It is possible, also, that Solomon's other heathen wives might promise to do the same; and indeed who would not, to carry Solomon in all his glory? though they afterwards returned to idolatry, and drew him with them. (Chap. xi. 1-8.) But at this period, we are informed, "Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the statutes of David his father;" by which we may reasonably understand the good advice he gave him a short time before his death, as mentioned in the preceding chapter. Under the Mosaic dispensation, the piety of a prince was expressed in the number and cost of his animal sacrifices. Those of Solomon, we are told, were offered in "the great high place" at Gibeon, because the temple was not yet built; but the tabernacle was now there, (2 Chron. i. 3.) and therefore this was the proper place: the intimation may be only intended to remind us, that he was waiting with some anxiety for the building of the temple.
On the following night (2 Chron. i. 7.) Solomon had a dream of a prophetic nature, in which he was permitted to ask of the Lord some heavenly gift, and he asked for wisdom—that wisdom especially which was "profitable to direct" him in his public duties:—"And now, O Lord my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father; and I—a little child—I know not how to go out, or come in. . . . Give there-the Targumist, the best judge in this case, pundekon, "tavern-keepers"—on Jos. ii. 1. Ju. xi. 1. Had these women been harlots, it is not likely that they would have dared to appear before Solomon; nor is it likely that persons would have been permitted in the reign of David. Their husbands might, at this time, have been following their necessary occupations in distant parts.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Divide the living child.—[This was apparently a very strange decision; but Solomon saw that the only way to discover the real mother was by the affection and tenderness she would necessarily show to her offspring. The plan was tried, and succeeded; and it was a proof of his sound judgment, penetration, and acquaintance with the human heart, if not of his extraordinary and supernatural wisdom. There are several similar decisions recorded by ancient writers. Suetonius, in his life of the Emperor Claudian, (c. xv.) whom he celebrates for his wonderful sagacity and penetration, tells us, that the emperor discovered a woman to be the real mother of a young man, whom fore thy servant an understanding heart, to judge thy people, that I may judge between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?" With this request the Lord was well pleased, and it was instantly granted; of which we have a striking proof in the decision the king made between the two harlots, in their dispute as to the identity of a child, as above related: on his ordering the disputed infant to be slain, he immediately discerned the true mother, by her feelings. The report of this decision raised Solomon's fame throughout the land, for "the people saw that the wisdom of God was in him, to do judgment." Wisdom always inspires reverence; they therefore "feared the king," and yielded a prompt obedience to his commands. How then should we fear to neglect or disobey him of whom Solomon was but a type or shadow—"the only wise God, our Saviour!" CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-34. The officers of Solomon's household: the extent of his dominions, and the variety of his knowledge.—If the glory of a king consists in the number and prosperity of his subjects, Solomon was now, as a prince, supremely happy. He reigned over all the kingdoms (or provinces rather) from the great river Euphrates to the land of the Philistines, and to the frontiers of Egypt. But his wisdom was still more extensive than his dominions. For "God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore;" a figure which Lord Bacon thus beautifully explains: "As the sand on the sea shore encloses a great body of waters, so Solomon's mind contained an ocean of knowledge." He was wiser than all men; and gave proofs of his extraordinary wisdom, both in his conversations and compositions. His conversations em-she refused to acknowledge, by commanding her to marry him, the proofs being doubtful on both sides, for, rather than commit incest, she confessed the truth. Diodorus Siculus also informs us, that Anophanes, king of Thrace, being appointed to decide between three young men, each of whom professed to be the son of the deceased king of the Cimmerians, and claimed the succession, discovered the real son by ordering each to shoot an arrow into the dead body of the king: two of them did this without hesitation; but the real son of the deceased monarch refused.]—Bagster.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. Scribes, &c.—Compare note on 2 Sam. viii. 16; xx. 24.
Ver. 4. Zadok and Abiathar.—This must have been written before chap. ii. 27, which see.
Ver. 7. Officers.—[These are doubtless to be considered as general receivers; for, as Sir John Chardin observes, "the revenues of the princes of the East are paid in the fruits and productions of the earth: there are no other taxes on the peasants." ]—Bagster.

pertained the region of <sup>a</sup> Argob, which is in Bashan, threescore great cities with walls and brazen bars:

14 Ahinadab the son of Iddo had <sup>a</sup> Mahanaim:

15 Ahimaaz was in Naphtali; he also took Basmath the daughter of Solomon to wife:

16 Baanah the son of Hushai was in Asher and in Alloth:

17 Jehoshaphat the son of Paruah, in Issachar:

18 Shimei the son of Elah, in Benjamin:

19 Geber the son of Uri was in the country of Gilead, in the country of Sihon king of the Amorites, and of Og king of Bashan; and he was the only officer which was in the land.

20 ¶ Judah and Israel were <sup>a</sup> many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, eating <sup>a</sup> and drinking, and making merry.

21 And Solomon reigned <sup>a</sup> over all kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought <sup>a</sup> presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.

22 ¶ And Solomon's <sup>a</sup> provision for one day was thirty <sup>a</sup> measures of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal, 23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and a hundred sheep, beside harts, and roebucks, and fallow deer, and fatted fowl.

24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphseh even to Azzah, over all the kings on this side the river: and he had peace <sup>a</sup> on all sides round about him.

25 And Judah and Israel dwelt <sup>a</sup> safely, every man under <sup>a</sup> his vine and under his fig-tree, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon.

26 ¶ And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of <sup>a</sup> horses for <sup>a</sup> his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.

27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing.

28 Barley also and straw for the horses and <sup>a</sup> dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.

A. M.
2989. 3029.
B. C.
1015. 975.
a De. 3. 4. 8.
o or, to Ma-hanaim.
p Ec. 22. 17.
c. 3. 8.
Pr. 14. 28.
q Ec. 2. 24.
r 2 Ch. 9. 26.
&c.
Ps. 72. 8.
11.
s 1 Sa. 10. 27.
Pa. 63. 29.
t bread.
u cors.
v 1 Ch. 22. 9.
w confidently.
x Je. 23. 6.
y Mt. 4. 4.
Zec. 3. 10.
z De. 17. 16.
a c. 10. 26.
2 Ch. 1. 14.
b or, mules,
or, swift beasts.
Ec. 3. 14.
Mt. 1. 13.

c c. 3. 12.
d Job 1. 3.
Mat. 2. 1.
16.
e Ac. 7. 22.
f 1 Ch. 15. 19.
Pa. 59.
title.
g 1 Ch. 2. 6.
6. 33.
Pa. 38.
title.
h Pr. 1. &c.
Ec. 12. 9.
i Ca. 1. 1. &c.
j 2 Ch. 9. 1.
23.
Is. 2. 2. 3.
Col. 2. 3.
A. M. 2990.
B. C. 1014.
a ver. 10. 13.
2 Ch. 2. 3.
Hiram.
b 2 Sa. 5. 11.
Am. 1. 9.
c 1 Ch. 22. 3.
23. 3.
d Pa. 72. 7.
Is. 9. 7.
e say.
f 2 Ch. 2. 4.
&c.
2 Sa. 7. 13.
g 1 Ch. 17.
12.

29 ¶ And God gave Solomon <sup>a</sup> wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore.

30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the <sup>a</sup> east country, and all the <sup>a</sup> wisdom of Egypt.

31 For he was wiser than all men; than Ethan <sup>a</sup> the Ezrahite, and <sup>a</sup> Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol: and his fame was in all nations round about.

32 And he spake three thousand <sup>a</sup> proverbs: and his <sup>a</sup> songs were a thousand and five.

33 And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

34 And there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

1 Hiram, sending to congratulate Solomon, is certified of his purpose to build the temple, and desired to furnish him with timber thereto. 7 Hiram, blessing God for Solomon, and requesting food for his family, furnisheth him with trees. 13 The number of Solomon's workmen and labourers.

AND Hiram <sup>a</sup> king of Tyre sent his servants unto Solomon; for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father: for <sup>a</sup> Hiram was ever a lover of David.

2 And Solomon sent to Hiram, saying,

3 Thou knowest how that David my father could not build a house unto the name of the Lord his God for the <sup>a</sup> wars which were about him on every side, until the Lord put them under the soles of his feet.

4 But now the Lord my God hath given me rest <sup>a</sup> on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent.

5 And, behold, I <sup>a</sup> purpose to build a house <sup>a</sup> unto the name of the Lord my God; as the Lord spake <sup>a</sup> unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build a house unto my name.

6 Now therefore, command thou that they hew me cedar trees out of Lebanon; and my servants shall be with thy servants: and unto thee will I give hire for thy servants accord-

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—18. Solomon prepares for building the temple, and negotiates with Hiram for materials.—In the close of the chapter preceding, we read that people came from all parts to hear the wisdom of Solomon. Some were doubtless influenced by curiosity; but many were ambassadors from different countries, who were deputed to congratulate him on his accession to the throne of Israel. Among these were the servants of Hiram, king of Tyre, with whom he formed both a friendly alliance and a commercial treaty; Hiram furnishing both cedar and fir trees for building, and sending artificers to instruct and work with those of Solomon. On the other hand, Solomon exported corn and oil to Hiram in great abundance.

The number of persons employed in this erection, may seem very great; but Pliny informs us, that in erecting one of the vast pyramids of Egypt, there were 360,000 men employed for twenty years.

The history of David's reign, is little more than the history of wars and insurrections. Solomon's was a reign of peace, which introduced commerce and the arts, which had been hitherto but little known among the Israelites. Solomon was braced the whole circuit of natural history; he uttered a great number of apothegms, and his songs and odes, sacred and moral, are computed at one thousand and five. Of these numerous productions, the book of Proverbs has preserved to us more than 900; several of his sacred odes are probably included in David's Psalms; and of his songs, the book of Canticles preserves at least seven or eight. Dr. Mason Good reckons them at twelve. Of the rest we know nothing.

Solomon's great desire, however, seems to have been, not for speculative, but practical wisdom, as it applied to his government, the improvement of his country, and the instruction of mankind. "The best knowledge (as Henry observes) is that which enables us to do our duty; to discern between good and bad—right and wrong—truth and falsehood."

"What tho' I trace each herb and flower
That drinks the morning dew,
Did I not own Jehovah's power,
How vain were all I knew?
Say, what's the rest but empty boast,
The pedant's idle claim,
Who, having all the substance lost,
Attempts to grasp a name?"

Ver. 13. Walls and brazen bars.—The gates and bars covered with brass, probably, like those in Priam's palace.

Ver. 23. Ten fat oxen.—Tavernier, describing the establishment of a royal seraglio, says, it required five hundred sheep and lambs daily.—Orient. Lit. No. 528.—Roebucks and fallow deer.—See note on Deut. xiv. 5.

Ver. 24. Tiphseh to Azzah.—That is, probably, from Thapsacus (on the Euphrates) to Gaza, in the S. W. corner of Canaan.—Dr. Wells.

Ver. 25. Solomon had forty thousand stalls of horses.—In 2 Chron. ix. 20, we read four thousand, which is far more probable.

Ver. 28. Barley.—Hasselquist says, in the East, horses are still fed with barley.—Orient. Lit. No. 530.—Dromedaries.—The Hebrew Rakesh, seems a general term, including all kinds of working cattle.—Parkhurst.

Ver. 31. Sons of Mahol.—The choir; <sup>a</sup> i. e. musicians and poets.—Bishop Louth. See 1 Chron. ii. 6.

Ver. 33. From the Cedar.—[The word alrez, whence the Chaldee and Syriac arzo and the Arabic and Ethiopic arz, and Spanish alerze, unquestionably denotes the cedar; it is thus rendered by the LXX. and other Greek versions, and by the Vulgate, and the inhabitants of mount Lebanon still call it ar. (See Michaëlis.) The cedar is a large and noble ever green tree; and according to Tournefort, makes a distinct genus of plants, but it is comprehended by Linnaeus among the junipers. Gabriel Sionata thus describes the cedar of Lebanon: "The cedar grows on the most elevated part of the mountain, is taller than the pine, and so thick that five men together could scarcely fathom one. It shoots out its branches at ten or twelve feet from the ground; they are large and distant from each other, and are perpetually green. The wood is of a brown colour, very solid and incorruptible, if preserved from wet. The tree bears a small cone, like that of the pine."—Bagster.

CHAP. V. Ver. 6. Cedar trees out of Lebanon.—It should seem that the forest has been so much thinned at different times, that all modern travellers complain of the scarcity of large and very old trees. J. H. Meyer, in 1813, could find only nine principal trees, very old and large, and thinks it may not contain more than eight or nine hundred altogether.

ing to all that thou shalt appoint: for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto the Sionians.

¶ And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, Blessed be the Lord this day, which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people.

¶ And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have considered the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning timber of fir.

¶ My servants shall bring them down from Lebanon unto the sea: and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them: and thou shalt accomplish my desire, in giving food for my household.

¶ So Hiram gave Solomon cedar trees and fir trees according to all his desire.

¶ And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand measures of wheat for food for his household, and twenty measures of pure oil: thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

¶ And the Lord gave Solomon wisdom, as he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon; and they two made a league together.

¶ And king Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel; and the levy was thirty thousand men.

¶ And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand a month by courses: a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and Adoniram was over the levy.

¶ And Solomon had threescore and ten thousand that bare burdens, and fourscore thousand hewers in the mountains;

¶ Beside the chief of Solomon's officers

A. M. 2990.
B. C. 1014.

h say.

i 1 Co. 12.

14, &c.

j Da. 2. 21.

k Pr. 13. 1.

l heard.

m send.

n Ex. 3. 7.

Eze. 27. 17.

Ac. 12. 20.

o cors.

p c. 12.

q tribute of men.

r c. 4. 6.

s c. 9. 21.

t Jos. 9. 21.

u or, Giblites.

Eze. 27. 9.

A. M. 2993.

B. C. 1011.

a built.

b Eze. 40. 41.

c or, windings, or, broad within, and narrow without; or, skewed and closed.

d or, upon, or, joining to.

e floors.

f Eze. 41. 6.

g ribs.

h narrowings, or, rebreastments.

which were over the work, three thousand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work.

¶ And the king commanded, and they brought great stones, costly stones, and hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house.

¶ And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the stone-squarers: so they prepared timber and stones to build the house.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The building of Solomon's temple. 5 The chambers thereof. 11 God's promise unto it. 15 The ceiling and adorning of it. 23 The cherubims. 31 The doors. 36 The court. 37 The time of building it.

AND it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month Zif, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the Lord.

¶ And the house which king Solomon built for the Lord, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

¶ And the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

¶ And for the house he made windows of narrow lights.

¶ And against the wall of the house he built chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the oracle: and he made chambers round about: particularly attached to architecture and to music; the former one of the most useful, and the latter one of the most elegant and pleasing arts of life; and both dedicated, in the first instance, to the honour of the Almighty. He built a temple, which has been justly considered, for its magnificence and splendour, one of the wonders of the world; and he furnished it with an establishment for sacrifice and praise equally admirable and unprecedented: but the glory of the temple consisted in the residing Deity, and in the typical display of the doctrines of salvation. Solomon was admonished, however, during the building, that the future happiness, both of himself and people, would depend on his adhering to the divine commands. "If thou wilt walk in my statutes, &c. then will I not forsake my people Israel."

¶ The nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made narrow rests round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1.—38. Solomon builds the temple in about seven years. Its dimensions, form, and furniture.—The temple itself appears to have been nearly in the same form as the tabernacle, (see the plate,) but it was twice the size; the tabernacle being 30 cubits by 10, and the temple 60 cubits by 20. The former had an open court around it, 100 cubits by 50; but the temple was surrounded with small chambers, and also had three courts. 1. The inner court, or that of the priests, wherein stood the great altar, and brazen sea, or laver; this was surrounded with a low parapet wall. 2. The court of Israel, which was surrounded with porticoes, or piazzas, over which were store rooms, and chambers for the priests. 3. The court of the Gentiles, not so divided, but surrounded also with piazzas and chambers over them. Without these was a Ver. 7. Blessed be the Lord.—That is, Jehovah. It should seem from that, Hiram must have been a proselyte to the Jewish religion; and this will well account for the zeal and readiness with which he entered into the design. Ver. 11. Measures.—"Twenty thousand baths of oil," are mentioned in Chronicles; and the Syriac, Arabic, and Septuagint, also have here "twenty thousand measures." But as barley and wine are also spoken of there, it is probable, that the wheat mentioned here, and the small quantity of fine oil, was intended for the use of Hiram's own family, while that in Chronicles was for his workmen.—Bagster.

Ver. 15. And Solomon had, &c.—These labourers, it appears, from 2 Chron. ii. 7, 18, were all foreigners; either Canaanites, whose lives were spared, or prisoners taken in war.

Ver. 16. Three thousand, &c.—[In the parallel passage of Chronicles, it is "three thousand six hundred," which is also the reading of the Septuagint here.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. The stone-squarers.—See Margin; inhabitants of Gebal. See Ezek.

xvii. 9.

third wall, which enclosed all the ground belonging to the temple, and which is calculated to have occupied a square plot of ground of 600 cubits, or about half an English mile.

The temple, it should be recollected, was not built on even ground, but on the side of mount Moriah, northeast of mount Zion, which occasioned the foundations in some parts to be very deep and massive, and greatly increased the labour and expense of building. We cannot here enter into the minutiae of this description; nor could we hope, at this distance of time, to explain the particulars: we shall therefore only offer two or three general remarks.

1. This temple is rather to be considered as a palace for the residence of the Most High, than as a place adapted for public worship, in the modern use of that term. They had no preaching nor prayers till after the captivity, and then they formed the service of the synagogue. Even the psalms chanted in the temple, could be attended only by a few of the elders, beside the priests and Levites, for it was only 40 cubits by 20. On great occasions, and on the offering of the burnt-offerings, the music was performed chiefly in the inner court, and the trumpets continued sounding, (according to the Rabbins,) until the victim was consumed. So numerous did the priests become, that in the time of Solomon they were divided into twelve courses, to officiate alternately, and even one of them afterwards increased to the number of five thousand. Infinite is therefore the advantage which we enjoy, as Christians, under the new dispensation. We, instead of one temple, have thousands of places of worship, and none are excluded from CHAP. VI. Ver. 2. Threescore cubits.—The Hebrew cubit, according to Bp. Cumberland and others, was one foot, nine inches, and three fourths; sixty cubits, therefore, would be about 109 feet long, and its breadth 36.

Ver. 4. Windows of narrow lights.—See Margin. The Targum says, "open within, and shut without." Dr. Clarke says, "probably latticed windows;" but Dr. Boothroyd renders it, "windows which might be opened or shut." The difference is perplexing, but of small importance.

Ver. 5. Chambers.—[Heb. floors. These appear to have been what we should now call corridors or galleries; in which were apartments for the use of the priests, there would be about 109 feet long, and its breadth 36.] By this (says Dr. Wall) one would take it, that the wall of the house had, at five cubits, a rebate in its thickness of one cubit; at ten, another; at fifteen, another; and that the beams of the chambers, though they did not go into the wall, did rest on those rebated places.

7 And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready <sup>i</sup> before it was brought thither; so that there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right <sup>i</sup> side of the house: and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

9 So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house <sup>h</sup> with beams and boards of cedar.

10 And then he built chambers against all the house, five cubits high: and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11 ¶ And the word of the Lord came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, if <sup>i</sup> thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I perform my word with thee, which I spake <sup>m</sup> unto David thy father:

13 And "I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake <sup>o</sup> my people Israel.

14 ¶ So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, <sup>p</sup> both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling: and he covered them on the inside with wood, and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the <sup>q</sup> most holy place.

17 And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long.

18 And the cedar of the house within was carved with <sup>r</sup> knops and <sup>s</sup> open flowers; all was cedar; there was no stone seen.

19 ¶ And the oracle <sup>t</sup> he prepared in the house within, to set there the ark of the covenant of the Lord.

20 And the oracle in the forepart was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof: and he overlaid it with <sup>u</sup> pure gold; and so covered the altar which was of cedar.

21 So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition by

A. M. 2993.
B. C. 1011.

i De. 27. 5, 6.
c. 5. 17, 18.

j shoulder.

k or, the vault-beams and the ceilings with cedar.

l c. 9. 4.

m 2 Sa. 7. 13.

n Ex. 25. 8.
2 Co. 6. 16.
Re. 21. 3.

o De. 31. 6.
He. 13. 5.

p A. M. 2993. 3000.
B. C. 1011. 1004.

q or, from the floor of the house unto the walls, and so ver. 16.

r Ex. 26. 33.
c. 8. 6.
Eze. 45. 33.

s or, gourds.

t openings of.

u ver. 5. 16.
Is. 23. 2.

v shut up.

x Ex. 30. 1, 3. 5.
2 Ch. 3. 7, &c.

y Ex. 37. 7. 9.

z or, the cherubims stretched forth their wings.

a or, five-square.

b or, leaves of the doors.

c openings of.

d or, four-square.

e Eze. 41. 23.

the chains of gold before the oracle; and he overlaid it with gold.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also <sup>v</sup> the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made two cherubims of <sup>w</sup> olive tree, each ten cubits high.

24 And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub: from the uttermost part of the one wing unto the uttermost part of the other were ten cubits.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

26 The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims within the inner house: and <sup>y</sup> they stretched forth the wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the house.

28 And he overlaid the cherubims with gold.

29 And he carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of cherubims and palm trees and <sup>z</sup> open flowers, within and without.

30 And the floor of the house he overlaid with gold, within and without.

31 ¶ And for the entering of the oracle he made doors of olive tree: the lintel and side posts were <sup>a</sup> a fifth part of the wall.

32 The <sup>b</sup> two doors also were of olive tree; and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims and palm trees and <sup>c</sup> open flowers, and overlaid them with gold, and spread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm trees.

33 So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive tree, <sup>d</sup> a fourth part of the wall.

34 And the two doors were of fir tree: the two <sup>e</sup> leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding.

35 And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers: and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work.

36 ¶ And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams.

37 ¶ In the fourth year was the foundation uniting in the service. Beside which, we have his presence with us, whose body is the true temple in which Deity resides, and who is himself "God manifest in the flesh."

2. It is mentioned as a peculiar circumstance, that though the building was of such magnitude and splendour, that neither "hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, was heard in the house while it was building;" the reason of which was, that both stones and timber, pillars and doors, were all manufactured by Hiram's labourers, assisted by those of Solomon, before they were forwarded to Jerusalem. This points to another circumstance worthy of remark, that heathens, and

Ver. 8. Middle chamber.—LXX. "Ground chamber." Boothroyd, "Lower." Compare ver. 6.

Ver. 9. Covered the house with beams and boards of cedar.—See Margin. The eastern custom is very different from ours; we ceil with plaster, they with wood.

Ver. 15. Both the floor of the house.—[That is, he lined, or wainscotted, the walls with cedar; the floor being covered with planks of fir; the marginal reading in this verse is preferable, as it removes every difficulty and obscurity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. The oracle.—[The oracle was the sanctuary, or holy of holies, in which there was nothing but the ark of the covenant, including the tables of the law, and into which the high-priest alone was to enter but once a year.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Knops and open flowers.—See Margin. ["Artificial knops," in the shape of colocynths, or wild gourds, as the word denotes, (see note on 2 Kings iv. 39), the full-blown flowers of which must have been very ornamental.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Pure gold.—Probably beaten or hammered gold, which was kept shut up in rolls, like sheet lead.

Ver. 23. Of olive tree.—Namely, the oleaster, or wild olive even Canaanites, were employed to prepare the temple of Jehovah: an intimation, as some pious divines have suggested, that many may be employed in forwarding the designs of God in his providence, and even in the propagation of the gospel, who have no personal interest in it. It may also, with no less pertinency, be remarked, that there was a court of the Gentiles in which all who renounced idolatry might worship; and which may be considered as anticipating another state of things, in which the Gentile church should be admitted to equal privileges with the Jews.

3. We must notice the splendid embellishments of this sa-

Ver. 29. Palm trees.—[Heb. tamar, in Ethiopic tamart, the palm tree, is so called, says Parkhurst, from its straight upright growth, for which it seems more remarkable than any other tree, and which sometimes rises to more than 100 feet. The trunk is remarkably straight and lofty; and it is crowned at the top with a large tuft of spiring leaves about four feet long, which never fall off, but always continue in the same flourishing verdure. The stalks are generally full of rugged knots, which are vestiges of decayed leaves; for the trunk of the tree is not solid, but its centre is filled with pith, round which is a tough bark full of strong fibres when young, which as the tree becomes old, hardens and becomes ligneous. To this bark the leaves are closely joined, which in the centre rise erect, but after they are advanced above the vagina which surrounds them, they expand very wide on every side of the stem, and as the older leaves decay, the stalk advances in height. The leaves, when the tree has grown to a size for bearing fruit, are 6 or 8 feet long, and very broad when expanded. The fruit, called the date, grows below the leaves in clusters.]—Bagster.

Ver. 36. Three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar beams.—This is supposed to mean a parapet wall round the inner court, covered with planks of cedar, whereon the people laid their offerings, but were not permitted to come within of the house of the LORD laid, in the month Zif.

38 And in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, which is the eighth month, was the house finished throughout all the parts thereof, and according to all the fashion of it. So was he seven years in building it.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The building of Solomon's house. 2 Of the house of Lebanon. 6 Of the porch of pillars. 7 Of the porch of judgment. 8 Of the house for Pharaoh's daughter. 13 Hiram's work of the two pillars. 23 Of the molten sea. 27 Of the ten bases. 38 Of the ten lavers, 40 and all the vessels.

BUT Solomon was building his own house thirteen years, and he finished all his house.

2 ¶ He built also the house of the forest of Lebanon; the length thereof was a hundred cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits, upon four rows of cedar pillars, with cedar beams upon the pillars.

3 And it was covered with cedar above upon the beams, that lay on forty-five pillars, fifteen in a row.

4 And there were windows in three rows, and light was against light in three ranks.

5 And all the doors and posts were square, with the windows: and light was against light in three ranks.

6 ¶ And he made a porch of pillars; the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth thereof thirty cubits: and the porch was before them: and the other pillars and the thick beam were before them.

7 ¶ Then he made a porch for the throne where he might judge, even the porch of judgment: and it was covered with cedar from one side of the floor to the other.

8 ¶ And his house where he dwelt had another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made also a house for Pharaoh's daughter, whom he had taken to wife, like unto this porch.

9 ¶ All these were of costly stones, according to the measures of hewed stones, sawed with saws, within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and so on the outside toward the great court.

A. M.
2963. 3000
B. C.
1011. 1004.

(A. M. all the appropriate names thereof, and with all the ordinances thereof.)

g ver. 1.9.

a c. 9. 10.
2 Ch. 3. 1.

b ribs.

c eight against eight.

d or, spaces and pillars were square in prospect.

e or, according to.

f from floor to floor.

g c. 3. 1.
2 Ch. 3. 11.

h Ju. 10. 23.
Ac. 3. 11.

i 2 Ch. 4. 11.
Hiram ver. 40.

j the son of a widow woman.

k 2 Ch. 2. 14.

l 2 Ch. 4. 16.

m Ex. 31. 3.

A. M.
3000. 3013.
B. C.
1004. 991.

n fashioned.

o ver. 21.
2 Ki. 25. 17.

p 2 Ch. 3. 15, &c.

q 4. 12 &c. 1e 32. 21, &c.

p c. 6. 3.

ver. 12.

q i. e. He shall establish.

10 And the foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, stones of eight cubits.

11 And above were costly stones, after measures of hewed stones, and cedars.

12 And the great court round about was three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar beams, both for the inner court of house of the LORD, and for the porch of house.

13 ¶ And king Solomon sent and fetched ram out of Tyre.

14 He was a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre a worker in brass: and he was filled with wisdom, and understanding, and cunning to work all works in brass. And he came to Solomon, and wrought all his work.

15 ¶ For he cast two pillars of brass, eighteen cubits high apiece: and a line twelve cubits did compass either of the about.

16 And he made two chapters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapter was five cubits, the height of the other chapter was five cubits.

17 And nets of checker work, and wreaths of chain work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars; seven for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter.

18 And he made the pillars, and two round about upon the one network, to compass the chapters that were upon the top, the pomegranates: and so did he for the other chapter.

19 And the chapters that were upon the tops of the pillars were of lily work in the pomegranates.

20 And the chapters upon the two pillars were pomegranates also above, over against the pomegranates which were by the network: and the pomegranates were two hundred in each chapter.

21 And he set up the pillars in the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof Jachin: and he ered building—stones covered with cedar, and timber overlaid with gold. But the most splendid objects here were the cherubim, (or cherubs,) ten cubits (about 18 feet) high, and their wings extending from wall to wall, across the whole of the oracle, or most holy place. It is very remarkable, however, that neither the prophet here, nor Moses, in describing those of the tabernacle, gives us any delineation of their form. We shall find some intimations in the Psalms and in Isaiah, but the only representation at all particular and distinct, is in Ezekiel, (chap. i.) to which we shall therefore defer inquiry; only, as we have before remarked the general design and import of the mystical furniture of the tabernacle, (see exposition on Exod. xxv.) so we may here add, that the splendid and gigantic figures here exhibited, may be designed to intimate, that while these sublime ministers of providence are employed to fulfil the will of God to mortals, so also are they placed here, as the cherubim at the gate of paradise, to intimate that "the way into the holiest of all was not made manifest," or the open, while as yet the tabernacle (or temple) was left standing. (Heb. ix. 8.) But when these heavenly spirits had witnessed the sanguinary perspiration in Gethsemane, and more bloody scene on Calvary then, and not till then they fly, as a guard of honour, to escort him before the throne ineffable. (See Psalm lxxvii. 17, 18.)

CHAP. VII. Ver. —51. Solomon builds his own palace makes further additions to the embellishments of the temple. Though three buildings seem here named, we think the lecture of Dr. Clarke very probable, that they were Jerusalem, all contiguous, and, in fact, formed one vast building; and we beg leave to suggest an opinion, that the house of Lebanon was his own palace, so called not only the vast quantity of cedar made use of in the building, but also from the pillars with their beams being so grouped and ornamented, as to give the whole a semblance to that CHAP. VII. Ver. 2, 3. Four rows of cedar pillars. . . . Fifteen in a row—make sixty instead of forty-five. Either here is some mistake, or the text refers to two stories of the building; the lower supported by four rows of pillars, and the upper by three.

Ver. 5. The doors and posts were square.—We suppose the meaning to be, that the doors and windows were all uniform, and so arranged as to give a prospect through the house.

Ver. 10. Even great stones.—(Reckoning the cubit at 21 inches, the ten cubits are seventeen feet and a half, and the eight cubits are 14 feet. The magnitude of these stones were certainly extraordinary; but let us hear M. Volney, and our surprise will no longer be fixed on these stones, but be transferred from Solomon's house to the ruins of Balbec: "What is still more astonishing is the enormous stones which compose the sloping wall. To the west the second layer is formed of stones which are from 28 to 35 feet long, by about nine feet high. On the right, as we approach the city, there is still lying there a stone, hewn on three sides, which is 53 feet 2 inches long, 12 feet 10 inches broad, and 13 feet 3 inches in thickness."—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Of the tribe of Naphtali.—[The mother of Hiram (not the Tyrian king mentioned before, but an intelligent coppersmith, of Jewish extraction by his mother's side) in Chronicles, is said to have been of "the daughter of Dan;" and she might have been of Naphtali by her father, and of Dan by her mother: or, she might originally be of the tribe of Dan, and have first married a man of the tribe of Naphtali; and, in either case, she be indifferently called "of the tribe of Naphtali," or of "the daughter of Dan."—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Eighteen cubits high.—[That is, nearly thirty feet English measure. But in the parallel place in Chronicles, these pillars are said to be thirty cubits high. Tremellius reconciles this difference by observing, that the one cubit was but one half of the cubit of the sanctuary; so that eight cubits was but one half of the cubit of the sanctuary; and, in either case, she be indifferently called "of the tribe of Naphtali," or of "the daughter of Dan."—Bagster.

Ver. 17. And nets of checker work, &c.—A fruitful imagination, like of Bunyan, might easily allegorize all the particulars here stated, as of fact, had done; but we have neither time nor talent for these sports of which are not authorized either by inspired authority or example. The work was, doubtless, by these descriptions, to impress the reader with the labour and expense and skill bestowed upon this magnificent building, and its minutest parts.

Ver. 21. Jachin and Boaz.—These pillars are famous; they were named up the left pillar, and called the name thereof <sup>1</sup> Boaz.

22 And upon the top of the pillars was lily work: so was the work of the pillars finished.

23 ¶ And he made a molten <sup>2</sup> sea, ten cubits <sup>3</sup> from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

24 And <sup>4</sup> under the brim of it round about there were knops compassing it, ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about: the knops were cast in two rows, when it was cast.

25 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

26 And it was a hand-breadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies: it contained two thousand baths.

27 ¶ And he made ten bases of brass: four cubits was the length of one base, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it.

28 And the work of the bases was on this manner: they had borders, and the borders were between the ledges:

29 And the borders that were between the ledges were <sup>5</sup> lions, oxen, and <sup>6</sup> cherubims: and upon the ledges there was a base above: and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions <sup>7</sup> made of thin work.

30 And every base had four brazen wheels, and plates of brass: and the four corners thereof had undersetters: under the laver were undersetters molten, at the side of every addition.

31 And the mouth of it within the chapter and above was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round after the work of the base, a cubit and a half: and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, foursquare, not round.

32 And under the borders were four <sup>8</sup> wheels; and the axletrees of the wheels were joined to the base: and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit.

33 And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot wheel: their axletrees, and

A. M.
3000. 3013.
B. C.
1004. 991.

r i. e. in its strength.

s 2 Ki 25.
13.

t from his brim to his brim.

u 2 Ch 4.3, 5.

v Eze 1.10.
10.14.
41.19.
Hos.5.14.
Re.5.5.

w Ge 3.24.
Ex.25.18.
37.7.
He.5.5.

x 1 Pe.2.5.

y Eze 1.15,
&c.

z nakedness.

a 2 Ch 4.6,
&c.

b shoulder.

c Heb.
Hiram.
ver. 13.

d ver. 17.13.

e upon the face of the pillars.

f Ex.27.3.

g brass
made bright, or,
scoured.

h in the thickness
of the ground.

i Ge.33.17.

j Jos.3.16.

their naves, and their fellows, and their spokes, were all molten.

34 And there were four undersetters to the four corners of one base: and the undersetters were of the very base itself.

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of half a cubit high: and on the top of the base the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same.

36 For on the plates of the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved cherubims, lions, and palm trees, according to the <sup>9</sup> proportion of every one, and additions round about.

37 After this manner he made the ten bases: all of them had one casting, one measure, and one size.

38 ¶ Then made he ten lavers <sup>10</sup> of brass: one laver contained forty baths: and every laver was four cubits: and upon every one of the ten bases one laver.

39 And he put five bases on the right <sup>11</sup> side of the house, and five on the left side of the house: and he set the sea on the right side of the house eastward over against the south.

40 ¶ And <sup>12</sup> Hiram made the lavers, and the shovels, and the basins. So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD:

41 The two pillars, and the two bowls of the chapters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two <sup>13</sup> networks, to cover the two bowls of the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars;

42 And four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, even two rows of pomegranates for one network, to cover the two bowls of the chapters that were <sup>14</sup> upon the pillars;

43 And the ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases;

44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

45 And <sup>15</sup> the pots, and the shovels, and the basins: and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the LORD, were of <sup>16</sup> bright brass.

46 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them; <sup>17</sup> in the clay ground between Succoth <sup>18</sup> and <sup>19</sup> Zarthan.

47 And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, rated forest. Adjoining to this—a sort of wing to it (as the modern term is)—was a porch, in the centre of which was his throne of judgment, and the whole building, probably, was occupied as a senate house for the nobles and elders of the house of Israel. Another porch, of the like dimensions, seems to have formed a wing on the other side of the building, designed for his harem, and here called the house of Pharaoh's daughter, who was the principal, and, we conceive, the first of the wives of Solomon. The quantity of massive marble here used, seems to imply, that here were the pleasure baths, the stones of which were costly, both from the beauty of the marble, and from their immense size.

Solomon, we are now informed, having heard of a celebrated founder at Tyre, named Hiram, (of the same name as the king himself,) employed him to cast two immense pillars, eighteen cubits high, and twelve in circumference, to ornament the temple, which were significantly called Jachin and Boaz; meaning together, "He shall establish (it) in strength;" or, as Dr. Boothroyd renders it, "It shall stand in strength;" i. e. firmly: meaning, that God would now establish both his house and throne.

The chapters on the tops of these pillars, afford another curious subject of inquiry. The ingenious Hutchinson laboured to prove that these were a kind of orreries, or a representation of the revolutions of the various planets round the sun, of which he supposes the lily also to be an emblem, (as it unquestionably is of light,) in confirmation of which, he refers to machines of this nature, mentioned by Cicero and some others. This idea agrees very well with the opinion of Josephus and Philo, that the temple at Jerusalem was a figurative representation of the universe; but the New Testament writers lead us rather to an evangelical than a philosophical application of that is, cast in brass. [Notwithstanding the names of these pillars, they seem to have supported no part of the building; and appear to have been formed for ornament; and were no doubt also emblematical.]—Basster.

Ver. 23. He made a molten sea.—This was eighteen feet diameter. The Hebrews called every large collection of waters a sea. In the Moorish palace of Grenada, is "the Fountain of the Lions," probably made in imitation of this; the basin is supported by lions instead of oxen.—Orient. Lit. No. 536.

Ver. 26. Two thousand baths.—[This immense laver, called a sea from its magnitude, held, at a moderate computation, 16,000 gallons. Besides this great brazen laver, there were in the temple ten lavers of brass of a less size, which moved on wheels, and were ornamented with the figures of various animals, having, probably, always some relation to the cherubim. These lavers were to hold water for the use of the priests in their sacred office, particularly to wash the victims that were to be offered as a burnt-offering, as we learn from 2 Chron. iv. 6.: but the brazen sea was for the priests to wash in. The knops are supposed to have been in the form of an ox's head, (2 Chron. iv. 3.;) and some think the water flowed out at their mouths.]—Basster.

Ver. 27. Ten bases.—Pedestals, or rather "laver-stands," as Dr. Boothroyd calls them, for the ten lavers mentioned ver. 38.

Ver. 30. Undersetters.—[It is probable that these undersetters were 80 many strong legs, somewhat shorter than the wheels, and were intended to prevent the laver from tilting or falling, in case of any accident.]—Basster.

Ver. 32. Under the borders were four wheels.—So that these bases were, in fact, carriages for the lavers, whereby they might be moved to any part of the court, for the purpose of washing the sacrifices.

Ver. 46. Did the king cast them.—[Zarthan is supposed to have been situated in the tribe of Manasseh, west of Jordan, near Jezreel and Bethshan or Scythopolis, and not far from the Jordan. Succoth we know was situated east of Jordan in the tribe of Gad, and according to Jerome in the district of Scythopolis: hence the "plain of Jordan," where Hiram cast the brazen vessels, must be the plain in which that river runs. Zarthan and Succoth being, probably, nearly opposite each other: but whether the precise spot of his operations was on this side or on the other side is uncertain. In this place he found that particular clay that was proper for his purpose: and it being a con-

<sup>1</sup> because they were exceeding many: neither was the weight of the brass <sup>1</sup> found out.

48 ¶ And Solomon made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD: the altar <sup>20</sup> of gold, and the table of gold, whereupon the shew-bread <sup>21</sup> was,

49 And the candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs of gold,

50 And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basins, and the spoons, and the censers of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple.

51 So was ended all the work that king Solomon made for the house of the LORD. And Solomon brought in the things which David his father had dedicated; even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The feast of the dedication of the temple. 12, 54 Solomon's blessing. 22 Solomon's prayer. 62 His sacrifice of peace-offerings.

THEN <sup>a</sup> Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city <sup>d</sup> of David, which is Zion.

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon at the feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month.

3 And all the elders of Israel came, and the priests took up the ark.

4 And they brought up the ark of the LORD, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up.

5 And king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

6 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims.

7 For the cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

A. M. 3000. 3013.
B. C. 1004. 991.

k for the exceeding multitude.

l searched. 1 Ch. 22. 14.

m Ex. 37. 25.

n Le. 24. 5. 8.

o ash pans.

p holy things of David.

q 2 Sa. 8. 11.

A. M. 3000.
B. C. 1004.

a 2 Ch. 5. 2. &c.

b princes.

c 2 Sa. 6. 17.

d 2 Sa. 5. 9.

e Le. 23. 34.

f Nu. 4. 15. 1 Ch. 15. 14.

g 2 Ch. 1. 3.

h 2 Sa. 6. 13.

i Ex. 26. 33.

j c. 6. 27.

k heads.

l or, ark.

m Ex. 35. 21. 40. 20.

n De. 10. 2. 5. He. 9. 4.

o or, where.

p Ex. 34. 27. 28.

q Ex. 40. 34. Le. 16. 2.

r 2 Ch. 6.

s Ps. 97. 2. Is. 45. 15.

t 2 Sa. 7. 13.

u Ps. 132. 14.

v 2 Sa. 6. 18.

w Lu. 1. 68.

x 2 Sa. 7. 5. &c.

y 1 Sa. 16. 1.

z 1 Ch. 17. 1. &c.

a 1 Ch. 28. 5. 6.

b De. 31. 28. ver. 9.

8 And they drew out the staves, that the ends of the staves were seen out in the place before the oracle, and they were seen without: and there they are unto day.

9 There was nothing in the ark save the tables of stone, which Moses put there Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD, 11 So that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ¶ Then spake Solomon, The LORD said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

13 I have surely built thee a house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide for ever.

14 And the king turned his face about, blessed all the congregation of Israel: (all the congregation of Israel stood;)

15 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand filled it, saying,

16 Since the day that I brought forth people Israel out of Egypt, I chose none out of all the tribes of Israel to build a house unto my name, but thou David; yet I chose David to be over my people Israel.

17 And it was in the heart of David my father to build a house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thy heart to build a house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thy heart.

19 Nevertheless thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the LORD hath performed his word unto David; and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the altar wherein is the covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

these images; and as Christ crucified is the soul and substance of the Christian system, so the pious Israelites had a more or less distant view, through all their sacrifices and ceremonies, of that seed of the woman, and of Abraham, in whom all the nations of the earth shall eventually be blessed. Thus Abraham saw his day and was glad, and David hailed at a distance (as we have seen) the rising of the Sun of righteousness, with healing (or salvation) in his wings." (2 Sam. xxiii. 4. Mal. iv. 1, 2.)

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—27. Solomon brings up the ark, and dedicates the temple, which is consecrated by the divine presence.

siderable distance from Jerusalem, that city would not be annoyed by the smoke and noxious vapours necessarily occasioned by the process. —B. 51. Things, the silver and the gold, even the vessels, —i. e. the sacred vessels of silver and gold.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. Solomon assembled. —(This did not take place, according to Archbishop Usher, till the year after the temple was finished, because that year was a jubilee. The 8th day of the 7th month, viz. the 30th of our October, being Friday, was the first of the seven days of dedication; the 10th day, Saturday, November 1, was the feast of expiation, or atonement, held; whereon, according to the Levitical law, the jubilee was proclaimed by sound of trumpet. The 15th day, Friday, was the feast of tabernacles, which was always very solemnly kept; and the day following, November 14, being our Saturday, when the Sabbath was ended, the people returned home.) —B.

Ver. 6. Under the wings, &c. —That is, the ark, with all its appurtenances, the cherubs of pure gold, &c. were placed under the wings of the gigantic cherubim formed by Solomon. The tabernacle, now done with, was probably stowed away in some part of the temple.

Ver. 8. The staves were seen out. —That is, the staves (which were much like those of a sedan chair) were so far pulled out as to jut against the wall, so that it might be seen without that they were there, though the staves themselves could not be seen. —There they are unto this day. —That is, this book, or at least this part of it, was written, which was certainly by the captivity. Ver. 9. There was nothing in the ark save the two tables. —Not a time; but there may have been, either before or afterwards. And does this expression seem to intimate, that there was something now missing seems very possible, that these sacred relics may have been purloined, or by the Philistines, or the men of Beth-shemesh, when they looked into the ark; and if so, this may help to account for the judgments wherewith they were visited.

Ver. 16. That my name might be therein. —In the parallel place of Chronicles, the following words are inserted: "Neither chose I any man to be over my people Israel; but I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name might there, and have chosen David," &c. This shows that the compilers of books of Kings and Chronicles did not use altogether the same documents, or else we must suppose that these words have been accidentally omitted, addition, however, seems required to complete the sense.

Ver. 21. Wherein is the covenant. —Namely, the law, the ten commandments which begins with a recital of the covenant; "I am the LORD thy God," See ver. 9.

22 ¶ And Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread <sup>b</sup> forth his hands toward heaven:

23 And he said, LORD God of Israel, there <sup>c</sup> is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who <sup>d</sup> keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk <sup>e</sup> before thee with all their heart:

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thy hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst <sup>f</sup> him, saying, <sup>g</sup> There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; <sup>h</sup> so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, O God of Israel, let <sup>i</sup> thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the <sup>j</sup> heaven and heaven of <sup>k</sup> heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee to-day:

29 That thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, <sup>l</sup> My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken unto the

A. M. 3000.
B. C. 1004.
b Ex. 9.33.
Is. 1.15. c Ex. 15.11.
2 Sa. 15.
22. d Ne. 1.5.
Da. 9.4.
e c. 2.6.
f c. 2.4.
g There shall not be cut off unto thee a man from my sight.
h only if.
i Ps. 119.49.
j 2 Ch. 2.6.
Is. 66.1.
Je. 23.24.
Ac. 17.24.
k 2 Co. 12.2.
l De. 12.11.
m or, in.
Da. 6.10.
n 2 Ch. 20.9.
o he require an oath of him.
Ex. 22.11.
p Ex. 34.7.
De. 25.1.
q Is. 3.10.
Ro. 2.13.
7.9.
r De. 28.25.
s Le. 26.40.
42.
Ne. 1.8,9.
t or, toward.
u Le. 26.19.
De. 28.23.
v 1 Sa. 12.
23.
Ps. 25.8.
94.12.

prayer which thy servant shall make <sup>m</sup> toward this place.

30 And <sup>n</sup> hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray <sup>m</sup> toward this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place: and when thou hearest, forgive.

31 ¶ If any man trespass against his neighbour, and <sup>o</sup> an oath be laid upon him to cause him to swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house:

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, <sup>p</sup> condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and justifying <sup>q</sup> the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be <sup>r</sup> smitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall <sup>s</sup> turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication unto thee <sup>t</sup> in this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest unto their fathers.

35 ¶ When heaven <sup>u</sup> is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou afflictest them:

36 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, that thou teach <sup>v</sup> them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.

support the priests, and feast the offerers. And this seems to have been the grandest festival ever kept in Israel; it lasted fourteen days, seven for the feast of tabernacles, and other seven for the dedication of the temple. During the former, the ark was brought up, with great solemnity, out of the city of David, and also, as appears by the parallel history, the tabernacle, with all the sacred vessels pertaining to it. The former (the ark) was then placed, with great reverence, beneath the spreading wings of the gigantic cherubim which had been made by Solomon, the smaller cherubim of gold, made by Moses, being still attached to the mercy-seat.

On this occasion, the whole company of the priests, the Levites, and the singers, were on duty; one hundred and twenty of the former, with trumpets, which were sounded over the sacrifices, and in the grand chorus of praise. To these were united all the other instruments, and the whole choir of singers, which was doubtless very numerous. And "it came to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord;" and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and (other) instruments of music, and praised the Lord (saying, "For he is good; for his mercy endureth forever;" that then the house was filled with a cloud, (even) the house of the Lord; so that the priests, having deposited the ark in its appointed place, were not able to stay to perform any other service "by reason of the cloud," which was evidently a dense and dark cloud, irradiated, perhaps, with supernatural glory; for now "the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God;" (2 Chron. chap. v.)

The scene before us unites all the splendour and magnificence of earth, with a miraculous glory sent down from heaven: it unites all the hilarity and joy of mortals with a spirit of devotion, enkindled from above in a 100,000, perhaps, of human souls. In short, it beggars all description, and it baffles all conception.

Behold now Solomon, placed upon a scaffold of brass, with the elders of Israel standing round him, stretches forth his hands; and, inspired with sentiments and feelings worthy of the scene, thus addresses the immense auditory now before him: "The Lord said that he would dwell in the thick darkness;" so he did at Sinai, and in the wilderness—and behold him now present, attended by his own chosen symbol! Then, raising his eyes to heaven in a rapture of devout feeling, he addresses the present Deity: "I have surely built thee a house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever." Again, suddenly "turning his face about" toward the people, who were all standing absorbed in admiration and attention, he blessed them, and that in the only way that mortals can ever bless each other, by calling upon the Lord to bless them: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled" all that he promised. After having, in a few words, expatiated on this subject, he then spread forth his hands, and exclaimed, "LORD God of Israel! there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath! And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto David my father." And then, as if suddenly recollecting himself, he exclaims, "But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded!" No paraphrase is needed to elucidate this language, and we know of none which can possibly heighten the effect; none, indeed, but must necessarily debase it.

Ver. 28—66. Solomon's prayer.—We have already noticed the sublime manner in which Solomon introduces his prayer, by marking the infinite condescension of Deity, in deigning to reside on earth, when he has a throne in heaven, surrounded by innumerable holy, happy, and exalted spirits; nay more, while he is encompassed with the sublime songs of praise that angels offer, that he should stoop to listen to the prayers and cries of mortal sinners in distress, and in distress wherein they had been involved by their own transgressions.

First, Solomon implores the guardian care of the Almighty over this house of prayer, erected to his honour, both by day and night, whenever any unhappy Israelite should address his prayer in or toward the holy temple—"then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place; and when thou hearest, forgive." The royal prophet then supposes seven particular cases of emergency, wherein the people might be involved, and in which he implores divine pity and assistance. 1. A case of trespass between two Israelites, when, by a solemn oath, the Almighty shall be appealed to, and in which he implores the divine interference on behalf of the injured party. 2. He supposes a case of national defeat, when, on account of their transgressions, they might be smitten before their enemies. 3. In the case of drought, which may threaten famine, through the want of rain. The 4th case is more general and comprehensive; "If there be in the land famine, pestilence, blasting, mildew, locust, or caterpillar; if their enemy besiege them in the land of their cities;" that is, in their frontier or fortified towns, "whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be; what prayer and supplication be made by any man, or by all the mercy and intervention of God would be indispensably requisite; and he earnestly bespeaks that mercy and intervention, on condition that the people pray towards that holy place; and with a feeling heart, make earnest supplication to the throne of mercy.]—Bagster

Ver. 22. Solomon stood.—It appears from the parallel history, 2 Chron. vi. 3, that Solomon had raised a brazen scaffold, five cubits square, on which he first stood, and then knelt in prayer.

Ver. 31. If any man, &c.—[Solomon here puts seven cases, in all of which 37 ¶ If <sup>w</sup> there be in the land famine, if there be pestilence, blasting, mildew, locust, or if there be caterpillar; if their enemy besiege them in the land of their <sup>x</sup> cities; whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be;

38 What prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man the plague of his own heart, and spread forth his hands toward this house:

39 Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for <sup>y</sup> thou, even thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men;

40 That they may fear <sup>z</sup> thee all the days that they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

41 ¶ Moreover concerning a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

42 (For they shall hear of thy great name, and of thy <sup>a</sup> strong hand, and of thy stretched out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house;

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that <sup>b</sup> all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that <sup>c</sup> this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name.

44 ¶ If thy people go out to battle against their enemy, whithersoever thou shalt send them, and shalt pray unto the Lord <sup>d</sup> toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I have built for thy name:

45 Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their <sup>e</sup> cause.

46 If they sin against thee, (for <sup>f</sup> there is no man that sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away <sup>g</sup> captives unto the land of the enemy, far or near;

47 Yet if they shall <sup>h</sup> bethink themselves in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, <sup>i</sup> saying, We have sinned, and have done perversely, we have committed wickedness;

48 And so return <sup>j</sup> unto thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies, which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward <sup>k</sup> their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

thy people Israel, which shall know every man the plague of his own heart," and shall be sensible that his or their sins have brought on them such affliction; then, if he "spread forth his hands toward this house; then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest:" that is, pardon their sin, and remove their punishment. The 5th prayer is on behalf of the Gentile proselyte, for whom the Jewish king implores the same blessings as for native Israelites. The 6th case is that of Israel being sent to war against their foreign enemies, as the Canaanites; and it is observable, that it is only in the supposition of their being attacked by, or sent to war against, their enemies, that Solomon dares to pray for a blessing on their arms. The last circumstance supposed is, that of

A. M. 3000.
B.C. 1004.
w Le.26.16,
&c.
De.28.21,
&c.
2 Ch.20.9.

x or, jurisdiction.

y 1 Ch.28.9.
Ps.11.4.
Je.17.10.
He.4.12.

z Ps.130.4.

a De.4.34.

b 2 Ki.19.19.
Ps.67.2.
102.15.

c thy name is called upon this house.

d the way of the city.

e or, right.

f Ec.7.20.
Ja.3.2.
1 Ja.1.8, 10.

g De.28.36,
64.

h bring back to their heart.

i Ne.1.6,
&c.
Ps.106.6.
Da.9.5,
&c.

j Je.29.12.
14.
Ho.14.1, 2.

k ver.23.

l or, right.

m Ex.7.2.6.
Ps.106.46.

n De.9.29.

o De.4.20.
Je.11.4.

p Ex.19.5.6.
De.14.2.

q 2 Sa.6.13.

r Jos.23.14.

s fallen.

t De.12.10, 11.

u De.31.6.

v Ps.119.36.

w the thing of a day in his day.

x Jos.4.24.
ver.43.

y De.4.35, 39.

z De.18.13.

a 2 Ch.7.4,
&c.

49 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling place, and maintain their <sup>1</sup> cause,

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and give them <sup>2</sup> compassion before them: carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them:

51 For <sup>3</sup> they be thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt, from the midst of the <sup>4</sup> furnace of iron.

52 That thine eyes may be open unto supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them in all that they call for unto thee.

53 For thou didst separate them from among all the people of the earth, to be thine inheritance, as thou spakest <sup>5</sup> by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God.

54 ¶ And it was so, that when Solomon made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the Lord, he arose from before the altar of the Lord, from kneeling, his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

55 And he stood, and blessed <sup>6</sup> all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying, 56 Blessed be the Lord, that hath given unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there <sup>7</sup> hath not <sup>8</sup> failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised <sup>9</sup> by the hand of Moses his servant.

57 The Lord our God be with us, as he hath said: let <sup>10</sup> him not leave us, nor forsake us:

58 That he may incline <sup>11</sup> our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication before the Lord, be unto the Lord our God day and night, that he will maintain the cause of his servant, and cause of his people Israel <sup>12</sup> at all times, as matter shall require:

60 That <sup>13</sup> all the people of the earth may know that <sup>14</sup> the Lord is God, and that there is none else.

61 Let your heart therefore be <sup>15</sup> perfect toward the Lord our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And <sup>16</sup> the king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the Lord.

63 And Solomon offered a sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the Lord, two and twenty thousand oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the

Ver. 37. In the land of their cities.—The expression evidently refers to their fortified towns on the confines of their land.

Ver. 44. If thy people pray . . . towards this city,—i. e. looking towards it. This was practised many ages afterwards; for Adrian made a decree that a Jew might not even look toward Jerusalem. The Turks pray with their faces toward their holy city, Mecca.

Ver. 46. If they sin, &c.—The second clause of this verse, as it here is translated, renders this supposition in the first clause entirely nugatory; for, if there be no man that sinneth not, it is useless to say if they sin; but the contradiction is removed by rendering the original, "If they shall sin against thee," (for there is no man that, lo yechetai, may not sin;) i. e. there is no man who is altogether free from sin; none that is not liable to transgress. —BAGIN, impeccable or infallible; none that is not liable to transgress. —The following verse is a supplement to the prayer; and there is an important addition to this in 2 Chron. vi. 41, 42, apparently taken from one of the Psalms. —BAGIN.

Ver. 63. Solomon offered . . . unto the Lord, two and twenty thousand oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORD.

64 The same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings: because the brazen <sup>b</sup> altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings.

65 ¶ And at that time Solomon held a <sup>c</sup> feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, from the entering <sup>d</sup> in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, seven days and seven days, even fourteen days.

66 On the eighth day he sent the people away: and they <sup>e</sup> blessed the king, and went unto their tents joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness <sup>f</sup> that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

CHAPTER IX.

1 God's covenant in a vision with Solomon. 10 The mutual presents of Solomon and Hiram. 15 In Hiram's works the Gentiles were his bondmen, the Israelites honourable servants. 24 Pharaoh's daughter removed to her house. 25 Solomon's yearly solemn sacrifices. 26 His navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.

AND <sup>a</sup> it came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the LORD, and the king's <sup>b</sup> house, and all <sup>c</sup> Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do,

2 That the LORD appeared to Solomon the second time, as he had <sup>d</sup> appeared unto him at Gibeon.

3 And the LORD said unto him, I have heard <sup>e</sup> thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my <sup>f</sup> name there for ever; and mine eyes and my heart shall be there <sup>g</sup> perpetually.

4 And if thou wilt walk before me, as David <sup>h</sup> thy father walked, in <sup>i</sup> integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments:

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, as I promised to <sup>j</sup> David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 But if <sup>k</sup> ye shall at all turn from following the divine mercy and the divine glory. 4. That every good man, who himself experiences the divine mercy, will be desirous that not only all his countrymen, but also all his fellow-creatures, may be made partakers of the same privileges and blessings; that all people of the earth may know "that the Lord is God, and that there is none else." Lastly, As every Israelite was directed to turn his eyes to the sacred oracle, and to the holy temple in which the Lord was pleased to place his name, so is every Christian directed to look to the divine Logos, the great Messiah, therein typified, in whom "dwelleth the fulness of the Godhead bodily." (Coloss. ii. 9.)

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—28. The Lord appears a second time to Solomon: his great prosperity.—The Lord's first appearance to Solomon, in prophetic vision, at Gibeon, is recorded in the third chapter of this book. In the present vision, a gracious answer is returned to the prayer of Solomon, and the Lord is pleased to say of this house, "Mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually." And it is added, that if Solomon continued to walk before the Lord in integrity and uprightness, like sand oxen, (cattle,) and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep.—That is during the fourteen days of the assembly. If it be asked, where could all these come from, it may be remarked, that there are sometimes on a Monday, in Smithfield, (London,) five thousand cattle, and twenty thousand sheep; and these cattle (as above remarked) were as well for food as sacrifice.

Ver. 64. Did the king hallow the middle of the court.—The altar of burnt-offerings not being sufficient, a temporary altar appears to have been erected in the open court.

Ver. 65. Eight days sent the people away.—[In the parallel passage of Chronicles, this is termed "the three and twentieth day of the seventh month," that is, the ninth day of the dedication: which Jarchi reconciles by supposing that Solomon gave them leave to return on the eighth day, and many of them did then return; and that he dismissed the remainder on the ninth, or 23d of the seventh month: see note on ver. 1.—Bagster.]

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. When Solomon had finished, &c.—As we know that these buildings had occupied Solomon 12 years after the dedication of the temple, it is unnatural to suppose that this answer to his prayer was deferred for such a length of time. Some judicious commentators (among whom is Scott) give therefore a somewhat different rendering to the two first verses: "And it was that thus Solomon finished the building, &c. And the Lord appeared," &c. Which perfectly corresponds with 2 Chron. vii. 11, 12, and does no violence to the Hebrew; Caph is often rendered "thus;" and the vau which

A. M. 3000.
B. C. 1004.
b 2 Ch. 4.1.
c ver. 2.
d Nu. 34.5,8.

o or,
thanked.
f Ps. 106.4,5.
122.5.9.

A. M. 3013.
B. C. 991.
a 2 Ch. 7.11,
&c.

b c. 7.1.
c 2 Ch. 8.6.
d c. 3.5.

e 2 Ki. 20.5.
1 Jo. 5.14.
f c. 8.29.

g De. 11.12.
h c. 2.4.
6.12.
15.5.

i Pr. 10.9.
28.18.
j 1 Ch. 22.
9.10.

k 2 Sa. 7.14.
Pr. 30.30,
&c.

l De. 4.26.
2 Ki. 17.
23.

m Je. 7.14.
n De. 28.37.
Pe. 44.11.

o De. 29.24,
26.
Je. 22.8,9.

p Zep. 1.4,5.
q Je. 12.7,8.
r 2 Ch. 8.1,
&c.

s were not right in his eyes.

t i. e. displeasing,
or, dirty.
u Jos. 19.27.

A. M.
2989, 3029.
B. C.
1015, 975.

v c. 5.13.
w 2 Sa. 5.9.
x Ps. 51.13.
y Jos. 19.36.
z Jos. 17.11.

a Jos. 16.10.
Ju. 1.29.

me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods and worship them:

7 Then <sup>1</sup> will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this <sup>2</sup> house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight: and Israel shall be a <sup>3</sup> proverb and a by-word among all people:

8 And at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, <sup>o</sup> Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they shall answer, Because they forsook <sup>p</sup> the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore <sup>q</sup> hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

10 And <sup>r</sup> it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house, 11 (Now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar trees and fir trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee.

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they <sup>s</sup> pleased him not.

13 And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, my brother? And he called them the land of <sup>t</sup> Cabul unto <sup>u</sup> this day.

14 And Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold.

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the <sup>v</sup> levy which king Solomon raised; for to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and <sup>w</sup> Millo, and the wall of <sup>x</sup> Jerusalem, and <sup>y</sup> Hazor, and <sup>z</sup> Megiddo, and <sup>a</sup> Gezer.

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

his father David, now should the throne be established in his family for ever. Solomon, however, soon turned aside to idolatry, and then were fulfilled all the threatenings here subjoined: ten out of the twelve tribes were wrested from his immediate successor; this glorious temple was eventually destroyed, and Israel became "a proverb and a by-word among all people," as we see at this day.

For twenty years, while Solomon was engaged in building the Lord's house and his own palaces, he remained faithful to his profession; and perhaps for seven or eight years afterwards, during which period occurred the several events related in this and the next chapter. First, Solomon "gave to Hiram twenty cities (or towns) in the land of Galilee;" not absolutely, it should seem, but by way of surety for the vast debt he had contracted with him. Hiram, however, came to see these cities, and was by no means pleased with them; and therefore called them "the land of Cabul;" meaning, according to some, "a dirty country;" and according to others, "good for nothing." The probability is, that they were fish-commences ver. 2. and usually rendered "and," is here used for a grammatical reason, and not to connect two events which were probably several years apart; the answer being given long before Solomon had finished all his buildings.

Ver. 10. At the end of twenty years.—This confirms the preceding remark, as it seems to connect with the first verse, and leaves the intervening narrative, of the divine appearance, a kind of parenthesis.

Ver. 13. Cabul.—See Margin. Parkhurst, "Nothing worth." [Josephus says that Cabul, in the Phœnician language, signifies displeasing; and that these cities were situated in the neighbourhood of Tyre. Most commentators from this Hiram took occasion to give this name to all the other cities which Solomon had ceded to him. Jos. xix. 27.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. And Millo.—This is supposed to have been a deep narrow valley, between Silon and Jebus, which Solomon filled up by a wall, and erected on it a fort (so the LXX. render it) with a gate, probably to form a communication, and for holding councils. See Calmét.—Hazor.—[Probably the city Merom or Semehon, and the famous capital of Jabin, situated on the lake Hazor, in Naphtali, and placed by Josephus south of Tyre, near Ptolemais.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Pharaoh . . . had taken Gezer (or Gaza).—This city Joshua had long before taken from the Canaanites; (Josh. x. 33.) but they seem to 17 And Solomon built Gezer, and Beth-horon<sup>a</sup> the nether,

19 And<sup>c</sup> Baalath, and Tadmor in the wilderness, in the land;

19 And all the cities of store that Solomon had, and cities for his<sup>d</sup> chariots, and cities for his horsemen, and<sup>e</sup> that which Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

20 ¶ And all the people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, 21 Their children that were left<sup>f</sup> after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able<sup>g</sup> utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of bond-service<sup>h</sup> unto this day.

22 But of the children of Israel<sup>i</sup> did Solomon make no bondmen: but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.

23 These were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work.

24 ¶ But J Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David unto her<sup>k</sup> house which Solomon had built for her: then did he build Millo.

25 ¶ And three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and he burnt incense<sup>m</sup> upon the altar that was before the LORD. So he finished the house.

A. M.
2583. 3423.
B. C.
1015. 575.
b Jos. 16. 3.
c Jos. 19. 44.
2 Ch. 3. 4.
6, &c.
d c. 4. 26.
e the desire of Solomon which he desired.
f Ju. 3. 1.
g Jos. 15. 63.
17. 12.
h Ju. 1. 28.
Ezr. 2. 58.
i Le. 25. 39.
j c. 3. 1.
k c. 7. 8.
l ver. 15.
c. 11. 27.
2 Ch. 32. 5.
m upon it.

n 2 Ch. 8. 12, &c. o De. 2. 8.
p lip.
q c. 10. 11.
r Job 22. 24.
A. M. 3014.
B. C. 990.
a 2 Ch. 9. 1, &c.
Mat. 12. 42.
b Pr. 1. 5. 6.
c words.
d standing.
e or, butlers.

26 ¶ And<sup>a</sup> king Solomon made a navy ships in<sup>b</sup> Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth on the<sup>c</sup> shore of the Red sea, in the land of Edom.

27 And Hiram sent in the navy his servants<sup>d</sup> shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, the servants of Solomon.

28 And<sup>e</sup> they came to<sup>f</sup> Ophir, and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

CHAPTER X.

1 The queen of Sheba abitheth the wisdom of Solomon. 14 Solomon's gold targets. 18 The throne of ivory. 21 His vessels. 24 His presents. 26 Hiram's ships. 28 His tribute.

AND<sup>a</sup> when the queen of Sheba heard<sup>b</sup> the fame of Solomon concerning the LORD, she came to prove him with<sup>c</sup> questions.

2 And she came to Jerusalem with a great train, with camels that bare spices, very much gold, and precious stones: when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

3 And Solomon told her all her<sup>d</sup> questions: there was not<sup>e</sup> any thing hid from the king which he told her not.

4 ¶ And when the queen of Sheba had<sup>f</sup> all Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built,

5 And the meat of his table, and the service of his servants, and the<sup>g</sup> attendance of ministers, and their apparel, and his<sup>h</sup> bearers, and his ascent by which he went up unto the house of the LORD; there was no spirit in her.

ing towns, upon the lake of Genesareth, occupied chiefly by fishermen and mariners; and though their revenues might be more productive than some splendid cities, they did not answer Hiram's expectations, and he therefore probably refused to accept them in that state; for we are told, in the parallel passage of Chronicles, that "the cities that Hiram (or Hiram) had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there." He built also various other cities, and particularly Tadmor, in the wilderness, since called Palmyra, one of the most splendid cities of the heathen world, and possibly given to king Hiram instead of "the dirty cities" which he despised. Solomon, it is evident, had a great taste for splendour and magnificence, which first appeared in his buildings. These must cost the nation, eventually, a vast expense, the taxes to repay which, probably, occasioned the discontents so observable in the succeeding reign. The labour, however, did not fall on his own people, but on the Canaanites, who were his bond slaves, and performed all the work, except that some of the Israelites were overseers, and some of Hiram's servants were engaged for the more difficult parts of workmanship. Solomon also built a ship, in a port on the Red sea, the first, perhaps, built in Israel. Hiram likewise sent both ships and seamen, which formed a little navy, (as it is called,) and together they made a three years' voyage to Ophir, and brought over 420 talents of gold, great part of which, probably, went to pay their master.

The same love of splendour and distinction which led Solomon to build palaces and ships, led him also to multiply his chariots, contrary to the divine command; still, however, he adhered to the worship of Jehovah, and to the temple service, which he attended at least upon the three great Jewish festivals. Another circumstance is more remarkable. He built, as we have seen, a house for Pharaoh's daughter, immediately as it was finished, brought her up thither, his father's palace in the city of David: "For he said, wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, cause the places are holy, wherunto the ark of the Lord come." (2 Chron. viii. 11.) The meaning of which we suppose to be, that he did not consider a place sanctified by the presence of the ark, as a proper site for a palace of pleasure, which Solomon was now evidently beginning to indulge.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1.—29. The Queen of Sheba visits Solomon.—Both the Arabians and Abyssinians lay claim to queen as their sovereign, and the latter seem to have grounds for so doing. It is probable also that she might a colony in Arabia, and consequently subjects; but A could not be considered as the uttermost parts of the world, because they could go through it by land to Egypt. Solomon sent thither for his horses; and it appears, as the queen attended by a train of loaded camels, that she must have travelled through that country to Jerusalem. It is evident also, her language, that she was not an entire stranger to the land of Israel, though it is probable that she might first have seen Solomon by means of his fleet touching upon her territory.

have recovered it, and kept possession to the time of Solomon. A city burnt, however, and its inhabitants slaughtered, seems to have been but a sorry portion for a king's daughter; but such was the barbarism of the times.

Ver. 18. Tadmor in the wilderness, in the land.—In what land? The land of Zobah, says Dr. Boothroyd, referring to 2 Chron. viii. 3, which, we suppose, means a port of Syria, south of Hamath, to which Solomon extended his conquests. This Tadmor, (or Tamar,) the city of Palms, is generally understood to be Palmyra, of which there are most splendid remains to this day: some of them, possibly, may be as ancient as the time of Solomon, though others furnish the finest specimens of Grecian architecture. Palmyra stood upon a fertile plain, surrounded by a barren desert, having the river Euphrates on the east. The ruins are well described by Messrs. Dawkes and Wood, of which they give fine representations. They are also well described in the ancient part of the Universal History. The description concludes thus: "The world never saw a more glorious city; a city not more remarkable for its stately buildings, than for the extraordinary personages who once flourished there; among whom, the renowned Zenobia, and the incomparable Longinus, must for ever be remembered with admiration and regret."

Ver. 22. Of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bondmen.—When Sesostris, king of Egypt, returned from his wars, he caused temples to be built in all the cities of Egypt, but did not employ one Egyptian in the work: having builded the whole by the hands of the captives which he had taken in his wars. Hence he caused this inscription to be placed upon each temple: "No native has laboured in these."

Ver. 23. These are the chief of the officers.—Five hundred and fifty.—2 Chron. viii. 10, mentions only two hundred and fifty; but in a former part of this book, (chap. v. 16,) we read of three thousand three hundred. This larger number, perhaps, were petty officers, employed to keep the people to labour: the five hundred and fifty were probably superior officers. Some think that the difference in Chronicles may be occasioned by the mistake of a numeral letter; others, that the two hundred and fifty were the superintendents of those who laboured in the building, while the five hundred and fifty were the superintendents over those who laboured in the quarries, &c.

Ver. 26. A navy of ships.—Literally, "ships." (Ovi;) but in 2 Chron. ix. 18, it is said that Hiram sent him (centoth) "ships," but it is not said Solomon built more than one ship, and that was chiefly manned by Tyrians.

Ver. 28. They came to Ophir.—Moses mentions a country so named Ophir the son of Joktan, Gen. x. 29. But this probably was not the place intended. There are several reasons (says Dr. Clarke) to prove that Ophir was not the Ophir of the Bible; (he means, not the place visited by Solomon's fleet,) which it seems was so situated as to require a voyage of three long, to go out, load, and return. Bruce has discussed the subject at length. He endeavours to prove, that Ezion-geber is situated on the E branch of the Arabian gulf, or Red sea. 2. That Tarshish is Moka, or Melinda, in the Indian ocean, in about three degrees south latitude. 3. That Ophir lies somewhere in the land of Sofala, or in the vicinity of the Zambezi, where there is great abundance, from the remotest antiquity. And he proves, 4. That no vessel could perform this voyage in less than three years, because monsoons; that more time need not be employed; and that this is the time mentioned, 1 Kings x. 22. 5. That this is the country of the queen Sheba, or Sabia, (or Azoba,) who, on her visit to Solomon, brought him hundred and twenty talents of gold; and of spices and precious stones, ver. 10. And that gold, ivory, silver, &c. are the natural products of this country.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. When the queen of Sheba heard, &c.—The LXX "Of the name of Solomon and of the name of Jehovah." The Syriac "Of the name of Solomon and of the name of Jehovah." But the Arabic also read pari, "and," instead of lamed, "concerning." But the title is translated "with," in Gen. xvi. 26. "She heard of Solomon's name," which is the sense above adopted.

Ver. 6. And his ascent by which he went up.—The Vulgate, LXX, &c.

6 And she said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in my own land of thy acts and of thy wisdom.

7 Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard.

8 Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom.

9 Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the LORD loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, to do judgment and justice.

10 ¶ And she gave the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.

11 And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of almug trees, and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the almug trees pillars for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such almug trees, nor were seen unto this day.

13 And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty. So she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

14 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred three-score and six talents of gold, 15 Beside that he had of the merchantmen, and of the traffick of the spice merchants, and of all the kings of Arabia, and of the governors of the country.

16 ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of gold went to one target.

17 And he made three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pounds of gold went to one

A. M. 3014.
B. C. 990.

f word

g or, sayings.

h thou hast added wisdom

and goodness
to.

i Pr. 8.34.

j c. 5.7.

k Ps. 72.2.

Pr. 8.15.

l Ps. 72.10.

15.

m c. 9.27.

n 2 Ch. 2.9.

9.10.11.

algumtrees.

o a prop,
or, rails.

p according to the hand of king Solomon.

A. M.

2589. 3029.

B. C.

1015. 975.

q or, captains.

r c. 14.26.

s c. 7.2.

t on the silver part thereof.

u hands.

v eo.

w or, there was no silver in them.

x Ge. 10.4.

2 Ch. 20.

36.

y or,
elephants'
teeth.

z c. 3.12.13.

4.29.34.

a the face of.

b Pr. 2.6.

c. 1.5.

d Ch. 1.14.

&c.

d gave.

e And the going forth of the horses was Solomon's.

f Eccl. 27.7.

g 2 Ki. 7.6.

shield: and the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

18 ¶ Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.

19 The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round behind: and there were stays on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays.

20 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps; there was not the like made in any kingdom.

21 ¶ And all king Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver: it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

22 For the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

23 So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.

24 ¶ And all the earth sought God had put in his heart.

25 And they brought every man his present. vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

26 ¶ And Solomon gathered together chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he bestowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jerusalem.

27 ¶ And the king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars made he to be as the sycamore trees that are in the vale, for abundance.

28 ¶ And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

29 And a chariot came up and went out of Egypt for six hundred shekels of silver, and a horse for a hundred and fifty: and so for all the kings of the Hittites, and for in different parts, during their three years' voyage. Travellers seem to have been always famous for the marvellous; this lady, therefore, doubted of the reports she heard, and was determined to satisfy her laudable curiosity, which appears to have extended not only to Solomon's personal character, but to his religion also. The Hebrew literally reads, that "hearing she heard of Solomon (connected) with the name of Jehovah;" that is, probably, she had heard of his sublime address at the dedication of the temple, and consequently of the temple itself; and this greatly excited her admiration, and induced her to make a journey from "the uttermost parts of the earth" to visit him—for so was Africa then considered, and but a small part of that quarter of the globe was then known.

We are told the queen came to prove Solomon with hard questions: the word is used respecting Samson's riddle, which was a poetical enigma, (Judges xiv. 12, 13.) and is applied to any difficult figure of speech in Psalm xlix. 4. where it is synonymous with parable. Here it certainly does not relate to any amusing trifles, but to points of religion, of government, and of natural history and philosophy. When arrived at Jerusalem, the subjects which chiefly attracted her attention were his buildings, the supply of his table, the number and order of his attendants, and especially the "ascent by which he went up into the house of the Lord;" by this some suppose that he had steps sacredly preserved for his own use: but the word also signifies "burnt-offerings," which he caused to ascend in the house of the Lord: and the best interpreters, both ancient and modern, give a preference to the latter explanation: these sacrifices were so numerous and expensive, that they might well not only create surprise, but so overwhelm her with astonishment, that she fainted.

She also "communed with him of all that was in her heart," stated all the questions that she had proposed, and listened with admiration to his replies. It is likely that much of their discourse was of natural history, and particularly that of Judea; but it is more certain that much of it referred to the and Arabic, all explain this of the holocausts (or whole burnt-offerings) which he offered (or sent up) in the house of the Lord. So Luther, "His burnt-offering which he offered." The burnt-offerings were in Hebrew called ascents, because they went up in smoke and flame.—No more spirit in her.—Probably she fainted from surprise.

Ver. 10. She gave the king a hundred and twenty talents.—Which, at the usual reckoning, amounts to $2,703,960. The most eminent critics follow Houbigant, in placing the 13th verse here, to conclude what concerns the queen of Sheba; otherwise ver. 11, 12, must be considered as a parenthesis.

Ver. 11. Almug trees.—2 Chron. ii. 8, &c. says, "Almug trees," by the transposition of a letter. The Arabic reads, "coloured wood;" i. e. beautifully veined, like mahogany, or satin wood.

Ver. 12. Pillars.—2 Chron. ix. 11. reads "terraces," which Parikhurst renders "stairs."

Ver. 16. Targets.—Probably shields, with a dagger in the centre, like the Highland targets.—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 18. A throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.—The late Editor of Calmet remarks, "Ivory is here called shen gedul, great tooth, a very expressive name." He adds, "But Solomon could never be such a fool as to cover his ivory throne with gold; he inlaid it, not overlaid it; for then, common wood would have answered the purpose."—In corroboration of this.

it may be remarked, that a noun of near kindred to this Hebrew verb, is used for a honey-comb, which is inlaid, not overlaid with honey. It cannot be denied, however, that the word is generally used for overpadding. See Parikhurst.

Ver. 19. Round behind.—Like some of our ancient armed chairs.—Stays on either side.—We should rather say arms; "arm-stays."—Boothroyd.

Ver. 22. A navy of Tharshish.—That is, to support the arms or elbows.

Ver. 23. Exceeded all the kings.—[Reynolds, stating Solomon's income at about four times as much as his father left him, reckons that he had each year about $620,554,630; each week, about $12,255,280; and each day about $1,735,020.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Linen yarn.—This seems to couple ill with horses; but some think the word Mikneh, signifies the cord by which the horses were strung to each other; probably this was made of yarn, woven, and therefore bought by the merchants. See note, 1 Chron. i. 16.

Ver. 29. Chariot of Egypt for six hundred shekels.—[This was the ordinary price of a chariot, as 150 shekels was that of a horse. It seems, that neither horses nor chariots came out of Egypt but by means of Solomon's servants.]—B the kings of Syria, did they bring them out by their <sup>h</sup> means.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Solomon's wives and concubines. 4 In his old age they draw him to idolatry. 9 God threateneth him. 14 Solomon's adversaries were Hadad, who was entertained in Egypt, 23 Rezon, who reigned in Damascus, 26 and Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah prophesied. 41 Solomon's axis, reign, and death: Rehoboam succeedeth him.

BUT king Solomon loved many strange women, <sup>a</sup> together with the daughter of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites;

2 Of the nations concerning which the LORD said <sup>b</sup> unto the children of Israel, Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you: for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods: Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned <sup>c</sup> away his heart.

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect <sup>d</sup> with the LORD his God, as was <sup>e</sup> the heart of David his father.

5 For Solomon went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after <sup>f</sup> Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and <sup>g</sup> went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

worship of Jehovah, and the divinely instituted religion of the Jews; for she not only complimented him on his wisdom and prosperity, but she also said, "Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the Lord loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king to do judgment and justice!" Nor were her words empty compliments, for she presented him with one hundred and twenty talents of gold, with spices and precious stones, and he in return gave her not only "whatsoever she asked," but also a present "of his royal bounty" besides.

Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold, which, according to Bishop Cumberland, was about fifteen millions of dollars, and so rich was he in this precious metal, that he made shields, and targets, and drinking vessels of gold; besides which he overlaid with it a throne of ivory which he had formed, and added golden ornaments. Indeed, so plentiful in his days was gold, that silver was nothing accounted of.

His first naval expedition proved so successful, that he formed connexions at Tarshish, from whence, in every three years, he received not only immense riches, but various objects of curiosity; and so far forgot the divine command, that he multiplied to himself chariots and horses also; but these he brought out of Egypt.

But if we quit this chapter without adverting to another personage more illustrious than either Solomon or the queen of Sheba, the latter will "rise up in judgment against us" another day; for "she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold a greater than Solomon is here!" (Matt. xii. 42.) Solomon in all his glory was but a type of King Messiah: "Princes shall come out of Egypt" to visit him: "Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands" toward him: "His name shall be continued as long as the sun; and all nations shall call him blessed. And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen and Amen." (Psalm lxxvii. 31.; lxxii. 17—19.)

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—13. Solomon seduced into idolatry by strange women.—We have seen in the preceding chapter the amazing increase of Solomon in fame and riches; and the natural consequences of these, unless guarded by divine grace, are pride, luxury, and licentiousness. Many a man, by increasing in riches, "lays up wrath against the day of wrath," (Rom. ii. 5.) and not only so, but by indulging in luxury and licentiousness, delivers himself into the "hands of the tormentors (disease and a guilty conscience) before his time." We have already noticed that Solomon had "multiplied to himself" riches from Tarshish, horses from Egypt, and wives from all the heathen nations round him; each of which was strongly and expressly forbidden to a king of Israel by the divine law, which he either did copy, or ought to have copied, with his own hand, on his accession to the throne. (Deut. xvii. 15—18.)

Solomon had probably around him many Jonadabs, (the 2889. 3020.

A. M.
B. C.
1015. 975.

b hand.
A. M.
3040. 3029.
B. C.
961. 975.

a or, beside.
b Ex. 34. 16.
De. 7. 3, 4.

c De. 17. 17.
Ne. 13. 23.

d e. 9. 61.
e called Molech.
ver. 7.

f fulfilled
not after.
Nu. 14. 24.

h Nu. 33. 52.
2 Ki. 23. 13.

i Nu. 21. 29.
Ju. 11. 24.
J. Pa. 78. 58.

k e. 3. 5.
9. 2.

A. M.
3020. 3027.
B. C.
961. 977.

l with thee.
m Is. 23. 13.
14.

n ver. 31.
o e. 12. 16, 20.

p e. 21. 25.
2 Ki. 20.
17. 19.
22. 19, 20.

q 2 Sa. 7. 15.
ver. 38.

r De. 12. 11.

7 Then did Solomon build a high place <sup>b</sup> for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon.

8 And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense and sacrificed unto their gods.

9 ¶ And the LORD was angry <sup>c</sup> with Solomon because his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, which had appeared unto him <sup>d</sup> twice,

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded.

11 Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon Forasmuch as this is <sup>e</sup> done of thee, and thou hast not kept <sup>f</sup> my covenant and my statutes which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend <sup>g</sup> the kingdom from thee, and will give it <sup>h</sup> to thy servant.

12 Notwithstanding in thy <sup>i</sup> days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit <sup>j</sup> I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which <sup>k</sup> I have chosen.

panders of his lust, (see 2 Sam. xiii. 5.) who collected young and beautiful virgins from all the nations round to furnish her seraglio, in which no regard appears to have been paid, even the fundamental principle of not intermarrying with the Canaanites, for the Zidonians were certainly of that accursed race.

That Solomon loved many women cannot be denied; but say that he loved a thousand would be perfectly ridiculous; nor is it to be inferred from the number in his harem, (or seraglio, since it appears that where there were "threescore queens and fourscore concubines," there were also "virgins without number.") The fact is, that in the East, women are kept in the harems of sovereigns for state, as well as voluptuousness. (See note on ver. 3.) The distinction between wives and concubines is well known; the former are generally from families of some rank, and their marriage makes them all princesses, though not queens. The concubines are mere slaves, and generally selected for their beauty, or sent by way of present to the sovereign. Such is the condition of women in the East. The Mosaic code did much to restrain their tyrants! But Christianity sets them free, for in "Christ Jesus there is neither bond nor free, male nor female;" both sexes are alike interested in his blessings. (Gal. iii. 28.)

But to return to Solomon, he seems to have been unhappy in his partial to "strange," that is, to foreign women, who were generally, if not universally, idolaters; and one reason may have been, that they excelled in certain accomplishments which were acquired in the service of their idol deities. It is probable also that he was deceived, as Christians are to the present day. At first, they might promise to renounce their idols and worship the God of Israel: afterwards, they would plead for their own idolatries as the religion of their fathers, in which they had been brought up, and so procure a toleration. The next step might be to entice him to be present, and to join in the seducing rites; and thus, though it does not appear he ever renounced the God of Israel, he united with his worship that of Moloch and others. Nor is this much to be wondered at when we consider that in the present day we can hardly go to any public dinner among Christians, and even for Christian objects, but our ears are greeted with the praises of "Jol Baccelus," the lewd Venus (the Ashtoreth of the Zidonians) or the "Glorious Apollo." It may be said, these are allegorical personages, and so were all the Pagan deities; but the disposition toward, and the enjoyment of, these follies, prove as clearly as the idolatry of Solomon, a "heart turned from the Lord;" and must provoke him to anger, as that did.

This is an evil to which the professors of religion need to be awakened; and to another also, in which this seems partly to originate; namely, the excessive admiration of the Pagan writers, and their extensive use in education, by which means such of our youth as are liberally educated acquire a much better acquaintance with the heathen deities than with the Christian Trinity.

Ver. 5. Ashtoreth the goddess.—That is, the Venus of the Zidonians.—Moloch—"The king;" another name for Molech, (ver. 7.) which signifies a king, i. e. among the gods, like Jupiter.

Ver. 7. Chemosh.—The swift, or the hot god; i. e. the sun.—In the hill.—This was the Mount of Olives, which lay east of Jerusalem; and that the Hebrews would consider before it, while the west would be behind it; for the very term used to denote the east, kedem, means before, while acharon hind, sometimes signifies the west.—Bagster.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 3. He had seven hundred wives, &c.—Weak and impious as, in this respect, Solomon was, he was by no means singular; all the eastern despots aim at forming large seragios. Father Le Compte says, that the emperor of China had a vast number selected for their beauty. The great Mogul, 1000. Achmet, the 8th emperor of the Turks, had 3000 virgins and concubines; and Hemacy mentions that the emperor of Persia collected all the beautiful virgins in his dominions, which are supposed to have amounted to a far greater number 14 ¶ And the LORD * stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom.

15 For it came to pass, when † David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male * in Edom;

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom:)

17 That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child.

18 And they arose out of † Midian, and came to * Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him a house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

19 And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife * the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and † that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, * Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, * Nothing: howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his lord † Hadadezer king of Zobah:

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when † David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, beside the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

26 ¶ And † Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman, even he lifted up † his hand against the king.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon built † Millo, and † repaired the breaches of the city of David his father.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon seeing the young man that he † was industrious, he made him ruler over all the † charge of the house of Joseph.

29 And it came to pass at that time when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet Ahijah † the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field:

30 And Ahijah caught * the new garment that was on him, and rent it in twelve pieces;

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for † thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee:

32 (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)

33 Because † that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

34 Howbeit † I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David * my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes:

35 But † I will take the kingdom out of his

Ver. 14—43. Solomon reaps the consequences of his rebellion.—The Lord, on this occasion, denounces on Solomon very heavy judgments for his disobedience. They are expressed, however, very differently from those denounced on Saul and other characters utterly rejected by him. Here is no personal destruction, not even deprivation during his life, nor even a total deprivation in the succeeding reign. Trials and difficulties in his government are announced, calculated to make him deeply sensible of his iniquities, yet not to sink him into despair. "I will afflict the seed of David," said he to Jeroboam, "but not for ever." (Ver. 39.)

But who were the adversaries raised up to punish Solomon? 1. Hadad, a prince of Idumea, who fled from Edom when Joab ravaged that country, but had since formed an alliance with the king of Egypt, whose daughter Solomon had married. 2. Rezon, one of the generals of Hadadezer, king of Zobah, who seized upon Damascus, where he reigned, and distressed Solomon in his declining years. And chiefly, 3. Jeroboam, a bold and enterprising man, of the tribe of Ephraim, who had been employed by Solomon in a confidential office, and having gained great influence with the people, had now begun to excite a disposition to revolt. Solomon hearing of this fact, sought Jeroboam's life, which occasioned him to flee to Egypt till after his death: then the folly of Rehoboam brought back Jeroboam, and raised him to the throne of Israel, though not of Judah, and fulfilled the threatened judgment.

Ver. 17. A little child.—(Rather, "a little boy;" one who was apprehensive of his danger, and could, with his father's servants, make his escape.)—E.

Ver. 18. Midian.—(Probably not the Midian east of the Red sea, to which Moses fled, (Ex. ii. 15, &c.) but the Midian east of the Dead sea, and south of Moab. These Midianites, whose daughters seduced the Israelites to commit idolatry, (Nu. xxii. 4, 7; xxv. 15; xxxi. 2, &c.) were descendants of Midian, son of Abraham, (Ge. xxv. 2.) Their capital city was called Midian, and its remains were to be seen in the time of Eusebius and Jerome: it was situated on the Arnon, south of the city Ar, or Areopolis.—Paran.—Probably the city of Paran, or the district around it, situated in the south of Idumea, and according to Eusebius, three days' journey east from Elah or Elath, at the head of the eastern branch, or Elanitic gulf of the Red sea.)—Bagster.

Ver. 22. He answered, Nothing.—i. e. to Pharaoh's question, not being

Of the last years of Solomon we have little account; we are told that they were recorded, but these records were probably lost with many others of great value during the captivity. The wonder is, and it calls for great thankfulness, that so many were preserved. The repentance of Solomon, and the evidence he gave of it, must be deferred till we come to the book of Ecclesiastes, which, if genuine, (and that we shall endeavour to prove,) will establish the fact in the same manner as the fifty-first Psalm proves the penitence of David, after "the matter of Uriah."

We must not wholly omit here to mention an incident in this chapter which is necessary to introduce the chapters following. Jeroboam having been officially employed, that his appearance might correspond with his office, clothed himself in a new, and probably a splendid garment; and thus arrayed, he meets in a field the prophet Ahijah, of Shiloh, who tears his garment into twelve pieces; thus intimating, by tearing his garment, that the kingdom of Israel should be rent; (1 Sam. xv. 28.) and by giving to Jeroboam (who doubtless well knew him) ten of these pieces, ten tribes were submitted to his government. This meeting, on the part of Jeroboam, was apparently accidental; but there are no accidents in the providence of God. The prophet was doubtless directed where to meet with him, and how to act towards him; and at the same time, as he announced to him a kingdom, he was given to understand that the perpetuity of his kingdom would depend willing to acquaint him with his reason; only he said, "Howbeit let me go."

Ver. 24. Damascus.—(Damascus, called also Damesek, but generally El Sham, by the Arabs, is situated in a delightful plain, well watered by the Barrada, at the eastern foot of Antilibanus, being surrounded by the hills in the form of a triumphal arch, 136 miles north of Jerusalem, 195 south of Antioch, and 276 S.S.W. of Diarbekir. It is a city of the highest antiquity, being at least as ancient as the time of Abraham; it has been often captured, and several times demolished, but has always risen to splendour and dignity. The modern town is described by Muradrell as of a long, straight figure, its ends pointing nearly N. E. and S. W. It is very slender in the middle, but swells bigger at each end, especially at that to the N. E. According to Niebuhr, the walls are something less than a league and a half in circumference; and the population is estimated at from 100,000 to 150,000.)—Bagster.

son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.

36 And unto his son will I give <sup>a</sup> one tribe, that <sup>r</sup> David my servant may have a <sup>a</sup> light alway before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

38 And it shall be, if <sup>t</sup> thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did; that <sup>u</sup> I will be with thee, and <sup>v</sup> build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee.

39 And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but <sup>w</sup> not for ever.

40 Solomon sought <sup>x</sup> therefore to kill Jeroboam. And Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

41 ¶ And <sup>y</sup> the rest of the <sup>z</sup> acts of Solomon, and all that <sup>h</sup> he did, and his wisdom, are they not written in the book of the acts of Solomon?

42 And the <sup>a</sup> time that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel was forty years.

43 And Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam <sup>b</sup> his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XII.

<sup>i</sup> The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him. <sup>6</sup> Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men, answereth them roughly. <sup>16</sup> Ten tribes revolting, kill Adoram, and make Rehoboam to flee. <sup>21</sup> Rehoboam, raising an army, is forbidden by Shemaiah. <sup>25</sup> Jeroboam strengtheneth himself by cities, <sup>26</sup> and by the idolatry of the two calves.

AND <sup>a</sup> Rehoboam went to Shechem: for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when <sup>b</sup> Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, heard of it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt;)

3 That they sent and called him. And Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying, upon his obedience to the divine law, and especially his adhering to the worship of Jehovah only, as David had always done.

4 Thy father made our yoke <sup>c</sup> grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—33. Rehoboam succeeds king Solomon, but ten tribes, as predicted, revolt to Jeroboam.—Immediately on the death of Solomon, Rehoboam succeeded to the throne: in order, however, to his coronation, he went to meet the tribes at Shechem. In the mean time, the disaffected tribes send for Jeroboam from Egypt, who immediately returns, and placing himself at their head, they send in proposals to Rehoboam, that if he would abate the rigour of his father's levies, both of taxes and of personal service, he might rely on their fidelity, but not otherwise. We are told in a preceding chapter, (ix. 19—22,) that Solomon's immense buildings were all reared by his Canaanites and other bond-slaves: it should seem, however, as his works increased, that he did not entirely confine himself to them: but the "grievous yoke" here complained of, may refer chiefly to the heavy taxes imposed to defray the expense of building his own palaces, as well as the temple, and to repay king Hiram for the timber and gold which

5 And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam consulted with the old <sup>d</sup> men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou wilt be a servant <sup>e</sup> unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words <sup>f</sup> to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him:

9 And he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with <sup>g</sup> scorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people <sup>h</sup> roughly, and forsook <sup>i</sup> the old men's counsel that they gave him;

14 And <sup>k</sup> spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people; for <sup>l</sup> the cause was from the Lord, that he might perform his saying, which the Lord spake <sup>m</sup> by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

he had sent him; which last he seems to have lavished with great profusion. What is gained without labour is often expended without care.

Rehoboam on receiving this message immediately applied to his father's counsellors, whom he had not yet dismissed. These very prudently recommended a conciliatory answer; but this not agreeing probably with his own sentiments, he next consulted the young men about his court, who had been brought up with him, and their advice was directly opposite. Upon Jeroboam and the tribes, or rather the heads of them, returning on the third day, according to appointment, Rehoboam therefore answered roughly—"My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions." "The very words, (as Bishop Hall remarks,) have stings in them."

The event was as predicted, and as might have been expected without an oracle. "To your tents, O Israel!" was the cry; and, "Now see to thine own house, David!" Thus the haughty ther; and the use I shall make of it to oppress and tax you shall be in proportion.]—Bagster. But we do not find Rehoboam adopted it.

Ver. 11. Scorpions.—[Should you rebel, or become disaffected; my father's whip shall be a scorpion in my hand. His was chastisement, mine shall be punishment. Ceistus and Hiller conjecture that akrabhim, denotes a sort of thorny shrub, whose prickles are of a venomous nature, called by the Arabs scorpion thorns, from the exquisite pain which they inflict. But the Chaldee renders it margenim, and the Syriac morayyad, i. e. scourges; and in the parallel place of Chronicles, the Arabic has saut, a scourge. Isidore, and after him Cabmet and others, assert, that the scorpion was a sort of severe whip, the lashes of which were armed with knots or points, that sunk into and tore the flesh.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Cause was from the Lord.—[The cause of all this confusion and anarchy, was Rehoboam's folly, cruelty, and despotic tyranny, and this was certainly not "from the Lord;" nor does the original text speak this doctrine. It says, ebbah, (from sawan, to turn, change), "the change or revolution was from the Lord;" which is consistent with all the preceding declarations. God stirred up the people to revolt from a man who had neither skill nor humanity to govern them.]—Bagster.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What <sup>a</sup> portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

17 But <sup>a</sup> as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent <sup>p</sup> Adoram, who was over the tribute; and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. Therefore king Rehoboam <sup>a</sup> made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 So <sup>a</sup> Israel <sup>a</sup> rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.

21 ¶ And <sup>a</sup> when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, a hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

22 But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for <sup>a</sup> this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam built <sup>a</sup> Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence and built <sup>a</sup> Penuel.

A. M. 3029.
B. C. 975.
n 2 Sa. 20.1.
oc. 11.13, 36.
p c. 4.6.
5.14.

q strengthened himself.
r 2 Ki. 17.21.

s or, fell away.

t Hos. 11.12.
u 2 Ch. 11.1,
&c.

ver. 15.

w Ju. 9.45.

x Ju. 8.17.

y De. 12.5, 14.

z 2 Ki. 10.
29.
17.16.

a Ex. 32.4, 8.

b Ge. 23.19.

c Ju. 18.29.
Am. 8.14.

d De. 21.15.
c. 13.24.

e Nu. 3.10.
2 Ki. 17.
32.

f Eze. 44.6.
8.

g Le. 23.33,
34.

g or, went up to the altar.

h or, to sacrifice.

i Am. 7.13.

j or, went up.

k Nu. 15.39.

l to burn.

m c. 13.1.

N. A. 3030.
B. C. 974.

a c. 12.32, 33.

b or, offer.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David:

27 If this people go up to <sup>a</sup> do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves <sup>a</sup> of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold <sup>a</sup> thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in <sup>b</sup> Beth-el, and the other put he in <sup>c</sup> Dan.

30 And this thing became <sup>a</sup> a sin: for the people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan.

31 And he made a house of high places, and made priests <sup>a</sup> of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.

32 And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast <sup>a</sup> that is in Judah, and he <sup>a</sup> offered upon the altar. So did he in Beth-el, <sup>a</sup> sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el <sup>a</sup> the priests of the high places which he had made.

33 So he <sup>a</sup> offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised <sup>a</sup> of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, <sup>a</sup> and <sup>a</sup> burnt incense.

CHAPTER XIII.

<sup>1</sup> Jeroboam's hand, that offered violence to him that prophesied against his altar at Beth-el, withered, 6 and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. <sup>7</sup> The prophet, refusing the king's entertainment, departeth from Beth-el. <sup>11</sup> An old prophet, seducing him, bringeth him back. <sup>20</sup> He is reproved by God, <sup>23</sup> slain by a lion, <sup>26</sup> buried by the old prophet, <sup>31</sup> who confirmed his prophecy. <sup>33</sup> Jeroboam's obstinacy.

AND, behold, there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the LORD unto Beth-el: and <sup>a</sup> Jeroboam stood by the altar to <sup>a</sup> burn incense.

2 And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith temper of one man, and the ambitious disposition of another, conspire to fulfil the divine purpose, "for the cause was from the Lord." Jeroboam was, however, no better than his master. No sooner is he settled in his kingdom, than he adopts a wicked policy to prevent the tribes from going to the temple service. He does not indeed set up Moloch, or Ashtoreth; but forms images, probably in some measure resembling the cherub figures, which the sacred writer in derision characterizes as calves—made priests of any of the people—established a feast in imitation of the feast of tabernacles—and offered sacrifices on altars of his own erecting. (See note ver. 28.)

Confined as our room is, we must beg leave to indulge in two or three practical remarks. 1. How does one sin lead on to another! Jeroboam makes gods, and to render them popular they are made of gold. But gods require priests, priests an altar, an altar a high place, and thus does one sin and folly lead on to others. 2. How great the folly of attempting to make religion serve our own private ends! Jeroboam will be religious; but it is to serve his political views, lest Israel should go to Jerusalem. 3. How ridiculous to set up any thing in the place of God! Call it what you will, it is still a calf: make it of gold, it is but "a golden calf." Lastly, how fit a type is this calf of "the mammon of unrighteousness!" the great idol which not only the heathen but the Christians worship. But let us remember who hath said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. vi. 24.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—34. A man of God prophesies against Jeroboam's new altar, but is slain by a lion in consequence of his being deceived by another prophet.—In this chapter, the following things particularly claim our notice. 1. A prediction of the utter destruction of Jeroboam's altar by a certain person hereafter to be born. "Here, (says Bishop Watson,) is a clear prophecy: the name, family, and office of a particular person are described in the year 975 (according to the Bible chronology) before Christ. Above 350 years after the delivery of the prophecy, you will find by consulting the Second Book of Kings (chap. xxiii. 15—20.) this prophecy fulfilled in all its parts."

2. We have a twofold miracle wrought to confirm the truth of this prophecy: first, on Jeroboam himself, who attempts to arrest the prophet; and secondly, on the altar, which is rent, and the ashes poured out. This miracle too has in it mercy as well as judgment. He that smote the king of Israel also healed him.

3. We have here a diabolical, though successful attempt, of an old prophet to seduce a young one; and when ordered to predict his untimely death, he neither shows tenderness to the unhappy prophet of Judah, nor any compunction for having been himself the cause thereof. "I cannot but think, (says Bishop Hall,) that this prophet ('the man of God,') died in the favour of God, though by the teeth of a lion; his life was forfeited for example, his soul was safe. . . . Violent events do not always argue the anger (i.e. wrath) of God. But, Oh! the unsearchable ways of the Almighty! The man of God sins and dies speedily: the lying prophet that seduced him survives: yea, wicked Jeroboam enjoys his idolatry, and treads upon the grave of his reprobate. There is neither favour in the delay of stripes, nor displeasure in the haste: rather, whom God loves, he chastises, sharply and speedily, while the rest prosper unto condemnation. How much happier is it for us, that we die now to live for ever, than that we live awhile to die for ever!"

Of the characters here described, we know nothing but the facts before us, which are much in favour of the young pro-

Ver. 20. The tribe of Judah only.—This was the only whole tribe: for it is evident from the next verse, that part of Benjamin remained with Judah. Ver. 28. Made two calves of gold.—He invented a political religion, and instituted feasts in his own times, different from those appointed by Jehovah; gave the people certain objects of adoration, and pretended to think that it would be both inconvenient and oppressive to them to go up to Jerusalem to worship. These calves were doubtless of the same kind as the calf which was set up by Aaron; and it is remarkable, that in pointing them out to the people, he should use the same words that Aaron used on that occasion, when they must have heard what terrible judgments fell upon their forefathers for this idolatry. Solomon's idolatry, however, had prepared the people for Jeroboam's abomination.—Bosser.

Ver. 29. Beth-el and Dan.—The southern and northern extremities of Canaan brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcass in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, Alas, <sup>a</sup> my brother!

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; lay <sup>a</sup> my bones beside his bones:

32 For the saying which he cried by the word of the Lord against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of <sup>b</sup> Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

33 ¶ After <sup>c</sup> this thing Jeroboam returned not from his evil way, but <sup>d</sup> made again <sup>e</sup> of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he <sup>f</sup> consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places.

34 And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to <sup>g</sup> cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Abijah being sick, Jeroboam sendeth his wife disguised with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. 5 Ahijah, forewarned by God, denounceth God's judgment. 17 Abijah dieth, and is buried. 19 Nadab succeedeth Jeroboam. 21 Rehoboam's wicked reign. 25 Shishak spoileth Jerusalem. 29 Ahijah succeedeth Rehoboam.

AT that time Abijah the son of Jeroboam fell sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam; and get thee to Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which <sup>a</sup> told me that I should be king over this people.

3 And <sup>b</sup> take <sup>c</sup> with thee ten loaves, and <sup>d</sup> cracknels, and a <sup>e</sup> cruise of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to <sup>f</sup> Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah. But Ahijah could not see; for his eyes <sup>g</sup> were set by reason of his <sup>h</sup> age.

5 ¶ And the Lord <sup>i</sup> said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

his day: "Wo unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them." (Luke xi. 47.) Again, "When I die, (said he,) lay my bones by his bones." And do not many professing Christians flatter themselves, that, by being buried in ground consecrated by the ashes of the saints, they shall also rise with them; and foolishly hope to escape that eye which seeth all things! (See Psalm cxxxix. 7-12.)

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1-31. Jeroboam's reign and death; the apostasy of Rehoboam and of Judah.—Jeroboam's son falling sick, he sends his wife in disguise to Ahijah, to inquire respecting his recovery. The prophet was, however, apprized of her visit; and though blind, immediately as she set her foot within his door, he calls her by name, denounces the death of the youth, the terrible destruction of Jeroboam's house, and that the ten tribes should be carried away captive. The death of the youth is, however, not threatened as a judgment upon himself, for he is "taken from the evil to come," and obtains this honourable distinction—"He only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave" in peace, because in him there was found "some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel;" which plainly intimates that he was not a mere infant, but had discovered evidence of early piety. For other particulars of Jeroboam's

Ver. 32. Cities of Samaria.—As it is certain Samaria was not yet built, either, 1. This name was afterwards inserted by the compiler of the book; or, 2. It was uttered by the spirit of prophecy: or, 3. (which seems most probable,) the hill was called by this name before the city was built on it. See note on chap. xvi. 24.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 3. Take with thee . . . cracknels. (Nekudim.)—(Spotted or perforated cakes; either, as some suppose, thin cakes pierced with holes, the same as is called Jenos' bread to the present day, and used by them at the passover; or, as Harmer imagines, cakes spotted with seeds, as with sesamum, Roman coriander, &c. such as he proves from Ravvolff, Russell, and Hanway, are still used in the East. This was certainly not a present that proclaimed royalty; but it does not appear to have been, in the estimation of the East, a present only fit for a country woman to have made, as Bp. Patrick supposes: for D'Arvieux informs us, that when he waited on an Arab emir, his mother and sisters sent him a present of pastry, honey, and fresh butter.

A. M. 3036. 3050.
B. C. 974. 954.

z Je. 22.18.

A. M. 3018.

B. C. 956.

a 2 Ki. 23.

16. 23.

b c. 16.24.

c c. 12.31. 32.

2 Ch. 11.

15; 13.9.

d returned and made.

e 2 Ti. 3.13.

f filled his hand.

Ju 17.12.

g c. 14.10.

Pr. 13.6.

a c. 11.31.

d 1 Sa. 9.7, 8.

c in thy

hand.

d or, cakes.

e or, bottle.

f c. 11.29.

g stood for his hour-

ness.

h Ec. 12.3.

i Ps. 139.1, 4.

j hard.

k c. 16.2.

l c. 11.31. 38.

m c. 15.5.

n c. 12.28.

o 2 Ch. 11.15.

p Pa. 108.29.

q c. 15.29.

r De. 32.36.

s 2 Ki. 14.26.

t ver. 17.

u Ec. 18.14.

&c.

v 2 Ch. 19.3.

w c. 15.27.

29.

x De. 28.63.

66.

Jos. 23.15.

16.

y Ps. 52.5.

z 2 Ki. 15.29.

17.6.

a De. 12.3, 4.

Is. 1.23, 29.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with <sup>i</sup> heavy tidings.

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Forasmuch <sup>k</sup> as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And rent <sup>l</sup> the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee: and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, who <sup>m</sup> kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart; to do that only which was right in mine eyes;

9 But hast done evil above all that were before thee: for <sup>n</sup> thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke <sup>o</sup> me to anger, and hast cast <sup>p</sup> me behind thy back;

10 Therefore, behold, I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off <sup>a</sup> from Jeroboam him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut <sup>r</sup> up and left in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone.

11 Him <sup>s</sup> that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the Lord hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house: and when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall <sup>t</sup> die.

13 And all Israel shall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because <sup>u</sup> in him there is found <sup>v</sup> some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

14 Moreover the Lord shall raise him up a king over Israel, who <sup>w</sup> shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what? even now.

15 For the Lord shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and <sup>x</sup> he shall root <sup>y</sup> up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter <sup>z</sup> them beyond the river, because they have made their <sup>a</sup> groves, provoking the Lord to anger.

reign, we are referred to "the book of Chronicles," while the historian returns to Rehoboam, and the house of Judah.

By the age of Rehoboam, it should seem that he must have been born before the accession of his father Solomon; but in this there seems to be some mistake. (See note on ver. 21.) His mother being an Ammonite, though for a while she might profess to be a proselyte, yet it is probable that afterwards she was one of the strange wives that turned away the heart of Solomon to idols. It was not therefore to be expected that Rehoboam should be clear from idolatry, especially as he appears to have been not only a weak, but a vicious man, and to have laid no restraint on the morals of the people; so that they not only worshipped idols, but served them with rites the most abominable and obscene.

In consequence of these enormities, the Lord was pleased to suffer Shishak, king of Egypt, to invade Jerusalem, when he plundered both the temple and the palace of their treasures; and particularly took away the three hundred shields of beaten gold, which Solomon had made, as already mentioned. But for a fuller account of this invasion, we are again referred to Chronicles; in the mean time we may remark upon the different characters of these rival and contemporary kings. Rehobwith a basin of sweet-meats of Damascus.]—Bagster.—A cruise—Either of skin or earthenware. In the East, no person thinks of asking information, or any kind of favour, without some present. See on 1 Sam. ix. 7.

Ver. 6. Heavy tidings.—All hard substances are heavy. Sounds are heavy which are dismal or alarming.

Ver. 10. Every man.—The common version is as in 1 Sam. xiv. 22. We conceive the sense of the verse to be, "every man who walks the streets, and every one who is conciliated at home;" and to complete the contumely of the expression, they are all compared to dung.

Ver. 13. Some good thing.—The Hebrew debar, signifying primarily word, some have hence inferred, that he was now a young man, past childhood, and that he had been bold enough to speak "a good word" (as we should say) on the part of Jehovah, and against idolatry: and this accounts for his death being so generally lamented.

Ver. 14. But what? even now.—These expressions are evidently elliptical 16 And he shall give Israel <sup>b</sup> up because of the sins of Jeroboam, who <sup>c</sup> did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to <sup>d</sup> Tirzah: and when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him; and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake <sup>e</sup> by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he <sup>f</sup> warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he <sup>g</sup> slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. Rehoboam was <sup>h</sup> forty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city <sup>i</sup> which the Lord did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

22 And Judah did evil in the sight of the Lord, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done.

23 For they also built them high <sup>k</sup> places, and <sup>l</sup> images, and <sup>m</sup> groves, on every high hill, and <sup>n</sup> under every green tree.

24 And <sup>o</sup> there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

25 ¶ And <sup>p</sup> it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

26 And he took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all the shields of gold <sup>q</sup> which Solomon had made.

27 And king Rehoboam made in their stead

boam, though the son of Solomon, was a weak and irresolute man; and notwithstanding he saw the evils which idolatry had brought on his father and himself, he had neither wisdom nor resolution to resist it. Jeroboam, on the other hand, was artful, active, and decided in his character; yet, though he knew the ten tribes had been given him in consequence of Solomon's apostasy, he also became an apostate and an idolater; but not exactly in the same way. The king of Judah worshipped heathen idols, and by heathen rites. The king of Israel made idols of his own, and attempted a middle path, by imitating the temple worship, with images, and rites, and by priests of his own making, as in the case of Micah, the Ephraimite. (See Judg. xviii. 14, &c.) The one worshipped false gods, the other the true God, as he pretended; but it was in a way contrary to his appointment. It is difficult to say which is the most offensive to the divine Being; both, however, we well know, proceed from the same source, "an evil heart of unbelief."

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—34. The reign of Abijam and Asa in Judah; and in Israel, of Nadab, who is slain, with all the house of Jeroboam, by Baasha, his successor.—Abijam, we have seen, was the son of Rehoboam, and "walked in all the sins of his father," in which Maachah, his mother, certainly en-and may be paraphrased as follows: "But what, speak I of a king to be raised up? Even now the judgment is begun in the death of the young prince Abijah."

Ver. 17. Tirzah.—Tirzah was a city of Ephraim, to which tribe Jeroboam belonged; and appears to have been pleasantly situated, as it is said in Ca. vi. 4. "Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah," though its precise situation cannot now be ascertained. It seems to have been the royal city, and the seat of government for a long time after the revolt of the ten tribes, till Omri built Samaria.—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Rehoboam was forty and one years old.—There is some difficulty attending this age of Rehoboam. If he were forty-one years of age at his father's death, it not only makes Solomon to have married two years before he came to the crown, but it is hard to explain how he could then be "young and tender hearted." See 2 Chron. xiii. 7. Two Greek fragments read, "Sixteen years old when he began to reign;" but this is slight authority; it is followed however by Houbert, Boothroyd, Clarke, &c. Capellus prefers 22 years, but this is wholly conjectural. See Boothroyd, also Wall's Crit. Notes.

Ver. 24. There were also sodomites.—"Prostitutes, male or female, were,

A. M. 3048.
B. C. 956.

b Ps. 81. 12.

c c. 15. 30, 34.

16. 2.

d c. 16. 6, 8.

A. M.

3029. 3050.

B. C.

975. 954.

e ver. 12, 13.

f 2 Ch. 13. 2.

&c.

g lay down.

h 2 Ch. 12. 13.

A. M.

3029. 3046.

B. C.

975. 953.

i c. 11. 36.

j De. 32. 21.

Ps. 78. 58.

k Eccl. 1. 22.

l Eccl. 1. 24.

25.

m or, standing images, or,

statues.

n 2 Ki. 17. 9,

10.

o Is. 57. 5.

Je. 3. 13.

p De. 23. 17.

2 Ki. 23. 17.

q A. M. 3024.

B. C. 970.

r 2 Ch. 12. 2,

&c.

q c. 10. 17.

r runners.

A. M. 3048.

B. C. 958.

s c. 12. 24.

15. 6.

t 2 Ch. 12. 16.

Abijah.

Abia. 1. 17.

Abia.

A. M.

3046. 3049.

B. C.

958. 955.

a 2 Ch. 13. 1,

&c.

b 2 Ch. 11.

20. 22.

c 2 Ch. 13. 2.

Michaelah

the daughter of Uziel.

d 2 Ch. 11. 21.

Abiath.

e c. 11. 4.

f 2 Ch. 21. 7.

g or, and 12.

c. 11. 36.

A. M. 3049.

B. C. 955.

h 2 Ch. 14. 1,

&c.

brazen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the <sup>r</sup> guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the Lord, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard chamber.

29 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

30 And <sup>s</sup> there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

31 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess. And <sup>t</sup> Abijam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Abijam's wicked reign. 8 Asa succeedeth him. 11 Asa's good reign. 16 The war between Baasha and him causeth him to make a league with Ben-hadad. 23 Jehoshaphat succeedeth Asa. 26 Nadab's wicked reign. 27 Baasha, conspiring against him, executeth Abijam's prophecy. 31 Nadab's acts and death. 33 Baasha's wicked reign.

NOW <sup>a</sup> in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijam over Judah.

2 Three years reigned he in Jerusalem. And <sup>b</sup> his mother's name was <sup>c</sup> Maachah, the daughter of <sup>d</sup> Abishalom.

3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart <sup>e</sup> was not perfect with the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father.

4 <sup>f</sup> Nevertheless for David's sake did the Lord his God give him a <sup>g</sup> lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem.

5 Because David did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him <sup>h</sup> a the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.

6 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all the days of his life.

7 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Abijam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was war between Abijam and Jeroboam.

8 And <sup>i</sup> Abijam slept with his fathers; and couraged him. (See ver. 13.) His son Asa was, however, a very different character, and "did what was right in the eyes of the Lord, like David his father." He banished the Sodomites, pulled down his father's idols, and even removed his grandmother from being queen, because she had made a filthy idol—which he burnt by the brook Kidron. For some unknown reason, the high places, indeed, which were occasionally used for sacrifice, were not removed; yet "his heart was perfect with the Lord all his days;" i. e. he served him alone, and no idol, as was the case with David, who turned not aside all his days from the divine precepts, "save only in the matter of Uriah." What, then, was that David's only sin? Far from it. He sinned in numbering the people, and in various other instances; for these he offered atonement, and they were blotted out; but this was a sin so complicated and enormous, that (though certainly forgiven) it will remain a blot upon his memory while the Scriptures of the Old Testament are in existence; and it is thus marked, to show that acts of treachery and murder are no less abhorrent to God, than acts of rebellion against himself.

Perpetual warfare was a natural consequence of the separation of the land of Israel into two kingdoms; in consequence of which we find there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam.

among the Canaanites and apostate Jews, sacred to Venus; they practised their abominable impurities as acts of religion;" also the gains of prostitution were dedicated to their idols.

Ver. 31. Abijam.—This name is also spelt Abihu, and Abiah. See Matt. i. 7. CHAP. XV. Ver. 2. Abijam's mother's name.—Consequently the grandmother of Asa.—Abishalom.—i. e. Abshalom. 2 Chron. xi. 21. so the LXX. always spell it. Josephus says that "Maachah was a grand-daughter of Abshalom, by Thamar his daughter." 2 Chron. xiii. 2. we read, Abijah's mother's name was Michaelah (a different spelling for Maachah) the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah; probably the husband of Thamar.—Dr. Wall.

Ver. 4. A lamp in Jerusalem.—That is, a son to reign there, ch. xi. 36.

Ver. 6. There was war, &c.—Instead of Rehoboam, fourteen MSS. the Arabic, and some copies of the Targum, read Abijam. The Syriac has Abia, the son of Rehoboam; and the Editio Princeps of the Vulgate has Abia. This is doubtless the true reading, as otherwise it would be an unnecessary repetition of ch. xiv. 30. and a repetition which interrupts the history of Abijah; see 2 Chr. xiii. 3, &c.]—Bagster.

he buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.

10 And forty and one years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.

11 And Asa did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, as did David his father.

12 And he took away the Sodomites out of the land, and removed all the idols that his fathers had made.

13 And also Maachah his mother, even her he removed from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove; and Asa destroyed her idol, and burnt it by the brook Kidron.

14 But the high places were not removed: nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord all his days.

15 And he brought in the things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the Lord, silver, and gold, and vessels.

16 ¶ And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built Ramah, that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

18 Then Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants: and king Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying,

19 There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold; come and break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

20 So Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maachah, and all Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali.

21 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in Tirzah.

22 Then king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah; none was exempted: and they took away the stones of Ramah,

A. M. 3049, 3090.
B. C. 955, 914.

i. e. grand-mother's, ver. 2.

12 Ch. 15, 16, &c.

k cut off.

1 Fx. 32, 20.

m. 22, 43.

n holy.

o 2 Ch. 16, 1, &c.

A. M. 3074.

B. C. 930.

p Jos. 18, 25.

q c. 12, 27.

r c. 11, 23, 24.

s go up.

t Ch. 15, 29.

u Jos. 18, 29.

v 2 Sa. 20, 14.

w free.

x Jos. 21, 17.

y Jos. 18, 26.

z Ch. 16, 12.

A. M. 3090.

B. C. 914.

a 2 Ch. 17, 1, &c.

b Mat. 1, 8, called Joseph.

A. M. 3051.

B. C. 953.

c reigned.

d c. 14, 14.

e Jos. 21, 23, c. 16, 13.

f c. 14, 9, 16.

g c. 14, 22.

h ver. 16.

i c. 12, 28, 29, 15, 33, 34.

j c. 14, 16.

Is. 1, 4.

A. M. 3073.

B. C. 931.

a ver. 7.

2 Ch. 19, 2, 20, 34.

b c. 15, 33.

and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded; and king Asa built with them Geba of Benjamin, and Mizpah.

23 ¶ The rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.

24 And Asa slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ And Nadab the son of Jeroboam began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years.

26 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 ¶ And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him, and Baasha smote him at Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines; for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon.

28 Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto the saying of the Lord, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite:

30 Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith he provoked the Lord God of Israel to anger.

31 Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

32 ¶ And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years.

34 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

CHAPTER XVI.

1, 7 Jehu's prophecy against Baasha. 6 Elah succeedeth him. 8 Zimri, conspiring against Elah, succeedeth him. 11 Zimri executeth Jehu's prophecy. 15 Omri, made king by the soldiers, forceth Zimri desperately to burn himself. 21 The kingdom being divided, Omri prevailed against Tibni. 23 Omri buildeth Samaria. 25 His wicked reign. 27 Ahab succeedeth him. 29 Ahab's most wicked reign. 34 Josiah's curse upon Heil, the builder of Jeichu.

THEN the word of the Lord came to Jehu the son of Hanani against Baasha, saying, boam—Abijam and Jeroboam—Asa and Baasha, and so on, while the two kingdoms subsisted. By perpetual warfare, however, we need not understand perpetual slaughter; but continual enmity, with frequent petty skirmishing, though not worth recording. So, in the last mentioned instance; though there was much animosity between the contemporary kings, there was no open war till Baasha began to build the fortress of Ramah, near Jerusalem, in order to cut off all communication between the two kingdoms. (See note on ver. 17.) But here it should seem Asa's faith, as well as his feet, failed him, and the Lord sent a prophet to reprove him for it, as we shall find in the parallel account of Chronicles. (2 Chron. xvi. 7, &c.) Asa, however, thought it necessary to bribe Benhadad, king of Syria, to assist him, by attacking some of the principal cities of Israel: he thus compelled Baasha to give up his design. Asa then summoned the people throughout Judah to destroy what Baasha had erected, which appears to have been of great strength, as he built or fortified two other towns with the stones and timber taken therefrom.

The sacred historian now marks the fulfilment of Ahijah's prophecy, of destruction to the house of Jeroboam. Baasha not only destroyed his son Nadab, then on the throne, but left not "any that breathed," according to the saying of the Lord by his servant Ahijah, of Shiloh, because of the sins of Jeroboam, and "the provocation wherewith he provoked the Lord God of Israel to anger." So truly is it "a fearful (awful) thing to fall in the hands of the living God." (Heb. x. 31.)

CHAP. XVI Ver. 1—34. Jehu the prophet, announces the Ver. 9. In the twentieth year of Jeroboam reigned Asa.—By ver. 1. Abijam began to reign in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam, reigned through the nineteenth, and began the twentieth, in the latter part of which Asa began his reign. The Hebrews reckon any part of three years or days, as three years or days. This remark will be found important, when we come to speak of the resurrection of our Saviour.

Ver. 13. From being queen.—Some read, "From the queen;" i. e. Asa's wife, over whom she might assume authority.—She had made an idol in a grove.—This refers to an obscene priapean figure, made for Venus. The Vulgate renders it, "a most abominable image;" and in 2 Chron. xv. 16. an image of Priapus. This idol Asa destroyed, or cut to pieces, then burnt, and probably threw its ashes into the brook Kidron.

Ver. 14. The high places were not removed.—That is, as some explain it, those employed to sacrifice to Jehovah; for otherwise we learn, 2 Chron. xiv.

5. "He took away out of the cities of Judah all the high places and the images," meaning all the high places with images which were used for idol worship; or, perhaps, he took the high places out of all the cities or great towns, but not out of all the villages. See Dr. John Edwards.

Ver. 17. Built Ramah.—(By building Ramah is here meant fortifying it in order to prevent all intercourse with the kingdom of Judah, lest his subjects should cleave to the house of David: for Ramah was a city of Benjamin situated on the confines of both kingdoms, probably on a hill, as the name imports, commanding a narrow defile between the mountains, through which lay the principal road to Jerusalem; so that a fortification being erected here, no communication could be held between the people of Israel and Judah, without Baasha's permission.)—Bagger.

CHAP. XVI Ver. 1. Son of Hanani.—He also was a prophet, see 2 Chron. xix. 2

2 Forasmuch <sup>a</sup> as I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel; and thou hast walked in the way <sup>d</sup> of Jeroboam, and hast <sup>e</sup> made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins;

3 Behold, I will <sup>f</sup> take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house; and will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

4 Him <sup>g</sup> that dieth of Baasha in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth of his in the fields shall the fowls of the air eat.

5 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written <sup>h</sup> in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

6 So Baasha slept with his fathers, and was buried in <sup>i</sup> Tirzah: and Elah his son reigned in his stead.

7 And also by the hand of the <sup>j</sup> prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his <sup>k</sup> house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in <sup>l</sup> provoking him to anger with the work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and because <sup>m</sup> he killed him.

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

9 And his servant <sup>n</sup> Zimri, captain of half his chariots, conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, drinking himself drunk <sup>o</sup> in the house of Arza <sup>p</sup> steward of his house in Tirzah.

10 And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him not one <sup>q</sup> that pisseth against a wall, <sup>r</sup> neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake <sup>s</sup> against <sup>t</sup> Baasha by Jehu the prophet,

13 For all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking

A. M. 3073.
B. C. 931.

c. 14.7.

d. c. 15.34.

e. Mat. 5.19.

f. ver. 11.

g. c. 14.11.

A. M. 3074.

B. C. 930.

h. 2 Ch. 16.1.

i. c. 15.21.

j. ver. 1.

k. Ex. 20.5.

l. ver. 13.

m. c. 15.27.

29.

A. M. 3075.

B. C. 929.

n. 2 Ki. 9.31.

o. Na. 1.10.

p. which was

q. 1 Sa. 25.22.

r. or, both

s. ver. 3.

t. by the hand of.

u. c. 15.30.

v. Dr. 32.21.

1 Sa. 12.

Is. 41.29.

Jo. 2.8.

R. 1.21.

23.

1 Co. 3.4.

10.19.

w. ver. 8.

x. c. 15.27.

y. 2 Sa. 17.23.

Ps. 9.16.

z. c. 12.28.

15.26.34.

a. Pr. 23.2.

Is. 9.19.

21.

19.2.

Mat. 12.

25.

A. M.

3079.3086.

13. C.

925.918.

b. 2 Ch. 22.2.

c. Shomeron.

d. c. 13.22.

2 Ki. 17.34.

Jn. 4.4.

Ac. 8.5.8.

e. Mi. 6.16.

<sup>a</sup> the LORD God of Israel to anger with their <sup>v</sup> vanities.

14 Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in <sup>w</sup> Tirzah. And the people were encamped against <sup>x</sup> Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him <sup>y</sup> with fire, and died, 19 For his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, in <sup>z</sup> walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did to make Israel to sin.

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel divided <sup>a</sup> into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri.

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri <sup>b</sup> to reign over Israel, twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, <sup>c</sup> d Samaria.

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil <sup>e</sup> in the eyes of the LORD, and did worse than all that were before him.

death of Baasha, who is slain by Zimri, but succeeded by Omri, and Omri by Ahab.—Baasha, though he was himself the instrument of destruction to Jeroboam's family, was so infatuated as to tread in the steps of that wicked prince, which entailed upon himself the same destruction. When, however, the Lord says, "I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel," we must not consider this as giving any sanction to the treachery or cruelty of Baasha, who was no better than a rebel and an assassin; but as marking the sovereignty of His providence, who, as Daniel saith, "changeth the times and seasons; removeth kings, and setteth up kings" at his pleasure; yet so as not to interfere with the free agency of men, or excuse their criminality. On the contrary, the same judgment was executed on Baasha as he had executed on Nadab the son of Jeroboam. Elah the son of Baasha succeeded his father, but he had not reigned more than two years when he also was slain by one of his own captains, while "drinking himself drunk" in the house of one of his servants!

The triumph of Zimri was, however, very short; he reigned but seven days, when the army, which were encamped at Gibbethon, hearing of his treachery, proclaimed Omri, their

Ver. 7. Because he killed him.—That is, Nadab, and the family of Jeroboam.—Rab. Sol. Ben Jarchi.

Ver. 8. Twenty and sixth year.—(Baasha began to reign in the third year of Asa, and reigned 24 years; yet he died and was succeeded by Elah in the 26th year of Asa; and, in like manner, Elah, who began to reign in the 26th year of Asa, and was killed in the 27th, is said to have reigned two years. Thus it is evident that a part of a year is calculated as a whole year. In the Chinese annals, the whole year in which a king dies is ascribed to his reign, the years of the succeeding king being reckoned only from the beginning of the following year.)—Baxter.

Ver. 23. In the thirty and first year of Asa.—There is a difficulty in this chronology, which the learned Rabbi, Sol. Ben Jarchi, (as quoted by Dr. Clarke), thus explains: "The division of the kingdom between Tibni and Omri, began in the twenty-seventh year of Asa, (and) lasted five years (or, between four and five.) Tibni dying, Omri came into possession of the whole commander-in-chief, king; and he immediately led them against Zimri, who, to avoid being taken, set fire to the king's palace, and burnt that and himself together. The nation was not, however, unanimous. One half the people, we are told, followed Tibni, while the other, including the army, remained attached to Omri; he was, however, no better than his predecessors, but followed the idolatries of Jeroboam. The only fact here thought worthy of recording is, that he bought the hill of Shemer, and built thereon the city of Samaria, which became afterwards the capital of the kingdom of Israel, and a rival city to Jerusalem.

Omri was succeeded by his son Ahab, who is branded beyond all his predecessors for idolatry, and "did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him." Such was the progress of idolatry in a nation singled out from all others to be witnesses for the true God against the idols of the Gentiles! Some may be ready to wonder what there could be so bewitching in idolatry. The truth appears to be, that every man by nature (as saith the prophet Jeremiah) "walks after the imagination of his own heart," and "the imagination of man's heart is only evil, and that continually." Men's depraved fancies picture to them-kingdom in the thirty-first year of Asa, and reigned seven years." So Dr. Wall; but the text divides the time more equally.

Ver. 24. Shemer; owner of the hill, Samaria.—Dr. Clarke renders this verse, "He bought the hill of Shomer from Shomer, and called it Shomer-o-i, (i. e. Little Shomer,) after the name of Shomer, owner of the hill." This city was situated nearly in the centre of the kingdom, about midway between Dan and Beer-sheba. [Samaria was situated on an agreeable and fertile hill in the tribe of Ephraim, 12 miles from Dothaim, and four from Atharoth, according to Eusebius, and one day's journey from Jerusalem, according to Josephus.] According to Dr. Richardson, it is 16 hours or 48 miles north from Jerusalem, and six from Shechem, or Nablous. The kings of Israel omitted nothing to render it the strongest, richest, and most splendid of cities. It was destroyed by Hyrcanus, rebuilt by Galinius, and greatly enlarged and fortified by Herod the Great, who called it Sebaste in honour of Augustus. It is now a small village, called Sabasta.—Baxter.

26 For he walked <sup>f</sup> in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their <sup>g</sup> vanities.

27 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he showed, <sup>are</sup> they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD above <sup>h</sup> all that <sup>were</sup> before him.

31 And it came to pass, <sup>i</sup> as if it had been a light <sup>j</sup> thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife <sup>k</sup> Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the <sup>l</sup> Zidonians, and <sup>m</sup> went and served Baal, and worshipped him.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

33 And Ahab made a <sup>n</sup> grove; and Ahab did more <sup>o</sup> to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the Bethelite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, according to the word of the LORD, which he <sup>p</sup> spake by Joshua the son of Nun.

CHAPTER XVII.

<sup>1</sup> Elijah, having prophesied against Ahab, is sent to Cherith, where the ravens feed him. <sup>8</sup> He is sent to the widow of Zarephath. <sup>17</sup> He raiseth the widow's son. <sup>24</sup> The woman believeth him.

AND <sup>a</sup> Elijah the Tishbite, <sup>who</sup> was of the inhabitants of Gilead, said unto Ahab, <sup>As</sup> <sup>b</sup> the LORD God of Israel liveth, before <sup>c</sup> whom I stand, there <sup>d</sup> shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.

2 And the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that <sup>is</sup> before Jordan.

4 And it shall be, <sup>that</sup> thou shalt drink of the selves gods like themselves; lewd, cruel, drunken, ferocious gods; but a God all pure and all perfect, is the delight only of the renewed heart. Gen. vi. 5. Jer. xxiii. 17. Psalm cxv. 8.

The chapter closes with noticing the rebuilding of Jericho, which Hiel did in defiance of the divine curse, and at the expense of losing both his eldest and his youngest sons; but those who defy God, must take the consequences. This passage contains the remarkable fulfilment of a prophecy delivered by Joshua, between four and five centuries prior to the event. (Josh. vi. 26.)

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1—24. Elijah sent with a message to Ahab; fed by ravens; multiplies a widow's meal and oil, and restores her son to life.—Elijah is here introduced in a very

Ver. 34. He laid the foundation, &c.—The sense above is that most usually given; but the Chaldee favours the idea of his having sacrificed his sons on these occasions. See 2 Kings iii. 27. Others suppose, that during the progress of building <sup>all</sup> his children died: i. e. when the foundations were laying the eldest died, and the last or youngest when the gates were set up. Nor is it improbable, that they died by some casualty, as the falling of stones or timbers, and the like.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 4. I have commanded the ravens.—[Some have thought that the prophet Elijah, instead of being fed by ravens, was supplied by merchants, or Hielians, or the inhabitants of the city Arbo. But, 1. Orevim, is never used singly to denote merchants; nor would God have said, generally, that he had commanded the merchants, but have specified <sup>what</sup> merchants he had commanded. 2. The word is not read orevim but aravin when it signifies Arabs; nor is it likely that they should be found in that district. 3. The inhabitants of Arbo, or Orbo, if any city of that name then existed, must have been called, according to the genius of the Hebrew language, aroyim, or arabim, not orevim. 4. The solemn declaration of good Obadiah, that Ahab took an oath of <sup>every</sup> people, that he was not concealed among them, shows that his situation required the utmost privacy, even to solitude, and that it was impossible for him to remain concealed among the inhabitants of the country. 5. When the brook was dried up, the prophet was obliged to quit brook; and I have commanded the ravens <sup>e</sup> to feed thee there.

5 So he went and did according unto the word of the LORD: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

6 And <sup>f</sup> the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.

7 And it came to pass <sup>g</sup> after a while, that the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land.

8 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

9 Arise, get thee to <sup>h</sup> Zarephath, which <sup>be-</sup> longeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee.

10 So he arose and went to Zarephath. And when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman <sup>was</sup> there gathering of sticks: and he called to her, and said, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And as she was going to fetch <sup>i</sup> it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thy hand.

12 And she said, <sup>As</sup> the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but a handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruise: and, behold, I <sup>am</sup> gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and <sup>j</sup> die.

13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go <sup>and</sup> do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake <sup>k</sup> first, and bring <sup>it</sup> unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son.

14 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruise of oil fail, until the day that the LORD <sup>k</sup> sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat <sup>l</sup> many days.

16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruise of oil fail, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake <sup>m</sup> by Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, <sup>that</sup> the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said unto Elijah, <sup>n</sup> What have I abrupt manner, without any intimation either of his family or tribe: it is only said that he was a Tishbite; meaning, as is generally understood, a native of Tisbeh, a city of Gad, in the land of Gilead. It should seem, however, by the abruptness of the address, that he was previously well known to king Ahab, and that he had warned him of the judgments about to be inflicted for his idolatries.

The language here used is in the highest degree authoritative, and marks his prophetic character as second only to Moses: "As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word." Here we may observe, 1. The period was not limited: the phrase seems equivalent to our expression, his asylum, which he needed not to have done had a people been his suppliers, as they could have brought him water as well as food. 6. Hence we may justly conclude, that these orevim were true ravens, as it is rendered in nearly every version. —Bagger. The Heb. orev serves as to include every species of corvus, receiving both its Hebrew and Latin name from its peculiar hoarse note; but here probably means the rook. These birds are gregarious, and ro sometimes in very large flocks: their flights are morning and evening. Such a flock might be directed to form a rookery in the prophet's neighbourhood. They do not live on carrion, but on corn and insects. See Encyclop. Brit. in Corvus.

Ver. 9. Zarephath.—Called by Obadiah, ver. 20. Sepharad, and by St. Luke, Sarepta, Luke iv. 26. This was near to Zidon, or Sidon.

Ver. 12. A barrel.—The word translated "barrel," properly signifies a jar, and is the same with that used for the vessels in which Gideon's soldiers concealed their torches, and which they brake when they blew their trumpets. —Harnier.

Ver. 18. What have I to do with thee?—The woman had already been convinced that Elijah must be a prophet, and knowing that it was the office of a prophet to reprove for sins, she began to suspect that this judgment might be sent to punish her for the sins of her former life. The phrase often occurs in the New Testament. See John ii. 4.

to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And he cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

21 And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again.

22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived.

23 And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth.

24 And the woman said to Elijah, Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

* In the extremity of famine, Elijah, sent to Ahab, meeteth good Obadiah. 9 Obadiah bringeth Ahab to Elijah. 17 Elijah, reproving Ahab, by fire from heaven convinceth Baal's prophets. 41 Elijah, by prayer obtaining rain, followeth Ahab to Jezreel.

AND it came to pass after many days, that the word of the LORD came to Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, show thyself unto Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth.

2 And Elijah went to show himself unto Ahab. And there was a sore famine in Samaria.

3 ¶ And Ahab called Obadiah, which was the governor of his house. (Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly:

4 For it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took a hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.)

5 And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all the fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts.

6 So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah?

8 And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

9 And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me?

10 As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, he is not there; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.

11 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me: but I thy servant fear the LORD from my youth.

13 Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid a hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here: and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely show myself unto him to-day.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him: and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that troubleth Israel?

18 ¶ And he answered, I have not troubled

"for some years;" the actual period of drought being dependant on the king's conduct, and might be shortened by his repentance. The judgment was also indefinite: "Neither dew nor rain, but according to my word;" which St. James explains thus: "Elias (or Elijah) prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not: he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James v. 17, 18.)

During this period, the prophet is ordered to conceal himself by the brook Cherith, near Jordan, where he is miraculously supplied with food. "Ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening, and he drank of the brook." Many idle questions have been asked on this subject, and sceptical writers have indulged their profane wit on it. (See note on ver. 4.) There seems to us, however, nothing ridiculous in supposing a colony of rooks might be directed to his retreat, and as these feed not on carrion, but on corn and insects, it is very conceivable that they might not only form a granary for the prophet, but furnish him with locusts, which were not only clean food by the Mosaic law, (see note on Levit. xi. 22,) but the very food on which his antitype John Baptist, subsisted in the wilderness. Certainly he who "feeds the young ravens when they cry," could be at no loss for means to feed the prophet; and if the Lord did it by means of creatures voracious or unclean, it is not a singular instance; for he often feeds his people by instruments more unclean than ravens.

After a while, however, (perhaps a year or more,) the prophet is ordered to shift his situation, and is directed to a poor Gentile widow in the coasts of Zidon, in the last extremity of want, but who appears to have known and feared the God of Israel. To her he is sent, to save her life, and the life of her son, while at the same time she supplies his wants out of his miraculous supply: for it is very observable that neither the prophets, nor our Lord himself, ever wrought a miracle for their own supply.

This Gentile widow was eminently "a child of Providence," and Elijah was the Lord's almoner, by whom her necessities were relieved, and her life was saved. Another severe trial now awaits her, in the death of her only son; but hereby another instance is afforded of the power of faith and prayer: the youth is restored to life, and the prophet's character is fully established: "Now by this (said she) I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the Lord in thy mouth is truth."

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—20. Elijah meets Obadiah, and afterwards Ahab, and challenges the priests of Baal.—Elijah seems to have spent the first year of his retirement with the rooks or ravens; the second year he spent with the widow, and lived with her on the miraculous supply of food which he had been the instrument of procuring; after which her son died, and was restored to life. It was probably about the close of the third year of the famine, that Elijah received orders to seek and show himself to Ahab. He meets Obadiah in search after grass to keep alive the cattle, and finds that Ahab was gone to the opposite part of the kingdom. His return must require some time, and when Elijah meets him, and gives the challenge to Baal's priests, it would require some time to collect four hundred and fifty of them, and to collect all Israel to be witnesses of this important contest. The prophets of Baal being defeated, are imprisoned, and afterwards slain, all which events might well occupy six months, and make out the full period of three years and six months, as mentioned by our Lord, and by St. James.

Ver. 19. Into a loft.—Bouthrooyd renders it "an upper room;" doubtless it was the prophet's own bed-chamber.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. In the third year.—[This form of expression, both in Hebrew and Latin, means "after the third year," i. e. sometime between the third and fourth year. Hence this statement agrees with that of our Lord, (Lu. iv. 25) and St. James, (ch. v. 17.) who say that the drought lasted three years and six months; and the fact itself is attested by Menander, who, as cited by Josephus, says it happened in the time of Ithobalus, the father of Jezebel.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. When Jezebel cut off the prophets.—It appears that the schools of the prophets, instituted by Samuel, were not wholly broken up before the time of Elisha, the successor of Elijah; it seems, however, from this passage, that they had been greatly persecuted by the wicked Jezebel, and that a massacre of them had taken place not long before.

Ver. 10. No nation or kingdom.—It should seem Ahab must have obtained considerable influence with the surrounding nations, to have exacted this oath from them; but it is highly probable that they hated Elijah as much as Ahab did.

Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim.

19 Now therefore send and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.

20 So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

21 ¶ And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word.

22 Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under:

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD: and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken.

25 ¶ And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, hear us. But there was no voice, nor any that answered. And they leaped upon the altar which was made.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.

28 And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them.

29 And it came to pass, when midday was past, and they prophesied until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any that regarded.

30 ¶ And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down.

31 And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, Israel shall be thy name:

32 And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench round about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

33 And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time.

35 And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

A. M. 3093.
B. C. 906.
q c. 21.20.
r 2 Ch. 15.2.
s 1 Sa. 15.12.
2 Ki. 2.25.
t c. 16.33.
u c. 22.6.
v 2 Ki. 17.41.
Mat. 6.31.
w or thoughts.
x Jos. 24.15.
y c. 19.10.
z 1 Ch. 21.26.
2 Ch. 7.1,3.
a The word
is good.
b or, answer.
c Ps. 115.
5-8.
Mat. 5.
1 Co. 12.2.
d or, heard.
e or, up and down at the altar.
f with a great voice.
g Is. 41.23.
h or, meditation.
i hath a pursuit.
j Le. 19.23.
k poured out blood upon them
l ascending
in attention.
m Ge. 32.23.
n Le. 1.6-8.
p went.
q ver. 32, 33.

It seems not a little remarkable, that so wicked a prince as Ahab should employ so pious a man as Obadiah; yet he was not the only man who feared the Lord in this degenerate age and country: the Lord had registered in the book of his remembrance "seven thousand, who had not bowed the knee to Baal." (Chap. xix. 18.) He had served the Lord from his youth up, probably in consequence of a religious education, and so happily was he impressed by it, that neither the smiles of Ahab nor the frowns of Jezebel could tempt him to idolatry, or deter him from the service of Jehovah.

Elijah, according to the divine command, appoints to meet, and, under the divine protection, meets him fearless. "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" said the king. The prophet replies, and it should be remembered, replies in the name of his divine master, "I have not troubled Israel; but thou and thy father's house, (i. e. the house of Jeroboam,) ye have troubled Israel, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of Jehovah, and thou hast followed Baalim. Now therefore (adds the prophet) send, and gather to me all Israel, unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal, four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table." On this, one would expect to see the prophet seized, and suffer immediately military execution; but no: He who hath in his hand the hearts of kings, bows the haughty monarch to submission; and, instead of hurling at him the royal javelin, he sends forth his decree, for all the tribes of Israel, and for all the prophets of Baal, to meet Elijah at an appointed time.

But in this, what could be Ahab's motive? Did he indeed dare to set his idol in opposition to Jehovah, and accept in his name a challenge from the God of Israel? The probability seems, that his mind was tortured with conflicting passions and distracting fears. The prayers of the prophet had closed the doors of heaven, and there was no prospect before them, but of absolute starvation. If Baal could do any thing for them, now was the time to show it; if not, who can tell but that if the prophet were to see the starving multitude before him, his compassion might be moved to pray for rain for them? It was a sort of forlorn hope; a last resource; and nothing but a miracle could now save the country.

Ver. 21-46. The grand contest between Elijah and Baal's prophets decided by fire from heaven.—The tribes are now assembled; the king and all Baal's prophets on the one hand, and Elijah on the other, supported only by "the hand unseen." Elijah now addresses Israel, in language at once simple, sublime, and energetic, on the great importance of decision in religion. How long halt ye between two opinions? "If Jehovah be (the true) God, follow him; but if Baal, follow him." And the people answered him not a word. What could they answer? They knew that they were apostates; and they felt that they were starving for their apostasy. They would fain serve two masters, the God of Israel, and the idol Baal: they about the altar" like birds. It is generally thought that Baal represented the sun, and was worshipped with the same rites as Apollo, whose priests were accustomed to run round his altars with many antics. Baal is generally represented on Medals, with a human face, embellished with the horns and ears of a bull or cow. See Fragments to Calmet.

Ver. 27. Cry aloud, he is a god, &c.—Vishnoo sleeps four months in the year; and to each of the gods some particular business is assigned. Vayoo manages the winds, Vuroonu, the waters, &c. According to a number of fables in the puranas, the gods are often out on journeys, or expeditions. Ward's Hindoos.—He is talking.—Is in a profound reverie: or, he is pursuing; i. e. the chase, perhaps, for the heathen heaven admitted of all the carnal pleasures of the present world: or, the words (sig to) may be rendered in connexion with the preceding, "He has lost himself;" i. e. in reverie. The LXX, however, render the words, "delivering oracles;" i. e. these referring to acts of the mind.

Ver. 28. Cut themselves.—If we look into antiquity, we shall find, that nothing was more common in the religious rites of several nations than this barbarous custom. To this purpose we may observe, that the priests of Belshazzar, when they sacrificed to that goddess, leameared the victim with their own blood.

Ver. 30. He repaired the altar of the Lord.—[This altar of Jehovah was probably built in the time of the judges; and it was even known among the heathen by the name of the altar of Carmel. Both Tacitus and Suetonius mention an altar on mount Carmel, which Vespasian went to consult, there was no temple nor statue, but simply an altar, venerable for its antiquity. A priest, named Basilides, officiated at this altar, and assured him that all his

Ver. 15. To day.—That is, without delay. See Psalm xc. 7.

Ver. 19. Mount Carmel.—[Mount Carmel is situated north of Dora and south of Ptolemais or Acre, from which it is distant, according to Josephus, 120 stadia, or, according to Thevenot 3 miles, one of its principal points advancing considerably into the Mediterranean, and forming an elevated promontory. It is described by Volney as a flattened cone, about 3000 feet (some say 1500) in height, very rocky, its sides steep and rugged, and the soil neither deep nor rich. Captain Mangley says it is now quite barren, though at the north eastern foot of it there are some pretty olive grounds.]—Bagster.—The prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty.—These belonged to Ahab's establishment; but Jezebel his queen appears to have had a separate establishment of four hundred prophets (or priests) of the groves: or, as some render the Heb. (Ashtero) Ashtarte, which was another name for Venus. These lived in the groves of Jezebel, and boarded at her table, but do not appear to have been present on this occasion, perhaps because they were not prophets of Baal, but Ashtarte.

Ver. 21. How long halt ye between two opinions.—Literally, "branches," which some explain of sects, parties, &c. in religion. Gesenius, Julius Bate, Parkhurst, and others, suppose here an allusion to birds hopping between two branches, without fixing on either; so Israel vacillated between the worship of Jehovah and of Baal.—If the Lord be God.—Heb. (with the article) the God; i. e. the true God. See ver. 39.

Ver. 26. Answered.—The same Heb. word signifies both to hear and answer, and is translated both ways in this verse, which seems unnecessary; we should rather read, "Nor any that heard."—And they leaped.—The same word is here used as above for halting, perhaps in ridicule; they hopped

36 And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, "LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word."

37 Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

38 Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

40 And Elijah said unto them, "Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape. And they took them: and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon, and slew them there."

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain.

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees,

43 And said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, "Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not."

45 And it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

46 And the hand of the LORD was on Elijah; and he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Elijah, threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beer-sheba. 4 In the wilderness, being weary of his life, he is comforted by an angel. 9 At Horeb God appeareth unto him, sending him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha. 19 Elisha, taking leave of his friend, followeth Elijah.

AND Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by to-morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree: and he requested for himself loved the latter, because he was whatever they were pleased to suppose him, "such an one as themselves;" but he could give them no rain. They were willing also to serve JEHOVAH; but then he was a jealous God; and with a divided heart, as theirs was, they could not serve him.

Decision is requisite in all cases of great importance, and most of all in religion: and not less so to Christians than to Jews. It is said of the late Emperor of France, when he was overrunning Europe, that some of the minor powers requested to be neutral; but he answered in the emphatic language of our Saviour, "He that is not with me, is against me." (Matt. xii. 30.)

Elijah proposes to put the matter to issue, by offering to each object of worship, his God and theirs, a bullock in sacrifice. The animal was to be prepared, and laid upon the altar, with wood under it, but no fire, "and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God!" This proposal was the more reasonable, if Baal, whose name signifies Lord, was the representative of the sun, "Lord of this lower world," and therefore the god of fire. It is agreed. The people answer, "It is well;" and the prophets of Baal dare not gainsay it. They first prepare their sacrifice; the wood is laid on the altar, and the animal on the wood: but where is the fire to consume it? Nothing seems wanting in point of zeal or energy on the part of Baal's prophets, who are evidently in an agony of anxiety and distress, not only running round and leaping on the altar, which they were accustomed to do, but cutting themselves with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them. We have in Scripture several other instances of the extravagant conduct of idolaters, in cutting themselves, as expressions of attachment or lamentation, particularly in the prophecy of Jeremiah. (See chap. xvi. 6; xli. 5; xlvii. 5; xlviii. 37.) But the Israelites were forbidden to do this, (Levit. xix. 28. Deut. xiv. 1.) and we cannot believe these acts of self-mutilation and will-worship less abhorrent to the God of Christians than the God of Israel. Bishop Hall says, "I do not find that the true God ever required or accepted the self-tortures of his servants: he loves true inward mortification of our corruptions; he loves the subduing of our spiritual insurrections, by due exercises of severe restraint; but he takes no pleasure in our blood."

The prophet, seeing to what length of superstition their zeal led them, ridicules their folly in a vein of the keenest irony, especially if we take the several words in reference to acts of mind: "He is meditating, perhaps, and lost in reverie; or he has studied himself into a sleep, and must be awakened."

projects would be crowned with success. These various circumstances prove that it was originally the altar of Jehovah, though in the time of Vespasian occupied by a heathen priest, and devoted to lying vanities.—Bagster.

Ver. 38. The fire of the LORD fell.—This was the usual token of divine acceptance among the Hebrews; see note on Gen. iv. 4. The heathen also considered the consummation of a sacrifice by lightning in the same point of view.

Ver. 41. A sound of abundance.—See Margin. Probably a remarkable whistling of the wind. See Taylor's Script. Index.—Between his knees.—This, according to M. Chardin, is a common posture of meditation in the East.

Ver. 44. A little cloud out of the sea.—[Kekaph ish, "like the hollow of a man's hand," in the form of a hand bent, the concave side downwards. A similar phenomenon is noticed by Homer, and was observed by Bruce in Abyssinia, as attending the inundation of the Nile. Every morning, about nine, a small cloud, not above four feet broad, appears in the east, whirling violently round, as if upon an axis; but arrived near the zenith, it first abates its motion, then loses its form, and extends itself greatly, and seems to call up vapours from all opposite quarters. These clouds having attained nearly the same height, rush against each other with great violence, and put me always in mind of Elijah foretelling rain on Mount Carmel.]—Bagster.

Ver. 46. Girded up his loins.—That is, tucked up his upper garment into his girdle, that he might not be incommoded, as is common in running.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 4. A juniper tree. So Rab. Kimoni and Jarchi; but Rab. Ben Gerson says, "the Spanish broom." Celsus contends strongly for this; so Parkhurst; but the juniper, in some countries, grows to a considerable height. See Job xxx. 4. and Taylor's Script. Index.

that he might die; and <sup>a</sup> said, It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life; for <sup>b</sup> I am not better than my fathers.

5 And as he lay and slept under a juniper tree, behold, then an angel <sup>c</sup> touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there was a cake baked on the coals, and a cruise of water at his <sup>d</sup> head. And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; because the journey is too great for thee.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that meat forty <sup>e</sup> days and forty nights unto Horeb the <sup>f</sup> mount of God.

9 ¶ And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the LORD came to him, and he said unto him, What doest thou here, Elijah?

10 And <sup>g</sup> he said, I have been <sup>h</sup> very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain <sup>i</sup> thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

11 And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount <sup>j</sup> before the LORD. And, behold, the LORD passed by, and a great and strong wind <sup>k</sup> rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD; but the <sup>l</sup> LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake;

12 And after the earthquake a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice.

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he <sup>m</sup> wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave. And, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, What doest thou here, Elijah?

14 And he said, I <sup>n</sup> have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken <sup>o</sup> thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael <sup>p</sup> to be king over Syria:

16 And Jehu <sup>q</sup> the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha <sup>r</sup> the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.

17 And <sup>s</sup> it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay: and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha <sup>t</sup> slay.

18 Yet <sup>u</sup> I <sup>v</sup> have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed <sup>w</sup> him.

19 ¶ So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth: and Elijah passed by him, and cast his mantle upon him.

20 And he left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and said, Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then <sup>x</sup> I will follow thee. And he said unto him, <sup>y</sup> Go back again: for what have I done to thee?

21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and boiled their flesh with the instruments <sup>z</sup> of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat. Then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

A. M. 3098.
B. C. 906.
e Nu. 11. 15.
Jo. 4. 3, 8.
f Ps. 39. 12.
g He. 1. 14.
h bolster.
i Ex. 34. 28.
De. 9. 9, 18.
Mat. 4. 2.
j Ex. 3. 1.
Mal. 4. 4, 5.
k Ro. 11. 2, 4.
l Na. 25. 11.
Is. 66. 9.
m e. 18. 4, 20.
Mi. 7. 2.
n Ex. 24. 12.
o Eze. 1. 4.
p Zec. 4. 6.
q Ex. 3. 5.
Is. 6. 2.
r ver. 9. 10.
s Je. 22. 9.
t Ki. 8. 12.
Is. 13.
u 2 Ki. 9. 1.
3.
v Lu. 24. 27. called Elisha.
w 2 Ki. 9. 14.
Ec.
10. 5. Ec.
13. 3.
x Ho. 6. 5.
y Ro. 11. 4.
z or, will leave.
a Ho. 13. 2.
b Mat. 8. 21.
22.
Lu. 9. 61.
62.
c go return.
d 2 Sa. 24. 22.

held up to infamy in the Bible. Ahab sinned in nothing more than in marrying this woman, who was, as we are told, chap. xvi. 31. daughter of a king of the Zidonians, a people remarkable for the fewest idolatries; and no sooner was she brought to Samaria, than she exerted all her arts to seduce Ahab and the Israelites into the same wickedness. To Elijah, of course, she was a determined enemy. Ahab was a weak man, perfectly indifferent to all religions, so that he could but enjoy his ease and pleasure. Jezebel no sooner heard of the conduct of Elijah, than she immediately vowed the destruction of the prophet. He retired, however, a day's journey into the wilderness, where he sat down under a tree, and wished for death, to release him from his troubles; a disposition too commonly indulged by good and useful men: "Lord, take away my life, for I am not better than my fathers." It is evident, however, that this arose not so much from a deep sense of his own unworthiness, as from a keen feeling of chagrin, and disappointment. Perhaps he had expected, from the miracle at Carmel, that the whole nation would return to the worship of Jehovah. Ministers often deceive themselves in calculating upon the effects of their zealous labours. So did the amiable Melancthon in early life; but he confessed afterwards, that "he found old Adam too strong for young Melancthon."

In the strength of the food provided by the angel, the prophet travelled forty days, and then lay down in a cave of Horeb, apparently again sinking into despondency: there he was indulged with a vision, of a very instructive tendency, somewhat similar to that with which Moses was favoured, and in or near the same spot—in a cliff of Horeb. "A great and strong wind" rends the mountain—the earth trembles beneath his feet—a supernatural flame beams around him; but God is not in all these. These are merely the apparatus of his glory; it is by "a small still voice" that he addresses the human heart. Thus it was in the first promulgation of the gospel. A mighty rushing wind shook the house in which the apostles were, and tongues of fire rested on their heads. So miracles prepared the way of the Lord, but they did not convert the heart. "The small still voice" of the Holy Spirit could alone do this. So also in the present day, the preacher may thunder and lighten with his eloquence, (as has been said of some orators,) but it is this small still voice alone that can effect a saving change.

But what saith the voice to the prophet—"What dost thou here, Elijah?" In the former retreats of Elijah he was directed; but this seems to have originated in his fears, without divine direction. When he arrived at Jezreel, he probably flattered himself, that on Ahab's relating to Jezebel the miracle that he had witnessed, she would have become a convert to the faith of the God of Israel; or, at least, too much alarmed any more to attempt to persecute: but when he received her threatening message, he felt disappointed and discouraged. But should such a man as he fear? A man that could by his prayers open and shut heaven? and bring down fire from above to attest the truths he preached? Alas! how weak is man! Abraham's faith and Elijah's courage both fail, when not supported by communion with the skies. But now, ready to die, he receives a fresh commission, and his courage is invigorated with the assurance, that there are yet "seven," that is, many, "thousands in Israel" that had not bowed the knee to Baal; and he is content to continue his labours till a successor is provided in the person of Elisha.

On this passage good Henry pithily remarks, "There are more good people in the world than some wise and holy men suppose. Their jealousy of themselves and for their God, makes them think the corruption universal; but God sees not as they do. When we come to heaven, as we shall not find many whom we thought to have met there, so (on the other hand) we shall meet a great many whom we little thought to meet. God's love proves more extensive than man's charity."

Ver 7. Too great.—About 150 miles.—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 13. He wrapped his face.—[This he did to signify his reverence; for covering the face was a token of respect among the Asiatics, as uncovering the head is among the Europeans.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Wilderness of Damascus.—[The wilderness of Damascus seems to have been that part of Arabia Deserta which lay on the south-east of that city, and east of the Trachonites, or the Djebel Haouran and El Ledja; at which the prophet could arrive without meeting Jezebel or any of his enemies.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Kissed him.—[Idolaters often kissed their hand in honour of their idols; and hence the origin of adoration, from ad, to, and os, oris, the mouth. "Touching the god with their right hand, they applied it to their mouth;" and so kissing the hand, and adoration, are the same thing: "In the act of adoration, we kiss the right hand."—Pliny. Cicero mentions a statue of Hercules, the chin and lips of which were considerably worn by the frequent kissing of his worshippers.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Go back again.—The Persians, by the same way, confer office and authority. See Orient. Lit.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Ben-hadad, not content with Ahab's homage, besiegeth Samaria. 13 By the direction of a prophet, the Syrians are slain. 22 As the prophet forewarned Ahab, the Syrians, trusting in the valleys, come against him in Aphek. 28 By the word of the prophet, and God's judgment, the Syrians are smitten again. 31 The Syrians submitting themselves, Ahab smothereth Ben-hadad away with a covenant. 35 The prophet, under the parable of a prisoner, making Ahab to judge himself, denounceth God's judgment against him.

AND Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together: and there were thirty and two kings with him, and horses, and chariots: and he went up and besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

2 And he sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee tomorrow about this time, and they shall search thy house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is <sup>b</sup> pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called all the elders of the <sup>c</sup> land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief: for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold; and <sup>d</sup> I denied him not.

8 And all the elders and all the people said unto him, Hearken not unto him, nor consent.

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do: but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed, and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, The gods <sup>e</sup> do so unto me, and more also, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that <sup>f</sup> follow me.

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, Let <sup>g</sup> not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.

A. M. 3103.

B. C. 901.

a 1s. 10, 13, 14.

b desirable.

c 2 KL 5.7.

d kept not back from him.

e c. 19.2.

f are at my feet.

g 1s. 11.8.

h 1s. 4.10.

i Pr. 21.1.

h word.

i or, tents.

j or, place the engines; and they placed engines.

k approached.

l ver. 28.

m or, servants.

n bind, or, tie.

o Ju. 7.7.

p c. 16.9. ver. 12. 1s. 23.29. 32.

q Ho. 4.11.

r 1s. 54.15.

s Ju. 7.21, 22. 9. 11.

t 2 KL 6.12.

u 2 Sa. 11.1.

v Pa. 115.2, 3. Is. 42.8.

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this <sup>h</sup> message, as he was drinking, he and the kings in the <sup>i</sup> pavilions, that he said unto his servants, <sup>j</sup> Set yourselves in array. And they set themselves in array against the city.

13 ¶ And, behold, there <sup>k</sup> came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thy hand this <sup>l</sup> day; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the <sup>m</sup> young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall <sup>n</sup> order the battle? And he answered, Thou.

15 Then he numbered <sup>o</sup> the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty-two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand.

16 And they went out at noon. But Ben-hadad was drinking <sup>p</sup> himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings <sup>q</sup> that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first; and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And <sup>r</sup> they slew every one his man: and the Syrians fled; and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on a horse with the horsemen.

21 And the king of Israel went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 ¶ And the prophet <sup>s</sup> came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for at the return <sup>t</sup> of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, Their gods <sup>u</sup> are gods of the hills; therefore they were stronger than we; but let CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—43. Ben-hadad besieges Samaria, is defeated, and his life spared by Ahab, for which the latter is reproved.—Both the Greek version and Josephus transpose this and the following chapter, as conceiving the nefarious transaction of Ahab, as to Naboth's vineyard, preceded this battle: we, however, take them as we find them. We may recollect, that some years before, Asa, king of Judah, had very improperly applied to Ben-hadad to assist him against Baasha, (chap. xv. 18, &c.) which was the means of exciting him, as in this chapter, to the conquest of the kingdom of Israel. First he collects a great army, with thirty-two petty princes in his train, and then sends an insulting message to Ahab, with the most degrading conditions, to which the king at first tamely submits; but this increasing the insolence of the tyrant, he sends a still more haughty message, which obliged him to consult the elders of Israel: these advise him to reject his shameful terms; and a prophet is sent to encourage Ahab to the conflict, with the promise of a victory. It may seem strange that Providence should interfere thus on the behalf of an idolater like Ahab; but the kingdom of Israel is not yet to be dissolved, and the Almighty will not suffer his plans to be defeated by any human power. The wicked Ahab is therefore in this case victorious; but is told to be guarded against the year following, when Ben-hadad vows to return, to revenge his former defeat. He had, however, blasphemed the God of Israel, by ranking him with the local deities of the heathen, as if his power were confined to the hills only. He will not be insulted with impunity, and therefore Ahab is again victorious, and Ben-hadad's army not only defeated, but destroyed; for as the discomfited remains were hastening to seek a retreat within the walls of Aphek, where they expected safety, Providence so ordered it, that the walls of the city and fortress suddenly gave way, while they were passing under them, and buried twenty-seven thousand men. The king and a few of his courtiers, however, escaped; and, as tyrants are always cringing when in distress, they agreed to appeal to the king of CHAP. XX. Ver. 6. Pleasant in thine eyes.—Josephus and the LXX. &c. read, in their eyes; but if this was intended to mortify Ahab, the common reading seems the most cutting. "If they shall find any thing in which you (Ahab) are known to take particular delight, they shall bring it away."

Ver. 11. That girdeth on.—The girdle was the last part of the armour put on, and bound the rest together. Bp. Lowth. This was a wise reproof; too wise for Ahab himself. [This was no doubt, a proverbial mode of expression. Jonathan renders it: "Let not him who girds himself, and goes down to the battle, boast as he who has conquered and returned from it." The word harness is an obsolete word for armour, derived from the French harnois.]—B.

Ver. 12. Pavilions.—[The word pavilion, from papilio, a butterfly, here signifies a tent, so called because when spread out it resembles such insects. That even persons of regal dignity regarded themselves in this manner, we may learn from Dr. Chandler, who, when he went to visit the Aga of Suki, after his return from hawking, found him vexed and tired: and "a couch was prepared for him beneath a shed made against a cottage, and covered with green boughs to keep off the sun. He entered as we were standing by, and fell down on it to sleep, without taking any notice of us."—Bagster. Ver. 20. Syrians fled.—[They were doubtless seized with a supernatural fear. The strongest mind could not reason down, nor the firmest heart resist. —This fear the Greeks and other heathen nations called a panic; because Pan, one of their gods, was believed to be the author of it. Bacchus, in his Indian expedition, led his army into some defiles, where he was surrounded by his enemies, and reduced to the last extremity. By the advice of Pan, his lieutenant general, he made his army give a sudden shout, which struck the enemy with so great astonishment and terror, that they fled with the utmost precipitancy. Hence it was ever afterwards called a panic, and supposed to come directly from heaven. It is thus expressed by Pindar: "When men are struck with divine terrors, even the children of the gods betake themselves to flight."—Bagster.

us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

24 And do this thing, Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms:

25 And number thee an army, like the army * that thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot: and we will fight against them in the plain, and <sup>w</sup> surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbered the Syrians, and went up to <sup>a</sup> Aphek, <sup>v</sup> to fight against Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and were <sup>z</sup> all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians filled the country.

28 And there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, Because <sup>a</sup> the Syrians have said, The LORD <sup>is</sup> God of the hills, but he <sup>is</sup> not God of the valleys, therefore <sup>b</sup> will I deliver all this great multitude into thy hand, and ye shall know that I <sup>am</sup> the LORD.

29 And they pitched one over against the other seven days. And <sup>so</sup> it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: <sup>c</sup> and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians a hundred thousand footmen in one day.

30 But the rest fled <sup>d</sup> to Aphek, into the city; and <sup>there</sup> <sup>e</sup> a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men <sup>that were</sup> left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into <sup>f</sup> an inner chamber.

31 ¶ And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful <sup>g</sup> kings: let us, I pray thee, put <sup>h</sup> sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: peradventure he will save thy life.

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and <sup>put</sup> ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant, Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, <sup>i</sup> Is he yet alive? <sup>he is</sup> my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether <sup>any thing would</sup> come from him, and did hastily catch <sup>it</sup>: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up <sup>j</sup> into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, The cities,

A. M. 2103.
B. C. 901.

v <sup>was</sup>
fallen.

w Ps. 10.3.

A. M. 2104.
B. C. 900.

x 1 Sa. 4.1.
29.1.
2Ki. 13.17.

y <sup>the war</sup> with Israel.

z or, victualled.

a Is. 37.29.
36.

b ver. 13.
Job 12.16
19.

c Ps. 10.16.

d Ps. 13.45.

e Je. 48.44.
Lxx. 13.1.

f <sup>a chamber within a chamber.</sup>
c. 22.25.
or, from chamber to chamber.

g Is. 16.5.

h Ge. 37.34.

i 2 Ki. 10.15.
Ac. 3.31.

j c. 15.20.

k Is. 8.12.

l 2 Ki. 2.3,
5, &c.

m c. 13.17,
18.

n Je. 27.2.
Eze. 4.3.

o c. 13.24.

p <sup>emitting</sup>
and <sup>wound-</sup>
ing.

q 2 Sa. 14.2.

r 2 Sa. 12.1,
&c.

s 2 Ki. 10.24.

t weigh.

u <sup>was</sup> not.

v 2 Sa. 12.5
..7.

w Job 15.6.
Mat. 21.42
13.
Lu. 13.22

x c. 22.31.
37.

y c. 21.4.
A. M. 2105.
B. C. 899.

z 1 Sa. 13.14.
b <sup>be good</sup> in <sup>thine</sup> eyes.

j which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So he made a covenant <sup>k</sup> with him, and sent him away.

35 ¶ And a certain man of the sons <sup>l</sup> of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word <sup>m</sup> of the LORD, Smite <sup>n</sup> me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed <sup>o</sup> from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

37 Then he found another man, and said, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, <sup>p</sup> so that in smiting he wounded him.

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and <sup>q</sup> disguised himself with ashes upon his face.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he <sup>r</sup> said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if <sup>s</sup> by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt <sup>t</sup> pay a talent of silver.

40 And as thy servant was busy here and there, he <sup>u</sup> was gone. And the king of Israel said unto him, So <sup>v</sup> shall thy judgment be; thyself <sup>w</sup> hast decided it.

41 And he hastened, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he <sup>x</sup> was of the prophets.

42 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore <sup>y</sup> thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people.

43 And the king of Israel went to his house heavy <sup>z</sup> and displeased, and came to Samaria.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Ahab being denied Naboth's vineyard is grieved. 5 Jezebel, writing letters against Naboth, he is condemned of blasphemy. 15 Ahab taketh possession of the vineyard. 17 Elijah denounceth judgments against Ahab and Jezebel. 27 Wicked Ahab repenting, God deferreth the judgment.

AND it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which <sup>was</sup> in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give <sup>a</sup> me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it <sup>is</sup> near unto my house: and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than <sup>it</sup>; or, if it <sup>b</sup> seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

Israel's mercy, to whom before they had shown the utmost haughtiness. Ahab, dazzled perhaps by their flattery, and utterly regardless of consequences, makes peace with him, and sends him home in safety.

For this very impolitic conduct, he is reproved by one of the sons of the prophets in disguise, in one of those symbolical actions peculiar to them, of which we have many instances in their writings. It has been objected to, that this reproof of Ahab for showing mercy, and the judgment inflicted on the man who refused to smite the prophet when desired, indicate a sanguinary disposition in the prophet, and can hardly be reconciled to the merciful character of the Deity. We, however, see only the outward circumstances, but God reads the heart. He also sees "the end from the beginning;" (Isa. xlv. 10.) and, knowing all the future consequences, is the only judge of his own conduct; we cannot therefore reason better than the patriarch Abraham, in all such cases—"Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" (Gen. xviii. 25.)

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—29. Ahab offers to buy Naboth's vineyard, but is refused. Jezebel plots his death, and gains possession.—We now come to one of the most iniquitous transactions recorded in the Scriptures. Ahab had a particular fancy for a vineyard which belonged to Naboth, in the vicinity of Jezreel, where the king had a palace, as well as in Samaria.

the great historian of the Crusades; from whom it appears that it was customary to give those nations which were engaged in them, churches, streets, and great jurisdiction therein, in those places which they assisted to conquer. The Genoese and Venetians had each a street in Acon, or Acre, in which they had their own jurisdiction, with liberty to have an oven, mill, bagnio, weights and measures, &c. So Knolles, in his history of the Turks, relates, that in the treaty of peace granted by Bajazet, the Turkish emperor, to Emanuel, the Greek emperor, it was stipulated, that the latter should grant free liberty to the Turks to dwell together, in one street of Constantinople, with the free exercise of their own religion, laws, &c. — Bagster.

Ver. 35. Disguised himself with ashes.—That is, he was covered with blood and dirt, as though he had been a wounded soldier.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 2. Give me thy vineyard.—[The request of Ahab, at first view, appears fair and honourable. But, as he most evidently wishe<sup>d</sup> Naboth

Ver. 26. Aphek.—[Supposed to be the Aphek near the river Adonis, between Heliopolis and Biblos, and probably the same place that Paul Lucas mentions in his voyage to the Levant. It was swallowed up by an earthquake, and formed a lake about nine miles in circumference, in which he says there were several houses still to be seen entire under the water.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Put sackcloth, &c.—[Six of the citizens of Calais are reported to have acted nearly in the same manner, when they surrendered their city to Edward the Third, king of England, in 1346. See the whole story circumstantially related by Sir John Froissart, who lived in that time, with that simplicity and detail that give it every appearance of truth.]—Bagster.

Ver. 34. Streets in Damascus.—[One of the conditions of this covenant we learn was, that Ahab should have "streets, chutsoth, in Damascus;" a proposal better relished by Ahab than understood by the generality of commentators. This, however, is well illustrated by Harmer, from William of Tyre,

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.

4 And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite, had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thy heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

9 And she wrote in the letters, saying, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people:

10 And set two men, sons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king. And then carry him out, and stone him, that he may die.

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them.

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying,

In the first place he made Naboth a fair and handsome offer for the purchase; but Naboth considered the total alienation of his estate (as it certainly was) inconsistent with the divine law: beside which, his mind possessed a spirit of independence that revolted at the idea of selling the inheritance of his fathers. He therefore refuses all Ahab's offers, at which the king became "heavy and displeased, and refused to eat." Jezebel, however, who evidently reigned, though her husband was king, had imbibed the diabolical principle that subjects are only made for kings. "Dost thou govern the kingdom?" said she, and art thou to be controlled by a subject? "This is what Dr. Clarke properly calls "the vital language of despotism;" and she is the despot. She takes the king's seal, forges letters in his name, hypocritically proclaims a fast, and writes to her creatures in Jezreel to procure wretches to swear away the life of Naboth, and all to make good her decree, "I will give thee the vineyard."

This narrative also gives us an awful view of the depravity of public morals at this time in Israel; when the magistrates and legal authorities, "the nobles and elders," were ready to undertake any work of perjury and murder that the king might to alienate it finally, which was expressly forbidden and provided against in the law of God, (Le. xxv. 14, 28.) it was high iniquity in Ahab to tempt him to do it, and to covet it showed the depravity of his soul.—Bagster.

Ver. 3. The Lord forbid.—Some read, (perhaps more correctly,) "It is forbidden me from Jehovah, that I should give." &c. referring to the law which prohibited the alienation of estates in Israel, Lev. xxv. 23. Numb. xxxvi. 1—9. The original implies, it would be profane, and contrary to the law.

Ver. 8. So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal.—The very ancient custom of sealing despatches with a seal or signet set in a ring, is still retained in the East. Dr. Pococke says, "In Egypt, they make the impression of their name with their seal, (generally of cornelian,) which they wear on their finger, and which is dialed when they have occasion to seal with it."

Ver. 9. On high among the people.—That is, set him up to be tried in the public court.

Ver. 10. Thou didst blaspheme.—The word most frequently means, to bless, and Parkhurst thinks always, and understands it of blessing the heathen gods and Moloch, which seems a strange accusation to come from Jezebel against

A. M. 3105.

B. C. 889.

c. Le. 25.23.

Nu. 36.7.

Eze. 46.18.

d. Job 5.2.

Hab. 2.3.

12.

e. Ne. 2.2.

f. Mi. 2.1, 2.

g. 2Sa. 11.14.

15.

Ez. 3.12,

13.

h. in the top

of.

i. De. 13.13.

j. Ex. 22.28.

Le. 24.15.

16.

Ma. 26.59.

66.

Ac. 6.11.

k. Le. 24.14.

l. Is. 53.4.

m. Ex. 20.16.

Ez. 27.12.

Pr. 25.18.

Mal. 3.5.

n. 2 Ki. 9.36.

Ec. 4.1.

Ac. 1.7, 8.

59.

o. Pr. 1.10.

16; 4.17.

p. Pa. 9.12.

q. c. 13.32.

2 Ch. 22.9.

r. c. 22.38.

Pa. 7.16.

Mat. 7.2.

s. c. 18.17.

t. ver. 25.

2 Ki. 17.17.

Is. 50.1.

52.3.

Ro. 7.14.

u. c. 14.10.

v. Ex. 20.5, 6.

2 Ki. 9.3.

w. c. 15.29.

x. c. 16.3, 11.

y. 2 Ki. 9.36,

57.

z. or, ditch.

a. c. 16.30, 31.

ver. 20.

Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee: because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the LORD.

21 Behold, I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall and him that is shut up and left in Israel, 22 And will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And of Jezebel also spake the LORD, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel.

24 Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 But there was none like unto Ahab dictate; and had at hand "men of Belial," ready to swear whatever they were paid to swear! No sooner, however, was this act of villany accomplished, than with all the coolness of a practised assassin, Jezebel says to Ahab, Naboth is dead, "arise and take possession." And Ahab himself, though he had wilfully kept himself ignorant of her proceedings, becomes responsible for all, by taking possession of the plunder; and that, no doubt, under the pretence that the vineyard had been forfeited by its owner (though innocent) having died for treason.

But "blood has a voice to pierce the skies;" thus the blood of Naboth, like that of Abel, was heard before the throne of God; and Elijah, who had now fully recovered his fortitude, is sent to meet Ahab, in or near his new possession; and hails him in these words of thunder—"Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? . . . In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth," that is, in the open field, (for Naboth was doubtless stoned without the city,) even "there shall the dogs lick thy blood, even thine." The prophet goes on to pronounce destruction against the house of Ahab, and also against Jezebel, all which we shall find shortly come a Jew. But extraordinary as it may seem, there are in most (perhaps in all) languages, words which admit of contrary meanings; as in English, let. In such cases, however, they may spring from one common source. So the Heb. Bark means to kneel, 2 Chron. vi. 13, and implies, to speak with great earnestness, as persons who either implore a blessing, or imprecate a curse. It is evident that Jezebel meant to charge Naboth with treason, as well as blasphemy, that she might get possession of the vineyard for Ahab. See ver. 15.

Ver. 13. And stoned him.—Not him only, but his children; for the Lord says, 2 Kings ix. 26. "I have seen . . . the blood of Naboth and of his sons."

Ver. 23. Dogs shall eat Jezebel.—[Shocking as this must appear to minds that have been humanized by the kindly influence of Christianity, we still find similar instances in the accounts of modern travellers. Bruce says, that when at Gondar, "the bodies of those killed by the sword were hewn to pieces, and scattered about the streets, being denied burial. I was miserable, and almost driven to despair, at seeing my hunting dogs, twice let loose by the carelessness of my servants, bringing into the court-yard the heads and arms of slaughtered men, and which I could no way prevent, but by the destruction of the dogs themselves."—Bagster.

which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the LORD, whom Jezebel his wife stirred up.

26 And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things as did the Amorites, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.

28 And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

29 Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Ahab, seduced by false prophets, according to the word of Micaiah, is slain at Ramoth-gilead. 37 The dogs lick up his blood, and Ahaziah succeedeth him. 41 Jehoshaphat's good reign. 45 His acts. 50 Jehoram succeedeth him. 51 Ahaziah's evil reign.

AND they continued three years without war between Syria and Israel.

2 And it came to pass in the third year, that Jehoshaphat the king of Judah came down to the king of Israel.

3 And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that Ramoth in Gilead is ours, and we be still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria?

4 And he said unto Jehoshaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, I am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, about four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

9 Then the king of Israel called an officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah sat each on his throne, having put on their robes, in a void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria: and all the prophets prophesied before them.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him horns of iron: and he said, Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.

14 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, what the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.

15 ¶ So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD?

17 And he said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd.

to pass. Alas for Ahab! little did he enjoy his ill-gained possessions. Instead of forming a kitchen-garden for his palace, "he rent his clothes, fasted, and lay in sackcloth," and thus procured a respite to his sentence, at least in part. But still this awful brand is placed upon his character: "he did sell himself" to sin and Satan "to work wickedness;" and as to "Jezebel his wife," she "incited," or stirred him up, to every abomination.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1—28. Ahab and Jehoshaphat, agreeing to attack Syria, consult Ahab's prophets.—It is a melancholy fact in the history of most nations, that their years of peace are few compared with those of war. Here are three years of peace, from the time of Ahab's treaty with Ben-hadad, who promised to restore all the towns that his father had taken from Israel; but when he got safe home, it is most probable he thought no more about them. Jehoshaphat, who had succeeded his father Asa, was now upon the throne of Judah, and reigned prosperously; but he now unhappily forms an affinity with Ahab, whom he visits, and agrees to go with him to war against Ramoth-gilead. First, however, he proposes to inquire of the LORD; on which occasion Ahab calls together his idol-prophets, chiefly consisting of those of Jezebel, who, not being present at the affair at Carmel, (for they were not prophets of Baal, but of Ashtaroath,) escaped the fate of their brethren. These were perhaps introduced under the general term of prophets; but Jehoshaphat perceived, or at least suspected, that they were not prophets of Jehovah, and therefore inquires if there was no other prophet—a prophet of Jehovah? Ahab confesses there was one Micaiah, "but (says he) I hate him, for he doth not prophesy good concerning me." Jehoshaphat, however, wishes to see Micaiah, who is sent for, and entreated by the way to prophesy success, as the other prophets had done before him. He accordingly repeats their words, but in a tone of irony, and preserving their ambiguity: for the pronoun it (which, indeed, is not in the original) might be interpreted either of the city to be attacked, or the assailing army; and as no king is named, either the king of Israel or of Syria might be understood: so that the equivocal oracle might be applied either to the capture of Ramoth-gilead, or of Ahab and his army. By the tone and manner of the prophet, however, it is evident that Ahab suspected that he was not in earnest, and in a kind of bravado conjures him to tell the truth. Micaiah therefore immediately takes up a parable that distinctly predicted the defeat of Israel, and the death of Ahab; and which plainly told him that his prophets were false prophets, and that the Almighty had permitted them to deceive him, as a punishment for employing them, and rejecting the prophets of Jehovah.

Micaiah, however, instead of convincing, so incensed Ahab, that he was immediately sent back to prison, from which he appears to have been brought at the request of Jehoshaphat, having committed the same crime of telling the truth on some former occasion. The only matter of surprise is, that Jehoshaphat, who was evidently a pious man, and no idolater, should, after all this, consent to accompany Ahab on this desperate expedition. Perhaps he hoped this was only the exas-

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 2. The king of Judah came.—Namely, to marry his son to Ahab's daughter. 2 Kings viii. 19. 2 Chron. xviii. 1.

Ver. 6. The Lord shall deliver.—It is observable, that the word here used for "LORD," though generally printed in capitals by mistake, is not in the original Jehovah, but Adonai, which these prophets were in the habit of applying to their idol gods; when, however, they found that Jehoshaphat laid so great stress on consulting a prophet of Jehovah, they also adopted the sacred name, as if they had been his prophets. [This prophecy is couched in the ambiguous terms in which the heathen oracles were delivered. It may mean, either "The Lord will deliver it (Ramoth-gilead) into the king's (Ahab's) hand," or "The Lord will deliver (Israel) into the king's (of Syria) hand." So in the famous reply of the Delphian oracle to Pyrrhus: "I say to thee, Pyrrhus, the Romans shall overcome: thou shalt go, thou shalt return, never in war shalt thou perish."]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. In a void place.—An open flat court, that had probably been used as a corn-floor.

Ver. 15. Go and prosper.—[This was strong irony; they were the precise words of the false prophets; but were spoken by Micaiah in such a tone and manner as at once showed Ahab that he did not believe, but ridiculed these words of uncertainty. The reply of the Delphian oracle to Cæsar was as ambiguous as that returned to Pyrrhus. "If Cæsar crosses the Helix, he will overthrow a great empire." This he understood of the empire of Cyri is: the event proved it to be his own. He was deluded, yet the oracle maintained its credit.]—Bagster.

herd: and the LORD said, These have no master: let them return every man to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: I saw <sup>r</sup> the LORD sitting on his throne, and all the host <sup>s</sup> of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall <sup>t</sup> persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

22 And the LORD said unto him, Where-with? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so.

2 Now <sup>u</sup> therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 ¶ But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote <sup>v</sup> Micaiah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

25 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go <sup>w</sup> into <sup>x</sup> an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the <sup>y</sup> prison, and feed him with bread of <sup>z</sup> affliction and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, If <sup>a</sup> thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, <sup>b</sup> Hearken, O people, every one of you.

29 ¶ So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, <sup>c</sup> I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes. And the king of Israel <sup>d</sup> disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 ¶ But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it <sup>e</sup> is the king of Israel. And <sup>f</sup> they turned aside to fight against him: and Jehoshaphat cried out.

33 And it came to pass, when the captains

A. M.
3104. 3107.
B. C.
908. 897.

r Is. 6. 1. 3.

Da. 7. 9. 10.

s Job. 1. 6.

Ps. 103. 21.

Mat. 25. 31.

Re. 5. 11.

t or, deceit.

u Ju. 9. 23.

Job. 12. 16.

Eze. 14. 9.

2 Th. 2. 10.

12.

v Ac. 23. 2.

w or, from chamber to chamber.

x a chamber in a chamber.

c. 20. 39.

y Je. 38. 6.

Ac. 5. 18.

Re. 2. 10.

z De. 16. 3.

Is. 30. 20.

a Nu. 16. 29.

De. 13. 20.

22.

b Mat. 13. 9.

43.

c or, when he was to disguise himself.

d 2 Ch. 35. 22.

e Pr. 13. 20.

—

f in his simplicity

2 Ki. 5. 11.

g and the breast-plate.

h made sick.

i ascended.

j bosom.

k ver. 17. 28.

l came.

m c. 21. 19.

A. M.

3035. 3107.

B. C.

918. 897.

n Am. 3. 15.

A. M. 3090.

B. C. 914.

o 2 Ch. 20.

31, &c.

p 2 Ch. 17. 3.

q c. 14. 23.

15. 14.

r 2 Ki. 12. 3.

2 Ki. 19. 2.

2 Co. 6. 14.

s c. 14. 24.

15. 12.

t Ge. 25. 23.

2 Sa. 8. 14.

2 Ki. 3. 9.

8. 20.

u or had ten ships.

v 2 Ch. 20. 35.

&c.

w c. 10. 22.

x c. 9. 26.

of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow <sup>t</sup> at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints <sup>s</sup> of the harness: wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thy hand, and carry me out of the host; for I am <sup>h</sup> wounded.

35 And the battle <sup>i</sup> increased that day: and the king was stayed up in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the <sup>j</sup> midst of the chariot.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every <sup>k</sup> man to his city, and every man to his own country.

37 ¶ So the king died, and <sup>l</sup> was brought to Samaria; and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria; and the dogs licked up his blood; and they washed his armour; according unto the word of the LORD which he <sup>m</sup> spake.

39 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory <sup>n</sup> house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

40 So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

41 ¶ And <sup>o</sup> Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel.

42 Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi.

43 And <sup>p</sup> he walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: nevertheless the high <sup>q</sup> places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places.

44 And Jehoshaphat made peace <sup>r</sup> with the king of Israel.

45 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and his might that he showed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

46 And the remnant of the <sup>s</sup> sodomites, which remained in the days of his father Asa, he took out of the land.

47 There was then no king <sup>t</sup> in Edom: a deputy was king.

48 Jehoshaphat <sup>u</sup> made ships <sup>v</sup> of <sup>w</sup> Tharshish to go to Ophir for gold: but they went not; for the ships were broken at <sup>x</sup> Ezion-geber.

perated language of an injured prophet; and thought himself too far pledged in joining his army with that of Ahab, to recede from his engagement.

Ver. 29—33. The battle joined; Ahab slain, and his army scattered.—Upon going into the battle, Ahab, who had probably heard that the enemy aimed personally at him, artfully persuaded Jehoshaphat to dress in royal robes, while he disguised himself as a common captain, hoping that by this means the former might be taken for him, and himself escape.

Ver. 19. I saw the Lord sitting.—[Micaiah evidently gives here an account of what appeared to him in a vision; many of the circumstances must be considered as parabolaical; for truth, rather than facts, is revealed in such representations.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Who shall persuade.—This strongly reminds us of the poetical machinery that introduces the book of Job. See chap. i. of that book.

Ver. 30. But put on thy robes.—The LXX. read, "Put on my robes," which might occasion him to be taken for Ahab; yet it is probable kings dressed pretty much alike.

Ver. 34. Between the joints of the harness.—The margin of 2 Chron. xviii. 35. says, "Between the buckles and the coat of mail;" the arrow was so directed as to pierce his vitals, and inflict a mortal wound.

William III. who was unquestionably a pious man, used to say, "Every bullet has its billet;" that is, it is directed by the hand of Providence: and we may say the same of every arrow, a remarkable instance of which occurs in this chapter; for while Ahab, knowing that he was the object aimed at, thought himself secure and safe, a common archer, in his simplicity, taking no special aim, "drew a bow at a venture," which was directed into "the bosom" of the king of Israel, between the joints of his harness where it was buckled on, and at once

Ver. 39. Ivory house.—[That is, probably, decorated with ivory in such abundance as to merit the appellation of an ivory house; in the same manner as Nero's palace, mentioned by Suetonius, was named aurea, or golden, because "overlaid with gold."]

Homer mentions ivory as employed in the palace of Menelaus at Mæcedon; and Bacchitides, cited by Athenæus, says, that in the island of Ceos, the houses of the great men "glisten with gold and ivory."—Lucan, in his description of the palace of Cleopatra, observes, that "ivory overlays the entrance;" and that the Romans sometimes ornamented their apartments in the same manner, is evident.]—Bagster.

Ver. 48. Jehoshaphat made ships of Tharshish.—By the parallel passage, it seems that these ships were made at Ezion-geber, to go to Tharshish; and 49 Then said Ahaziah the son of Ahab unto Jehoshaphat, Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships. But Jehoshaphat would not.

50 ¶ And <sup>v</sup> Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Jehoram his son reigned in his stead.

51 ¶ Ahaziah <sup>v</sup> the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the seventeenth

A. M. 3115.
B. C. 889.
y 2 Ch. 21. 1.
A. M. 3107.
B. C. 897.
z ver. 40.

u c. 16. 30,
& c.
b c. 12. 28.
33.
c Ja. 2. 11.

year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned two years over Israel.

52 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way <sup>a</sup> of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam <sup>b</sup> the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin:

53 For he served <sup>c</sup> Baal, and worshipped him, and provoked to anger the Lord God of Israel, according to all that his father had done.

fulfilled the decree of heaven, and the prediction of the prophet.

Thus ended the battle and the war. Jehoshaphat hastened back to his own kingdom, and instead of madly prosecuting a foreign war, wisely set about reform at home; and, in the course of the 25 years he reigned in Jerusalem, promoted true that Ahaziah, the son of Ahab, was concerned in the speculation, which so displeased the Lord, that they were broken to pieces on the rocks, and never reached their destination.

religion and suppressed idolatry; and procured this honourable testimony, that "he did right in the sight of the Lord;" the highest character attainable by mortals. As, however, we shall find a much fuller account of his wise and happy reign in the Second Book of Chronicles, we shall omit at present entering into particulars.

Ver. 49. Jehoshaphat would not.—It appears that they were united in the building, and Ahaziah wanted to help to man them; but this Jehoshaphat "would not" suffer; perhaps he now saw his error.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS,

COMMONLY CALLED,

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THIS book is merely a continuation of the preceding, to which it is joined in the Hebrew Canon; the remarks therefore already made on that, in a great measure apply to this.—It contains the contemporary history of the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel, during a period of 208 years, from the rebellion of Moab, A. M. 3108, to the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, A. M. 3116.—In Israel the kings were uniformly idolatrous and wicked: and though the labours of Elijah, Elisha, and other prophets, were prospered to preserve a considerable number of the people from the general contagion; yet the measure of their national iniquity was soon filled up; so that they were conquered and carried captive by the kings of the Assyrians, and dispersed among the Gentiles, no more, as a collected body, to be restored to their own land. Their country was, after this, planted by the conquerors with a mingled people, who established a corrupt and partial worship of Jehovah, from whom originated the nation and religion of the Samaritans. These events began to take place considerably above a hundred years before the Babylonish captivity.—In Judah indeed some remarkable revivals of religion took place under the pious princes of David's family, and by means of the faithful labours of the prophets: but these promising appearances were of short duration; several of the kings were idolatrous and extremely wicked; the priests and Levites exceedingly neglected their important duty; and the people were generally prone to idolatry and iniquity. So that, after the death of pious Josiah, the nation became almost universally corrupt; and the melancholy account closes with the destruction of the city and temple, the desolation of the country, and the enslaving and carrying away of the inhabitants, by the Chaldeans.—As all the prophets, (commonly so called,) whose writings have been preserved, lived in the latter part of this period; (those excepted who lived during or after the captivity;) and as they continually refer to the facts recorded in this history; we may consider all their predictions as sanctioning, by their accomplishment, the divine authority of the narrative; though it does not contain any express prophecy, the completion of which extended much beyond the term of the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity.—T. Scott.

CHAPTER I.

1 Moab rebelled. 2 Ahaziah, sending to Baal-zebub, had his judgment by Elijah. 5 Elijah twice bringeth fire from heaven upon them whom Ahaziah sent to apprehend him. 13 He pieth the third captain, and, encouraged by an angel, telleth the king of his death. 17 Jehoram succeedeth Ahaziah.

THEN Moab rebelled <sup>a</sup> against Israel after the death of Ahab.

2 ¶ And Ahaziah fell down through a lattise in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, inquire of Baal-zebub the god of <sup>b</sup> Ekron whether I shall recover <sup>c</sup> of this disease.

3 But the angel of the Lord said to Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baal-zebub <sup>d</sup> the god of Ekron?

4 Now therefore thus saith the Lord, <sup>e</sup> Thou

A. M. 3108.
B. C. 896.

a 2 Sa. 8. 2.
c 3. 5.

b 1 Sa. 5. 10.
c 1 Ki. 14. 3.
c. 8. 9, 10.

d Ma. 3. 22.

e The bed whither thou art gone up thou shalt not come down from it.

f Is. 41. 22, 23.
g 1 Ch. 10. 13.
Pa. 16. 4.

h What was the manner of the man?

i Zec. 13. 4.
Mat. 3. 4.

shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore <sup>e</sup> thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, <sup>b</sup> What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was a hairy

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—18. Ahaziah's wicked reign, with the conduct of Elijah.—This book opens with the affairs of Israel, soon after Ahaziah, son of Ahab, came to the crown, and near the time that the Moabites, who had been subdued by David, threw off the yoke of Israel, which we suppose to have been 896 years before the Christian era. About this time Ahaziah met with an accident, by falling through a kind of sky-light, made of lattice work. Alarmed for the consequences, and anxious to know the issue, he sends, not to Elijah the prophet of the God of Israel, but to the priests of Baal-zebub, the titular god of Ekron. This idol, whose name has been since appropriated to Satan, the great enemy of mankind, has been usually called the god of flies, and was either represented like "Jupiter, the fly-exPELLER," with flies attendant on him, or as a fly with a human face upon his shoulders. This Canaanitish idol is supposed to have been considered, like the Apollo of the Greeks, as the god of medicine, and was therefore consulted by Ahaziah under his accident.

A fly is considered with us as a despicable creature; but it may be remarked, that when that indefatigable missionary, Dr. Vanderkemp, went first among the Hottentots, a fly, called the Mantis, (which had very much the appearance of a vegetable leaf,) was the only divinity of which they had an idea.—(Mission. Sketches.)

This conduct of Ahaziah was highly insulting to the God of Israel, and therefore is Elijah sent to announce to him that he should never again come down from his bed alive, which proved to be the fact. The king hearing of this, (for he did not CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Lattice.—[The flat roofs of the eastern houses are generally surrounded by a parapet wall breast high; but, instead of this, some terraces are guarded with balustrades only, or latticed work. Of the same kind, probably, was the lattice, or used the term shagan seems to import, through which Ahaziah fell into the court. This incident proves the necessity of the law for the formation of battlements for the roof, (De. xxii. 8.) which God graciously dictated from Sinai, which furnishes a beautiful example of his paternal care and goodness; for the terrace was a place where many offices of the family were performed, and business frequently transacted.]—Bagster.—Baal-zebub.—He appears to have been the medical idol of the Philistines. For the representation above mentioned, see Taylor's Fragments to Calmet, with the plate of Baal-zebub.

Ver. 4. Thou shalt not come down.—Heb. "The bed whither thou art gone up, thou shalt not come down from it."

Ver. 8. A hairy man.—Heb. "A master of hair;" "Clothed with a hairy garment."—Boothroyd. [That is, he wore a rough garment, either made of camels' hair, as that of John the Baptist, or of a skin, dressed with the hair on. Sir J. Chardin informs us, in a MS. note on this place, cited by Harmer, that the eastern dervishes and fakiers are clothed just as Elijah was, with a hairy garment, girded with a leathern girdle.]—Bagster man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite. ¶ Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of a hill. And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

11 Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty went up, and came and fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the Lord said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

16 And he said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to inquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

17 ¶ So he died according to the word of the Lord which Elijah had spoken. And Jehoram reigned in his stead, in the second year of Je-horam the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son.

18 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

CHAPTER II.

1 Elijah, taking his leave of Elisha, with his mantle divideth Jordan, and, grandly Elisha his request, is taken up by a fiery chariot into heaven. 12 Elisha divides Jordan with Elijah's mantle, is acknowledged his successor. 16 The young prophets, hardly obtaining leave to seek Elisha, could not find him. 19 Elisha with salt healeth the unwholesome waters. 23 Bears destroy the children that mocked Elisha.

AND it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el.

3 And the sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Jericho. And he said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

6 And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the Lord hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood to view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

8 And Elijah took his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were see the prophet, though he was at no loss, from the description, to recognise him,) sent immediately a captain, with fifty men, to apprehend him. These were destroyed by fire from heaven, as was a second party also; but the captain of the third party entreating the prophet for his life, the latter was ordered immediately to go with him. His conduct towards the former captains has been much censured; but the blame, if any, attaches to his Master. Elijah had no more power over the fire of heaven, than had the captains who summoned him; and surely it would have been thought profane, even in a heathen, to deny Jupiter the right to wield his own lightnings.

Elijah went, however, and delivered his message in the king's bed-chamber, who came no more down from off his bed. With God "are the issues of life and death," and however little we may think of it, in him we live, and move, and have our being. (Acts xvii. 28.)

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—25. Elijah translated to heaven, and succeeded by Elisha.—It seems extraordinary that we should hear of a school of prophets at Beth-el, after it had been rendered so infamous by Jeroboam's calves. We know, however, that the Lord had reserved to himself thousands of faithful worshippers, even when Elijah thought he had been left alone. The sons of the prophets were doubtless their pupils or disciples, who were not only instructed in the common arts of reading and writing, but in the Holy Scriptures; and especially in the arts of sacred poetry and music, which in these early ages were always associated. Thus, when we find Saul among the prophets, they were always so employed. From these schools also the prophets themselves were generally selected. Elisha was doubtless immediately admitted to be a pupil, when he became an attendant on Elijah; and at his death he succeeded as head of all the schools. Here also, it should seem, were held religious assemblies on the sabbaths and new moons, and hither those who needed advice and consolation were accustomed to repair. (See 1 Sam. x. 5—12; 2 Kings iv. 23. 1 Chron. xxv. 1. Neh. vi. 7. Jer. xlii. 2—4. Amos vii. 14.)

There were schools of the prophets also at Jericho and at Gilgal, and probably at other places; and the students must have been pretty numerous, as we find fifty of them waiting to see Elijah ascend to heaven, of which they had, by some means, received intimation; though Elisha was only thus favoured, and caught his hairy or woolly mantle, when it fell.

Before the prophet ascended, however, he asked his disciple and successor Elisha what he should do for him, meaning, in the way of intercession with that God into whose presence he was now going. The young man wisely entreated for a double portion of his master's spirit and prophetic powers; that is, to be treated as his first-born son; and this was granted. He immediately wrought a miracle, by dividing the Jordan on his return, as his master had before on passing over, by his prophetic mantle, and was immediately accredited as his successor. The young prophets, however, perhaps farther to try his miraculous gifts, apply to him to heal the waters of were two Jehorams contemporary; this Jehoram, whom the LXX. Vulgate, and Syriac, call the "brother" of Ahaziah, king of Israel; and Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. It is believed that Jehoshaphat made his son viceroy (or partner in his throne) some years before his death, which was a circumstance not uncommon. See 2 Chron. xxi. 2—5.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. Thy master from thy head.—The master sat at the head (i. e. above) his scholars; hence they were said to sit at his feet, Acts xxi. 3.

Ver. 7. To view afar off.—Looking at a distance, while the two prophets were at the edge of the river which they were about to cross.

Ver. 8. His mantle.—The LXX., here and elsewhere, render it "his sheep skin." See note on chap. 1. 8.

Ver. 10. Let fire come down.—[Or, rather, as the original literally imports, and the LXX. renders, fire SHALL come down; Elijah's words being simply declarative, and not imprecatory.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Not come down off thy bed.—[In the East, there is usually at the end of each chamber a little gallery, raised three or four feet above the floor, with a balustrade in front, to which they go up by a few steps: here they place their beds; an allusion to which situation is involved in this declaration of Elijah's, and frequently referred to in the Sacred Scriptures. See Ge. xlix. 4. Psalm cxxxi. 3.]

Ver. 17. Jehoram reigned in his stead.—See Margin. "The second year of Jehoram was pro-rex, and the 18th of Jehoshaphat." See chap. iii. 1. There gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10 And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing: nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12 ¶ And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

13 He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan;

14 And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither: and Elisha went over.

15 And when the sons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him.

16 ¶ And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: lest peradventure the Spirit of the Lord hath taken him up, and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send.

17 And when they urged him till he was ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but found him not.

18 And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 ¶ And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth: but the water is naught, and the ground barren.

20 And he said, Bring me a new cruise, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him.

Jericho, and the barrenness of the land about them, which he did, by casting into the water, a cruise, or bottle of salt. From thence he went up to visit the school of Beth-el, when by the way he met with a number of young men and boys, probably belonging to some school of idolatry, and who, knowing that he was a prophet of Jehovah, turned his character into ridicule, and blasphemed his God, by telling him to go up to heaven after his master Elijah, of whose ascension they had heard, but did not believe. This accounts for the apparent severity with which he treated them, by uttering a prophetic curse, which so speedily overtook them. It is, however, to be remembered, that Elisha could no more send bears from the wood, than he could call down fire from the skies. It was the Lord's doing, and it becomes not us to censure it.

Curious minds may be here disposed to ask a variety of questions; as, "What was this fiery chariot? and whither did it bear Elijah?" This is no business of ours; we must be content to remain ignorant of many things more interesting to us; but we may safely consider this event as intended to demonstrate, that there is "another and a better world;" or wherefore this glorious apparatus, if he were to sink again, and perish.

As to ourselves, though we cannot hope for this honourable

Ver. 11. Chariot of fire.—[i. e. a chariot and horses of the most resplendent glory, which manifesting itself in coruscations or shooting rays, seemed to be like blazing fire, or the sun in his strength. Some think that this circumstance gave rise to the fable of Apollo, or the sun, being seated in a blazing chariot, drawn by horses breathing fire.]

Ver. 23. Little children.—The word rendered "children" is applied to Isaac at 28; to Joseph at 30; and to the soldiers of Ahab. (See Gen. xxi. 5—12; xli. 12. 1 Kings xx. 14.) But the diminutive restricts the term to an early age; and

A. M. 3108.
B. C. 896.
i Nu. 27.20.

j done hard in asking.

k c. 6.17.
Ps 101.4.

l c. 13.14.

m lip.

n ver. 8.

o ver. 7.

p sons of strength.

q 1 Ki. 18.12.
Ac. 8.39.

r one of the mountains.

s causing to mischance.

t Le. 2.13.
Mat. 5.13.
Mat. 9.50.

u Ex. 15.25.
c. 4.41.
Eze. 47.8, 9.

v Ps. 107.33,
34.

w Job 19.13.
30.1,5,&c.

x Mat. 27.
29, &c.

y Ge. 9.25.
Ju. 9.20,27.
La. 3.65.

a c. 1.17.

b statue.

c 1 Ki. 16.32.

d 1 Ki. 12.28
.32.

e 2 Sa. 8.2.
Ps. 108.9, 10.

f Is. 16.1.

g c. 1.1.
8.33.

h 1 Ki. 22.4.

21 And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land.

22 So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head.

24 And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the Lord. And there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them.

25 And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jehoram's reign. 4 Mesha rebelleth. 6 Jehoram, with Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, being distressed for want of water, by Elisha obtaineth water, and promise of victory. 21 The Moabites, deceived by the colour of the water, coming to spoil, are overcome. 28 The king of Moab, by sacrificing the king of Edom's son, raiseth the siege.

NOW Jehoram the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years.

2 And he wrought evil in the sight of the Lord; but not like his father, and like his mother: for he put away the image of Baal that his father had made.

3 Nevertheless he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

4 ¶ And Mesha king of Moab was a sheep-master, and rendered unto the king of Israel a hundred thousand lambs, and a hundred thousand rams, with the wool.

5 But it came to pass, when Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.

6 ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and numbered all Israel.

7 And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.

distinction of escaping death, afforded only to two individuals of the human race; yet if we serve the same God as Elijah did, we shall have our chariots too. Poor Lazarus was conveyed by angels into Abraham's bosom, and there is the same conveyance for every believer: and though our bodies may be left to putrify in the grave, yet when the Lord shall be revealed in flaming fire from heaven, there will be angels of fire and chariots of flame for all his people.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—27. The reign of Jehoram, and his attack on Moab.—The first verse of this book briefly informs us, that Moab rebelled against Israel, and this chapter explains the cause. The king was, it seems, like Abraham, of ancient times, a great sheep-master, and being tributary to Israel, had, at different periods probably, rendered to Israel the quantity of lambs and rams here mentioned. At Ahab's death, however, thinking himself sufficiently strong to resist, he declined paying them any farther tribute. Upon this, Jehoram sent to Jehoshaphat, (who was much too fond of war,) to ask him to join with him. The king of Judah replied in the same terms as he had done to his father Ahab, that Israel and Judah being all one nation, he was willing to make a common cause with him. Jehoram farther proposed, in order to insure the aid of the king of Edom, that they should go through his country, and as both the words are masculine, it may fairly include boys of various ages, but not absolute children.

CHAP. III. Ver. 4. A sheep-master.—So the Chaldee and other versions. Not only was this the case in those early times, but it is so with the Tartars to the present day. The royal flocks of the king of Spain were also considered extremely valuable; but the present king may perhaps have neglected them, since he has assumed a new vocation, and become dress-maker to the Virgin Mary!

8 And he said, Which way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through the wilderness of Edom.

9 So the king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom: and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle that followed them.

10 And the king of Israel said, Alas! that the Lord hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

11 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the Lord, that we may inquire of the Lord by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which poured water on the hands of Elijah.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, the word of the Lord is with him. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom went down to him.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, What have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay: for the Lord hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.

14 And Elisha said, As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now bring me a minstrel. And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the Lord came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the Lord, Make this valley full of ditches.

17 For thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.

18 And this is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

19 And ye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree, and stop all wells of water, and make every good piece of land with stones.

20 And it came to pass in the morning, when the meat-offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with water.

21 And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered all that were able to put on armour, and upward, and stood in the border

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood:

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely slain, and they have smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they went forward smiting the Moabites, even in their country.

25 And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water, and felled all the good trees: only in Kir-haraseth left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

26 And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel: and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil. 8 He giveth a son to the good Shunammite. 18 He raiseth again her dead son. 38 At Gilgal he healeth the deadly pottage. 42 He satisfieth a hundred men with twenty loaves.

Now there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets unto take him with them. When they got, however, into the wilderness of Edom, they were ready to perish with drought, having no water either for themselves or cattle. In this extremity, Jehoshaphat inquires, (as he ought to have done sooner,) if there were no prophet of Jehovah in that neighbourhood, and is directed to Elisha, lately the servant of Elijah, and whom he recognises as his successor in the prophetic office.

The three kings therefore go down to him; but the prophet no sooner sees the king of Israel, than he exclaims, "What have I to do with thee? Get thee to the prophets of thy father and mother?" Not that Jehoram was the gross idolater that they were, who worshipped Baal and Ashtaroth; but he served the golden calves of Jeroboam.

The king of Israel reproaches the Lord with having "called these three kings together, to give them into the hands of the king of Moab." Elisha's temper is now greatly ruffled, and he declares, that if it were not for the presence of Jehoshaphat, who was a worshipper of Jehovah, he would not even look at them. He calls, however, for a skilful minstrel, one of the sons of the prophets no doubt, and his temper becoming calmed, the prophetic spirit comes on him, and he predicts, not only a supply of water, but a decisive victory over Moab, which immediately followed. According to the barbarous custom of those times, the land was terribly destroyed; but the circumstance which excites the most horror, is the human sacrifice mentioned in the last verse.

The king of Moab, it seems, finding the war so severe against him, offered his own son and heir as a burnt-offering upon the wall, in sight of all the armies; in hope, not only to appease the titular deity of the place, but also to show his desperation, and determination not to submit. The shocking scene had its effect: "There was great indignation against Israel." The Moabites were desperately exasperated; the people of Judah were disgusted and shocked, as were probably the Israelites; and above all, the Lord himself was wroth both with Moab and with Israel. The siege of Kir-haraseth was therefore immediately given up, and the invading armies returned to their respective countries.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-44. The widow's oil multiplied. A rich woman entertains Elisha: her son dies suddenly, and is restored to life again.—It is very clear that the prophets did not live in a state of constrained celibacy, as some have pretended; for here is the widow of a prophet in great distress through her husband having died insolvent, and the creditor demands her two sons as bondmen till the debt is paid. In cases of extreme Ver. 11. Poured water on the hands of Elijah.—i. e. was his constant and confidential servant. Hamazy, speaking of a Persian supper, says, "Supper being now brought in, a servant presented a basin of water, and a napkin hung over his shoulders; he went to every one in the company, and poured water on their hands to wash."—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Minstrel.—[This was evidently intended to soothe and tranquilize the prophet's mind, which had been agitated and discomposed with holy indignation by the presence of the idolatrous king, and the recollection of his abomination. The soothing influence of music is generally acknowledged in every civilized nation. Cicero, in his Tusculan Questions, says, that "the Pythagoreans were accustomed to calm their minds, and soothe their passions, by singing and playing on the harp."—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Neither see wind nor rain.—Rain in the East is often attended with such whirlwinds of sand, as to obscure and darken the air.—Harmer.

Ver. 19. Mar.—This is metaphorical; the meaning is, filled with stones.

Ver. 20. In the morning, when the meat-offering was offered.—That is,

A. M. 3109.
B. C. 836.
i at their feet.
Ex. 11.3.
j 1 KI. 22.7.
k Isa. 22.26.
14.
1 TY. 5.10.
A. M. 3109.
B. C. 835.
l Eze. 14.3.
m Ju. 10.14.
Pr. 1.28.
Je. 2.28.
n 1 KI. 18.19.
o 1 KI. 17.1.
5.16.
p Pa. 15.4.
q 1 Sa. 10.5.
r Eze. 1.3.
3.14.
S. 1.
c. 4.3.
t De. 20.19.
20.
u grieve.
v Ex. 29.39.
40.
w were cried together.
x gird himself with a girdle.
y destroyed.
z or, smote in it, even smiting.
a Is. 37.26.
b Ge. 26.15.
c until he left the stones thereof in Kir-haraseth.
d Is. 16.7, 11.
e Mi. 6.7.
f Am. 2.1.
g Is. 37.37.
A. M. 3110.
B. C. 834.
a 1 KI. 20.35.

soon after sunrise. [This supply was altogether miraculous; for there was neither wind nor rain, nor any other natural means to furnish it.]—Bagster.

Ver. 21. They gathered all.—i. e. assembled by proclamation.—All that were able.—See note on 1 Kings xx. 11.

Ver. 22. Red as blood.—This might have been an optical deception. I (says Dr. Clarke) have seen the like sight when there was no reason to suspect supernatural agency. But might not the water have acquired this colour by passing through a red clay soil?

Ver. 25. Only in Kir-haraseth, &c.—See margin. Or, "Until he left in Kir-haraseth only the stone (walls) thereof," which are mentioned as very strong, Isa. xvi. 7.

Ver. 27. His eldest son.—All the heathen nations on great occasions offered human sacrifices: even our ancestors in England. Sanctum asserts, that among the Phenicians "it was customary, in great and public calamities, for princes and magistrates to offer up in sacrifice to the avenging demons, the dearest of their offspring."—Upon the wall.—Sol. Jarchi says, chamah pro

Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen.

2 And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thy handmaid hath not any thing in the house, save a pot of oil.

3 Then he said, <sup>a</sup>Go borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels; <sup>c</sup>borrow not a few.

4 And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and <sup>f</sup>thou shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

5 So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.

7 Then she came, and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest.

8 ¶ And <sup>b</sup>it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread.

9 And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive <sup>k</sup>that this is a holy man of God, which passeth by us continually.

10 Let <sup>l</sup>us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful <sup>m</sup>for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee?

poverty, a parent had, by the Mosaic law, a right to sell both himself and children, and from this it was inferred, that the creditor had a right to demand them: and thus the law was acted upon, not only in this period, but also in the time of our Lord's incarnation, though it is not clear the law itself justified such demand. (See Exod. xxi. 7. Levit. xxv. 39, 47—52. Isa. l. 1. Matt. xviii. 25.) Instead, however, of disputing the right, the prophet, by miracle, so multiplies the widow's pot (or cruise) of oil, that she is enabled to pay her debts, with a surplus to subsist both herself and children.

Elisha going one day to Shunem, calls in at the house of a pious and wealthy Israelite, whose wife invites him not only to take some present refreshment, but to call there whenever he might pass that way. He does so; and her husband being like minded, they build for himself and servant a little chamber on the wall, where he might enjoy the greater solitude, with, probably, a pleasing prospect of the country; and furnish this chamber with all the necessary accommodations. Wishing to make some grateful return, and finding the pious couple wanted neither riches nor honours, but only an heir to their possessions, he promises her a son. This son is born, and growing perly signifies "the sun," who was the god of Moab, and renders the phrase, "unto the sun;" but Dr. Clarke, who cites this remark, says, it is "not very solid."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. The creditor is come.—(Children, according to the Hebrew laws, were considered the property of their parents, who had a right to dispose of them for the payment of their debts. The Romans, Athenians, and Asiatics, in general, had the same authority over their children: they sold them in time of poverty; and their creditors seized them as they would sheep or oxen, or household goods. The same laws still exist among the Georgians.)—Basster.

Ver. 8. Shunem.—[This city was situated in the tribe of Issachar, five miles south from mount Tabor, according to Eusebius; and is probably the place which he calls Sanin, in Acrobatene, in the neighbourhood of Samaria or Se-jaste.]—Basster.

Ver. 10. A little chamber on the wall.—[Putting out above the wall, which rooms, in the East, are called Oleah, or Olee, the very term here used. See note on Judges iii. 30.—A candlestick.—Rather, a lamp; for as candles were not invented for many ages afterwards, it seems improper to speak of candlesticks. See note on Ex. xxv. 31.

A. M. 3110.
B. C. 894.
b Le. 25.39.
Mat. 13.25. c 1 Kl. 17.12.
d c. 3.16.
Ro. 4.17.
e or, scant.
f Ma. 6.37..
44.
8.5.9.
Jn. 2.7.9.
Ep. 3.20.
g or, creditor.
h There was a day.
i Jos. 19.18.
j laid hold on him.
k Mat. 5.16.
l Mat. 10.41.
42.
Ma. 9.41.
He. 13.2.
1 Pe. 4.9.
m He. 6.10.

n Ge. 18.10, 14.
o set time.
p ver. 23.
q Pa. 113.9.
Lu. 1.36.
r Nu. 23.11.
s peace.
t restrain not for me to ride
u c. 2.25. "
Is. 35.2.
v Le. 10.3.
Job 1.21,
22.
He. 39.9.

wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people.

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

16 And he said, About <sup>n</sup>this <sup>o</sup>season, according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do <sup>p</sup>not lie unto thy handmaid.

17 And the woman <sup>q</sup>conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, My head, my head. And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died.

21 And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither new moon, nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be <sup>r</sup>well.

24 Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; <sup>s</sup>slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went and came unto the man of God to mount <sup>t</sup>Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is <sup>v</sup>well.

up to a sufficient age to accompany his father to the harvest field, is suddenly taken ill, and dies the same day.

The pious Shunammite lays him on the prophet's bed, and having procured from her husband an ass to ride on, hastens to mount Carmel, to the prophet. Elisha seeing her at a distance, sends his servant to meet her, with the most friendly inquiries respecting herself and family, to all which he only receives for answer, "It is well." She hastened into the prophet's presence, and casting herself at his feet, began the narrative of her misfortunes; but before she could get through it, the prophet, perceiving her case, sends his servant forward to lay his staff upon the corpse, meaning, probably, himself to stop at home, and pray for the resuscitation of the child. Her importunity, however, prevails with him to accompany her, and he heaves not to pray over the boy until he is restored to life, and given back into his mother's hands.

The faith of this good woman has been justly admired, and is sufficiently evident in her application to the prophet, which probably arose from her conviction that Elisha was so well beloved of God, that his request would in no case be refused; and having, like Sarah, conceived when past the usual time of life

Ver. 20. He sat on her knees till noon, and then died.—The heat in Eastern countries is often so excessive as to prove fatal. The child of the Shunammite here spoken of, had gone to the reapers in the field, (ver. 18.) where he suddenly complained of head-ache, (ver. 19.) and soon after died. Probably he had a sun stroke, which is very common in the great heat which prevails in those countries at harvest time. (During the Crusades, the army of King Baldwin IV. suffered considerably by this circumstance near Tiberias; and Egmont and Hepman, in the 15th century, found the air about Jericho extremely hot; and say that the year before they were there it destroyed many persons.)—E. Monconys, speaking of himself, says, "Towards evening, the sun had struck with such force on my head, that I was seized with a violent fever, and obliged to go to bed."

Ver. 23. Wherefore . . . to-day?—This implies she had been accustomed to go to the prophet on the Sabbath and festival days.—It shall be well.—Wishing to stop all inquiries for the present, and confident all would be peace at last.

Ver. 26. Is it well? &c.—The Hebrew, in every instance in this verse is Sallem, "peace," the usual salutation among the Hebrews, and still general in the East. She wished to enter into no particulars with the servant, but hur-

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught <sup>w</sup> him by the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust her <sup>x</sup> away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is <sup>y</sup> vexed within her: and the Lord hath hid <sup>z</sup> it from me, and hath not told me.

28 Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not <sup>a</sup> say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, Gird <sup>b</sup> up thy loins, and take my staff in thy hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute <sup>c</sup> him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff <sup>d</sup> upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice, nor <sup>e</sup> hearing. Wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not <sup>f</sup> awaked.

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, and shut <sup>g</sup> the door upon them twain, and <sup>h</sup> prayed unto the Lord.

34 And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he <sup>i</sup> stretched himself upon the child; and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

35 Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy son.

37 Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took <sup>j</sup> up her son, and went out.

38 ¶ And Elisha came again to <sup>k</sup> Gilgal: and there was a dearth <sup>l</sup> in the land; <sup>m</sup> and the sons of the prophets were <sup>n</sup> sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets.

(her husband, like Abraham, being old also,) she, like the patriarch, also received her child a second time from the dead. (Heb. xi. 17—19.) The whole of this history strongly reminds us of the miracles wrought by Elijah for the widow of Zarephath. (1 Kings xvii. 17.)

Two other miracles occur in the close of this chapter. In the one case, the sons of the prophet, sitting before Elisha at Gilgal, and it being a time of dearth, one went out into the field, to gather herbage for their food, and gathered poisonous herbs; but the prophet having thrown a handful of meal into the pot, neutralized the poison. In another instance, some friend having sent them twenty barley loaves and a few ears of corn, Elisha blessed the food, and feasted a hundred men therewith.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—16. Naaman cured of his leprosy.—1. From how small circumstances do great events sometimes arise? In some of the predatory excursions of the Syrians, either Naaman himself, or one of his captains, had taken captive a little girl, who was given to Naaman's wife as a domestic slave, from whom nothing farther is expected than manual ried in to his master, and falling at his feet, seized the bottom of his garment, to secure his attention. Gehazi, thinking this too great a liberty, would have thrust her away, but his more considerate master checked him.

Ver. 39. Wild gourds.—Generally thought to be the Coloquintida, the fruit of a wild vine, about the size of an orange, and a bitter poison.—Taylor's Script. Index.

Ver. 42. Twenty loaves.—[Probably parched corn, or corn to be parched; full ears, before they are ripe, parched on the fire; a very frequent food in the East. The leaves were probably extremely small, as their leaves of bread still are in Eastern countries. But small as this may appear, it would be a considerable present in the time of famine; though very inadequate to the number of persons. Baal-shalisha, of which the person who made this seasonable present was an inhabitant, was situated, according to Eusebius and Jerome, 15 miles north of Diopolis, or Lydda.]—Bagster.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Naaman, captain of the host.—Of this Naaman we have

A. M. 3110.
B. C. 894.
w by his feet.
Mat. 23.9.
x Mat. 20. 31.

y bitter.
1 Sa. 1.10.

z Ge. 18.17.

a ver. 16.

b c. 9.1.

c Lu. 10.4.

d Ex. 7.19.

e Ac. 19.12.

A. M. 3115.

B. C. 889.

f attention.

g Ma. 5.29.

h Ju. 11.11.

i Ge. 4.

j Mat. 6.6.

k 1 Th. 17.20.

l 21.

m Ac. 20.10.

n once hither, and once thither.

o He. 11.35.

p 1 c. 21.

q m. c. 8.1.

r n. c. 2.3.

s o Lu. 10.39.

t Ac. 22.3.

u P Is. 5.4.

v Mat. 15.

w He. 12.15.

x Ex. 15.23.

y c. 2.21.

z Ju. 9.6.

a evil thing.

b 1 Sa. 9.4,7.

c 1 Co. 9.11.

d Ga. 6.6.

e u or, in r his scrip, or, garment.

f v Lu. 9.17.

g Ju. 6.11.

h 13.

i w Mat. 14.

j 20; 15.37.

k A. M. 3110.

l B. C. 894.

m A. M. 4.27.

n b before.

o c lifted up, or, accepted in countenance, or, gracious.

p d or, victory was before f before.

q g gather in.

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild <sup>p</sup> gourds his lap full, and came and shred <sup>q</sup> them into the pot of pottage: for they knew <sup>r</sup> them not.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O <sup>s</sup> thou man of God, there is death in the pot. And they could not eat <sup>t</sup> thereof.

41 But he said, Then bring meal. <sup>u</sup> And he cast <sup>v</sup> it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no <sup>w</sup> harm in the pot.

42 ¶ And there came a man from <sup>x</sup> Baal-shalisha, and brought <sup>y</sup> the man of God bread of the first-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn <sup>z</sup> in the husk thereof. And he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat.

43 And his servitor said, What, <sup>a</sup> should I set this before a hundred men? He said again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus saith the Lord, <sup>b</sup> They shall eat, and shall leave <sup>c</sup> thereof.

44 So he set <sup>d</sup> it before them, and they did eat, and left <sup>e</sup> thereof, according to the word of the Lord.

CHAPTER V.

1 Naaman, by the report of a captive maid, is sent to Samaria to be cured of his leprosy. 8 Elisha, sending him to Jordan, cureth him. 15 He refusing Naaman's gifts, granteth him some of the earth. 20 Gehazi, abusing his master's name unto Naaman, is smitten with leprosy.

NOW <sup>a</sup> Naaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a great man <sup>b</sup> with his master, and <sup>c</sup> honourable, because by him the Lord had given <sup>d</sup> deliverance unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour, but he was a leper.

2 And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she <sup>e</sup> waited on Naaman's wife.

3 And she said unto her mistress, Would God my lord were <sup>f</sup> with the prophet that <sup>g</sup> is in Samaria! for he would <sup>h</sup> recover him of his leprosy.

4 And <sup>i</sup> one went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that <sup>j</sup> is of the land of Israel.

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel.

service; this child, however, proves to her master the greatest blessing of his life. 2. No rank in society can exempt us from the most distressing circumstances to which sin has subjected human nature. Naaman was a mighty man, and honourable, and a great man with his master; but he was a leper, afflicted with one of the most loathsome and disgusting disorders that our "flesh is heir to." 3. God has so constructed society, that the lowest may render the most important services to the highest and the greatest—a little captive maid is the first means of Naaman's cure. She was taken into the kitchen, and, while employed in waiting on her mistress, she hears her, perhaps, lament the painful circumstances of the general-in-chief, and in her simplicity she says, "Would God my lord were with the prophet in Samaria, for he would recover him of his leprosy!" One of the servants probably went and told my lord Naaman, Naaman told the king his master, and Ben-hadad writes to the king of Israel on his behalf. 4. It is by a divine interposition, however, that our conflicting circumstances are harmonized and made productive of the great designs of Providence. Every thing seems no other account: but he is referred to by our Lord, Luke iv. 27.—King of Syria.—This must have been Ben-hadad; and the king of Israel, his contemporary, Jehoram.—Honourable.—Elevated in the sight of his master.—Deliverance.—From this expression some of the Rabbins have inferred, that he was the man who drew the bow at a venture, by which Ahab was slain: 1 Kings xxii. 34.—He was a leper.—This was a common disease in Syria, and they had not the wholesome regulations of the Mosaic law. Naaman's disorder appears to have now grown desperate.

Ver. 3. Would God, &c.—The name of God is not in the original, which simply reads, "Would that," or, I wish, &c.

Ver. 4. And one went in.—The LXX. read, "And she went in;" i. e. Naaman's wife. The Vulgate, "Naaman went in and told his lord;" i. e. the king; which best agrees with what follows.

Ver. 5. Ten talents.—The whole of the present is estimated at about $45,000.

And <sup>b</sup> he departed, and took <sup>i</sup> with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment.

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.

7 And it came to pass, when <sup>i</sup> the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, Am I <sup>k</sup> God, to <sup>i</sup> kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and see how he seeketh <sup>m</sup> a quarrel against me.

8 ¶ And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall know <sup>n</sup> that there is a prophet in Israel.

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha.

10 And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and wash <sup>o</sup> in Jordan seven <sup>p</sup> times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

11 But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, <sup>q</sup> I thought, <sup>r</sup> He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and <sup>s</sup> strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper.

12 Are not <sup>t</sup> Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage.

13 And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, My <sup>u</sup> father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how <sup>v</sup> much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

14 Then <sup>w</sup> went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like <sup>x</sup> unto the flesh of a little child, and he was <sup>y</sup> clean.

15 ¶ And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came, and stood before him: and he said, Behold, now I know <sup>z</sup> that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel: now therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing <sup>a</sup> of thy servant.

16 But he said, As <sup>b</sup> the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive <sup>c</sup> none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt-offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but <sup>d</sup> unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth <sup>e</sup> on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down <sup>f</sup> myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon <sup>g</sup> thy servant in this thing.

19 And he said unto him, Go <sup>h</sup> in peace. So he departed from him a little <sup>i</sup> way.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but, as the LORD liveth, I will run after him, and take <sup>j</sup> somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman. And when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, <sup>k</sup> Is all well?

22 And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be <sup>l</sup> content, take two

A. M. 3115.
B. C. 839.
h 1 Sa. 9.5.
c. 3. 3. 9.
i in his
hand.
j Is. 37. 14.
k Ge. 30. 2.
l De. 32. 39.
1 Sa. 2. 6.
m 1 Ki. 20. 7.
Lu. 11. 54.
n 1 Ki. 18.
36. 37.
Psa. 2. 5.
38. 33.
o Ju. 9. 7.
p Jos. 6. 4.
16.
q said, or,
said with myself.
r Ju. 4. 48.
s move up and down.
t or, Amana.
u Ge. 41. 43.
c. 2. 12.
v 1 Co. 1. 21.
27.
w Eze. 47. 1.
Zec. 13. 1.
14. 8.
x Job 33. 25.
y Lu. 4. 27.
z Da. 2. 47.
3. 29.
6. 25. 27.
a Ge. 33. 11.
b c. 3. 14.
c Ge. 14. 23.
Mat. 10. 8.
Ac. 20. 33.
33.
d 1 Th. 1. 9.
e c. 7. 2.
f Ex. 20. 5.
18. 19.
g 2 Ch. 30.
18. 19.
h Ma. 5. 34.
Lu. 7. 50.
i piece of ground.
or, Ge. 33.
16.
j Hab. 2. 9.
1 Ti. 6. 9.
10.
k Is there
peace?
l c. 6. 3.

now in a train for Naaman's cure; but the king of Israel is offended, and thinks the letter of the king of Syria was only designed to pick a quarrel. A prophet must therefore interfere, to harmonize these hostile feelings. "Let him come now to me," says Elisha, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel."

Naaman now comes with great pomp and splendour, expecting, as he confesses, that the prophet would come out to meet him, and perform some solemn ceremony; instead of which, he only sends out a message by his servant—"Go, and wash in Jordan seven times." Naaman, in his turn, is wroth also, at being treated with such disrespect: "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? So he turned and went away in a rage." "But a soft answer turneth away wrath;" and "a word spoken in due season, how good is it?" His servants (wiser than their master) venture to whisper in his ear—"My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it?" The tempest is instantly a calm: he washes in Jordan and is clean. The great man comes now back to the prophet in a very different temper: cured of his leprosy, and overwhelmed with astonishment and gratitude, he exclaims, "Behold! now I know that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel;" and he is grateful not only to the author, but to the instrument, of his cure; and he adds, "Now, therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing of thy servant; and he urged him.

Ver. 6. That thou mayest recover him.—It should seem as if either the king of Syria misunderstood the business, or supposed that the prophet was at the king's command.

Ver. 11. And strike his hand.—i. e. rub the part affected with some choice oil, or ointment.

Ver. 12. Abana and Pharpar.—[This river is evidently Barrada, or Barida, as the Arabic renders, the Chrysorrhoea of the Greeks, which taking its rise in Antilibanus, runs eastward towards Damascus, where it is divided into three streams, one of which passes through the city, and the other two through the gardens; which reuniting at the east of the city, forms a lake about five or six eagles to the south-east, called Behnair el Marj, or, Lake of the Meadow. Pharpar was probably one of the branches.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Two mules' burden of earth.—It seems improper to conceal, that very different views of these words have been taken by different commentators. Dr. Clarke supposes, that by earth, the Syrian here meant the present which he had brought, of silver and gold, which are called clay, Hab. ii. 6. and dust but he refused." It may be said, that the prophets received presents at other instances, and his gift is here offered under the delicate terms of "a blessing;" but the prophet had substantial grounds for his refusal, as his servant must have had good reason to conclude.

Ver. 17—27. Naaman's request.—Gehazi's falsehood and punishment.—Finding the waters of Israel endowed with so miraculous a power, this great man seems to imagine that the earth might be equally sacred, and therefore requests two mules' load of it; but for what purpose? It is generally supposed, that it was for the erection of an altar with holy earth; for it might not be unnatural for a heathen to suppose, that there was some peculiar sanctity both in the earth and water of Judea. He might also understand, by means of the little Hebrew maid, or otherwise, that the God of Israel preferred an altar of earth, or unwrought stone. (Exod. xx. 24, 25.) He therefore wished to erect to the God of Israel, whom he had determined to serve in future, such an altar as might be most acceptable. The answer to this requirement, however, is not recorded.

The next request is still more difficult of interpretation. Our translators, following the ancient versions, represent Naaman as soliciting an indulgence in practising the outward rites of idolatry, so far as necessary to please his royal master and retain his place at court; and the answer of the prophet, "Go in peace," if it be supposed to sanction such prevarication, and more, Zech. ix. 3. This he requests may be given, not to himself, but to Gehazi, the prophet's servant. But the late Taylor, in his Fragments to Calmet, though he takes the term earth literally, thinks that the earth was not meant for an altar, but for purposes of ablution; and he cites evidence to prove that the Arabians, when they could not get water, performed their ablutions with sand, or dry earth, and sometimes by rubbing their hands and arms upon a stone. Both these ideas are ingenious, but do not, we conceive, agree with the context.

Ver. 18. The house (or temple) of Rimmon.—Rimmon signifies the high one, or the highest, which some refer to the sun, and others to the planet Saturn, as ultimately worshipped by the Syrians. Rimmon also signifies the pomegranate; and the learned Bryant mentions a figure of Zeus (or Jupiter) Cassius, at Pelusium, in Egypt, holding this mysterious emblem of the pomegranate.

Ver. 19. A little way.—See Margin: but means rather, "a good way;" some considerable distance.—Parkhurst: "about a French mile."—Gesenius.

talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants; and they bare them before him.

24 And when he came to the tower, he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house: and he let the men go, and they departed.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master. And Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went no whither.

26 And he said unto him, Went not my heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and olive-yards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants?

27 The leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever. And he went out from his presence a leper as white as snow.

CHAPTER VI.

Elisha, giving leave to the young prophets to enlarge their dwellings, cansteth iron to swim. 3 He discloseth the king of Syria's counsel. 13 The army, which was sent to Dothan to apprehend Elisha, is smitten with blindness. 19 Being brought into Samaria, they are dismissed in peace. 24 The famine in Samaria causeth women to eat their own children. 30 The king sendeth to slay Elisha.

AND the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there, where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

3 And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

4 So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the axe-head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he showed him the place. And he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

seems of very dangerous tendency. Dr. Lightfoot, therefore, and other eminent Hebraists, render the words in the past tense. "In this thing the Lord pardon thy servant, that when my master hath gone into the house (or temple) of Rimmon to worship, and he leaned on my hand, and I bowed myself in the house of Rimmon; when I bowed myself in the house of Rimmon, the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing! And he said unto him, Go in peace." This appears perfectly consistent: he confesses that he was an idolater, and seems to hint that he had been such, not so much from principle as from policy. Now, however, he is convinced that there was "no God in all the earth but in Israel;" and therefore declares his determination, in future, to worship him alone. Well might the prophet then say, "Go in peace," and thus dismiss him with a blessing.—But Gehazi's conduct admits of no apology. He had seen his master's disinterested conduct; but, instead of admiring, he murmurs at it: "My master hath spared this Syrian," but I will get something from him. He therefore follows him with a lie in his mouth, and has another ready for his master in return. It seems extraordinary, however, that he should attempt to impose upon the prophet: but it appears that he was taken by surprise, and knew not what to say. How true is it, that "the love of money is the root of all evil!"—"Covetousness, (says Bishop Hall,) never lodged in the heart alone; if it find not, it will breed wickedness. What a mint of fraud is there in a worldly breast! How readily can it coin subtle falsehood for an advantage!" This hypocritical servant, however, had his reward. "The leprosy of Naaman (says the prophet) shall cleave to thee, and unto thy seed for ever;" and "he went out from his presence a leper as white as snow." Thus ended his dream of wealth and riches.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—33. The sons of the prophets remove their habitation—Iron swims—Syrians smitten with blindness—Sa-Ver. 24. The tower.—Perhaps it might be an old tower, in which he hid his ill-gotten treasures.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 5. The axe head.—The Hebrews very early manufactured iron tools, which art, perhaps, they acquired while working at the iron furnaces in Egypt; De. ii. 20.

Ver. 19. Dothan.—This is supposed to be the same place where Joseph

A. M. 3115.

B. C. 883.

m or, secret place.

n Jos. 7.21. Is. 29.15.

o Eze. 33.31.

p not hither or thither.

q Pr. 12.19, 22.

r Is. 59.2,3. Hos. 10.13.

s Nu. 12.10. c. 15.5.

A. M. 3111. B. C. 893.

a c. 43.

b c. 52.

c iron.

d c. 221.

e or, encamping.

f 2 Ch. 20.20.

g Ps. 49. 4,5. Mal. 2,3. &amp;c.

h No.

i Am. 3.7.

j Ps. 139.1. 4.

k Ps. 37.32, 33.

l Je. 36.26. Ac. 23.12. 27.

m heavy.

n or, minister.

o 2 Ch. 16.9. Ps. 55.18. Ro. 3.31.

p c. 211.

q Ps. 34.7. 68.17.

r Ze. 1.8. 6.1.7. Re. 19.11, 14.

s Ge. 19.11.

r 2 Sa. 16.18.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp.

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down.

10 And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.

11 ¶ Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not show me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, None, my lord, O king: but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bed-chamber.

13 And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan.

14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a great host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about.

15 ¶ And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, a host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do?

16 And he answered, Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

17 And Elisha prayed and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.

18 ¶ And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness. And he smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha.

19 And Elisha said unto them, This is not maria besieged.—The sons of the prophets complain to their master that their school is too contracted, having probably much increased under his care, and have leave to remove. They fell trees from the banks of Jordan. While at work, the head of an axe falls off into the water, but Elisha causes it to swim, and it is recovered, which was a matter of honest gratulation—"for it was borrowed."

We are next told that the king of Syria again "warred," or rather, he designed to war, "against Israel," and took previous "counsel with his servants" concerning his encampments; but He, whose ear heareth all that is said in secret, enabled Elisha to warn the king of Israel of his plans, and he found them all defeated: he therefore suspected treason in his council, until they informed him, that it was through Elisha that his secrets were betrayed. Exasperated at this, and not recollecting that this movement would be equally open to the prophet's eye, he sends horses and chariots, and a great host, to surround the city. His servant, on rising in the morning, is struck with terror and alarm, until, on the prayer of his master, his eyes are opened, and he sees the mountain on which they dwelt encompassed with chariots and horses of ethereal flame. And thus he found, as his master had assured him, that more were for them than against them.—And thus may Christians console themselves under their severest trials. Numerous and powerful as may be the enemies of their peace, the Lord "giveth his angels charge concerning them;" and they are surrounded with invisible protectors. As to Elisha, instead of carrying him off to their master, the host of the king of Syria are smitten with blindness, and carried to Samaria; but the king of Israel is not suffered to touch them: on the contrary, they are feasted, and sent back to their own master.

Ben-hadad was, however, bent on war; and though we know not the ostensible cause, we well know, as is remarked was sold by his brethren; and it is placed by Eusebius 12 miles north of Samaria.—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Smite with blindness.—[Confound their sight, so that they may not know what they see; and so mistake one place for another. The word sanverim, rendered blindness, occurs only here and in Gen. xix. 11, on which see the note.]—Bagster the way, neither is this the city : * follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, Lord, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the Lord opened their eyes, and they saw ; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them ? shall I smite them ?

22 And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them : wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow ? set a bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And he prepared great provision for them : and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel.

24 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered all his host, and went up, and besieged Samaria.

25 And there was a great famine in Samaria : and, behold, they were besieged it, until an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for five pieces of silver.

26 ¶ And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king.

27 And he said, * If the Lord will not help thee, whence shall I help thee ? out of the barn-floor, or out of the wine-press ?

28 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee ? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow.

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him : and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him : and she hath hid her son.

by the shrewd and learned Calmet, that "an ambitious and restless prince always finds a sufficiency of reasons to colour his enterprises." In the following year he besieges Samaria, and reduces it to the last extremity of famine, so that food becomes unattainable to the lower classes ; inasmuch that women were compelled to eat the fruit of their own womb. The king, on hearing this, instead of feeling it as a visitation for his sins and those of the people, again vows the destruction of Elisha ; and, laying all the blame on him, sends a messenger to take off his head. The prophet was, however, warned of this, and also that his master was just behind him : he therefore desires the elders of Israel who were with him, to detain the messenger till the king came ; who, immediately as he appeared, began to reproach, not only the prophet, but the Lord also. "I see," said he, "this evil is of the Lord : what (or wherefore) should I wait for the Lord any longer ?" Poor man ! what will he do without him ? The prophet's answer begins the next chapter : in the mean time we may remark, that it little becomes creatures so dependant as we are, to be out of patience with our Maker. Not wait for him ? "It is in him we live, and move, and have our being !"

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—20. Elisha promises immediate relief.—The Syrians fly under a false alarm, and leave their camp

Ver. 22. Wilt thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive ?—To slay prisoners, no longer capable of resistance, is always considered both cowardly and cruel.

Ver. 23. Came no more.—[That is, for a considerable time. What is mentioned in the next verse was more than a year afterwards.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. An ass's head.—[If the pieces of silver were drachms, as they most probably were, the whole would amount to about $10 75 ; which was a great price for so mean a part of this unclean animal. A similar instance is mentioned by Plutarch, in his life of Artaxerxes, who informs us, that in that prince's war with the Caducii, an ass's head could scarcely be purchased at the price of 60 drachms, i. e. about $10.—Dove's dung.—This probably denotes, as Rochart, Scheuchzer, and others, suppose, a kind of pulse or vetches, which the Arabs still call pigeon's dung. "They never," says Dr. Shaw, "constitute a dish by themselves, but are stewed singly as a garnish over cucumbers, villonoe, and other dishes. They are besides in the greatest repute after they are parched in pans and ovens : then assuming the name lebleby," and he thinks they were so called from being pointed at one end and acquiring an ash colour in parching.]—Bagster.

A. M. 3111.
B. C. 893.

s come ye after me.

t Lu. 24.16, 31.

u Pr. 25.21, 22.

Ro. 12.20.

v c. 5.2, 24.2.

A. M. 3112.
B. C. 892.

w Le. 26.25,
Je. 52.6,
Eze. 4.16.

x or, Let not the LORD save thee.

y Ps. 127.1,
146.3,5,
Je. 17.5.

z Le. 26.29,
De. 28.53,
57,
Je. 49.15.

a dollar.

b 1 Ki. 3.26.

c 1 Ki. 21.27.

d 1 Ki. 19.2.

e Eze. 8.1, 20.1.

f 1 Ki. 14.6.

g 1 Ki. 18.13, 14.

h Job 1.21.

i Ps. 37.7,9.

a ver. 18,19.

b which belonged to the king leaning upon his hand.

c 5.18.

d Ge. 7.11,
Mal. 3.10.

e ver. 17,20.

f Le. 13.46.

g Es. 4.16,
Lu. 15.17,
18.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes ; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.

31 Then he said, God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day.

32 But Elisha sat in his house, and the elders sat with him ; and the king sent a man from before him : but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son of a murderer hath sent to take away my head ? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door : is not the sound of his master's feet behind him ?

33 And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him, and he said, Behold, this evil is of the Lord ; what should I wait for the Lord any longer ?

CHAPTER VII.

1 Elisha prophesieth incredible plenty in Samaria. 3 Four lepers, venturing on the host of the Syrians, bring tidings of their flight. 12 The king, finding by spies the news to be true, spoileth the tents of the Syrians. 17 The lord, who would not believe the prophecy of plenty, having the charge of the gate, is trodden to death in the press.

THEN Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the Lord ; Thus saith the Lord, a To-morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria.

2 Then a lord b on whose hand the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, if the Lord would make windows in heaven, might this thing be ? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men at the entering in of the c gate : and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die ?

4 If we say, we will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there ; and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians : if they save us alive, we shall live ; and if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians : and when they full of provisions, which puts an end to the famine.—In the conclusion of the preceding chapter, the king of Israel, being introduced to Elisha, addressed him in the words which we have already noticed, as expressive both of impatience and unbelief. To those words the prophet replies by this prediction :—"To-morrow, about this time, shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria." The measure here referred to was a seah, equal to about two gallons and a half ; and the shekel about the value of 50 cents. This forms a wonderful contrast to the price of provisions in the preceding chapter, and might well seem incredible to the noble lord who accompanied the king, and on whose arm he leaned, but who evidently knew nothing of the power of Jehovah : he therefore objects, that if the Almighty were to make "windows in heaven," to pour down corn upon the earth, the fact would be scarcely possible ; to which the prophet instantly replies, "Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof."

Let us now turn to the strange and mysterious means which had been provided to fulfil this incredible prediction. Four miserable lepers were sitting and starving at the gate of Samaria, when they resolve to venture into the camp of the Sy-

Ver. 29. So we boiled my son.—This was threatened, and even predicted, by Moses ; De. xxviii. 56.

Ver. 32. Son of a murderer.—Namely, of Ahab, who murdered Naboth and many others.

Ver. 33. The messenger came down.—Dr. Boothroyd (following Dathie) inserts, "and the king, who had followed him." So Josephus says, "The king (Jehoram) repenting of his cruel message, immediately followed the messenger."—He therefore said, What should I wait, &c.—Or rather, "Wherefore should I wait." So the Heb. particle is rendered, Ex. xiv. 15, and elsewhere.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. In the gate.—[From this it appears that the gates were not only used as courts of judicature, but as market places. So Morier observes, "In our rides we usually went out of the town at the Derwazeh Shah Abdul Azeem, or the gate leading to the village of Shah Abdul Azeem, where a market was held every morning, particularly of horses, mules, asses, and camels. At about sun-rise, the owners of the animals assemble and exhibit them for sale. But besides, here were sellers of all sorts of goods, in temporary shops and tents : and this, perhaps, will explain the custom alluded to in 2 Kings vii. 18."—Bagster.

were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there.

6 For the Lord had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and <sup>h</sup> they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.

7 Wherefore they <sup>i</sup> arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

9 Then they said one to another, <sup>k</sup> We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if <sup>l</sup> we tarry till the morning light, <sup>m</sup> some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

10 So they came and called unto the <sup>n</sup> porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were.

11 And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.

12 ¶ And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now show you what the Syrians have done to us. They know that we be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.

13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left <sup>o</sup> in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed: <sup>p</sup>) and let us send and see.

A. M. 3112.

B. C. 892.

g 2 Sa. 5.24.

Is. 19.7.

Job 15.21.

h c.3.22, &c.

11 KL.10.29.

1 Ps.14.5.

48.4.6.

Is. 12.

Pr.21.1.

k Le.19.13.

Pr.11.26.

l Ec.4.11.

m we shall find punishment.

n 2 Sa.18.26.

o in it.

p Ps.68.12.

Is.33.1,4.

Is. 23.

q ver.1.

r ver.2.

s Ge.18.14.

Num.11.23.

Is. 23.19.

t Nu.20.12.

Je.17.5,6.

He.3.19.

A. M. 3113.

B. C. 891.

a c.4.18, &c.

b Ps.105.16.

Hag.1.11.

c Ge.41.27.

14 They took therefore two chariot horses; and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see.

15 And they went after them unto Jordan: and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king.

16 And the people went out, and <sup>p</sup> spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, according to the word <sup>q</sup> of the Lord.

17 ¶ And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to have the charge of the gate: and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had <sup>r</sup> said, who spake when the king came down to him.

18 And it came to <sup>s</sup> pass as the man of God had spoken to the king, saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, shall be to-morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria:

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, if the Lord should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt <sup>t</sup> not eat thereof.

20 And so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAPTER VIII.

<sup>1</sup> The Shunammite, having left her country seven years, to avoid the forewarned famine, for Elisha's miracle sake, hath her land restored by the king. <sup>7</sup> Hazael, being sent with a present by Ben-hadad to Elisha at Damascus, after he had heard the prophecy, killed his master, and succeeded him. <sup>16</sup> Jehoram's wicked reign in Judah. <sup>20</sup> Edom and Libnah revolt. <sup>23</sup> Ahaziah succeeded Jehoram. <sup>25</sup> Ahaziah's wicked reign. <sup>28</sup> He visiteth Joram, wounded, at Jezreel.

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, whose son <sup>u</sup> he had restored to life, saying, Arise and go thou and thy household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for the Lord hath called <sup>v</sup> for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land seven <sup>w</sup> years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years.

3 And it came to pass at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry often fulfilled in a manner that no human sagacity could possibly devise or foresee.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—29. The inheritance of the Shunammite restored. Ben-hadad falls sick, and is murdered by Hazael, who succeeds him.—This chapter is partly retrospective, and leads us back to the history of the Shunammite, whom, it seems, the prophet had advised to leave the land of Israel during the seven years' famine in the reign of Ahab. She accordingly sojourned among the Philistines till the famine ceased: and having, during that time, been deprived of her inheritance, on her return she petitions the king of Israel that it might be restored. Providentially, at this time, the king of Israel happened to be in conversation with Gehazi, whom his master had dismissed for improper conduct towards Naaman, and he has the curiosity to inquire what this man knew respecting the miracles reported of his master: while he is naming the restoration to life of the Shunammite's son, both she and her son come into the royal presence with their petition; and Gehazi points to them in confirmation of his narrative—"Behold, the woman and her son!" From this seemingly accidental circumstance her petition is granted without difficulty.

Elisha now visits Damascus; and Ben-hadad having fallen sick, and hearing of his being in the neighbourhood, sends Hazael, one of his officers, to inquire whether he should recover.

his soldiers. They soon fell to plunder, and drunk so freely of the liquors, that, overcome with the fatigue of the day's march, and the fumes of the spirits they were long sunk into profound repose. At that time, two sheiks who were watching the enemy, came silently to the camp, and being rejoined by Daher, they all rushed into the camp, and fell upon the sleeping foe, 8000 of whom they butchered on the spot; and the pasha, with the remainder, escaped with much difficulty to Damascus, leaving all their baggage in the hands of the victorious Daher.—Bagster.

Ver. 13. They are as the multitude of Israel, i. e. consumed with famine.—Behold they are as all the multitude of Israel, [which are left in it: behold, they are even as all the multitude of Israel,] which are consumed," &c. Dr rians, and throw themselves on their mercy. On attempting to do this, they are astonished to find that the Syrians are all fled, under the impression of a false alarm; for the Lord had caused them to "hear a noise of chariots and of horses, even a great host;" from whence they concluded that the king of Israel had hired to his assistance the Canaanites and Egyptians: they were, therefore, seized with a dreadful panic, and left behind both their provisions and their treasures; when, therefore, these poor lepers had filled their bellies, they also loaded their backs with silver and gold, and garments, which they hid: when they came, however, to reflect on the state of their starving countrymen within the walls of Samaria, their conscience smote them, and they went and gave information at the king's palace. The king at first very naturally suspected it to be a feint of the Syrians, to draw them out of the city, and get possession of it; he therefore prudently sends out two horsemen, who return without being able to find an enemy. The people no sooner hear this than they fly to the spoil, and bring in such a quantity of provisions, that the prediction is literally fulfilled. The unhappy nobleman, indeed, who jeered at it, tastes not of the blessing; for, being appointed to keep the gate, and perhaps neither sufficiently active or accommodating, the people press on him, and he is trodden down in the gate and killed; thus fulfilling the other and the melancholy part of the prediction. So are the designs of God

Ver. 12. Gone out of the camp to hide.—[This was a very natural conclusion; and, in the History of the Revolt of Ali Bey, we have an account of a stratagem very similar to that supposed to have been practised by the Syrians. The Pasha of Damascus having approached the sea of Tiboras, found Sheik Daher encamped there: but the Sheik, deferring the engagement till the next morning, during the night divided his army into three parts, and left the camp with great fires blazing, all sorts of provisions, and a large quantity of spirituous liquors. In the middle of the night the pasha, thinking to surprise the Sheik, marched in silence to the camp, which, to his astonishment, he found entirely abandoned; and imagining the sheik had fled with so much precipitation that he could not carry off his baggage and stores, he stopped in the camp to refresh unto the king for her house and for her land.

4 And the king talked with <sup>d</sup> Gehazi the servant of the man of God, saying, <sup>e</sup> Tell me, I pray thee, all the great things that Elisha hath done.

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had restored a dead body to <sup>f</sup> life, that, behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this <sup>is</sup> the woman, and this <sup>is</sup> her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain <sup>g</sup> officer, saying, Restore all that <sup>was</sup> her's, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

7 ¶ And Elisha came to Damascus; and Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick; and it was told him, saying, The man of God is come hither.

8 And the king said unto <sup>h</sup> Hazael, Take a present <sup>i</sup> in thy hand, and go, meet the man of God, and <sup>j</sup> inquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

9 So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present <sup>k</sup> with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest <sup>l</sup> certainly recover: howbeit the LORD hath showed me that he shall surely <sup>m</sup> die.

11 And he settled his <sup>n</sup> countenance steadfastly, until he was ashamed: and the man of God <sup>o</sup> wept.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know the evil <sup>p</sup> that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword,

The prophet sends this answer—"Certainly thou mayest recover from this disease: howbeit (adds he) the Lord hath showed me that he shall surely die." This must have seemed a very mysterious, and even contradictory reply: it was, however, strictly correct; his disorder was not mortal, nor did he die of it; but he did not at the moment explain the mystery. He fixed his eyes, however, on Hazael till he blushed, and the prophet himself wept. "Why weepest thou, my lord?" said Hazael; "Because I know, (said he,) the evil that thou wilt do to the children of Israel, and the cruelties thou wilt commit upon them. Hazael himself is shocked at the idea; he contemplated nothing of the kind. "Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great evil?" Alas! he knew not what was in his heart. "No man, (says Bishop Taylor,) is discerned to be vicious so soon as he is so; for vices have their infancy and their childhood, and it cannot be expected that in a child's age there should be the vice of a man; that were as monstrous as if he wore a beard in his cradle. We do not believe that a serpent's sting does just then grow, when he strikes us in a vital part; the venom of the little spear was there when first it began to creep from its little shell." The Kennicott considers the words between brackets, as repeated by the errors of a transcriber; and remarks, that they are omitted in the LXX. and Syriac versions, and in forty of his and De Rossi's MSS.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 4. King talked with Gehazi.—[As it appears not likely that the king would hold conversation with a leprous man; or that, knowing Gehazi had been dismissed with the highest disgrace from the prophet's service, he would talk with him concerning his late master; some have supposed that this happened before the cleansing of Naaman. But it agrees better with the chronology to consider it as having taken place after that event; the king, probably, having an insatiable curiosity to know the private history of a man who had done such astonishing things. As to the circumstance of Gehazi's disease, he might overlook that, and converse with him, keeping at a reasonable distance, as nothing but actual contact could defile.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Present with him.—"Forty camels' burden" of the good things of Syria, must be considered, not merely in the light of a present on this occasion, but as some compensation for his former attempt against him, ch. vi. 14; and perhaps also in acknowledgment of his conduct towards his troops, in preserving their lives; ver. 22, 23.

Ver. 10. Thou mayest recover.—Hebrew, "Living, thou mayest live." Dying he shall die." Our common Hebrew text, however, has the negative in the first clause also; but our English version, like all the ancient versions, follows the reading, called Keri, which we have no doubt is right.

Ver. 11. Until he was ashamed.—Not the prophet, but Hazael; and when his countenance fell, the prophet wept.

A. M. 3113.

B. C. 891.

d c. 5. 20, 27.

e Mat. 2. 8.

Lu. 9. 9.

23. 8.

Jn. 9. 27.

f c. 4. 35.

g or, eunuch.

h 1 Ki. 19. 15.

i 1 Ki. 14. 3.

j c. 1. 2, 6.

k in his hand.

l 1 Ki. 22. 15.

m ver. 15.

n and set it.

o Lu. 19. 41.

p c. 10. 32.

13. 7.

q Am. 1. 3. 5.

Ps. 137. 8, 9.

r c. 15. 16.

Hos. 13. 16.

Am. 1. 13.

s 1 Sa. 17. 43.

t 1 Ki. 19. 15.

u ver. 10.

v Mi. 2. 1.

A. M. 3112.

B. C. 892.

w 2 Ch. 21. 5.

&c.

x reigneth.

y 1 Ki. 22. 52,

53.

z ver. 26.

a Je. 33. 25,

26.

Hos. 11. 9.

b 2 Sa. 7. 13.

1 Ki. 1. 36.

15. 4.

Ps. 132. 17.

c candle,

or, lamp.

d Ge. 27. 40.

e 1 Ki. 22. 47.

f ver. 20.

g Jos. 21. 13.

and <sup>q</sup> wilt dash their children, and rip up <sup>r</sup> their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what, <sup>is</sup> thy servant a <sup>s</sup> dog, that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, The LORD hath showed me <sup>t</sup> that thou <sup>shalt</sup> be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me <sup>that</sup> thou shouldest <sup>u</sup> surely recover.

15 And it came to pass on the <sup>v</sup> morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread <sup>w</sup> it on his face, so that he died: and Hazael reigned in his stead.

16 ¶ And in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat <sup>being</sup> then king of Judah, <sup>x</sup> Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah <sup>begin</sup> began to reign.

17 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

18 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house <sup>y</sup> of Ahab: for the <sup>z</sup> daughter of Ahab was his wife: and he did evil in the sight of the LORD.

19 Yet <sup>a</sup> the LORD would not destroy Judah for David his servant's sake, as he promised <sup>b</sup> him to give him always a <sup>c</sup> light, <sup>and</sup> to his children.

20 ¶ In his days Edom revolted <sup>d</sup> from under the hand of Judah, and made a king <sup>e</sup> over themselves.

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him: and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents.

22 Yet <sup>f</sup> Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. Then Libnah <sup>g</sup> revolted at the same time.

23 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, <sup>are</sup> they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

Lord hath showed me, (said Elisha,) that thou shalt be king over Syria," or rather, "hath showed thee to me, king of Syria." In the glass of prophetic vision he had been favoured with a prospective view of his conduct, and shrunk from it with horror.

Hazael goes home to his master, and relates what he thought proper of the conversation. "He told me that thou shouldest surely recover." But his mind resolved the latter part of the prediction, that he should be "king over Syria." The glimpse of a throne, though distant, had intoxicated him. To be a king!—And why not now? might he say. "His wish was father to that thought." Behold, on the morrow he suffocates his master with a wet cloth, and reigns in his stead. (See note on ver. 15.) A wet cloth hath stopped the mouth of his sovereign, but, "O Hazael, thou shalt not thus easily stop the mouth of thy conscience. That shall call thee traitor, even in thy chair of state, and shall check all thy royal triumphs with—'Thou hast founded thy throne in blood!'"—Bishop Hall.

The sacred history now adverts to the circumstances of Judah and of Israel. Jehoram (or Joram) son of Jehoshaphat

Ver. 12. Rip up, &c.—This horrible cruelty has been too often practised, in order to destroy the fruit of the womb, and might be resorted to by this sanguinary wretch. See chap. x. 32, 33. and compare Amos 1. 3. See also Amos 1. 13. Hosea xiii. 16. 2 Kings xv. 16.

Ver. 15. A thick cloth.—[There is a considerable degree of ambiguity in this passage. The pronoun he is generally referred to Hazael; but Dr. Geddes and others are decidedly of opinion, that we should understand by it Ben-hadad; who, encouraged by the favourable answer of Elisha, as reported by Hazael, adopts a violent remedy to allay the heat of his fever, and puts over his face the keener, or fy-net, (see note on 1 Sa. xix. 13.) dipped in water, which suddenly checked the perspiration and occasioned his death.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. In the fifth year, &c.—This verse seems very confused. Scott thus explains it: "Jehoram, the son of Jehoshaphat, began to reign with his father before the death of Ahab; so that Ahaziah, the son of Ahab, died in the 23d year of his reign, or in the 18th of Jehoshaphat. About five years after, he seems to have more solemnly admitted to the exercise of the royal authority, within two years of his father's death. This took place when Jehoram was thirty-two years old, and from that time he reigned eight years, though he reigned only five or six as sole king, after the death of his father." But the parenthesis (Jehoshaphat being king of Judah) is wanting in some MSS. and ancient versions.

Ver. 21. Zair.—[Zair is supposed by Cabmet, and others, to be the same as Setir, the country of Setir the Horite, inhabited by the Edomites or Idumeans. Probably the former was a dialectical pronunciation of the latter.]—Bagster.

24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and <sup>h</sup> Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel.

27 And he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, as did the house of Ahab: for he was the son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

28 ¶ And <sup>k</sup> he went with Joram the son of Ahab to the war against Hazael king of Syria in Ramoth-gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram.

29 And king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds <sup>l</sup> which the Syrians had given him at <sup>m</sup> Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria. And Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went <sup>n</sup> down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was <sup>o</sup> sick.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Elisha sendeth a young prophet with instructions to anoint Jehu at Ramoth-gilead. 4 The prophet having done his message. 26th. 11 Jehu, being made king by the soldiers, killeth Joram in the field of Nain. 27 Ahaziah is slain at Gur, and buried at Jerusalem. 30 Proud Jezebel is thus thrown out of a window, and eaten by dogs.

AND Elisha the <sup>a</sup> prophet called one of the children of the prophets, and said unto him, Gird <sup>b</sup> up thy loins, and take this box of oil in thy hand, and go to <sup>c</sup> Ramoth-gilead:

2 And when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among <sup>d</sup> his brethren, and carry him to an <sup>e</sup> inner chamber;

3 Then <sup>f</sup> take the box of <sup>g</sup> oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel. Then open the door, and flee, and tarry not.

4 ¶ So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting; and he said, I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

phat, now wholly succeeds his father, and being freed from the salutary restraint of his authority, walks in the way of wicked Ahab, whose daughter, Athaliah, he had married, and of Jezebel her wicked mother. The time, however, was not yet come for Judah to be abandoned to its enemies; but its power and consequence is considerably reduced by the total revolt of Edom, which had been subdued by David; and also of Libnah, (a city of Judah,) "because he (Jehoram) had forsaken the Lord God of his fathers." (2 Chron. xxi. 8—11.)

Jehoram king of Judah, was succeeded by Ahaziah, his youngest son, all his other sons having been slain by some Arabian marauders. (2 Chron. xxi. 17.) His reign was short and inglorious; for going with Joram (or Jehoram) king of Israel to war with Hazael now king of Syria, he was mortally wounded, and died after the reign of one year only.

We should remark, however, that as the revolt of Edom was a punishment to Judah, it was also a fulfilment of ancient prophecy, that after Edom (or Esau) had been long subjected to his brother Jacob, (that is, in his posterity,) he should throw off the yoke, and be again independent. Gen. xxvii. 40. Thus, as in the complicated machinery of the moderns, the same

6 And he arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus <sup>h</sup> saith the Lord God of Israel. I <sup>i</sup> have anointed thee king over the people of the Lord, even over Israel.

7 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that I may <sup>j</sup> avenge the blood of my servants <sup>k</sup> the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the Lord, at the hand of Jezebel.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish: and <sup>l</sup> I will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up <sup>m</sup> and left in Israel:

9 And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam <sup>n</sup> the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha <sup>o</sup> the son of Ahijah:

10 And <sup>p</sup> the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And he opened the door, and fled.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, Is all well? wherefore came this mad <sup>q</sup> fellow to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.

12 And they said, It is false; tell us now. And he said, Thus <sup>r</sup> and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, and took every man his <sup>s</sup> garment, and put it under him on the top of the stairs, and blew <sup>t</sup> with trumpets, saying, Jehu <sup>u</sup> is king.

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi conspired against Joram. (Now Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria.)

15 But king <sup>v</sup> Joram was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians <sup>w</sup> had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria.) And Jehu said, If it be your minds, then <sup>x</sup> let none go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; for Joram lay there. And Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood a watchman <sup>y</sup> on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company

A. M. 3112.

B. C. 892.

b called Azariah,
2 Ch. 22. 6.
and Jehoahaz,
2 Ch. 21.
17; 25. 23.
12 Ch. 22. 1,
&c.

l or, granddaughter,
ver. 25.

A. M. 3120.

B. C. 884.

k c. 9. 15.
l whereunto
the Syrians had wounded.

m called Ramoth.
ver. 23.

n c. 9. 16.

o wounded.

a 1 Ki. 20. 35.

b c. 4. 29.

c. 1. 17.

c. 9. 28.

d ver. 5. 11.

e chamber in a chamber.

f 1 Ki. 19. 16.

g 1 Sa. 10. 1.

h 2 Ch. 22. 7.

i Ps. 75. 6.

j Da. 2. 21.

k 17. 32.

5. 30. 21.

j Lu. 15. 7. 8.

De. 6. 9. 10.

k 1 Ki. 18. 4.

21. 15. 21.

11 Ki. 14. 10.

m De. 32. 36.

n 1 Ki. 15. 29.

o 1 Ki. 16. 5.

p 1 Ki. 21. 23.

ver. 35. 36.

q Je. 29. 25.

Hos. 9. 7.

Jn. 10. 30.

Ac. 26. 24.

1 Co. 1. 10.

r ver. 6.

s Mat. 21. 7.

t 2 Sa. 15. 10.

u reigneth.

v Jehoram.

w smote.

x let no escaper go.

y 2 Sa. 18. 24.

Is. 21. 6.

&amp;c.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—37. Jehu slays both the kings of Israel and Judah, and gives the dead body of Jezebel to the dogs.—

This chapter is full of scenes of righteous vengeance on apostate Israel. Jehu, another of the sons of Jehoshaphat, but an officer in the army of Israel, after being anointed by the prophet, and proclaimed by the army, hastens to Jezreel, to which city Joram had returned, to be healed of his wounds from the Syrians; and whither Ahaziah, king of Judah, had gone to meet him. He is seen approaching, by the watchmen on the tower, and being known by the fury of his driving, both the kings, in great alarm, go out to meet him, and both are slain. Still pressing on, as he approaches, Jezebel, hearing the sound of chariots and of horses, and at first, probably hoping that the confederate king's had returned victorious, tricked out in all the vanity of an antiquated prostitute, looked out at the window of her palace, which appears to have been on the wall of the town. Seeing Jehu enter the gate, she rashly reproaches him with the murder of his master; at which, becom-

Ver. 13. Every man his garment.—[The spreading of garments in the street before persons to whom it was intended to show particular honour, was an ancient and very general custom; the garments, in these cases, being used for carpets. In the Agamemnon of Æschylus, the hypocritical Clytemnestra commands the maids to spread carpets before her returning husband, that on his descending from his chariot, he may place his foot on "a purple covered path." We also find this custom among the Romans. Plutarch relates, that when Cato of Utica left the Macedonian army, where he had become legendary arbiter, the soldiers spread their clothes in the way.—On the top of the stairs.—The ancient fortified cities were generally strengthened with a citadel, (Ju. ix. 46, 51.) commonly built on an eminence, to which they ascended by a flight of stairs, (Ne. iii. 15.) It is extremely probable, therefore, that Ramoth-gilead, being a frontier town of Israel and Syria, had a tower of this nature; and that Jehu was proclaimed king on the top of the stairs by which they ascended the hill on which the tower stood, i. e. in the area before the door of the tower, and consequently the most public place in the city.]—B

Ver. 26. Two and twenty years old.—[In the parallel passage of Chronicles, it is said, "forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign;" but this is evidently a mistake, as it makes the son two years older than his own father! For, his father began to reign when he was thirty-two years old, and reigned eight years, and so died, being forty years old. See ver. 17.]—B.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 4. So the young man.—[Hannara hannavee, not, as some would render, "the servant of the prophet," but as correctly rendered by our venerable translators, "the young man, the prophet;" for hannara, "the young man," is not in regimine, but in opposition with hannavee, "the prophet."]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. That mad fellow.—[That enthusiast! [It is probable, there was something peculiar in the young prophet's manner and address, similar to the vehement action sometimes used by the prophets when under the divine influence, which caused them to use this contemptuous language.]—Bagster.

Though they did not know his name, they suspected he was a prophet, from his manner o! Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take a horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nim<sup>c</sup>, he driveth he furiously.

21 And Joram said, Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met him in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts are so many?

23 And Joram turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah.

24 And Jehu  drew a bow with his full strength, and smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, the Lord laid this burden upon him;

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the Lord; and I will requite thee in this plat, saith the Lord. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the Lord.

27 ¶ But when Ahaziah the king of Judah

A. M. 3120.
B. C. 884.
2 1 Sa. 16.4.
17.22.
1 Ki 2.13.

a or, marching.

b in madness.

c Hab. 1.6.

d blind.

e found.

f Is. 48.22.

g Ec. 2.20..
25.

h filled his hand with a bow.

i bowed.

j 1 Ki 21.29.

k bloods.

l 1 Ki 21.19.

m or, portion.

n Jos. 17.11.
J. 1.1.27.
2 Ch. 22.9.

o c. 8.25.
2 Ch. 22.1.
2.

p put her eyes in painting.
Eze. 23.40.

q 1 Ki 16.9.
20.

r or, chamberlain.

s 1 Ki 16.31.

t Ec. 6.3.
Is. 14.18.
20.
Je. 22.19.
Je. 30.

u by the hand of.

v 1 Ki 21.23.

w Ps. 83.10.
Je. 8.2.
16.4.

x nourishers.

saw this, he fled by the way of the garden house. And Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by Ibleam. And he fled to  Megiddo, and died there.

28 And his servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

29 And in the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she  painted her face, and tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three  eunuchs.

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses: and he trode her under foot.

34 And when he was come in, he did eat and drink, and said, Go, see now this cursed woman, and bury her: for she is a king's  daughter.

35 And they went to bury her: but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him. And he said, This is the word of the Lord, which he spake  by his servant Elijah the Tishbite,  saying, In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

37 And the carcass of Jezebel shall be as dung  upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.

CHAPTER X.

1 Jehu, by his letters, causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded. 8 He executeth the fact by the prophecy of Elijah. 12 At the shearing-house he slayeth two and forty of Ahaziah's brethren. 15 He taketh Jehonadab into his company. 18 By subtilty he destroyeth all the worshippers of Baal. 29 Jehu followeth Jeroboam's sin. 32 Hazael oppresseth Israel. 33 Jehoshaphat succeedeth Jehu.

AND Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to  them that brought up Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now as soon as this letter cometh to you,

ing highly incensed, he orders her attendant eunuchs to throw her down. This being instantly complied with, her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and her carcass trod beneath the feet of Jehu's horses.

Regardless of her fate, Jehu now enters the palace, and feasts himself on royal dainties. After having gratified his appetite, he begins to inquire after the carcass of Jezebel, and finds that the dogs had eaten it, and he immediately recollects the prophecy of Elijah: "In the portion (or district) of Jezreel (embracing what had been Naboth's vineyard) shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel," which was now literally fulfilled. (See 1 Kings xxi. 19.)

It may be proper to remark here, that in eastern countries,

Ver. 21. Make ready,—i. e. fasten the horses to the chariots.
Ver. 27. Fled by the way of the garden house.—This house was in Samaria where, according to the parallel place in Chronicles, Ahaziah hid himself. But Jehu still pursued him, till he was found in the road to Gur; there they shot him, but he still went on to Megiddo, where he died; and then they brought him back, and buried him. The apparent discrepancies arise from the brevity of the narrative in each. Our account differs a little from that of Dr. Lightfoot.

Ver. 29. In the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab, began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.—Our translators here subjoin the following judicious note in the margin: "Then he began to reign as viceroy to his father, in his sickness;" 2 Chron. xxi. 18, 19. But in Joram's 12th year, he began to reign alone; chap. viii. 25.

Ver. 30. She painted her face.—[The word puch, translated painting, is rendered by the LXX. and Vulgate, stibium, either antimony or black lead. "Upon the principle of strengthening the sight," says Dr. Russell, "as well as an ornament, it has become a general practice among the women to black the inside of their eyelids, by applying a powder called lamed.—Their method of doing it is by a cylindrical piece of silver, steel, or ivory, about 2 inches long, made very smooth, and about the size of a common probe. They wet with water, in order that the powder may stick to it, and applying the middle part horizontally to the eye, they shut their eye-lids upon it, and so drawing it through between them, it blacks the inside, leaving a narrow black rim all round the edge."—Bagster.

dogs are not tamed and domesticated as with us; but rove at large, and are little better than wolves, living on the carrion of the streets and fields; but we should also add, that the whole animal creation, as well as man, are occasionally employed to fulfil the divine decrees. This wretched woman was not only murdered in the very spot foretold, and refused a burial; but her body is torn to pieces, and her bones scattered, so that they could not say, "This is Jezebel!"

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—36. Jehu slays all the family of Ahab, and the worshippers of Baal.—Jehu was certainly a monster of cruelty, and delighted in shedding blood. But it is a part of the plan of Providence to employ wicked men in the punishment of each other. Like the contrary elements of fire and Ver. 31. Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?—This is generally considered as a severe sarcasm upon Jehu, who had slain his master. Some render it, "Peace to Zimri! who slew his master;" meaning to call Jehu by that name.

Ver. 33. Throw her down.—[This terrible mode of punishment appears to have been but rarely used, though we occasionally meet with it during this and subsequent periods.—The same punishment, it is well known, obtained among the Romans, who used to throw certain malefactors from the Tarpeian rock. This practice obtains among the Moors at Constantia, a town of Barbary, and is also of frequent occurrence in Persia. See Sir R. K. Porter's Travels in Persia.]—Bagster.

Ver. 34. She is a king's daughter.—She was daughter to the king of Tyre, wife of Ahab; mother of Joram, king of Israel; mother-in-law of Joram, king of Judah; and grand mother to Ahaziah; but with all these honours, she was accused of God.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Ahab had seventy sons.—[As he had several wives, this need not appear remarkable. In Homer, (Il. vi. 244.; xxiv. 495.) King Priam is represented as having 50 sons and 12 daughters. Artaxerxes Mnemon, king of Persia, had by his 360 concubines, not less than 115 sons, besides three by his queen. Stegert, in his journey to Mequinez, says, Muley Abdallah, who was Emperor of Morocco in 1730, is said to have had, by his four wives, and the many thousand women he had in his seraglio, 700 sons able to mount horse.—Bagster.

seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour;

3 Look even out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, two <sup>b</sup> kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand?

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, We <sup>c</sup> are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be <sup>d</sup> mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and slew <sup>e</sup> seventy <sup>f</sup> persons, and put their heads in <sup>g</sup> baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, Lay ye them in two heaps at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be righteous: behold, I <sup>h</sup> conspired against my master, and slew him: but who slew all these?

10 Know now that there shall <sup>i</sup> fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the Lord, which the Lord spake <sup>j</sup> concerning the house of Ahab: for the Lord hath done that which he spake <sup>k</sup> by his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his <sup>l</sup> <sup>m</sup> kinsfolks, and his priests, until <sup>n</sup> he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose and departed, and came to Samaria. And as he was at the <sup>o</sup> shearing-house in the way,

13 Jehu <sup>p</sup> met with the brethren of Ahaziah

A. M. 3120.
B. C. 854.

b c. 9.24.27.

c 1 Ki. 20.4.

32.

d for me.

e 1 Ki. 21.24.

f Ju. 9.5, &c.

g Mat. 14.8.

11.

h c. 9.14.24.

i 1 Sa. 3.19.

Je. 44.23.

29.

j 1 Ki. 21.19.

&c.

k by the hand of.

l or, acquaintance

m Ps. 125.5.

Pr. 13.20.

n 1 Ki. 14.10.

o house of shepherds binding sheep.

p found.

q the peace of.

r 1 Ki. 20.18.

s 2 Ch. 22.8.

t found.

u Je. 35.6.

&c.

v 1 Ch. 2.55.

w blessed.

x Ex. 10.19.

y 1 Ki. 19.10.

Pr. 27.2.

Eze. 33.31.

Mat. 6.2,5.

z c. 9.8.

a 1 Ki. 21.21.

b 1 Ki. 16.31.

32.

c 1 Ki. 22.6.

d Job 13.7.

Pr. 29.5.

e sanctify.

f 1 Ki. 16.32.

g or, so full that they stood mouth to mouth.

h ver. 15.

i Mat. 13.30.

41.

25.32,33.

king of Judah, and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah; and we go down to <sup>a</sup> salute the children of the king and the children of the queen.

14 And he said, Take them <sup>a</sup> alive. And they <sup>a</sup> took them alive, and slew them at the pit of the shearing-house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he <sup>a</sup> lighted on Jehonadab <sup>a</sup> the son of <sup>a</sup> Rechab <sup>a</sup> coming to meet him: and he <sup>a</sup> saluted him, and said to him, Is thy heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, give <sup>a</sup> me thy hand. And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to him into the chariot.

16 And he said, Come with me, and see my zeal <sup>a</sup> for the Lord. So they made him ride in his chariot.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all <sup>a</sup> that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed him, according to the saying of the Lord, which he spake <sup>a</sup> to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, Ahab <sup>b</sup> served Baal a little; but Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me all the prophets <sup>c</sup> of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests; let none be wanting: for I have a great sacrifice <sup>d</sup> to do to Baal; whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it in <sup>d</sup> subtlety, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, <sup>e</sup> Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel: and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not. And <sup>y</sup> came into the house <sup>f</sup> of Baal; and the <sup>h</sup> of Baal was <sup>g</sup> full from one end to another.

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.

23 And Jehu went, and <sup>h</sup> Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the Lord, but <sup>i</sup> the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices water, they afford a perpetual counteraction. Jehu begins the work of slaughter with his master's family. First, he sends a taunting message to the great men of Samaria, and of Jezreel, advising them to set up a king, one of their "master's sons," of whom it appears there were no less than 70, and challenging them to meet him in the field of battle; but they, being men of weak minds, and terrified at the vigour and severity of his measures, cringe before him; and at his command actually murder all the sons of their late master, and send their heads in baskets. These he orders to be laid in two piles at the entrance of the city, and then reproaches them for their treachery and weakness. Doubtless "ye be righteous!" said he; "I conspired against my master, and slew him: but who slew all these?" Soon after this, he meets with another party, who call themselves the brothers of Ahaziah, but as his brothers seem to have been all slain before, these could have been his brothers only in the more general sense of relatives, or cousins. They pretend to be coming to make their submission to him and his family. This, however, does not pacify him having undertaken to avenge the Lord of the house of Ahab, he spares not a single member of it; but "slew all his great men, his kinsfolks, and his priests, until he left him none remaining."

Jehu, indeed, was a great hypocrite, and while he pretended zeal for the God of Israel, was seeking the admiration of men. When therefore he met with Jehonadab the Rechabite, a man of austere manners, and known to be a servant of Jehovah, he took him up into his chariot; "Come with me, and see my zeal for the Lord," said he, while at the same time he doubtless hoped to derive, from the sanction of his presence, no small credit with the people.

Another instance of hypocrisy and craft was displayed in his pretending to worship Baal, while at the same time he only meant to sacrifice his priests and devotees. First, he tempts them to idolatry, by pretending to unite in their worship, and then murders them in the very act of worshipping: and yet,

Ver. 6. Now the king's sons . . . were with the great men of the city, who brought them up.—The rich hire a dedah, or wet nurse, for their children. If a boy, the father appoints a steady man, from the age of two years, to be his laleh, who, I conjecture, must stand in the same capacity as the bringers up of Ahab's children, mentioned in the catastrophe of Ahab's sons.—Mortier.

Ver. 8. Lay ye them in two heaps.—[Such barbarities are by no means uncommon in the East.]—B. During this fight, says Mortier's second Journey through Persia, ten tomans were given for every head of the enemy that was brought to the prince; and it has been known to occur, after the combat was over, that prisoners have been put to death in cold blood, in order that the heads, which are immediately despatched to the king, and deposited in heaps at the palace gate, might make a more considerable show.

Ver. 15. Gave him his hand.—[Jehu asked for the hand of Jehonadab, not merely for the purpose of assisting him into the chariot, but that he might give him an assurance that he would assist him in the prosecution of his desires; for giving the hand is considered as a pledge of friendship and fidelity, or a form of entering into a contract, among all nations. Bruce relates that when he entered the protection of a sheikh, "the great people, who were assembled, came, and after joining hands, repeated a kind of prayer, of about two minutes long; by which they declared themselves, and their children, accounted, if ever they lifted their hands against me, in the tell, (or field,) in the desert, or on the river; or, in case that I, or mine, should fly to them for refuge, if they did not protect us, at the risk of their lives, their families, and their fortunes, or, as they emphatically expressed it, to the death of the last male child among them." Another striking instance occurs in Ockley's History of the Saracens: Telha, just before he died, asked one of Ali's men if he belonged to the emperor of the faithful; and being informed that he did, "Give me, then," said he, "your hand, that I may put mine in it, and by this act renew the oath of fidelity which I have already made to Ali."—Bagster.

and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Go in, and slay them; let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city of the house of Baal.

26 And they brought forth the <sup>m</sup> images out of the house of Baal, and burned <sup>o</sup> them.

27 And they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and <sup>p</sup> made it a draught house unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ Howbeit from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them, to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in my heart, thy children of the fourth <sup>s</sup> generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.

31 But Jehu took no heed to walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart: for he departed not from the <sup>v</sup> sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin.

32 ¶ In those days the LORD began <sup>w</sup> to cut Israel short: and Hazael <sup>x</sup> smote them in all the coasts of Israel;

33 From Jordan <sup>y</sup> eastward, all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, <sup>z</sup> even Gilead <sup>a</sup> and Bashan.

34 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and all his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers: and they buried him in Samaria. And Jehoahaz his son reigned in his stead.

36 And <sup>b</sup> the time that Jehu reigned over

A. M. 3120.
B. C. 834.
1 Ki. 20. 39.
k Ex. 32. 27.
De. 13. 6.
11.
Eze. 9. 5. 7.

l mouth.

m statues.

n 1 Ki. 14. 23.

o 2 Sa. 5. 21.

1 Ki. 15. 13.

p Ex. 6. 11.

Da. 2. 5.

3. 29.

q 1 Ki. 12. 28.

23.

r Eze. 29.

18. 20.

s ver. 35.

Am. 1. 10.

14. 23.

15. 8. 12.

t observed not.

u Ju. 4. 24.

v 1 Ki. 14. 16.

w to cut off the ends.

x c. 8. 12.

y toward the rising of the sun.

z or, even to Gilead and Bashan.

a Am. 1. 3.

b the days were.

c 2 Ch. 22. 10.

b c. 26.

d seed of the kingdom.

e 2 Ch. 22. 11.

f 2 Ch. 24. 1.

&c.

g c. 16. 13.

h or, from breaking up.

i bands, or companies.

j 1 Ch. 26. 26.

Israel in Samaria was twenty and eight years.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Jehoash, being saved by Jehoshciba his aunt from Athaliah's massacre of the seed royal, is hid six years in the house of God. 4 Jehoiaada, giving order to the captains, in the seventh year anointeth him king. 13 Athaliah is slain. 17 Jehoiaada restoreth the worship of God.

AND when <sup>a</sup> Athaliah the mother <sup>b</sup> of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the <sup>c</sup> seed royal.

2 But <sup>d</sup> Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took <sup>e</sup> Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain; and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the LORD six years. And Athaliah did reign over the land.

4 ¶ And <sup>f</sup> the seventh year Jehoiada sent and fetched the rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the LORD, and showed them the king's son.

5 And he commanded them, saying, This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch <sup>g</sup> of the king's house;

6 And a third part shall be at the gate of Sur; and a third part at the gate behind the guard: so shall ye keep the watch of the house, <sup>h</sup> that it be not broken down.

7 And two <sup>i</sup> parts of all you that go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep the watch of the house of the LORD about the king.

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand: and he that cometh within the ranges, let him be slain: and be ye with the king as he goeth out and as he cometh in.

9 And the captains <sup>j</sup> over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiaada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiaada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give king David's spears and with all this zeal for Jehovah, he retains the worship of Jeroboam's calves. In this he was doubtless governed by political motives; he feared his subjects going to Jerusalem, lest they should revolt to Judah.

Of all the characters held up to detestation in the Scriptures, there is none so execrable as that of a time-serving hypocrite, who, while he pretends great zeal in religion, is only seeking his private ends, whether it be in the gratification of his interests, or his lusts; but when cruelty is blended with hypocrisy, it renders the man equally hateful to his own species as to his Maker.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—21. Athaliah destroys all the seed royal of Judah, except Joash, who, at seven years old, is made king, and she is slain.—This Athaliah was the daughter of Ahab, and the grand-daughter of Omri, wife to Joram, (or Jehoram,) king of Judah, and the mother of Ahaziah. It is supposed that she was left regent when her son went on a visit to the king of Israel: and hearing of his being killed by Jehu, she determined to succeed him, though she waded through a sea of blood to reach the throne. She destroyed all she could find of the seed royal of Judah, as Jehu had done with respect to Israel. Jehosheba, however, the daughter of king Joram, but probably by another wife, stole one of the royal infants, and for six years concealed him in her bedchamber. In his seventh year, Jehoiaada the high priest called together the captains of Israel privately in the temple, and having shown them Joash the late king's son, and taken an oath of them to support his claim, anointed him king; and, at the same time, from the temple furnished them with arms, (which David had lodged there,) in order to guard their new sovereign, whom they now proclaimed with great rejoicings. When Athaliah heard this, she came down to the temple, and seeing the honours done to the young king, she exclaims, "Treason! Treason!" She is, however, carried without the temple, and there slain, without any to regret her fate. Jehoiaada now makes a covenant between the Lord and the king with the people, that they should serve the Lord and renounce the worship of Baal. They immediately destroy Baal's temple, break in pieces all his images, and slay his chief priest: at the same time, proper officers are appointed to regulate the concerns of the temple and divine worship; and the young king, (only seven years old,) is removed to the palace and seated on his father's throne; and peace and prosperity prevail during the wise administration of the venerable priest Jehoiaada. It is with nations as with individuals, when their ways please the Lord, he makes their enemies to be at peace with them. (Prov. xvi. 7.)

Naad was conveyed for safety to a loyal province, and afterwards restored.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Bed-chamber.—[Bachadar hammattoth. "in a chamber of beds," which Sir J. Chardin thinks does not mean a room to sleep in, but a chamber used as a repository for beds; for, in the East, they sleep upon cotton mattresses, of which they have several in great houses, against they should have occasion, and a room on purpose for them." See Harmer.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. 6. A third part.—The three parties ("companies," or "bands,") were to keep the three gates leading to the temple. There was no gate on the west. The king was proclaimed on the sabbath, on account of the concourse of people then assembling.

Ver. 10. King David's spears.—[Josephus states, that, for fear of creating suspicion, they came unarmed, and Jehoiaada having opened the arsenal in

Ver. 25. City of the house.—That is, the buildings belonging to his temple.
Ver. 27. A draught house.—[This was an ancient mode of degradation, which still continues in the East; and we are informed, that Abbas the Great, king of Persia, having conquered Bagdad, treated the tomb of Hanifah, one of the fathers of the church among the Turks, in a similar manner.]—Bagster.
"In the year 1729, the Persians not only demolished the superb mausoleum of the late Afghan Sultan Maghmud, but to add a greater mark of contempt and abhorrence, in the very place on which the mausoleum had been erected, they built a public jakes."—Hanway's Hist. of Nadir Shah.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. All the seed royal—i. e. all the remaining branches of the royal family. [A similar history is related by Bruce, as having occurred in Abyssinia. Judith surprised the rock Damo, and slew the whole of the princes, to the number, it is said, of about 400; while the infant king Del * shields, that were in the temple of the LORD.

11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner of the temple to the left corner of the temple, along by the altar and the temple.

12 And he brought forth the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony; and they made him king, and anointed him; and they clapped their hands, and said, God save the king.

13 ¶ And when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the LORD.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a pillar, as the manner was, and the princes and the trumpeters by the king, and all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpet: and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, Treason, Treason.

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges: and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the LORD.

16 And they laid hands on her; and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house: and there was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between the king also and the people.

18 And all the people of the land went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed officers over the house of the LORD.

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the gate of the guard to the king's house. And he sat on the throne of the kings.

20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was in quiet: and they slew Athaliah with the sword beside the king's house.

21 Seven years old was Jehoash when he began to reign.

A. M. 3120.

B. C. 884.

k 2 Sa. 8.7.

l shoulder.

m Ps. 21.3.

n De. 17.18.

o 2 Sa. 24.7.

p Ps. 47.1.

q Let the king live.

r 1 Ki. 1.34.

s c. 23.3.

t Na. 10.1.

u Ex. 21.14.

v Eze. 9.7.

w Ge. 9.6.

x 2 Sa. 5.3.

y 2 Co. 8.5.

z c. 10.26, 27.

a De. 12.3.

b 7cc. 13.2, 3.

c offices.

d Ps. 11.10.

e 29.2.

f 1 Ki. 15.14.

g 22.43.

h 1 Ki. 15.14.

i Je. 2.30.

j A. M. 3143.

k B. C. 856.

l holinesses, or, holy things.

m Ex. 30.13.

n c. 22.4.

o e of the soul of his estimation.

p Le. 27.2.

q ascendeth upon the heart of a man.

r Ex. 35.5.

s h in the twentieth year and third year.

t i 2 Ch. 24.5.

u &c.

v j threshold.

w k or, secretary.

x l bound up.

y m brought it forth.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiaha. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 17 Hazael is diverted from Jerusalem by a present of the hallowed treasures. 19 Jehoash being slain by his servants, Amaziah succeedeth him.

IN the seventh year of Jehu, Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiaha the priest instructed him.

3 But the high places were not taken away: the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash said to the priests, All the money of the dedicated things that is brought into the house of the LORD, even the money of every one that passeth the account, the money that every man is set at, and all the money that cometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of the LORD,

5 Let the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance: and let them repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, that in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then king Jehoash called for Jehoiaha the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.

9 But Jehoiaha the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and the priests that kept the door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up in bags, and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

11 And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they laid it out to the carpenters and builders, that wrought upon the house of the LORD,

12 And to masons, and hewers of stone, and

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—21. Joash reigns well and repairs the temple. Hazael threatens Jerusalem, but withdraws. Joash is slain by his own servants.—One of the first reforms of this new administration was the restoration of the public worship of Jehovah, in order to which the temple was repaired, which had been long neglected, and had doubtless fallen into decay. For the sons of Athaliah, as appears by the parallel passage, (2 Chron. xxiv. 7.) had "broken up the house of God;" that is, had committed great dilapidations, in order to the repairs of which part of the income of the priests was devoted, with a kind of national subscription among the people. After this was finished, new vessels of gold and silver were also made for the temple service, the former having been appropriated to idol worship.

the temple which David had prepared, he divided among the centurions, priests, and Levites, the spears, (arrows,) and quivers, and all other kinds of weapons which he found there."—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Gave him the testimony.—That is, witnessed his appointment; though many think "The Book of the Law," sometimes so called, is here intended. See Deut. xvii. 13, 19.—Clapped their hands.—Wynakkoos kaph, "they clapped the hand," which Harmer thinks was similar to the mode in which Oriental females express their respect for persons of high rank, by gently applying one of their hands to their mouth. So Pitts relates, that in some of the towns of Barbary, the leaders of the sacred caravan being received with loud acclamations, the very women get upon the tops of the houses to view the parade, or line show, where they keep striking their four fingers on their lips, as fast as they can, making a joyful noise all the while."—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Stood by a pillar.—Heb. "On a pillar." Being a child, he was perhaps thus elevated to render him conspicuous. Yet this seems not peculiar to Thus prosperous were the affairs of Judah during the life of Jehoiaha the priest, which extended to the vast age of 130 years; and he was buried with great honour in the sepulchre of the kings, because "he had done good in Israel." 2 Chron. xxiv. 16. After his death, however, things took an unfavourable turn. There "came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king;" that is, they flattered him on his talents, his piety, and his zeal; and he, unhappily listening to them, was thus drawn into their idolatries. "They left the Lord God of their fathers, and served groves and idols." Upon this, "the Lord sent prophets among them, to bring them back; but they would not give ear." Then "the Spirit of the Lord came upon Zechariah, the priest, the son of Jehoiaha," who thus remonstrated with the people: "Why transgress ye Joash, for it is added, "according to the manner," i. e. the usual manner; for so was Josiah elevated, chap. xxiii. 3. Some think there was a sort of pulpit, with a seat, or throne, on the top of this pedestal. See Taylor's Fragments to Calmet, No. 242.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 10. Put up in bags.—[Sir J. Chardin, in a MS. note on Tobit ix. 5. cited by Harmer, informs us, "it is a custom of Persia always to seal up bags of money; and the money of the king's treasure is not told, but is received by bags sealed up." These are what are called in the East purses; each of which, as Maillet informs us, contains money to the amount of 1500 reves, or about $290 00 of our money. The money thus collected for the repairs of the temple, seems, in like manner, to have been reckoned in bags of equal value to each other; as we can scarcely imagine the placing it in bags would otherwise have been mentioned. The value of a Jewish purse is unknown; but the bags mentioned in chap. v. 23. amounted to a talent.]—Bagster.

to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the LORD, and for all that was laid out for the house to repair it.

13 Howbeit there were not made for the house of the LORD bowls of silver, snuffers, basins, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD:

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD.

15 Moreover they reckoned not with the men, into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen: for they dealt faithfully.

16 The trespass money and sin money was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.

17 ¶ Then Hazael king of Syria went up, and fought against Gath, and took it: and Hazael set his face to go up to Jerusalem.

18 And Jehoash king of Judah took all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah, his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things, and all the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and in the king's house, and sent it to Hazael king of Syria: and he went away from Jerusalem.

19 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And his servants arose, and made a conspiracy, and slew Joash in the house of Millo, which goeth down to Silla.

21 For Jozachar the son of Shimeath, and Jehoabab the son of Shomer, his servants, smote him, and he died; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jehoahaz's wicked reign. 3 Jehoahaz, oppressed by Hazael, is relieved by prayer. 8 Joash succeeded him. 10 His wicked reign. 12 Jeroboam succeeded him. 14 Elisha dying prophesied to Joash three victories over the Syrians. 20 The Moabites invading the land, Elisha's bones raise up a dead man. 22 Hazael, dying, Joash getseth three victories over Ben-hadad.

IN the three and twentieth year of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned seventeen years.

the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper? Because ye have forsaken him, he hath forsaken you." Upon this, they stoned him with stones "at the commandment of the king" in the court of the Lord's house. "Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiaada his father had done to him, but slew his son?" How base the ingratitude! yet still more base his apostasy from the God of Israel, in whose service he had been trained and instructed from his earliest years.

The murdered priest, in his last hours, according to the severity of the dispensation under which he lived (for he had not the example of a Saviour, who in the hour of death prayed for his murderers!)—the murdered priest imprecated on them the justice of heaven—"The Lord look upon it and require it!" (2 Chron. xxiv. 15—22.)

It was required: for, at the end of the same year, the

Ver. 13. Were not made.—[That is, there were no vessels made for the service of the temple till all the outward repairs were completed; but, when this was done, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiaada, whereof were made vessels of gold and silver, (2 Ch. xxiv. 14.) to replace those which had been taken away by Athaliah and her sons.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Jehoash took the hallowed things.—[He dearly bought, by such unhallowed means, a peace which was of short duration; for the next year Hazael returned, and Jehoash having no more treasures, was obliged to hazard a battle, which he lost, and the principal part of his nobility, so that Judah was totally ruined, and Jehoash soon after slain in his bed by his own servants.]—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Jehoabab.—[This person is called Zabab in Chronicles, and Shimeath his mother is said to be an Ammonitess; and Jehoababab is said to be the son, not of Shomer, but of Shimeath, a Moabitess. Who the fathers of these two persons were we know not; they were probably foreigners and aliens. Some suppose that they belonged to the king's chamber, and therefore could have easy access to him.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. In the three and twentieth (or 23d) year of Joash king of Judah.—This Joash (also frequently called Jehonah) must be distinguished from Joash king of Israel. The kings of Israel and Judah sometimes bearing the same name, great care is requisite to prevent confusion. Jehoahaz began his reign at the commencement of the 23d year of Joash king of Judah, and reigned 17 years; i. e. 14 alone, and 3 with his son Joash, king of Israel.

Ver. 3. All their days.—As the word their is not in the original, Scott would

A. M. 3148.
B. C. 856.
n went forth.
o c. 22.7.
p l. e. 5, 15.
q l. e. 7, 7.
Nu. 18. 9.
r c. 8. 12.
s l. Ki. 15. 18.
c. 15. 15, 16.
t up.
u c. 14. 5.
v or, Beth-
millo.
w 2 Ch. 24.
26. Zabab
or, Shimeath.
a the thirtieth year and third year.
A. M. 3148. 3165.
B. C. 856. 839.

b walked after.
c Ju. 21. 4.
d c. 9. 12.
12. 17.
e Ps. 78. 34.
f Ex. 3. 7.
c. 14. 28.
g ver. 25.
h yesterday and third day.
i he walked.
j stood.
k Ki. 16. 33.
l Am. 1. 3.
A. M. 3165.
B. C. 839.
m ver. 10.
Jehoash.
n alone.
o In consort with his father.
c. 14. 1.
A. M. 3165.
B. C. 842. 825.
p c. 14. 15, 25.
q c. 14. 9, &c.
2 Ch. 25. 17, &c.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, and followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

3 ¶ And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days.

4 And Jehoahaz besought the LORD, and the LORD hearkened unto him: for he saw the oppression of Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them.

5 (And the LORD gave Israel a saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians: and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents, as beforetime.)

6 Nevertheless they departed not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but walked therein: and there remained the grove also in Samaria.)

7 Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for the king of Syria had destroyed them, and had made them like the dust by threshing.

8 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoahaz, and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers; and they buried him in Samaria: and Joash his son reigned in his stead.

10 ¶ In the thirty and seventh year of Joash king of Judah began Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned sixteen years.

11 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD; he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin: but he walked therein.

12 And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, and his might wherewith he fought against Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joash slept with his fathers; and Syrians came up against them, and though with but "a small company of men," the Lord "delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers." (2 Chron. xxiv. 23, 24.) And, on this occasion, the king was compelled to give up the treasures of the house of the Lord into the hands of Hazael, to bribe him to return home.

Judgment was also "executed against Joash" himself, for his own servants conspired against him, for the blood of the son of Jehoiaada the priest, and slew him on his bed, (where he "was in great disease,") and he died; and they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings." (2 Chron. xxiv. 25.)

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—25. The reigns of Jehoahaz and Joash his son, in Israel.—The illness and death of Elisha.—This Jehoahaz was the son of Jehu, whose life and actions we have just reviewed, and whose evil example he followed in supply his, i. e. the days of Jehoahaz; for the remark does not apply to his son Joash, who was victorious; see ver. 25. There is, however, no supplement needed; the original "all days," means "every day;" i. e. continually, and is so rendered by Dr. Boothroyd.

Ver. 5. A saviour.—That is, a deliverer, namely, Joash.—As before time.—Reckoning back, "the day before yesterday." Our version gives the correct sense.

Ver. 6. But walked.—Our translation seems to refer to the people, but the Heb. to the king; "he walked."—There remained the grove also.—This and such like places confirm Selden's opinion, that by groves in such places are meant, not natural groves, but images so called.—Dr. Wall. But may it not mean real groves, with idols, Baal, Astarte, &c., beneath their shade?

Ver. 7. Neither did, &c.—Houbigant, Dahn, and others, place this verse between the 4th and 5th, which makes the sense much clearer. Dr. Kennicott remarks, that if the copyists inserted a line or a verse, they were afraid to interline it, for fear of spoiling the sale of their MSS., and therefore inserted it afterwards.—Made them like the dust by threshing.—The Hebrews, (like other eastern nations,) threshed by treading out the corn with cattle, by which means, the straw was beaten all to pieces, which is here alluded to. See Shamo's Travels.

Ver. 10. In the thirty and seventh year.—[Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, was associated with his father in the government two years before his death. It is this association that is spoken of here. Joash reigned sixteen years, which include the years he governed conjointly with his father.]—Bagster.

Jeroboam sat upon his throne: and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof he died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, * Put thy hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, Open the window eastward. And he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot. And he shot. And he said, * The arrow of the Lord's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in * Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

18 And he said, Take the arrows. And he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite upon the ground. And he smote thrice, and stayed.

19 And the man of God was wroth with him, and said, Thou shouldest have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt smite Syria but * thrice.

20 ¶ And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man, that, behold, they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man * was let down, and touched the bones of Elisha, he revived, and stood up on his feet.

22 ¶ But Hazael * king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

23 And the Lord was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with * Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and would worshipping the golden calves. In consequence of this, the Lord continually delivered Israel into the hands of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hands of his son Ben-hadad. Upon seeing this, Jehoahaz seems to have been in some degree humbled, and besought the Lord in behalf of Israel. The Lord therefore raised them up a deliverer in the person of Joash his son, who took back the cities which they had wrested from his father. This was probably begun during his father's lifetime, and might be the occasion of his being taken into the government with him.

Soon after the death of Jehoahaz, the young king Joash visited Elisha in his last sickness, and wept over him, saying, 'O my father! my father! the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof!' This seems to have been a proverbial expression, (the same that the prophet himself had used to his master, Elijah, chap. ii. 12.) implying, that he considered him as, under God, the guardian and protector of the country. Elisha, as appears from the following incidents, must have been at this time very old, feeble, and dim-sighted: he is thought to have prophesied above threescore years. The action related is clearly symbolical and prophetic. Having directed the king to take a bow and arrows, when he had placed the arrow upon the string, the prophet placed his own hands on the king's, and bade him shoot eastward, i. e. toward the country beyond Ver. 16. Put thy hand.—i. e. back it with thy hand, so as to command it with all thy force, as in riding a horse.

Ver. 17. Aphek.—Their strong hold. See 1 Kings xx. 26, 30. and note.—The arrow of the Lord's deliverance.—It was an ancient custom to shoot an arrow, or cast a spear, into (or toward) the country intended to be invaded. So when Alexander had arrived on the coasts of Ionia, he threw a dart into (or toward) Persia: and Turnus, in Virgil's Æneid, thus gives the signal of attack.

"Who first (he cried) with me the foe will dare?
Then hurl'd a dart, the signal of the war."—Pitt's Virg.

Ver. 20. Elisha died.—The characters of this prophet and his master Elijah, are beautifully drawn by the author of Ecclesiasticus, ch. xlviii. 1-14.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 7. Valley of salt.—[Some suppose that the Valley of Salt

A. M.
3162-3179.
B. C.
842-825.

r c.2.12.

s make thy hand to ride.

t Jo.7.20.

u 1 Ki.20.26.

v ver.25.

w went down.

A. M.
3118-3165.
B. C.
856-859.

x c.8.12.

y Ex.2.24.

z Ge.17.2-5.

Ex.32.13.

Ne.9.32.

Ps.106.45.

a face.

b Ge.6.3.

c returned and took.

d ver.18,19.

A. M. 3165.

B. C. 859.

a c.13.10.

b 2 Ch.25.1.

&c.

c c.12.3.

d c.12.20.

e De.24.16.

f Eze.18.4.

20.

g or, th.

rock.

Ob.3.

h Jos.15.33.

A. M. 3173.

B. C. 826.

i 2 Ch.25.17.

&c.

j 2 Sa.2.14.

not destroy them, neither cast he them from his * presence as <sup>b</sup> yet.

24 So Hazael king of Syria died; and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his stead.

25 And Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz * took again out of the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael the cities, which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war. Three <sup>d</sup> times did Joash beat him, and recovered the cities of Israel.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Amaziah's good reign. 5 His justice on the murderers of his father. 7 His victory over Edom. 8 Amaziah, provoking Jehoash, is overcome and spoiled. 15 Jeroboam succeeds Jehoash. 17 Amaziah slain by a conspiracy. 21 Amaziah succeeds him. 23 Jeroboam's wicked reign. 28 Zachariah succeeds him.

IN * the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, reigned <sup>b</sup> Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah.

2 He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as Joash his father did.

4 Howbeit * the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

5 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that he slew his servants <sup>d</sup> which had slain the king his father.

6 But the children of the murderers he slew not: according unto that which is written * in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the Lord commanded, saying, The fathers * shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; but every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

7 ¶ He slew of Edom in the valley of salt ten thousand, and took * Selah by war, and called the name of it <sup>b</sup> Joktheel unto this day.

8 ¶ Then <sup>i</sup> Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash, the son of Jehoahaz son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us <sup>i</sup> look one another in the face.

9 And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Am-

Jordan, which Hazael had taken from Israel. Then he told him to smite with the arrows on the ground, and he smote three times, on which the prophet was angry that he had not smote oftener, as those strokes were to mark the number of victories destined for him, which were now restrained to three only.

Elisha died and was buried, and after his funeral an extraordinary miracle was wrought by means of his dead corpse. The Israelites being engaged in burying one of their own people, they espied a band of Moabites, on which they were terrified, and instead of digging a grave for him, they threw the body hastily into the tomb of Elisha; and as soon as the body touched Elisha's bones it revived, and the dead man stood upon his feet.

The chapter closes with mentioning the three victories above predicted, and which were granted because "the Lord was gracious, and had compassion on them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and would not destroy them, neither cast them from his presence as yet;" so, by the long-suffering of God, their often threatened captivity was yet delayed.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1-29. The reigns of Amaziah and Azariah, kings of Judah, and of Jehoash and Jeroboam II. kings of Israel.—The reign of Amaziah begins with a partial reform, was south of the Dead or Salt sea, towards the land of Edom; and others suppose it to be the Valley of Salt, about three or four miles south east of Palmyra, which now supplies, in a great measure, the surrounding country with salt.—Selah.—Or, the rock. Selah is generally supposed to be the same as Petra, which in Greek signifies a rock, the celebrated capital of Arabia Petraea. Strabo places it 3 or 4 days journey from Jericho, and 5 days' journey from the forest of palm trees on the Red sea. Pliny places it 600 miles from Gaza, and 125 from the Persian gulf; but Cellarius and Reland very justly consider that the numbers have been changed, and that we ought to read 125 miles from Gaza, and 600 from the Persian gulf. Eusebius places Beerothbene-jakaan 30 miles west from Petra, and Elath ten miles east; and Burchard discovered the ruins of this ancient city, in a valley called Wady Musa.—Bagster.—Joktheel.—"Obedience to God," referring to his dismissing the army of Israel at the word of the prophets. Chron. vii. 9.

aziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle <sup>a</sup> that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

10 Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and thy heart hath lifted <sup>1</sup> thee up: glory of this, and tarry <sup>2</sup> at home: for why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldst <sup>3</sup> fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

11 But Amaziah would not hear. Therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up; and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at <sup>4</sup> Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

12 And Judah <sup>5</sup> was put to the worse before Israel; and they fled every man to their tents.

13 And Jehoash king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Jehoash the son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh, and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate <sup>6</sup> of Ephraim unto the corner <sup>7</sup> gate, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took all the gold <sup>8</sup> and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

15 ¶ Now <sup>9</sup> the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 And Jehoash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and Jeroboam his son reigned in his stead.

17 ¶ And <sup>10</sup> Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.

18 And the rest of the acts of Amaziah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

restoring things to the state in which they were in his father's time; and as soon as he became established on his throne, he felt it his duty to avenge the death of his father on his murderers. He would not, however, involve their children in their punishment, as was too customary, but evidently contrary to the law of Moses. (Deut. xxiv. 16.) For though, in many instances, it may be just in the Almighty to visit "the sins of the fathers upon the children," it does not follow that it would be just in us. He only who "knows the hearts of all men," can be acquainted with all the circumstances of the case; and "he judgeth righteous judgment."

It seems to have been the misfortune of both the kingdoms of Judah and Israel that their princes were ambitious of military fame. This Amaziah having raised an immense army, attacked Edom, (on what provocation we are not informed,) and obtained a signal victory; yet, as in many other victories, what was the point gained? it was Selah, a bare and barren rock!

On turning to the parallel history of Chronicles, (2 Chron. xxv. 5, 6.) several circumstances occur, which require notice in their connexion. Amaziah, not content with an army of 300,000 men of Judah and Benjamin, with a hundred talents hired 100,000 Israelites to assist him. Thus cheaply do military men estimate the lives of their fellow-creatures! He was forbidden, however, to take the army of Israel with him; as they were devoted to idolatry; yet, no sooner does he gain a victory, than himself turns idolater, and having captured from the Edomites their idols, sets them up as objects of adoration! How much wiser acted Fabian the Roman general, when he took Tarentum! He, on being asked by his soldiers what they should do with the gods, very sensibly replied, "Let them alone; they are good for nothing, since they could not defend their worshippers."

Another circumstance, though too common in those barbarous

19 Now they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem: and he fled to <sup>11</sup> Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish, and slew him there.

20 And they brought him on horses: and he was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David.

21 ¶ And all the people of Judah took <sup>12</sup> Azariah, which was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah.

22 He built <sup>13</sup> Elath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

23 ¶ In the fifteenth year of <sup>14</sup> Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years.

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from all the sins <sup>15</sup> of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath <sup>16</sup> unto the sea <sup>17</sup> of the plain, according to the word of the LORD God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant <sup>18</sup> Jonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher.

26 For the LORD saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for <sup>19</sup> there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel.

27 And the LORD said not <sup>20</sup> that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven: but <sup>21</sup> he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.

28 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, <sup>22</sup> which belonged to Judah, for Israel, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel; and Zachariah his son reigned <sup>23</sup> in his stead.

rous ages, ought not here to be passed without reprobation.—Not content with having slain 10,000 Edomites in battle, and taken 10,000 prisoners, they led the latter to the top of a rock, (probably Selah.) and in cold blood dashed them in pieces from its lofty summit!

We have mentioned above, that Jehoash had hired 100,000 Israelites to his assistance: but he was forbidden to take them with him. The Israelites, however, were greatly exasperated at his conduct, and on their return home fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria to Beth-horon, smote 3000 of the inhabitants, and took much spoil. (2 Chron. xxv. 13.) On this the haughty king of Judah challenges his brother of Israel to a war, with all the coolness of a practised duellist—"Come, let us look one another in the face." The answer to this challenge is cutting and ingenious, and concludes with a most salutary admonition. The former is in the ancient parabolical form, and is thus briefly explained by Dr. Clarke: "The thistle that was in Lebanon, Amaziah king of Judah, sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, Jehoash king of Israel, saying, Give thy daughter, a part of thy kingdom, to my son to wife: to be united to and possessed by the kings of Judah. And there passed by a wild beast, Jehoash and his enraged army, and trode down the thistle, utterly discomfited Amaziah and his troops, pillaged the temple, and broke down the walls of Jerusalem," as we find related in this chapter, (ver. 12—14.) The admonition which follows, is indeed worthy of being written in letters of gold for a royal motto. "Thou hast indeed smitten Edom; glory of this, and tarry at home, for why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt?"

Amaziah survived Jehoash fifteen years, but was slain by a conspiracy of his own people, and succeeded by his son Azariah, a youth sixteen years of age. Joash, king of Israel, was also succeeded by his son Jeroboam II. who walked in all the sins of his predecessor, the son of Nebat. He was, however,

Ver. 9. The thistle.—[The word choach, which is rendered here, and in 2 Ch. xxv. 18., Job xxxi. 18. thistle, in 1 Sa. xiii. 6. thicket, in Isa. xxiv. 13. bramble, and in 2 Ch. xxxiii. 11. Pr. xvi. 9. Cant. ii. 2. Hos. ix. 6. thorn, is probably the black thorn, or stoe tree, the prunus spinosa of Linnaeus, as the same word signifies in Arabic. There is a vast deal of insolent dignity in this remote word of Jehoash; but it has nothing conciliatory; no proposal of making amends for the injury his army had done to the unoffending inhabitants of Judah. (2 Ch. xxv. 10—13.) The comparatively useless thorn, which may by chance accrete the incautious passenger, is made the emblem of the house of Judah and David, while the house of Jehu is represented by the stately cedar.]—B.

Ver. 22. Elath.—[Elath, the Ela or Elana of the Greek and Roman writers was a celebrated port situated at the extremity of the eastern branch of the Red sea, hence called the Elaenic gulf, ten miles east from Petra, according to Eusebius; and 150 Roman miles from Gaza, according to Ptolemy, but 136½ stadia, or 157 miles, according to Strabo and Marcianus Heracleota. It is now called Akaba, and is nothing but a tower or castle, surrounded by a large grove of date trees, the residence of a governor dependant on him of Grand Cairo. See Burckhardt's Travels in Syria.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Jonah.—This prediction is not in his book of prophecies, and perhaps was not committed to writing.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Azariah's good reign. 5 He dying a leper, Jotham succeedeth. 8 Zachariah, the last of Jehu's generation, reigning ill, is slain by Shallum. 13 Shallum, reigning a month, is slain by Menahem. 16 Menahem strengtheneth himself by Pul. 21 Pekahiah succeedeth him. 23 Pekahiah is slain by Pekah. 27 Pekah is oppressed by Tiglath-pileser, and slain by Hoshea. 32 Jotham's good reign. 35 Ahaz succeedeth him.

IN <sup>a</sup> the twenty and seventh <sup>b</sup> year of Jeroboam king of Israel began <sup>c</sup> Azariah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign.

2 Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done;

4 Save <sup>d</sup> that the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And <sup>e</sup> the LORD smote the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house. And Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land.

6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So Azariah slept with his fathers; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

8 ¶ In the thirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah did <sup>f</sup> Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

10 And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired against him, and smote him before the people, and slew <sup>g</sup> him, and reigned in his stead.

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

12 This was the word of the LORD <sup>h</sup> which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. And so it came to pass.

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of Uzziah king of Judah; and he reigned a <sup>i</sup> full month in Samaria.

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up a military man, and restored to Israel Damascus, Hamath, and other places which had formerly belonged to Judah, but had been taken from them by the kings of Syria.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—38. Azariah king of Judah also begins well, but apostatizes, and is succeeded by his son Jotham. In Israel, Jeroboam is succeeded by Zachariah, who acts wickedly, and is succeeded by a race of rebels and assassins.—This Azariah is also called Uzziah in the subsequent verses of this chapter. For many years, during the time of Zechariah the prophet, he did "that which was right in the sight of the Lord," and in all his concerns prospered. He subdued the Philistines, Arabians, Ammonites, &c., and his dominion extended even to the entering in of Egypt. He built towers in Jerusalem, cultivated vineyards, and fed cattle, "for he loved husbandry." And yet, after all, the author of the Chronicles from Tirzah, and came to Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote <sup>k</sup> Tiphshah, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and all the women <sup>l</sup> therein that were with child he ripped up.

17 ¶ In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria.

18 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

19 ¶ And <sup>m</sup> Pul the king of Assyria came against the land: and Menahem <sup>n</sup> gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to confirm <sup>o</sup> the kingdom in his hand.

20 And Menahem <sup>p</sup> exacted the money of Israel, even of all the mighty men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver, to give to the king of Assyria. So the king of Assyria turned back, and stayed not there in the land.

21 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

22 And Menahem slept with his fathers; and Pekahiah his son reigned in his stead.

23 ¶ In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekahiah the son of Menahem began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned two years.

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 But Pekah the son of Remaliah, a captain of his, conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Arieah, and with him fifty men of the Gileadites: and he killed him, and reigned in his room.

26 And the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

tells us, (2 Chron. xxvi. 16, &c.) "When he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction: for he transgressed against the Lord his God, and went into the temple of the Lord to burn incense upon the altar of incense;" and notwithstanding all the remonstrances of the priests, persevered in so doing, till he was smitten with leprosy in his forehead, on which he was separated both from the temple worship and from the government, and his son Jotham reigned in his stead.

We now turn to the history of Israel, which exhibits little more than a succession of treachery and murder. First, Zachariah reigned six months, and followed the idolatries of Jeroboam son of Nebat. He was then slain by Shallum, who reigned only one month, and was slain by Menahem, a monster of cruelty, with whom the nation was punished ten years. Pekahiah his son, who succeeded him, was murdered by Pekah,

Ver. 5. A several.—Rather, a separate house, according to the law. Le. xiii. 46. Heb. "A house of freedom."

Ver. 19. Pul.—[Prideaux supposes that this Pul was the father of the famous Sardanapalus, who was called Sardan with his father's name Pul annexed, as was frequent in those times, making Sardanpul: thus Merodach king of Babylon was Merodach-Baladan, because he was the son of Baladan. This Pul began to reign, according to Usher, A.M. 3337, the fifth year of Menahem preached in that city.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Each man fifty shekels.—(Or rather, as Bishop Patrick renders, "to give the king of Assyria fifty shekels of silver for each man," i. e. in his army. It may be supposed, that Menahem compelled "the mighty men of wealth" to give much more a-piece than this sum, (some what about $22 23 each,) and each of them in some proportion to his affluence.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. With Argob and Arieah.—It is not certain whether these were attendants upon the king, (which is very likely,) or engaged with Pekah in the conspiracy. (From the construction of the Hebrew text, it would appear that CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. Twenty and seventh year, &c.—The marginal note of our translators explains this of "the 27th year of Jeroboam's partnership in the kingdom with his father, who made him consort at his going to the Syrian wars. It is the 16th of Jeroboam's monarchy." Dr. Lightfoot explains it thus; "At the death of Amaziah, his son and heir, Azariah, (or Uzziah,) was but four years old, for he was but 16 in Jeroboam's 27th year; therefore the throne must have been empty 11 years, and the government administered by protectors, while Uzziah was in his minority.—Azariah.—Dr. Kennicott complains loudly here of "the corruption in the name of this king of Judah, who is expressed by different names in this chapter: Ozriah, Oziah, Ozrihu, and Ozihu. Our oldest Hebrew MS. relieves us here, by reading truly, in verses 1, 6, 7, Uzziah, where the printed text is differently corrupted. This reading is called true, 1. Because it is supported by the Syriac and Arabic versions in these three verses. 2. Because the printed text itself has it so in verses 32 and 34, of this very chapter. 3. Because it is so expressed in the parallel place in Chronicles: and, 4. Because it is not Azarias, but Ozias, (Uzziah,) in St. Matthew's genealogy."—Bagster.

27 ¶ In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years.

28 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

29 ¶ In the days of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-beth-maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria.

30 ¶ And Hoshea the son of Elah made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

32 ¶ In the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of Israel began Jotham the son of Uzziah king of Judah to reign.

33 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jerusha, the daughter of Zadok.

34 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD: he did according to all that his father Uzziah had done.

35 Howbeit the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burned incense still in the high places. He built the higher gate of the house of the LORD.

36 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

37 In those days the LORD began to send against Judah Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah.

38 And Jotham slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

A. M. 3261.
B. C. 740.
q Is. 7. 1, 4, 9.
r Is. 9. 1.

A. M. 3265.
B. C. 736.

u After an anarchy for some years.
c. 17. 1.
Ho. 10. 3.
7. 15.

t The 4th year of Ahaz, the 20th after Jotham had begun to reign: (Usher.)

A. M. 3246.
B. C. 753.

u 2 Ch. 27. 1, &c.

A. M. 3262.
B. C. 742.

v At the end of Jotham's reign.

w c. 16. 5.
x ver. 27.

a 2 Ch. 33. 1, &c.

b Is. 18. 21.
Ps. 106. 37, 38.

c Is. 12. 31.
Ps. 106. 35.

d Is. 12. 2.
1 Ki. 14. 23.

e Is. 7. 1, &c.

f c. 14. 22.

g Elath.

h Tiglath-pileser.

i 1 Ch. 5. 26, &c.

j 2 Ch. 28.

k Tiglath-pileser.

l c. 15. 29.

m c. 12. 18.

n A. M. 3264.
B. C. 740.

o Dammesek.

p Forcited,
Am. 1. 5.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Ahaz's wicked reign. 5 Ahaz, assailed by Rezin and Pekah, hireth Tiglath-pileser against them. 10 Ahaz, sending a pattern of an altar from Damascus to Urijah, diverteth the brazen altar to his own devotion. 17 He spoils the temple. 19 Hezekiah succeedeth him.

IN the seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah, Ahaz the son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father.

3 But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, and made his son to pass through the fire, according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.

4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 ¶ Then Rezin king of Syria and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, but could not overcome him.

6 At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drove the Jews from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day.

7 ¶ So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me.

8 And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria.

9 And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria went up against Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin.

10 ¶ And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of who reigned twenty years, till he also was slain, and succeeded by Hoshea the son of Elah. During this succession of revolutions, two successive kings of Assyria laid the country under contributions, took various towns, and carried off many of the inhabitants into Assyria.

To return to Judah: Jotham the son of Uzziah, (otherwise Azariah,) seems to have been so affected with the fate of his father, that though he "did that which was right in the sight of the LORD," he entered not within the temple, at least in the early part of his reign, which probably encouraged the people to burn incense in the high places. However, he was successful in war, laid the children of Ammon under tribute, and "became mighty, because he prepared his ways before the LORD his God." (2 Chron. xxvii. 6.)

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—20. The wicked reign of Ahaz, who restores idolatry in Judea.—Ahaz is branded as the worst character among all the kings of Judah hitherto. "This is that king Ahaz!" (2 Chron. xxviii. 22.) And the worst part of his character respects his cruel and gross idolatry. "He walked in the way of the (idolatrous) kings of Israel; yea, and made his son to pass through the fire, according to the abomination of the heathen." Whether the son here mentioned was Hezekiah, who succeeded him, we have no means of ascertaining; but if so, we have a striking instance of the Argob and Arieh were slain with the king, and that the fifty Gileadites were conspirators with Pekah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Tiglath-pileser.—(Some suppose Tiglath-pileser to be the son of Sardanapalus; but the learned Pritchard makes him the same as Arbaces the Mede, called by Strabo, Thelismus, and by Cassius, Ninus Junior, who, with Belshazzar, headed the conspiracy against Sardanapalus, and fixed his royal seat at Nineveh, as Belshazzar, called in Scripture Babalan, did his at Babylon.]—Bagster.

Ver. 30. Reigned in his stead.—"After an anarchy of some years," chap. xvii. 1.—In the twentieth year of Jotham.—See Margin. There are, as Dr. Clarke says, "many difficulties in this chronology," and we think it better to leave them, than to puzzle our readers with a variety of conjectures.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 2. Twenty years old.—Here occurs another chronological difficulty. If Ahaz came to the throne at 20, and reigned but 16 years, he must have died at 36; if, therefore, Hezekiah was 25 when he began to reign, (chap. xvii. 1.) he must have been born when his father was little more than 11 years old, which to us appears incredible. It was, however, very common for the heir to be taken in as partner of the throne some years before his father's death: and something of the kind is intimated in the present instance; for, power of grace beyond that of Satan. His father devoted him to idols; but the LORD consecrated him to himself. The general practice of idolaters was to pass hastily through a fire, or between two fires, with their children in their arms; by which they were "made over," in a way of dedication, to their idols; but it is also certain, that, either through excess of zeal, or perhaps by accident, sometimes these children were absolutely consumed. (See Psalm cvi. 38. Jer. vii. 31. Ezek. xliii. 37—39.) And this appears to have been the case as to some of Ahaz's children, though not with Hezekiah. (See 2 Chron. xxviii. 3.)

It will perhaps startle some of our readers, to be told that these abominable rites were formerly practised in the British Islands, and are, indeed, not wholly extinct at the present day. The following citations, while they prove this fact, will also in a good degree illustrate the manner of these idolatries. Dr. Jamieson (in his Dictionary of the Scottish Language) mentions a festival held annually in Scotland, on the 1st of May, (O. S.) which is called Beltane, or Beltein. A town in Perthshire is called Tillee Beltein; i. e. the eminence (or high place) of the fire of Baal. Near this are two Druidical temples of upright stones, with a well adjacent to one of them, still held in great veneration for its sanctity, and on that account visited by vast numbers of superstitious people. In the ch. xviii. 1. it is said, Hezekiah began to reign in the 3d year of Hoshea; and of Hoshea, that he began to reign in the 12th of Ahaz, ch. xvii. 1. It is evident, therefore, that Hezekiah began to reign in the 14th year of Ahaz; and this allows for his father being at least thirteen or fourteen years old at the birth of Hezekiah, before which age matrimony often takes place in those warm countries.

Ver. 5. But could not overcome him.—It is probable, that at this time Isaiah was sent to support Ahaz, by predicting the death of both his enemies. See Isa. vii. 1, &c.

Ver. 6. Recovered Elath, (or Elath).—This place had formerly belonged to Edom. It was built on the eastern branch of the Red sea; but it had been rebuilt by Azariah (or Uzziah) ch. xiv. 22. and added to Judah; and now, perhaps, taken possession of by the king of Syria in the name of Edom; yet, however, Aram (Syria) and Edom differ but one letter in the original, and that very similar; some MSS. for Syria read Edom, and for Syrians Edomites.

Ver. 9. Kir.—[Josephus informs us, that this place was in Upper Media; and it is clear that it must be understood of some city or country in the dominions of the king of Assyria. It is highly probable, that it was the country on the banks of the river Cyrrus or Kyrrus, now called Kur, or Kura; and we find the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof.

11 And Urijah the priest built <sup>m</sup> an altar according to all that king Ahaz had sent from Damascus: so Urijah the priest made it against king Ahaz came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was come from Damascus, the king saw the altar: and the king approached to the altar, and offered <sup>n</sup> thereon.

13 And he burnt his burnt-offering and his meat-offering, and poured his drink-offering, and sprinkled the blood of <sup>o</sup> his peace-offerings, upon the altar.

14 And he brought also the brazen <sup>p</sup> altar, which was before the LORD, from the forefront of the house, from between the altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north side of the altar.

15 And king Ahaz commanded Urijah the priest, saying, Upon the great altar burn the morning <sup>q</sup> burnt-offering, and the evening meat-offering, and the king's burnt-sacrifice, and his meat-offering, with the burnt-offering of all the people of the land, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings; and sprinkle upon it all the blood of the burnt-offering, and all the blood of the sacrifice: and the brazen altar shall be for me to inquire by.

16 Thus did Urijah the priest, according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

17 ¶ And king <sup>r</sup> Ahaz out off the borders of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down the sea from off the brazen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones,

18 And the covert for the sabbath that they had built in the house, and the king's entry without, turned he from the house of the LORD for the king of Assyria.

19 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Ahaz which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and <sup>s</sup> was buried with his fathers in the city of David, and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Hoshea's wicked reign. 3 Being subdued by Shalmaneser, he conspireth again et hina with So king of Egypt. 5 Samaria for their sins is captivated. 24 The strange nations, which were transplanted in Samaria, being plagued with lions, make a mixture of religions.

IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began <sup>a</sup> Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

3 ¶ Against <sup>b</sup> him came up Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and <sup>c</sup> gave him <sup>d</sup> presents.

4 And the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison.

5 ¶ Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.

6 In <sup>e</sup> the ninth-year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and <sup>f</sup> carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in <sup>g</sup> Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

7 For so it was, that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods,

8 And walked <sup>h</sup> in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made.

A. M. 3264.
B. C. 740.
m Ps. 106. 39.
n Nu. 18. 3.
2 Ch. 28. 16, 19.
o the peace-offerings which were his.
p 2 Ch. 4. 1.
q Ez. 29. 39
41.
r 1 Ki. 7. 23, 28.
A. M. 3278.
B. C. 726.
s 2 Ch. 28. 27.
A. M. 3274.
B. C. 730.
a After an interregnum.
c. 15. 30.
b c. 18. 9.
c rendered. 2 Sa. 8. 2.
d or, tribute.
A. M. 3283.
B. C. 721.
e c. 18. 10, 11. Foretold, Hos. 13. 16.
f 1. 26. 32, 33.
De. 28. 36, 64.
29. 27, 28.
g 1 Ch. 5. 26.
h Le. 18. 3.
De. 18. 9.
c. 16. 3.
Ps. 106. 35.

parish of Callandar, (same county,) upon Beltein day, they cut a circular trench in the ground, sufficient to enclose the whole company assembled. "They kindle a fire, and dress a repast of eggs and milk, in the consistence of a custard: they knead a cake of oatmeal, which is toasted at the embers against a stone." After the custard is eaten, they divide the cake into as many equal parts as there are persons present, and one part is made perfectly black with charcoal. The bits of cake are put into a bonnet, and are drawn blindfold, and he who draws the black bit is considered as devoted to be sacrificed to Baal, and is obliged to leap three times through the flames. Pennant (Tour in Scotland, 1769) gives a similar account, with varying ceremonies.

"In Ireland," says Macpherson, "Beltein is celebrated on the 21st of June, at the time of the solstice. There they make fires on the tops of the hills, and every member of the family is made to pass through the fire, as they reckon this ceremony to ensure good fortune during the succeeding year. This resembles the rite used by the Romans in Palilia. Beltein (adds M.) is also observed in Lancashire." (Compare with the above our exposition on Levit. ch. xx. and note on ver. 2.)

But to return to Ahaz. He no sooner restores idolatry, than he is involved in war, and surrounded by enemies. Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, besiege Jerusalem. The former retook Elath, (which had been built by Uzziah, ch. xiv. 22.) and expelled all the Jews from thence; but they could not overcome Ahaz. However, they so alarmed him, that he sent a cringing message to the king of Assyria, and bribed him with the treasures of the temple, to come to his assistance; he accordingly captured Damascus, and slew Rezin, king of Syria. This, for the present, relieved Ahaz; but at the same time both impoverished and ensnared him; for, going to meet the king of Assyria at Damascus, he saw an idolatrous altar, with which he was so delighted, that he sent a model of it to Jerusalem, and ordered the priest, who was servile enough to obey him, to have a similar one placed in the temple, where he himself officiated; and that which had been erected by Solomon was removed, to make room for it. He took down also the brazen sea from the back of the brazen oxen, and made other alterations, which showed his utter disregard for the divine commands, and his subservency to the king of Assyria, to gratify whom these alterations are said to have been made. But we must refer, with our text, to the book of Chronicles, for some other particulars of importance there recorded. (See 2 Chron. xviii.)

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1-41. The wicked reign of Hoshea, who, conspiring against the king of Assyria, is dethroned, and Israel is carried captive into Babylon.—We now come to the affairs of Israel, and to the painful crisis of their captivity. Hoshea was a wicked prince, though not so much so as some of his predecessors. But it was his real or supposed conspiracy against Shalmaneser, that brought on his immediate ruin. He had sent presents to the king of Egypt, and withheld his usual tribute from the king of Assyria, which led the latter to conclude, that he had taken part with the former against him. On hearing this, therefore, Shalmaneser marched a powerful army into the land of Israel, dethroned and imprisoned Hoshea, and carried the people away captive. By the mention of the king's imprisonment before the siege of Samaria, it should seem probable that the king was seized out of his metropolis, and carried captive before any of his people. Samaria must indeed have been ably defended, as it stood a siege of three years before it could be taken; when taken, however, the inhabitants were carried away captive into the Assyrian empire, and colonies sent from different parts to supply their place. The Lord now sent lions among the new inhabitants, who cities called Cyropolis, Cyrena, and Carine, mentioned by writers as lying in these parts; and a part of Media, called Syromedia, as it is thought, from the Syrians, who were carried captive thither.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Of his peace-offerings.—Rather, perhaps, "the peace-offerings which (were placed) for him on the altar."
Ver. 15. For me to inquire by.—Some suppose that he meant to consult this, as a sort of oracle; see ch. viii. 4. But it may be translated—"and (as to) the brazen altar, that shall be (left) for me to inquire, (concerning)."
Dr. Boothroyd renders it, "As to the brazen altar, it shall be for me to inquire what must be done." See ver. 14, which states what he did do.

Ver. 18. The covert for the sabbath.—[There are a great number of conjectures concerning this covert; but it is probable, that it was either, as Locke supposes, a sort of shelter or canopy erected for the people on the sabbath, when the crowd was too great for the porch to contain them; or, as Dr. Geddes supposes, a seat, probably covered with a canopy, placed on an elevation, for the king and his court when they attended public worship.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. In the twelfth year of Ahaz.—[In ch. xv. 30, this is said to be "the twentieth year of Jotham," which Calmet thus reconciles: "Hoshea conspired against Pekah, the 30th year of the reign of this prince, which was the 18th of Jotham, king of Judah. Two years after this, that is, the 4th of Ahaz, and the 20th of Jotham, Hoshea made himself master of a part of the kingdom, according to chap. xv. 30. Finally, the 12th year of Ahaz, Hoshea had peaceable possession of the whole kingdom, agreeably to chap. xvii. 1."] —Bagster.

Ver. 6. In Habor, by the river of Gozan.—As no such river is to be found, Stackhouse reads, "He placed them in Halah, and by the river Habor, in Gozan," &c. Habor according to Calmet, is the same as Chebar, Eze. i. 1.

9 And the children of Israel did secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

10 And they set them up images and groves in every high hill, and under every green tree:

11 And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger:

12 For they served idols, whereof the LORD had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD testified against Israel, and against Judah, by all the prophets, and by all the seers, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed vanity, and became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and used divination and enchantments, and sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For he rent Israel from the house of David; and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drew Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin.

attributed this misfortune to their ignorance of the rites of worship practised by their predecessors: for it is evident they took the God of Israel to be a local deity, like their own idols; and thought it only necessary to perform the accustomed sacrifices, in order to secure his protection. On making such a representation to the king of Assyria, he sends a Jewish priest to instruct them "how they should fear the Lord." He did so; but whether he did not forewarn them against idolatry, or whether they did not regard his doctrine, still "every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made."

As to these Israelites, who were chiefly the two tribes and a

Ver. 9. From the tower, &c.—The meaning is, from the smallest villages to the largest cities: the idolatry was universal.

Ver. 18. Out of his sight.—That is, from his immediate presence in the temple. See Jonah i. 4.

Ver. 26. The manner of the God of the land.—That is, the manner in which he is accustomed to be worshipped.

Ver. 27, 28. One of the priests.—Most likely not one of the sons of Aaron, but one of Jeroboam's, which might, in great measure, tolerate their idolatry.

Ver. 30. Succoth-benoth.—(Literally, "the tents of the daughters.") were probably tents in which young women, according to the testimony of Herodo-

A. M. 3283.
B. C. 721.

i. Eze. 8. 12.

j. c. 13. 8.

k. i. Ki. 11. 23.

l. 57. 5.

1. statues.

m. De. 16. 21.

ni. 5. 14.

n. De. 12. 2.

o. Ex. 20. 3. 4.

p. De. 19. 1.

q. De. 19. 1.

r. De. 19. 1.

s. De. 19. 1.

t. De. 20. 25.

u. De. 6. 17.

v. De. 4. 23.

w. De. 32. 21.

x. 1. Sa. 12. 21.

y. 1. Ki. 16. 13.

z. Ro. 1. 21.

1. De. 12. 30.

2. Ex. 32. 4. 8.

3. 1. Ki. 12. 28.

4. 1. Ki. 14. 15.

5. 15. 13.

6. 1. Je. 8. 2.

7. c. 1. Ki. 16. 31.

8. 22. 53.

9. d. Le. 18. 21.

10. c. 16. 3.

11. De. 33. 37.

12. e. De. 18. 10.

13. f. 1. Ki. 21. 20.

14. g. 1. Ki. 11. 13.

15. 32.

16. h. Je. 3. 3.

17. i. Je. 6. 30.

18. j. c. 13. 3.

19. 15. 29.

20. Ne. 9. 27.

21. 28.

22. k. 1. Ki. 11. 11.

23. l. 1. Ki. 12. 20.

24. 28.

25. m. 1. Ki. 14.

26. 16.

27. n. ver. 6.

28. A. M. 3305.

29. B. C. 678.

30. o. Ezr. 4. 10.

31. p. ver. 30.

32. q. c. 13. 34.

33. Isaah.

34. r. 1. Ki. 13. 28.

35. Je. 6. 6.

36. Eze. 14. 21.

37. s. Mi. 4. 5.

38. t. ver. 24.

39. u. Ezr. 4. 9.

40. v. De. 12. 31.

41. w. 1. Ki. 12. 31.

42. x. ver. 41.

43. Zep. 1. 5.

44. y. or, who carried them away from thence.

45. z. Ge. 32. 23.

22 For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them;

23 Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

24 And the king of Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel: and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.

28 Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

30 And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima, 31 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 So they feared the LORD, and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

33 They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence.

34 Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel; half beyond Jordan, (1 Chron. v. 26.) we have seen they were carried away into captivity, for the very same crimes committed by the heathen, than whom they were so much the more culpable, as they had in their hands the revealed will of God. It is vain to inquire into the exact situation of the places here named, whither they were carried; and still more so, to look for any remainder of them now there existing. Many doubtless returned after the captivity, and those who did not, were dispersed farther in the course of years; so that some remains of the ten tribes have been traced, with considerable probability, in Chaldea and Persia; among the Afghans in Cabulistan; in India, in Africa, and even in North America. (See

Isis and Strabo, devoted themselves to the worship of the Babylonish goddess Mylitta, or Venus. The Rabbits say, her emblem was a hen and chickens.—Cuth.—Cuth is probably the Cush watered by the Gihon, or Araxes, now Aras. (Ge. ii. 13.) the ancient country of the Scythians, where we meet with the Quitians.—Baseter.—Nergal.—The Solar light, whose emblem, according to the Rabbits, was the cock that "utters in the dawn."—Ashima.—The atoner; represented by the same authority as a goat, or a satyr. See Le. vi. 23, 24.

Ver. 31. Nibhaz.—The Anubis of the Egyptians, being the body of a man, with the head and feet of a dog.—Tartak.—The Scinocephalus, a figure somewhat similar, having the body of an ape with a dog's head, standing upon 35 With whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, <sup>a</sup> saying, Ye shall not fear other gods, nor <sup>b</sup> bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them:

36 But the LORD, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power <sup>c</sup> and a stretched out arm, him shall <sup>d</sup> ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

37 And the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ye <sup>e</sup> shall observe to do for evermore; and ye shall not fear other gods.

38 And the covenant that I have made with you ye <sup>f</sup> shall not forget: neither shall ye fear other gods.

39 But the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 Howbeit <sup>g</sup> they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 So <sup>h</sup> these nations feared the LORD, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.

CHAPTER XVIII.

<sup>i</sup> Hezekiah's good reign. <sup>j</sup> He destroyeth idolatry, and prospereth. <sup>k</sup> Samaria is carried captive for their sins. <sup>l</sup> Sennacherib invading Judah is pacified by a tribute. <sup>m</sup> Rab-shakeh, sent by Sennacherib ago, revileth Hezekiah, and by blasphemous persuasions soliciteth the people to revolt.

NOW it came to pass in the third year of <sup>n</sup> Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Hezekiah <sup>o</sup> the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was <sup>p</sup> Abi, the daughter of Zachariah.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father did.

4 <sup>q</sup> He removed the high places, and brake the <sup>r</sup> images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the <sup>s</sup> brazen serpent that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it: and he called it <sup>t</sup> Nehushtan.

5 He trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so <sup>u</sup> that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

6 For he clave <sup>v</sup> to the LORD, and departed not from <sup>w</sup> following him, but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

7 And the LORD was with <sup>x</sup> him; and he prospered <sup>y</sup> whithersoever he went forth: and he

A. M. 3326.
B. C. 678.

a Ju. 6.10.

b Ex. 20.5.

c Ex. 6.6.

d De. 10.20.

e De. 5.32.

f De. 4.23.

g Je. 13.23.

h ver. 32.33.

A. M. 3278.
B. C. 726.

a 2 Ch. 28.27.

29.1.

He is called

Hezekias.

Mat. 1.9.

A. M. 3278.—3306.
B. C. 726.—698.

b 2 Ch. 29.1.

Abijah.

c statueh.

d Nu. 21.9.

e i. e. a piece of brass.

f c. 23.25.

g De. 10.20.

Jos. 23.8.

h after him.

i 2 Ch. 15.2.

Isa. 13.

14.

j Ps. 60.12.

Ro. 8.31.

k c. 16.7.

l Azzah.

A. M. 3281.
B. C. 723.

m c. 17.3, &c.

n 1 Ch. 5.26.

o Ne. 9.26.27.

Ps. 107.17.

Da. 9.6.10.

A. M. 3291.
B. C. 713.

p 2 Ch. 32.1.

&c.

Isa. 36.1, &c.

q Stanherib.

r c. 16.8.

s them.

A. M. 3294.
B. C. 710.

t Is. 20.1.

u heavy.

v Is. 7.3.

w of, secretary.

lary.

rebelled against the king of <sup>k</sup> Assyria, and served him not.

8 He smote the Philistines, even unto <sup>l</sup> Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchman to the fenced city.

9 <sup>m</sup> And it came to pass in the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Shalmaneser <sup>n</sup> king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

10 And at the end of three years they took it: even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, that is the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel, Samaria was taken.

11 And <sup>o</sup> the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes:

12 Because <sup>p</sup> they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.

13 <sup>q</sup> Now <sup>r</sup> in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did <sup>s</sup> Sennacherib king of Assyria come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold.

15 And <sup>t</sup> Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave <sup>u</sup> it to the king of Assyria.

17 <sup>v</sup> And the king of Assyria sent <sup>w</sup> Tartan and Rab-saris and Rab-shakeh from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a <sup>x</sup> great host against Jerusalem. And they went up and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which <sup>y</sup> is in the highway of the fuller's field.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the <sup>z</sup> scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh said unto them, Speak

Williams's Dictionary of Religions, in Afghans and Jews.) Yet, however we may have lost them, they are not lost to the eye of Providence, but will be easily re-collected, when "the set time to favour Zion" shall be come.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—37. Hezekiah puts down idolatry. Sennacherib, after invading Israel, and taking captive the inhabitants of Samaria, threatens Hezekiah, who in vain bribes him to withdraw.—The early part of Hezekiah's reign is here passed over very cursorily, but the blank may be filled up by reading the 29th, 30th, and 31st chapters of the second his hind legs, and looking intensely at the moon.—Adrammelech, &c.—These names both refer to Moloch. Jarchi says that they were in the form of a mule and a horse, to represent the sun and moon. See Dr. Clarke.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 2. Began to reign.—[As Ahaz was 20 years old when he began to reign, and died when he had reigned 16 years, his whole age only amounted to 36 years; and as Hezekiah was, at least, entering on his 25th year when he began to reign, then Ahaz must have been under 12 years of age when his son was born.] This is not at all impossible; and there are well attested facts of men having children at as early a period, especially in eastern countries. See note on ch. xvi. 2.—Bagster.
Ver. 4. Nehushtan.—See Margin. For the history of the brazen serpent, see Numb. xxi. 8, 9. Afterwards, it appears, the Israelites, in their rage for idolatry, burnt incense to this brazen relic.

Ver. 11. Halah.—[It is thought, with much probability, that Halah, or Chalach, is Ptolemy's Calachene, the northern part of Assyria; that Habor, or Chabor, is the mountain, or mountainous country, between Media and Assyria, called by Ptolemy, Chaboras; and that Gozan is the Gauzanitis of Pto- book of Chronicles, which will come under our review hereafter. We have, in the preceding chapters, an account of the capture of Samaria and its inhabitants, by Shalmaneser king of Assyria, in the sixth year of Hezekiah's reign. About eight years after this, Sennacherib, who had succeeded Shalmaneser, turned his arms against Judah, with a design of subduing that country also. Several of the fenced cities (or walled towns) on the boundaries of Judah having been captured, Hezekiah became much alarmed. Knowing that his father Ahaz had been tributary to the king of Assyria, he, in a mo-lency, situated between that mountain and the Caspian seas, and between the two channels of the river Cyrr—Bagster.

Ver. 16. The gold from the doors.—See 1 Kings vi. 32.—And from the pillars.—What these pillars were is unknown.

Ver. 17. Tartan and Rabaris and Rab-shakeh.—Calmet considers these not personal names, but names of office. Tartan, master of the tribute; Rab-saris, chief of the eunuchs; Rab-shakeh, master of the wine, cup-bearer, or butler.—Conduit.—Or aqueduct. See Isa. vii. 3. [If the Fuller's field were supposed, then it is probable that the conduit of the upper pool was an aqueduct that brought the water from the upper or eastern reservoir of that fountain; which they had probably seized in order to distress the city.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Rab-shakeh.—[He was the chief speaker, being a very eloquent man, and, according to the Hebrews, whom Procopius follows, an apostate Jew; which is not improbable, as he spoke Hebrew so fluently; and, when he blasphemed the Divine Majesty, the king and nobles rent their clothes, which was not usual unless the blasphemer were an Israelite.]—Bagster.—What conj- ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

20 Thou <sup>s</sup> sayest, (but they are but <sup>v</sup> vain words,) <sup>a</sup> I have counsel and strength for the war. Now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?

21 Now, behold, thou <sup>a</sup> trustest upon the staff of this bruised <sup>b</sup> reed, even upon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust on him.

22 But if ye say unto me, We trust in the LORD our God: is not that he, whose high <sup>c</sup> places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and hath said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now therefore, I pray thee, give <sup>d</sup> pledges to my lord the king of Assyria, and I will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

24 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

25 Am I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD <sup>e</sup> said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Syrian language; for we understand it: and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that <sup>f</sup> they may eat their own dung, and drink <sup>g</sup> their own piss with you?

28 ¶ Then Rab-shakeh stood and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus <sup>h</sup> saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither <sup>i</sup> let Hezekiah make you trust: in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

31 Hearken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, <sup>k</sup> Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and

A. M. 3294.
B. C. 710.

x or, talk-
est.

y word of the lips.

z or, But counsel and strength are for the war.

a trustest thee.

b Eze. 29, 6, 7.

c ver. 4.
2 Ch. 31.1.

d or, hos-
tates.

e Is. 10. 5, 6.
Am. 3. 2.
Jn. 19. 10, 11.

f Is. 4. 5.
Eze. 4. 15.

g the water of their feet.

h Ps. 73. 9, 9.

i 2 Th. 2. 4, 5.

j Ps. 11. 1.
22. 7.
125. 1, 2.

k make with me a blessing, or, seek my favour.
Ge. 32. 20.
33. 11.
Pr. 19. 16.

l or, pit.

m De. 8. 7, 8.

n or, de-ceiteth.

o c. 19. 12. 13.
Is. 10. 10, 11.

p Je. 49. 23.

q c. 17. 24.
Avch.

r c. 19. 17. 18.
Da. 3. 15.

s Pr. 26. 4.
Am. 5. 13.

t Is. 33. 7.

a Is. 37. 1, &c.

b Lu. 3. 4.
called Esaias.

c Je. 30. 7.

d or, provocation.

e c. 18. 17.

f Ps. 74. 18.

g Ps. 50. 21.

h Ro. 9. 27.

i found.

every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern:

32 Until I come and take you away to a land like <sup>m</sup> your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he <sup>n</sup> persuadeth you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

33 Hath <sup>o</sup> any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where are the gods of <sup>p</sup> Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and <sup>q</sup> Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

35 Who <sup>r</sup> are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of my hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not <sup>a</sup> a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah <sup>s</sup> with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Hezekiah mourning sendeth to Isaiah to pray for them. 6 Isaiah comforteth them. 8 Sennacherib, going to encounter Tirhakah, sendeth a blasphemous letter to Hezekiah. 14 Hezekiah's prayer. 20 Isaiah's prophecy of the pride and destruction of Sennacherib, and the good of Zion. 35 An angel slayeth the Assyrians. 36 Sennacherib is slain at Nineveh by his own sons.

AND <sup>a</sup> it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD.

2 And he sent Eliakim, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to Isaiah <sup>b</sup> the prophet the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day <sup>c</sup> of trouble, and of rebuke, and <sup>d</sup> blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It may be the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent <sup>e</sup> to reproach <sup>f</sup> the living God; and will reprove <sup>g</sup> the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant <sup>h</sup> that are <sup>i</sup> left.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast ment of weakness, sent to know his demands; and in order to satisfy them, cut off the gold from the doors and pillars of the temple, which he had repaired but a short time before, and sent it, with all the silver he could muster, to pacify the Assyrian despot. Whether these were not equal to his expectations, or whether the sight of them only increased his appetite for more, while he was himself with the main army besieging Lachish, he sent three of his chief officers, with a body of troops, to threaten Jerusalem. Hezekiah, however, having recovered his first alarm, had taken prudent precautions to protect the city, and encouraged his people to put confidence in the LORD. (2 Chron. xxxii. 1—8.) The messengers of Sennacherib blasphemed the God of Israel, by comparing him with the idols of the heathen: and, by addressing the inhabitants in their own language, endeavoured also to excite discontents among the people, who, however, remained firm both to their God and to their king. We must not omit to notice the artful conduct of Rab-shakeh, in pretending that Hezekiah was an apostate, and had offended the God of Israel by destroying the high places and idols of Jeroboam; and by obliging the people to come twice a year to worship at Jerusalem, as in the times of David and of Solomon; but the people were now better taught than to be deceived by him.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—37. Hezekiah applies to the prophet dence.—Dr. Clarke takes the Hebrew word (habitachom) to be a diminutive; "What little foolish confidence is this?"

Ver. 20. Vain words.—i. e. a word of no meaning. Perhaps the sentence would read more in the spirit of the original, "Thou sayest, (but it is a vain word) counsel and strength are for war; (so margin.) Now on whom dost thou trust," where is thy strength and counsel, "that thou rebellest against me?"

Ver. 26. Speak in Syrian.—[Perceiving that the object of this blasphemous carterf was to stir up the people to sedition, they mildly and reasonably required him to make his proposals in the Syrian language.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Make an agreement.—i. e. a handsome present. See Gen. xxxii. 20; xxxiii. 11.

Ver. 34. Hamath.—[Hamath, there is little doubt, was the Epiphania of the Greeks, as Josephus, Theodoret, and Jerome, expressly assert. It was a celebrated city of Syria, situated on the Orontes, and the present Hamah doubtless occupies its site; as Abulfeda, who was prince or emir of Hamah about A. D. 1346, expressly states, in his description of Syria, that Hamah is an ancient city mentioned in the writings of the Israelites. It is still a considerable town, situated on both sides of the Orontes, about three days' journey and a half from Tripoli, by way of Hossn; and must contain, Burckhardt says, at least 30,000 inhabitants.—Arpad.—Arpad is probably the town of Arphas, mentioned by Josephus, as limiting the province of Gamalitis, Gaula- which Stephanus places near Epiphania.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 3. Children come to the birth.—A proverbial phrase, to mark a crisis of difficulty and danger.

heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee: he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelassar?

13 Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?

14 ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth.

16 LORD, bow down thine ear, and hear: open, LORD, thine eyes, and see: and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands, 18 And have cast their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me

A. M. 3294.
B. C. 710.

J c. 18.35.

k ver. 35.37.

l Je. 15.1.

m c. 18.14.

n 1 Sa. 23.27.

o c. 18.5.

p c. 18.33,34.

q Eze. 37.23.

r 2 Ch. 32.30.

s 2 Ch. 5.7,8.

t 1 Sa. 4.4.

u Ps. 102.25.

v Ps. 31.2.

w 2 Ch. 6.40.

x given.

y Ps. 115.4.

z 1 Ki. 20.23.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

1 Sa. 4.4.

against Sennacherib king of Assyria I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; The virgin the daughter of Zion hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the Holy One of Israel.

23 By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar trees thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof: and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into the forest of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places.

25 Hast thou not heard long ago how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.

26 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the housetops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

29 And this shall be a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

30 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

31 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning

Isaiah, and receives a favourable answer. The Assyrian army is destroyed, and Sennacherib is slain.—Hezekiah now clothed himself with sackcloth, and sent messengers in sackcloth also to Isaiah the prophet, who gave an answer of peace, which we find fulfilled in the same chapter. When Rab-shakeh returned back to Sennacherib, he found him at Libnah, whence he sent another message, by letter, to Hezekiah, no less insulting and blasphemous than his former one. The answer was, (through the prophet,) "The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee and laughed thee to scorn." The king of Assyria now heard a rumour that the king of Ethiopia (or rather Cush) was come out to war against him, and hastened home to meet him; after this, it is supposed, (for the narrative is not clear,) that he returned back with his whole force to Judea. Before, however, he could reach Jerusalem, or "shoot an arrow there," the Lord sent his angel, and smote 185,000 of his men in one night. Whether this was done by means of a pestilence, as in the case of David's punishment for numbering the people, (2 Sam. xxiv. 15, 16.) or, as "he maketh the winds his angels," (Psalm civ. 4.) whether it was by means of the pestilential vapour called the simoom, we presume not to decide. (See note.) But either way it was equally fatal, and equally from the hand of God; and the divine prediction closes with this sentence—"I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land." He did so, and by the sword of his own sons.

This chapter seems to want no farther elucidation, but we must not close it without remarking—"What an asylum hath the Palmyrene, west of the Euphrates; or, rather Rezipha, in Mesopotamia, east of the Euphrates;—Bagster.

Ver. 24. I have digged and drunk strange waters.—That is, in the bombastic language of the East, "I have conquered many foreign countries, and my army has been so numerous, that their feet have dried up the trenches around the places I besieged."

Ver. 25. Hast thou not heard, &c.—These are understood to be the words of Jehovah. Our translation is obscure, and the marginal reading little better. Dr. Boothroyd is more dignified and perspicuous: "Hast thou not heard of old that I disposed this? And that from ancient times I determined it? Now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to reduce into heaps of ruin the strongest cities."

Ver. 28. A hook in his nose.—[This alludes to the method by which the Ver. 9. And when he heard.—[When Sennacherib had levied contributions on Hezekiah, he marched his army into Egypt; where, after several successes, he laid siege to Pelusium, (Josephus) and spent much time in it; but hearing that Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, whom Strabo calls Therchan, was marching against him with a great army, to assist his kinsman, Sevechus, or Sethon, the king of Egypt, he durst not abide his coming, but raised the siege; and returning to Judea, he encamped against Lachish, and afterwards against Libnah. But, finding that Tirhakah pursued him as a fugitive, he marched back to encounter him; and having totally routed his army, he returned to wreak his vengeance on Hezekiah.]—Bagster.—Ethiopia.—Heb. "Cush," which does not always mean the same country; but here, according to some, Ethiopia proper; and to others, Arabia, on the eastern coast of the Red sea.

Ver. 12. Rezeph.—[Was probably either Rezapha, which Ptolemy places in the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.

33 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

34 For I will defend this city, to save it, for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

35 ¶ And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

37 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword: and they escaped into the land of Armenia. And Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XX.

Hezekiah, having received a message of death, by prayer hath his life lengthened. The sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign of that promise. 12 Berodach-baladan sending to visit Hezekiah, because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasures. 14 Isaiah understanding thereof foretelleth the Babylonian captivity. 20 Manasseh succeedeth Hezekiah.

IN those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thy house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying,

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, remember now how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore.

4 And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying, the soul in prayer!" "Prayer moves the arm, that moves the universe." There is no reason to be terrified at the threats of any mortal man, even though he wear a crown, while we can have access to "Him who dwelleth between the cherubim;" and have there an Advocate who gratuitously pleads our cause, and who never pleads in vain.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—21. Hezekiah's sickness and miraculous recovery.—It appears this sickness preceded the events just related; at least, it is evident, (from ver. 6.) that it occurred during the time (Scott says "the first time") that Sennacherib threatened the invasion of Judea. In the first verse, the prophet is sent to Hezekiah with this message, "Set thy house in order, for thou shalt die, and not live." He is herein informed that his disorder was fatal in its nature, and is admonished to prepare to die. This involves him in deep distress: he turns to the wall, and sorely weeps and prays for respite. Probably there was a window in that wall that looked "towards God's holy temple;" and he might recollect the petition of king Solomon. (1 Kings viii. 29.) "Hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make toward this place." But why is king Hezekiah thus alarmed at the thoughts of death? Did he not know that he was mortal? Did he not know that there is a world beyond the grave? Assuredly he must have common people manage their beasts in the East, especially the dromedaries, which are governed by a bridle fastened to a ring, which runs through the nostril of the beast.—Bagster.

Ver. 35. The angel of the Lord.—(This angel, or messenger, was probably the simoom, or hot pestilential wind, which is so frequent in eastern countries, and often destroys vast numbers in a moment.)—Bagster.

Ver. 37. Land of Armenia.—Armenia or Ararat is a province of Asia, comprising the modern Turcomania and part of Persia; having Georgia on the north, Kurdistan, or the ancient Assyria, on the south, and Asia Minor, now Naticia, on the west.—Bagster.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 4. The middle court.—This is the reading of the Masoretic Keri, and the ancient versions; but "middle of the city," is the reading of the present Hebrew text, and most of the MSS., as noted in the margin of our bibles.

Ver. 5. I will heal thee.—This does not prove any change in the divine mind, any more than when, after sentence is pronounced, a reprieve is granted. Hezekiah's prayer shows that he did not consider the sentence irreversible.

Ver. 7. Take a lump of figs, &c.—(Schemin, from the Arabic sachama, to be hot, signifies an inflammatory tumour, or burning boil: and some think that Hezekiah's malady was a pleurisy; others that it was the plague; and

A. M. 2294.
B. C. 710.

s c.20.6.

2Ch.32.21.

Is.37.36.

u Ge.10.11.

Jo.1.2.

5.4, &c.

v ver.7.

w Ararat.

x Ezr.4.2.

A. M. 2291.

B. C. 713.

a 2 Ch.32.

24, &c.

Is.38.1, &c.

b gize

chance concerning thy house.

288.17-23.

c Ne.13.22.

d c.18.3-6.

e Ge.17.1.

1 Ki.3.6.

f with a weeping.

g or, city.

h 1 Sa.9.16.

10.1.

i c.19.20.

Ps.66.19,

20.

j Ps.39.12.

56.8.

126.5.

k De.32.39.

l c.19.24.

m Ju.6.17,

37.

Is.7.11,14.

n Jos.10.12.

o degrees.

A. M. 2292.

B. C. 712.

p Is.39.1,

&c.

q or, Merodach-bal-adan.

r 2Ch.32.27.

s or, spicery.

t vessels,

or, jewels.

u Ps.23.5.

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee: on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet cried unto the LORD: and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz.

12 ¶ At that time Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and showed them all the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour, and all that was found in his treasures: "there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

14 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king often read and sung the Psalms of holy David; "My heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth; my flesh also shall rest in hope;" "I shall behold thy face in righteousness;" "Thou shalt guide me by thy counsel, and afterwards receive me to glory;" and many like passages. There are, however, various considerations that may make a good man desirous to live, such as the state of his affairs, the circumstances of the times, and the prospects of farther usefulness: all these might have their weight with this pious king. It cannot be denied, likewise, that, under the old dispensation, the prospects of a future life were much less clear and encouraging than under the brighter revelation of the gospel. When, therefore, under this dispensation, we see so many good Christians anxious for continuance of life, we need not wonder at this instance of it in a pious Jew. But what is Hezekiah's plea? "I beseech thee, O Lord, remember now how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight." On this, Bishop Hall thus descends:—"Couldst thou fear, O Hezekiah, that God had forgotten thine integrity? The grace that was in thee was his own work; could he in thee neglect himself? Or dost thou, therefore, doubt of his remembrance of thy faithfulness, because he summons thee to receive the crown of thy faithfulness, glory and immortality? Wherein canst thou others, the elephantiasis, a species of leprosy, as one of the Hexapla versions renders in Job ii. 7. A poultice of figs might be very proper to mature a boil, or dismiss any obstinate inflammatory swelling, and the propriety of such an application is expressly mentioned by Pliny, but we cannot discuss its propriety in this case, unless we were certain of the nature of the malady. It was, however, the natural means which God chose to bless for his recovery; and without this interposition, he must have died.—Bagster.

Ver. 11. In the dial.—This is a very curious and complicated subject. Sundials, such as we use, at this time were certainly not invented. For dial, our margin reads "degrees," or steps: and Dr. Clarke has given a curious diagram of steps, of a peculiar construction, with a perpendicular gnomon, by the shadow of which the progress of the day might be accurately ascertained. The late Taylor has also pursued the subject with great ingenuity, in his "Fragments to Calmet," No. 2. He (with many others) attributes the effect to an extraordinary refraction of the solar rays, by means of "a layer of condensed air;" and names an extraordinary fact in support of this opinion.

Ver. 12. Berodach.—Isa. xxxix. 1. he is called "Merodach." So here the Versions, Talmuds, and several MSS.

Ver. 13. House of his armour.—The word evidently includes vessels, weapons, instruments, and perhaps all sorts of curiosities.

Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in thy house? And Hezekiah answered, All the things that are in my house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.

16 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD.

17 <sup>w</sup> Behold, the days come, that all that is in thy house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, shall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

18 And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take <sup>a</sup> away; and <sup>y</sup> they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, Good is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, Is it not good, if peace and truth be in my days?

20 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he made <sup>b</sup> a pool, and a conduit, and brought water <sup>c</sup> into the city, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

21 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Manasseh's reign. 3 His great idolatry. 10 His wickedness censured prophesies against Judah. 17 Amon succeeded him. 19 Amon's wicked reign. 23 He being slain by his servants, and those murderers slain by the people, Josiah is made king.

MANASSEH <sup>a</sup> was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hephzi-bah.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, after <sup>b</sup> the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For he built up again the high places which <sup>c</sup> Hezekiah his father had destroyed; and he reared up altars for Baal, and made a grove, be remembered, if this be to forget thee? What challenge is this? is God a debtor to thy perfection? Hath thine holy carriage merited any thing from that infinite justice? Far, far, were these presumptuous conceits! . . . This perfection of thine was no other than an honest sadness of heart and life, which thou knowest God hath promised to reward. It was the mercy of the covenant thou pleaded, not the merit of thine obedience."

King Hezekiah's petitions were, however, heard and granted. Fifteen years were added to his life, and a miracle wrought to assure him of the fact. The shadow returned ten degrees backward on the dial of Ahaz. Objections have been made to this and other miracles of the Old Testament, as disturbing the motions of the heavenly bodies; but without the least foundation. In this book of Kings, we have (in the original) no mention of either sun or dial, but of "degrees," or steps only; and the miracle, without in any degree affecting the sun itself, consisted only in the retrogression of the shadow upon certain "degrees," or steps, so constructed, as by the shadow caused by the sun's progress, to ascertain the time of the day, in the manner of a sun-dial. Whether this effect was produced by the intervention of a cloud, or any other supernatural means, Hezekiah was satisfied of the divine interference, without any disturbance of the course of nature. Miracles, however, do not always produce that salutary effect upon the human mind which we might expect. At the moment, indeed, he wrote a penitential hymn, which we shall find in the prophecy of Isaiah, (chap. xxxviii. 9—20.) But after a while, it is said, "Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done to him: for his heart was lifted up;" which seems indeed to have been his besetting sin: "therefore wrath came upon him, and upon CHAP. XXI. Ver. 7. A graven image of the grove.—That is, no doubt, the image of Astarte, or the Asiatic Venus; but we have before ventured to suggest, that this image was worshipped in a grove; see note on 1 Kings xv. 13. Dr. Clarke, however, who herein follows the learned Seden, contends, that the word Asherah generally means an image only, thinking that there could be no grove of trees in the house of the Lord. But of this we are not certain, as there is an express precept to forbid it, Deut. xvi. 21; and Moses, in another place, clearly distinguishes groves from graven images, Deut. xii. 3. It is not impossible, therefore, considering the character of these idolaters, that a grove, as well as images was planted there in direct opposition to the divine com-as <sup>d</sup> did Ahab king of Israel: and worshipped <sup>e</sup> all the host of heaven, and served them.

4 And he built altars in the house <sup>f</sup> of the LORD, of which the LORD <sup>g</sup> said, In Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he made his son <sup>h</sup> pass through the fire, and observed <sup>i</sup> times, and used enchantments, and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards: he wrought much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke <sup>j</sup> him to anger.

7 And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to <sup>k</sup> David, and to <sup>l</sup> Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither <sup>m</sup> will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers: only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But they hearkened not: and <sup>n</sup> Manasseh seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 Because <sup>o</sup> Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the <sup>p</sup> Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols:

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, I <sup>q</sup> am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line <sup>r</sup> of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem as <sup>s</sup> a man wipeth a dish, <sup>t</sup> wiping it, and turning it upside down.

14 And I will forsake <sup>u</sup> the remnant of mine

Judah and Jerusalem." (2 Chron. xxxii. 25.) The circumstance alluded to is, that when ambassadors were sent from Babylon to congratulate him on his recovery, and to inquire into the nature of the miracle we have just mentioned, he received them with too much complacency; and instead of glorifying God before them for his mercy, he listened to, and was pleased with their flatteries; he made an ostentatious display of his treasures, the natural effect of which was, (and he ought to have foreseen this,) to excite their cupidity; and therefore, as is here threatened, in the reign of Jehoiachin, those boasted treasures were carried captive into Babylon. Howbeit, in this instance, the Lord left him to himself "to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart." (2 Chron. xxxii. 31.) And this trial seems to have humbled him more than all the preceding ones; for he said to Isaiah, "God is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken: and is it not (good) if peace and truth be in my days?"

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—25. The wicked reigns of Manasseh and his son Amon.—It may be worth remarking, that, while the kings of Israel were, for several generations, almost uniformly bad, those of Judah were very frequently reversed. Thus wicked Ahaz was succeeded by good Hezekiah, good Hezekiah by wicked Manasseh and his son Amon. These by the excellent Josiah, and he again by the foolish Jehoiachin, who was carried captive into Babylon. Manasseh, the prince now before us, was born three years after his father's life had been extended; and as we read of no other son of Hezekiah, it is highly probable that he was a darling child, and indulged to a great excess: now children excessively indulged are uniformly spoiled, and seldom come to any good. He must, mand; and it appears that this image of Astarte was seldom or never to be seen, but in a grove.

Ver. 10. By his prophets.—Those who lived about this period were Joel, Nahum, Habakkuk, and Isaiah.

Ver. 13. The line of Samaria, &c.—[This metaphor is taken from the custom of using a line in measuring land, and in dividing portions of it among several persons. Samaria was taken, pillaged, and ruined, and its inhabitants carried into captivity; Jerusalem shall have the same measure.]—Bagster—Wiping and turning it.—See Margin. The meaning is, that Judah shall be completely emptied, both of its treasures and inhabitants.

inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their <sup>a</sup> enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood <sup>a</sup> very much, till he had filled Jerusalem <sup>a</sup> from one end to another; beside his sin wherewith <sup>a</sup> he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

17 ¶ Now <sup>a</sup> the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

18 And Manasseh slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own house, in the garden of Uzza: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 ¶ Amon <sup>a</sup> was twenty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah.

20 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as <sup>a</sup> his father Manasseh did.

21 And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served, and worshipped them:

22 And he forsook <sup>b</sup> the LORD God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the LORD.

23 ¶ And the servants of Amon conspired against him, and slew the king in his own house.

24 And the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

25 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Amon which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

26 And he was buried in his sepulchre in the garden of Uzza: and Josiah <sup>c</sup> his son reigned in his stead.

A. M.
3306. 3327.
B. C.
698. 677.

u Ps. 74. 1. 7.

v Jo. 2. 34. 19. 4.

w from mouth to mouth.

x 1 Ki. 14. 16.

y 2 Ch. 33. 1. 20.

z 2 Ch. 33. 21. &c.

a ver. 2. &c.

b 1 Ki. 11. 33. c. 22. 17.

c Mat. 1. 10. called Josias.

—

a 1 Ki. 13. 2. 2 Ch. 34. 1. &c.

b Jon. 5. 39.

c De. 5. 32.

d c. 12. 4. &c.

e Ps. 84. 10.

f threshold.

g De. 31. 24. 2 Ch. 34. 14. &c.

h melted.

i Ne. 8. 3. 18. Jo. 36. 6. 15.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He took care for the repair of the temple. 8 Hilkiah having found a book of the law, Josiah senteth to Huldah to inquire of the Lord. 10 Huldah prophesies the destruction of Jerusalem, but respite thereof in Josiah's time.

JOSIAH <sup>a</sup> was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Adaiah of <sup>b</sup> Boscath.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in all the way of David his father, and turned not aside <sup>c</sup> to the right hand or to the left.

3 ¶ And it came to pass in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying,

4 Go up to Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver <sup>d</sup> which is brought into the house of the LORD, which the <sup>e</sup> keepers of the <sup>f</sup> door have gathered of the people:

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, I have found <sup>g</sup> the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have <sup>h</sup> gathered the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe showed the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book. And Shaphan read <sup>i</sup> it before the king.

however, have fallen among evil counsellors, for he not only set up the idolatries his father had put down, but he introduced idols into the temple of the Lord, and caused his children to pass through the fire to Moloch, in the valley of the son of Hinnom; he also "used enchantments and witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards," until at length "he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood." The ease and rapidity with which he did this, evidently shows that the nation had acted hypocritically in complying with the reformation which his father had introduced, and were not themselves reformed in heart. They did not, however, want for admonition. Prophets were sent to warn them, but, alas! in vain. How long this career of wickedness continued, is not known; but it is generally supposed during the far greater part of his long reign. At length another set of monitors was sent to him, namely, the captains of the king of Assyria, which "took Manasseh among the thorns," or perhaps scourged him with thorns, and bound him in chains, and thus carried him to Babylon. When in affliction he besought the Lord, who "was entreated of him;" and, by some means now unknown, restored him to Jerusalem and to his throne. He then set in earnest about reform, and endeavoured to restore things to the state in which they had been placed by his good father, but did not live to complete the work of reformation; and his son Amon, who had followed him in his idolatries, refused to follow him in his repentance: at his death, therefore, Amon restored the reign of idolatry and vice. Happily his reign was short, and probably tyrannical, for his servants conspired against him; yet he seems to have been a favourite with the people, perhaps for his wickedness, for they slew all who had conspired against him. We turn, however, with pleasure, to his successor, whose early and persevering piety has embalmed his name in sacred history.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1—20. Josiah repairs the temple—reads the book of the law, and consults the prophetess Huldah.—Josiah was the least exceptionable character that ever filled the throne of Judah. He had no private vices nor public crimes; "he did right in the sight of the Lord, and walked (as respects his public conduct) in all the way of David his father;" setting his face resolutely against idolatry. (See note, verse 1.) Such a king never reigned in Israel before or since, (chap. xxiii. 25.) As Josiah was but eight years old when he began to reign, and as his father and grand-father were both bad characters, it is reasonable to attribute much of the reform commenced in the early part of life to his mother Jedidah, in connexion with Hilkiah the high priest. His first effort appears to have been to repair the temple, and to collect a sufficient revenue to pay the workmen. It was, perhaps, in superintending those repairs, that Hilkiah found the sacred book of the law; a fact that has been variously interpreted, and by some very perversely. The Rabbins say that Ahaz, and Manasseh also in the former part of his reign, did all they could to suppress the sacred writings of the Jews; and hence it has been inferred, that this was the only copy now extant; but of this we have no proof; yet, admitting that this might be the only complete copy, there must have been many detached parts existing, in consequence of Jehoshaphat having many years before sent priests and Levites with the book of the law through-

Ver. 17. In the book of the Chronicles—2 Chron. xxxiii. What we have said relative to his repentance is taken from that chapter, ver. 18—19.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1. Josiah.—This prince was one of the best, if not the best, of all the Jewish kings since the time of David. He began well, continued well, and ended well. It has been frequently observed, that young King Edward VI. of England, greatly resembled Josiah. He indeed gave singular evidences of wisdom and piety far above his years; but he was taken away at such an early age, that we can only conjecture what he would have been, and done, had he attained the age at which Josiah died. J.—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Sum the silver.—Ten years seems to have elapsed since the people began to offer the accustomed offerings; yet no one had taken an account of them, nor were they applied to the purpose for which they were given. J.—B.

Ver. 8. I have found the book.—(This certainly was a genuine copy of the divine law: and probably the autograph of Moses, as it is said, in the parallel place of Chronicles, to be the book of the law of the Lord by Moses. It is not probable that this was the only copy of the law in the land, or that Josiah had never before seen the book of Moses; but the fact seems to be, that this was the original of the covenant renewed by Moses in the plains of Moab, and now being unexpectedly found, its antiquity, the occasion of its being made, the present circumstances of the people, the imperfect state in which the reformation was as yet, after all that had been done, would all concur to produce the effect here mentioned on the mind of the pious Josiah. J.—Bagster.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the book of the law, that he rent his clothes.

12 And the king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Achbor <sup>k</sup> the son of <sup>i</sup> Michaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 Go ye, inquire <sup>m</sup> of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great <sup>n</sup> is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled against us, because our <sup>o</sup> fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do <sup>p</sup> according unto all that which is written concerning us.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shalum the son of <sup>a</sup> Tikvah, the son of <sup>r</sup> Harhas, keeper of the <sup>s</sup> wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem <sup>t</sup> in the college;) and they communed with her.

15 ¶ And she said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me,

16 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read:

17 Because <sup>u</sup> they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; <sup>v</sup> therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place, and shall not be quenched.

18 But to the king of Judah which sent you to inquire of the LORD, thus shall ye say to him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, As touching the words which thou hast heard;

19 Because thy <sup>w</sup> heart was tender, and thou hast humbled <sup>x</sup> thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a <sup>y</sup> desolation and a <sup>z</sup> curse, and hast <sup>a</sup> rent thy clothes, and <sup>b</sup> wept before me; I also have heard thee, saith the LORD.

20 Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and <sup>c</sup> thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this out the kingdom. Nor does it appear among any of the sins of the idolaters, in these early times, that they took the trouble to collect or to destroy any of the sacred writings. They cared nothing about the worship of Jehovah: their great object was to mingle their idolatries with it, or to associate Baal, or Moloch, or Astarte, with the great Eternal. One thing, however, must be admitted, that copies of the law and of the other scriptures were become scarce, through the neglect and contempt with which they were generally treated. It is also highly probable that the copy now found was either the original autograph of Moses, which had been deposited in the most holy place, or at least an authentic and attested copy. (See Exod. xxv. 16—21. 1 Kings viii. 9.) (See note, verse 8.) It farther appears, that, in consequence of this scarcity of the scriptures, and a general indifference towards them, both Ver. 14. Huldah the prophetess.—Jeremiah had now probably begun to prophesy, but he lived at Anathoth, in the tribe of Benjamin, and was very young. —In the college.—Dr. Boothroyd, more exact perhaps as to the sense, reads, "in the suburbs."

Ver. 20. Unto thy grave in peace.—This has no reference to the death he should die; but means, that he should be taken from the evils about to come upon the country, and be honourably buried in his own sepulchre, which came to pass accordingly. 2 Ch. xxiv. 28; xxv. 24, 25. [During thy life, none of these calamities shall fall upon thee nor thy people; no adversary shall be permitted to disturb the peace of Judah; and thou shalt at last "be gathered into thy grave in peace." Now, though it is stated that Pharaoh-Nechoh slew him at Megiddo, yet the Assyrians and the Jews were at peace; and though Josiah might feel it his duty to oppose the Egyptian king's going against his friend and ally, and that in his endeavours to oppose him, he was mortally wounded at Megiddo, yet certainly he was not killed there, but was brought to Jerusalem, where he died in peace.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 4. Priests of the second order.—[These were either such place. And they brought the king word again.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Josiah causeth the book to be read in a solemn assembly. 3 He reneweth the covenant of the Lord. 4 He destroyeth idolatry. 15 He burnt dead men's bones upon the altar of Beth-el, as was foreprophecied. 21 He kept a most solemn passover. 24 He put away witches and all abominations. 28 God's final wrath against Judah. 29 Josiah, provoking Pharaoh-nechoh, is slain at Megiddo. 31 Jehoahaz, succeeding him, is imprisoned by Pharaoh-nechoh, who made Jehoiachim king. 36 Jehoiachim's wicked reign.

AND <sup>a</sup> the king sent, and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem.

2 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, <sup>b</sup> both small and great: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was <sup>c</sup> found in the house of the LORD.

3 ¶ And <sup>d</sup> the king stood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes with all their heart and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book. And all the people stood to the covenant.

4 ¶ And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the vessels that were made for Baal, and for the <sup>e</sup> grove, and for all the host of heaven: and he burned them without Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto Beth-el.

5 And he <sup>f</sup> put down <sup>g</sup> the idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burned incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the <sup>h</sup> planets, and to all the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out the grove from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burned it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves <sup>i</sup> of the children of the people.

7 And he brake down the <sup>j</sup> houses of the sodomites, that were by the house of the LORD, where the women <sup>k</sup> wove <sup>l</sup> hangings for the grove.

priests and princes were very ignorant of their contents, and much surprised at the dreadful penalties they had incurred. Not knowing what step to take, Josiah sends to consult Huldah the venerable prophetess—a mother in Israel, and probably considered as especially conversant with the holy writings. She informed them, without hesitation, that the judgments denounced in that book should certainly be executed; yet, in consequence of the penitence evinced by the king, the princes, and the priests, they should be deferred, and not executed on that generation.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 1—30. Josiah reads certain parts of the holy writings, and makes various reforms in consequence.—As Solomon, though surrounded by priests and prophets, himself offered prayer at the dedication of the temple, so Josiah here takes the lead in this work of piety and reform, though as occasionally supplied the high priest's office, or those of the second course or order established by David.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. He put down the idolatrous priests.—Heb. Kemarinim; literally, the black priests, so called either from the colour of their garments; or, as others think, from their being blackened with the smoke of their incense. See Dr. Clarke. —To the planets.—[Or, twelve signs, or, constellations. So the Vulgate, "the twelve signs," i. e. the zodiac; which is the most probable meaning of the word, mazzaloth, from the Arabic, manzeel, a caravaner's house or dwelling, as being the apparent dwellings of the sun in his annual course; and the Targumists and Rabbins often employ the words terejany mazzalotay, to denote the signs of the zodiac.]—B. —All the host of heaven.—[That is, the stars, fixed, or errant. Ps. cxlvi. 2. See exp. of Ge. ii. 1—3, ver. 7. Houses of the sodomites.—Heb. Kedoshim; "All kinds of prostitutes."—Dr. Clarke. The term implies that they were devoted or consecrated to prostitution in honour of their idols. See note on 1 Ki. xiv. 24.—Hangings.—Houses woven, must be tents, or tent curtains, made square, perhaps instead of round. These probably, were a kind of shins

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burned incense, from <sup>m</sup> Geba to Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless the <sup>n</sup> priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the Lord in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread <sup>o</sup> among their brethren.

10 And he defiled <sup>p</sup> Topheth, which is in the valley <sup>q</sup> of the children of Hinnom, <sup>r</sup> that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun, at the entering in of the house of the Lord, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the <sup>s</sup> chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were on the <sup>t</sup> top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which <sup>u</sup> Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the Lord, did the king beat down, and <sup>v</sup> brake them down from thence, and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron.

13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of <sup>w</sup> the mount of corruption, which Solomon <sup>x</sup> the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile.

14 And he <sup>y</sup> brake in pieces the <sup>z</sup> images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men.

15 <sup>aa</sup> Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place <sup>ab</sup> which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burned the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burned the grove.

16 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word <sup>b</sup> of the Lord which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed these words.

17 Then he said, What title is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is the sepulchre of the man of <sup>c</sup> God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

18 And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones <sup>d</sup> alone, with the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria.

19 <sup>ee</sup> And all the houses also of the high places that were <sup>e</sup> in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And he <sup>f</sup> slew <sup>g</sup> all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burned men's <sup>h</sup> bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 <sup>ii</sup> And the king commanded all the people, saying, Keep the passover unto the Lord your God, as it is <sup>i</sup> written in the book of this covenant.

22 Surely <sup>j</sup> there was not holden such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the Lord in Jerusalem.

24 <sup>kk</sup> Moreover <sup>k</sup> the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the <sup>l</sup> images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the <sup>m</sup> law which were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the Lord.

25 And <sup>n</sup> like unto him was there no king before him, that turned <sup>o</sup> to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according <sup>p</sup> to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

26 <sup>nn</sup> Notwithstanding the Lord turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherein his anger was kindled against Judah, <sup>q</sup> because of all the <sup>r</sup> provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal.

27 And the Lord said, I will <sup>s</sup> remove Judah also out of my sight, as I have removed <sup>t</sup> Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem which I have chosen, and the house of which <sup>u</sup> I said, My name shall be there.

28 <sup>tt</sup> Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 <sup>uu</sup> In <sup>v</sup> his days Pharaoh-nechoh king of

A. M. 3366. 3327.
B. C. 688. 677.
m 1 Ki. 15.22
n Eze. 44.10
o 14.
p 1 Sa. 2.26.
q Je. 7.31.
r Jos. 15.8.
s Le. 13.21.
t De. 18.10.
u Eze. 23.37.
39.
v or, sunnith,
of, officer.
w Je. 19.13.
x Zep. 1.5.
y u c.21.5.
z or, ran from thence.
aa w i. e. the mount of olives.
ab x 1 Ki. 11.7.
ac y Ex. 22.24.
ad Nu. 33.52.
ae De. 12.25.
af Mi. 1.7.
ag s status.
ah a 1 Ki. 12.28.
33.
ai b 1 Ki. 13.2.
aj c 1 Ki. 13.30.
31.
ak d to escape.
al e 2 Ch. 34.6.
7.
am f or, sacrificed.
an g Eze. 22.20.
1 Ki. 18.40.
c. 11.18.
ao h 2 Ch. 34.5.
ap i Ex. 12.3. &c.
aq Nu. 9.2.
ar De. 16.2.
as De. 16.2.
at j 2 Ch. 35.18.
19.
au k c. 21.6.
av Re. 22.15. aw l or, Tera-phim.
ax Gi. 31.19.
ay m Je. 19.31.
20.27.
az De. 18.11.
ba A. M.
3363. 3384.
bb De. 16.
31.610.
bc c. 18.5.
bd 1 Ki. 8.48. be Je. 29.13.
bf p Ne. 10.29.
bg c. 21.11. 12.
24.34.
bh Je. 15.4.
bi r anger.
bj s c. 21.13.
bk t c. 17.18. 20.
18.11.
bl a 1 Ki. 9.3.
bm A. M. 3394.
B. C. 610.
bn v 2 Ch. 35.20.
&c.

attended in like manner. The zeal and energy with which the young king acted, shows that his heart was deeply engaged in the design. His reform was thorough and universal. Every vestige of idolatry was destroyed, and the idolatrous priests punished according to the law. It may be recollected that this book, in the first instance, was read to the king by Shaphan the scribe; but now it was to be read in public, it might receive much greater attention from the king himself being the reader, though it is by no means unlikely that he was assisted and relieved by others in the work. The king, we are informed, stood by or upon a pillar, or pedestal, while he made a covenant with the people, as Joshua had before done. (Josh. xxiv. 25.) "And all the people stood" up to express their assent and obedience "to the covenant" now made, or rather renewed and ratified; though we afterwards find that a great part of them were hypocritical and insincere. (See Jer. iii. 10.)

Ver. 9. Priests of the high places.—Where sacrifices were offered, sometimes to the Lord, and at others, to idols. These were treated as priests having some blemish. See Le. xxi. 21—23.

Ver. 10. Topheth . . . in the valley . . . of Hinnom.—A valley south of Jerusalem, infamous for its idolatrous services. This was called Gehenna, and made a type of hell, by all the filth and offal of the city being brought thither, and consumed in fires perpetually burning.

Ver. 11. Horses given to the sun.—[Throughout the East, the horse, because of his swiftness and utility, was dedicated to the sun; and the Greeks and Romans feigned that the chariot of the sun was drawn by four horses, Pyros, Eous, Aithon, and Phlegon; and hence also chariots were dedicated to that luminary. Jarchi says, that those who adored the sun had horses which they mounted every morning, to go out to meet him at his rising. The kings of Judah had imitated these idolatrous customs, and kept the horses of the sun even at the entrance of the temple of the Lord.]—Bagster.—The chamberlain.—This being plainly opposed to the divine law. (De. xxiii. 1.) we may hope that these officers, of whom we frequently read in the books of Kings, were foreigners, and employed in imitation of the heathen nations.

Ver. 12. On the top of the upper chamber.—The flat roof.—Brake them down.—Literally, "run (them) down." The marginal reading makes this the action of Josiah: having "beaten down" these altars, in the ardour of his zeal, he "ran from thence" himself, to cast them into Kidron. Perhaps (as they probably were of brass) he served them as Moses did the golden calf; broke, melted, and ground them, and cast the dust into the river. See expos. of Ex. xxxii. 15—35.

Ver. 13. Mount of corruption.—This, according to the Chaldee, was the mount of Olives, which, by a very slight change in the original, was now named, "the mount of corruption," for having been devoted to idolatry.

Ver. 16. Who proclaimed these words.—[The Septuagint and Hexapla Syriac at Paris insert, "when Jeroboam stood by the altar at the feast. And turning about, he cast his eyes on the sepulchre of the man of God."]—Bagster. See 1 Kings xiii. 1—8.

Ver. 20. And he slew.—Not in a religious but in a judicial sense, as every culprit executed is a sacrifice to justice. See exposition of 1 Kings xviii. 21—46.

Ver. 29. Pharaoh-nechoh.—[Pharaoh-Nechoh, called Necos, the son of Psamticus, by Herodotus, was now marching "to make war upon the Medes and Babylonians, who had dissolved the Assyrian empire." (Josephus;) the king of the latter being the famous Nabopolassar, who had also become king of Assyria.—Megaddo.—Megaddo, called Magdolum, by Herodotus, was situated in the tribe of Manasseh, west of Jordan, in the valley of Jezreel, and not far from Hadad-Rimmon, or Maximianopolis. This shows that Josiah

Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him; and he slew him at <sup>w</sup> Megiddo, when he had seen him.

30 And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre. And <sup>x</sup> the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead.

31 <sup>y</sup> Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was <sup>z</sup> Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

32 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh put him in bands at <sup>a</sup> Riblah in the land of Hamath, <sup>b</sup> that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and <sup>c</sup> put the land to a tribute of a hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and <sup>d</sup> turned his name to Jehoiakim, and took Jehoahaz away: and <sup>e</sup> he came to Egypt, and died there.

35 <sup>f</sup> And Jehoiakim gave the silver <sup>g</sup> and the gold to Pharaoh; but he taxed the land to give the money according to the commandment of Pharaoh: he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

36 <sup>h</sup> Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

37 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

CHAP. XXIV.

<sup>i</sup> Jehoiakim, first subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, then rebelling against him, procured his own ruin. <sup>j</sup> Jehoiachin succeeded him. <sup>k</sup> The king of Egypt is vanquished by the king of Babylon. <sup>l</sup> Jehoiachin's evil reign. <sup>m</sup> Jerusalem is taken and carried captive into Babylon. <sup>n</sup> Zedekiah is made king, and reigneth ill unto the utter destruction of Judah.

IN <sup>a</sup> his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years: then he turned and rebelled against him.

The next circumstance that particularly merits our attention is, that, in order to prevent the former idolatries being recurred to, he defiled the altars of the idols by burning filth and dead men's bones upon them, according to what had been predicted by the man of God, who had foretold these things, and mentioned Josiah by name above 300 years before he was born.

But the most happy and memorable circumstance in this chapter was the celebration of the Passover, which had, doubtless, been much neglected and despised during the prevalence of idolatry; but now was restored with all the circumstances of its original institution, and with so much zeal and piety, that no such Passover had been held since the times of Joshua and his immediate successors. It is remarkable, too, that he carried his reforms even into the cities of Samaria, though under the Assyrian yoke.

His last act, however, was an act of imprudence, arising, perhaps, from the natural zeal and impetuosity of his temper.

reigned over the country formerly possessed by the ten tribes; and is also probable, that Nechoh had landed his troops at or near Casarea of Palestine.] —Bagster.

Ver. 30. Dead.—Rather, "dying," (for meth is the participle.) Compare 2 Chron. xxxv. 24.

Ver. 33. In bands.—That is, in chains; probably taken in the act of fighting against him. He died a captive. See Jer. xxii. 12. He is called Shalum here and in 1 Chron. iii. 15.—Riblah.—[Theodoret expressly affirms that Riblah, or Rebatha, was in the time called Emesa.—Emesa was a city of Syria, situated on the Orontes, and, according to the Antonine Itinerary, is miles from 140 miles S. E. of Hamah or Hamath, in the road to Damascus. The present name only occupies about one quarter of the space contained within the ancient walls, which apparently date from the time of the Saracens. Here is nothing remarkable, except a Roman sepulchre, and a large ruined castle.] —Bagster.

A. M. 3394.
B. C. 610.

w Zec. 12.11

z 2 Ch. 36.1,
&c.

y called Shalum.

1 Ch. 3.15.

Je. 22.11.

z 2 Ch. 36.1.

a c. 25.6.

Je. 54.27.

b or, because he reigned.

c set a mullet upon the land.

2 Ch. 36.3.

d Ge. 41.45.

2 Ch. 36.17.

Da. 1.7.

e Je. 22.11.

12.

Eze. 19.3.

f ver. 33.

A. M.

3394. 3405.

B. C.

610. 599.

a 2 Ch. 36.5.

&c.

b Je. 25.9.

32.29.

Eze. 19.8.

c by the hand of.

d Ex. 20.5.

c. 23.26.

e Dt. 19.10.

c. 21.16.

Je. 2.34.

19.4.

f Ps. 106.38.

g Eze. 33.25.

h Je. 22.18.

19.

i Je. 37.5,7.

j Je. 48.2.

k called Jehoiachin.

1 Ch. 3.16.

Je. 21.1.

and Coniah.

Je. 22.24.

28.

l Da. 1.1,2.

m came into siege.

n Je. 39.1,2.

o or, emuchs.

p c. 20.17.

q Je. 24.1.

2 And <sup>b</sup> the LORD sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by <sup>c</sup> his servants the prophets.

3 Surely at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, for <sup>d</sup> the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did;

4 And also for the innocent blood <sup>e</sup> that he shed: for <sup>f</sup> he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; which the LORD would not <sup>g</sup> pardon.

5 <sup>h</sup> Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

6 So <sup>i</sup> Jehoiakim slept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

7 <sup>j</sup> And <sup>k</sup> the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had <sup>l</sup> taken from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

8 <sup>m</sup> Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. And his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

10 <sup>n</sup> At <sup>o</sup> that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city <sup>p</sup> was besieged.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And <sup>q</sup> Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his <sup>r</sup> officers: and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

13 And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD <sup>s</sup> had said.

14 And <sup>t</sup> he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of Pharaoh-Nechoh, it seems, was at war with the king of Assyria, who was at this time at peace with Judah, and had, as we should suppose, from his reforms being carried into Samaria, shown him friendly countenance: Josiah, therefore, in his zeal for the king of Assyria, imprudently interferes, and is unhappily slain, just in the moment he had gained a victory over idolatry and its supporters.

Great was the mourning made on his account. It is called the mourning of Hadad-rimmon in the valley of Megiddo.—(Zech. xii. 11.) Jeremiah was the prophet who composed those pensive strains, and the singing men and women of the temple were the performers; but, alas! both poetry and music are now lost, and lost forever!

CHAP. XXIII., Ver. 31—37, and CHAP. XXIV. Josiah succeeded by Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, his sons. The former reigns three months, the latter eleven years. Jehoiachin, the son of Jehoiakim, reigns three months, and then is carried with CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Nebuchadnezzar.—[This prince, so famous in the writings of the prophets, was the son of Nabopolassar king of Babylon; who, being old and infirm, associated his son with him in the government, and sent him against Carchemish and the provinces which had revolted from him to Pharaoh-Nechoh.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Jehoiakim slept, &c.—[As Jehoiakim was "buried with the burial of an ass," the expression, "slept with his fathers," can only mean that he died without determining what became of either body or soul.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Eighteen years old.—[In the parallel place, he is said to be only eight years old; but this must be a mistake, for we find that having reigned only three months, he was carried captive to Babylon, and there had wives; and had he been of such a tender age, it could scarcely have been said that, as a king, "he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord."]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. All Jerusalem.—[That is, all the chief men, the nobles, and the artificers. Among these were 7000 mighty men, and 1000 craftsmen and smiths.]—Bagster.

valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land.

15 And he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might, even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

17 ¶ And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.

18 Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

19 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For through the anger of the Lord it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Jerusalem is besieged. 4 Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, his eyes put out. 8 Nebuzar-adan defaceth the city, carrieth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity, 13 spoileth and carrieth away the treasures. 12 The nobles are slain at Riblah. 22 Gedaliah, who was set over them that remained, being slain, the rest flee into Egypt. 27 Evil-merodach advanceth Jehoiachin in his court.

AND it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

3 And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.

4 ¶ And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden: (now the Chaldees were against the city round about:) and the king went the way toward the plain.

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him.

all the principal inhabitants to Babylon.—It is lamentable that so good a king as Josiah should have had such wicked successors; but the iniquity of Judah is now full as that of Israel had been 150 years before. The short and inglorious reign of Jehoahaz was closed by his being carried by Pharaoh-Nechoh into Egypt, where he died. Pharaoh then set up his brother Eliakim, and to remind him of his constant dependance upon him, changed his name to Jehoiakim. He did nothing worthy recording; but burdened the land with taxes, to gratify the king of Egypt. The king of Babylon, however, gained the ascendancy, and Jehoiakim became his servant for three years, and then rebelled against him, and involved himself in much trouble during the remainder of his days. A secular historian would have speculated on these rapid changes and calamitous events, but the sacred historian refers all to the great First Cause; "Surely, at the command of the Lord came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight for the sins of Manasseh, which the Lord would not pardon."

Ver. 16. Craftsmen and smiths.—Nadir Shah, after having taken Delhi, ordered eight hundred builders (masons, carpenters, and smiths) to go with him into Persia.

Ver. 17. His father's brother.—He was son of Josiah, and consequently brother to Jehoiakim. See 1 Ki. iii. 15.—Changed his name.—The change of name was to show Nebuchadnezzar's supremacy; and that Zedekiah was only his vassal or viceroy. The custom of changing names, we are assured by travellers, still exists in the East.—Bagster.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1. Ninth year.—[This, according to the computation of Archbp. Usher, was on Thursday, January 30th, A.M. 3414, which was a sabbatical year; wherein they proclaimed liberty to their servants according to the law, but soon enthrall'd them again. See Jer. xxxiv. 8–10.—Bagster.]

A. M.
3394. 3405.
B. C.
610. 599.
r c. 23. 12.

a or,
even in the city.
t Je. 37. 1.

A. M.
3405. 3416.
B. C.
599. 588.

u Je. 52. 1, & c
v c. 23. 31.

w 2 Ch. 36. 13
Eze. 17. 15.

A. M. 3414.
B. C. 590.

a 2 Ch. 36.
17. & c.
Je. 34. 2,
& c.
39. 1, & c.
32. 4, & c.
Eze. 26. 24,
& c.

A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.

b Eze. 12. 12.

c c. 23. 33.

d spoke judgment
upon him.

e made blind.

f Eze. 12. 13,
& c.

g or, chief marshal.

h 1 Ki. 9. 8.
Ps. 79. 1.
Is. 10. 11.

i Am. 2. 5.

j Ne. 1. 3.
Je. 52. 14,
& c.

k fallen
away.

l c. 24. 14.
Je. 40. 7.

m Je. 27. 19,
& c.
1 Ki. 7. 15
—57.

n Ex. 27. 3.

o 1 Ki. 7. 47,
59.

p the one.

q 1 Ki. 7. 15.

r 1 Ch. 6. 14.
Eze. 7. 1.

s Je. 21. 1.
29. 25, 29.

6 So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him.

7 And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, a captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem:

9 And he burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away.

12 But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vine-dressers and husbandmen.

13 ¶ And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon.

14 And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

15 And the firepans, and the bowls, and such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away.

16 The two pillars, a one sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the Lord; the brass of all these vessels was without weight.

17 The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass: and the height of the chapter three cubits; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass; and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.

18 ¶ And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the Jehoiakim was succeeded by his son Jehoiachin, or Jeco-niah; but after three years he was carried captive by the army of Nebuchadnezzar—himself, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers, and all the principal inhabitants, to the number of 10,000—these all surrendered to Nebuchadnezzar, and were carried captive into Babylon.

After this, Nebuchadnezzar made Mattaniah, another of Josiah's sons, king in Jerusalem, and changed his name to Zedekiah. Neither of his sons, however, appear to have possessed a particle of their father's virtues, much less his piety and zeal for true religion: but their rebellion against the king of Babylon was the immediate cause of their ruin, and sealed the fate of Judah and Jerusalem.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1–30. Nebuchadnezzar besieges Jerusalem, which is taken. Zedekiah carried captive, and the temple and city finally plundered.—Three times did Nebuchadnezzar besiege and plunder Jerusalem and the temple. 1. In the reign of Jehoiakim, when he "carried off the vessels of Ver. 7. Put out the eyes.—[Thus were fulfilled the apparently contradictory prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel; that his eyes should see the king of Babylon; but Babylon he should not see, though he should die there.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Fifth month.—[This answered to Wednesday, August 24; and three days after he reduced the temple to ashes, and carried Judah captive; in the 11th year of Zedekiah; the 19th of Nebuchadnezzar; the 1st of the 48th Olympiad; the 160th current year of Nabonassar; 424 years, 3 months, and 8 days, from the foundation of the temple; 468 years from the beginning of the reign of David; 388 years from the division of the ten tribes; and 134 years from their captivity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. The height of one, &c.—See note on 1 Ki. vii. 15.

second priest, and the three keepers of the door:

19 And out of the city he took an officer that was set over the men of war, and five men of them that were in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the principal scribe of the host, which mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land that were found in the city:

20 And Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard took these, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah:

21 And the king of Babylon smote them, and slew them at Riblah in the land of Hamath. So Judah was carried away out of their land.

22 ¶ And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

23 And when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Careah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

24 And Gedaliah sware to them, and to their

A. M. 3116.

B. C. 585.

t threshold.

u or, eunuch.

v saw the king's face.

Esa. 1. 14.

w or, scribe

of the captain of the host.

x Le. 26. 33.

De. 23. 35.

61.

c. 23. 27.

Eze. 12. 25.

c. 23.

24. 14.

y Je. 40. 5.

Ez. 1.

z Je. 41. 1, &amp;c.

a of the kingdom.

b Je. 43. 4, 7.

A. M. 3112.

B. C. 562.

c Je. 52. 31,

&amp;c.

d Je. 40. 13,

20.

e good things

with him.

f Da. 2. 37.

5. 18, 19.

g Is. 51. 3.

h 2 Sa. 9. 7.

i Ne. 11. 23.

Da. 1. 5.

Mal. 6. 11.

Ac. 6. 1.

men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon; and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah.

26 And all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt: for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison;

28 And he spake kindly to him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon;

29 And changed his prison garments: and he did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life.

30 And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.

the house of the Lord to Babylon," and put them in the temple of his god. (2 Chron. xxxvi. 7. Dan. v. 2.) These were the vessels that Belshazzar profaned, and Cyrus restored to Ezra. (Dan. v. 2. Ezra i. 2.) 2. Under Jehoiachin, when he took the rest of the golden vessels, and brake and cut them in pieces, as the Lord had said, (ver. 13.) And, 3. In the time of Zedekiah (as in this chapter, ver. 13.) when he burnt the temple and the palaces, took the brazen vessels, pillars, and every thing valuable, and left only the poor of the land to till the ground and dress the vines.

Long, indeed, and terrible, was the imprisonment of Jehoiachin; but, in the thirty-seventh year of his captivity, Nebuchadnezzar being dead, Evil-merodach, his son and successor, took pity on the exiled prince and liberated him: not only so, but he spake kindly to him, preferred him to all the other captive kings, and fed him at his own table all his remaining days.

By comparing this very concise account with the fuller narrative of Josephus, we learn that Pharaoh-Hophra hearing how Zedekiah was besieged, and alarmed for the safety of Egypt, if Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem, came and attacked the Chaldean army, which, upon this, raised the siege, and went to meet the Egyptians. At this juncture, Zedekiah and the military escape toward Jericho, where he was taken, and his army utterly dispersed. He was therefore taken before the king of Babylon, who gave judgment against him, and, according to the barbarity of those times, slew his sons, and having put out both his eyes, carried him captive into Babylon, where he died; and whither Jehoiachin had been carried long before.

Thus commenced the seventy years of the Babylonish captivity, in the year of the world (according to common computation) 3398, and 606 years before the Christian era. The completion of this period was accomplished in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, who then issued an edict for the restoration of the Jews to their own country, as we find in the first chapter of the book of Ezra, which continues the Jewish history. During this interval, though we have no continuous history, we shall find many important facts in the prophecies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and especially Daniel, which will connect these Chronicles with that book.

Ver. 13. Second priest.—[Called by the Jews sagan, who officiated for the high-priest in case of sickness, or any temporary incapacity. See note on ch. xxiii. 4.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Five men.—[In the parallel place of Jeremiah, it is said that he took seven who were men near the king's person: the same number is found in the Arabic in this place; while the Chaldee has no less than fifty; but in Jeremiah, this, as well as all the rest of the versions, reads seven. Probably they were no more than five at first; or, perhaps, Jeremiah reckoned with the five the officer that was set over the men of war, and the principal scribe of the host, mentioned here as two of the five: and thus made seven in the whole.]—B.

Ver. 23. Mizpah.—[There were several places of the name of Mizpah, or Mizpeh; and we do not certainly know which of them this was; but it is probable that it was that situated east of Jordan, in the mountains of Gilead, (Ge. xxxi. 49.) and most contiguous to Babylon; and therefore the most proper for the residence of Gedaliah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 27. Evil-merodach.—[This foolish and profligate prince was the son of Nebuchadnezzar; who, after having reigned two years at Babylon, became so intolerable on account of his vices, that even his relations conspired against him and put him to death; and it is supposed that Jehoiachin fell with him.]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE TWO BOOKS OF KINGS.

[THE events detailed in these books, though in themselves highly interesting and important, are described with great simplicity, but with much animation. The account of the wisdom, magnificence, and extended commerce of Solomon; the rash and impolitic conduct of Rehoboam; the disobedient prophet; the widow of Zarephath; Elijah and the prophets of Baal; Ben-hadad's pride and defeat; Elijah's assumption into heaven; Elisha's succession to his ministry, and the series of illustrious miracles he performed; the panic flight of the Syrians; the history of Ben-hadad and Hazael; and the predicted death of Ahab and Jezebel, and their children: are all pregnant with instruction, and have furnished themes for frequent dissertation. We perceive in these impressive histories the characters and qualities of men painted with the utmost fidelity; and the attributes of God displayed with great effect: we contemplate the exact accomplishment of God's promises and threatenings; the wisdom of his dispensations; and the mingled justice and mercy of his government. The particulars and circumstances are sketched out with a brief and lively description, and the imagination lingers with pleasure in filling up the striking outlines presented to our view. The authenticity of these books is attested by the prophecies they contain, which were subsequently fulfilled; by the citation of our Saviour and his Apostles; by their universal reception by the Jewish and Christian churches; and by the corresponding testimonies of profane authors, and ancient sculptures. Thus the narrative of the invasion of Israel by Shalmaneser, and the deportation of the ten tribes, is confirmed by ancient ancient sculptures on the mountains of Be-Sitoun, on the borders of the ancient Assyria. For the knowledge of these antiquities we are indebted to the persevering researches of Sir R. K. Porter. Again, the destruction of Sennacherib's army is confirmed by Herodotus, who calls the Assyrian king Sennacherib, as the Scriptures do; and that the time referred to in both is perfectly accordant. Another remarkable fact is confirmed by the same historian, and also by the researches of the late intrepid Belzoni—the defeat of Josiah by Pharaoh-Nechoh, and the subsequent reduction of Jerusalem, when "he took Jehoiachin away; and he came into Egypt, and died there." The account of Herodotus is as follows: "Now Necos was the son of Psammetichus, and reigned over Egypt.—And Necos joined battle with the Syrians, in Magdolis, and after the battle he took Cadytis, a large city of Syria. And having reigned in the whole sixteen years, he died, and left the throne to his son Psammetichus." Here it is evident that Magdolis is the same as Magdalo; and Cadytis, which he mentions again, "as a city belonging to the Syrians of Palestine," and "as a city not less than Sardis," is undoubtedly the same as Jerusalem, called Alkuds, or El Kuds, that is, the holy city, by the Syrians and Arabians, from time immemorial to the present day. We now turn to the researches of Belzoni in the tomb of Psammetichus, or Psammis, the son of Pharaoh-Nechoh. In one of the numerous apartments of this venerable monument of ancient art, there is a sculptured group, describing the march of a military and triumphal procession, with three different sorts of prisoners, who are evidently Jews, Ethiopians, and Persians. The procession begins with four red men with white kirtles, followed by a hawk-headed divinity: these are Egyptians apparently released from captivity, and returning home under the protection of the national deity. Then follow four white men in striped and fringed kirtles, with black beards, and with a simple white fillet round their black hair: these are obviously Jews, and might be taken for the portraits of those who, at this day, walk the streets of London. After them come three white men with smaller beards, and curled whiskers, with double-spreading plumes on their heads, tattooed, and wearing robes or mantles spotted like the skins of wild beasts: these are Persians or Chaldeans. Lastly, come four negroes, with large circular ear-rings, and large pectorals, supported by a belt over their shoulders: these are Ethiopians. Among the Hieroglyphics in Belzoni's drawings of this tomb, Dr. Young has succeeded in discovering the names of Nechoh, and of Psammetichus.]—Bagster.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THE two Books of Chronicles, (like those of Samuel and of the Kings,) were originally one, and are commonly attributed to Ezra; but with no certainty. They cannot be supposed to contain the whole of the public Chronicles of the kings of Judah and Israel, (so often referred to,) but rather an abstract, or extracts made under the eye of Ezra, or some other prophet, who lived after the captivity.

The Hebrew title is Dibreiy Hayamim, or "Words of the Day;" that is, Journals. The Greek calls them Paralipomenon, or "Things omitted;" considering them as supplementary to the preceding books, of which, as we shall see, they are chiefly repetitions. Our English name, Chronicles, or "Memorials of the Times," is at least equally proper with either of the preceding.

The first nine chapters are entirely genealogical, and in great part copied from the Book of Genesis; but with difference as to the names, partly owing to provincial variations in pronouncing, and partly to mistakes in copying the similar letters in the Hebrew, which are sometimes hard to be distinguished. But the far greater part of these Books consist of repetitions of the same facts, with only some slight additions and variety of circumstances, most of which, having been anticipated in our exposition of the Books of Samuel and Kings, will require, generally, only a few brief notes. The marginal readings and references will often illustrate texts, which would otherwise demand a separate note.

The Chronology of these books is nearly the same as that of the Books of Kings; beginning with David, and ending with the captivity in Babel, but the historical facts, after the division of the kingdom into Judah and Israel are confined chiefly to the former.

CHAPTER I.

Adam's line to Noah. 5 The sons of Japheth. 8 The sons of Ham. 17 The sons of Shem. 24 Shem's line to Abraham. 29 Ishmael's sons. 32 The sons of Keturah. 34 The posterity of Abraham by Esau. 43 The kings of Edom. 51 The dukes of Edom.

ADAM, <sup>a</sup> Sheth, Enosh, 2 Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered,
3 Henoch, Methuselah, Lamech,
4 Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.
5 ¶ The <sup>b</sup> sons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

6 And the sons of Gomer; Ashchenaz, and <sup>c</sup> Riphath, and Togarmah.

7 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and Tarshish, Kittim, and <sup>d</sup> Dodanim.

8 ¶ The sons of Ham; Cush, and Mizraim, Put, and Canaan.

9 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabta, and Raamah, and Sabtecha. And the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.

10 And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be mighty upon the earth.

11 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtulim, 12 And Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (of whom came the Philistines,) and <sup>e</sup> Caphtorim.

13 And Canaan begat Zidon his first-born, and Heth.

14 The Jebusite also, and the Amorite, and the Girgashite,

15 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

16 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite.

17 ¶ The sons of Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram, and Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and <sup>f</sup> Meshech.

18 And Arphaxad begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber.

19 And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of the one was <sup>g</sup> Peleg; because in his days the earth was divided: and his brother's name was Joktan.

20 And Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 21 Hadoram also, and Uzal, and Diklah,

22 And Ebal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

23 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab. All these were the sons of Joktan.

24 ¶ <sup>h</sup> Shem, Arphaxad, Shelah,

25 Eber, Peleg, Reu,

26 Serug, Nahor, Terah,

27 <sup>i</sup> Abram; the same is Abraham.

28 The sons of Abraham; <sup>j</sup> Isaac, and <sup>k</sup> Ishmael.

29 ¶ These are their generations: The first-born <sup>l</sup> of Ishmael, Nebaioth; then Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam,

A. M. 1.

B. C. 4004.

a Ge. 1.25,26.

5,3,9.

b Ge. 10.2.

&c.

c or, Di-

phat,

as it is in some copies.

d or, Roda-nim, according to some copies.

e De. 2.23.

A. M. 1653.

B. C. 2246.

f or, Mash,

Ge. 10.23.

g i.e., Division.

Ge. 10.25.

h Ge. 11.10.

&c.

i Ge. 17.5.

j Ge. 21.2,3.

k Ge. 16.11.

15.

l Ge. 25.13.

16.

m or, Ha-

dar,

Ge. 25.15.

n Ge. 25.1.

&c.

A. M. 2108.

B. C. 1596.

o Ge. 21.2,3.

p Ge. 25.23.

26.

q Ge. 36.9.

&c.

r or, Zepho,

Ge. 36.11.

s or, Heman,

Ge. 36.22.

t or, Alban,

Ge. 36.23.

u or, Shepho,

Ge. 36.23.

v or, Hem-

dan,

Ge. 36.23.

w or,

Achan,

Ge. 36.27.

A. M. cir.

2387, &c.

B. C. cir.

1617, &c.

x or, Hadar,

Ge. 36.39.

y or, Pau,

Ge. 36.39.

30 Mishma, and Dumah, Massa, <sup>m</sup> Hadad, and Tema, 31 Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah. These are the sons of Ishmael.

32 ¶ Now the sons of <sup>n</sup> Keturah, Abraham's concubine: she bare Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah. And the sons of Jokshan; Sheba, and Dedan.

33 And the sons of Midian: Ephah, and Ephra, and Henoch, and Abida, and Eldaah. All these are the sons of Keturah.

34 ¶ And <sup>o</sup> Abraham begat Isaac. The sons of <sup>p</sup> Isaac; Esau, and Israel.

35 The <sup>q</sup> sons of Esau; Eliphaz, Reuel, and Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

36 The sons of Eliphaz; Teman, and Omar, <sup>r</sup> Zephi, and Gatam, Kenaz, and Timna, and Amalek.

37 The sons of Reuel; Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah.

38 ¶ And the sons of Seir; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, and Dishon, and Ezar, and Dishan.

39 And the sons of Lotan; Hori, and <sup>s</sup> Homam: and Timna was Lotan's sister.

40 The sons of Shobal; <sup>t</sup> Alian, and Manahath, and Ebal, <sup>u</sup> Shephai, and Onam. And the sons of Zibeon; Aiah, and Anah.

41 The sons of Anah; Dishon. And the sons of Dishon; <sup>v</sup> Amram, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

42 The sons of Ezer; Bilhan, and Zavan, and <sup>w</sup> Jakan. The sons of Dishan; Uz, and Aran.

43 ¶ Now these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel; Bela the son of Beor; and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

44 And when Bela was dead, Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead.

45 And when Jobab was dead, Husham of the land of the Temanites reigned in his stead.

46 And when Husham was dead, Hadad the son of Bedad, which smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

47 And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

48 And when Samlah was dead, Shaul o, Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead.

49 And when Shaul was dead, Baal-hanan, the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

50 And when Baal-hanan was dead, <sup>x</sup> Hadad reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was <sup>y</sup> Pai; and his wife's name was Meheta.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Adam, Sheth, Enosh.—The genealogy of this chapter is taken from the book of Genesis, as follows: Ver. 1 to 4, from Gen. v. 1, &c.; ver. 5 to 23, from Gen. x.; ver. 24 to 28, from Gen. xi. 10, &c.

Ver. 6. Riphat.—The Heb. letters Reph and Daleth (R and D) are so very similar as to occasion many mistakes; thus in ver. 2, Dodanim for Rodanim, and in ver. 30, Hadad for Hadar, &c.

Ver. 7. Kittim.—(These, and other words ending in im, forming the Hebrew plural, are not the names of individuals, but of nations.)—Bagster.

Ver. 17. And Aram.—LXX. and one MS. add, "And the sons of Aram, Uz," &c.

Ver. 24. Shem.—[That is, Shem was the father of Arphaxad; Arphaxad, the father of Shelah; Shelah, the father of Peleg, and so on; as in ver. 1 Adam the father of Sheth; Sheth the father of Enosh, &c.]—Bagster.

Ver. 38. Timna.—[Here, according to our present text, Timna is reckoned among the sons of Eliphaz; but it appears from the parallel passage of Gen. that she was the concubine of Eliphaz, and mother of Amalek. Agreeably to this, the Arabic, and the Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint, read here "Timna also, who was the concubine of Eliphaz, bare him Amalek."—Bagster.

bel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

51 ¶ Hadad died also. And the dukes of Edom were; duke Timnah, duke * Aliah, duke Jetheth, 52 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon, 53 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar, 54 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram. These are the dukes of Edom.

CHAPTER. II.

<sup>1</sup> The sons of Israel. <sup>3</sup> The posterity of Judah by Tamar. <sup>15</sup> The children of Jesse. <sup>18</sup> The posterity of Caleb the son of Hezron. <sup>21</sup> Hezron's posterity by the daughter of Machir. <sup>25</sup> Jerahmeel's posterity. <sup>34</sup> Sheshan's posterity. <sup>42</sup> Another branch of Caleb's posterity. <sup>50</sup> The posterity of Caleb the son of Hur.

THESE are the sons of <sup>a</sup> Israel; <sup>b</sup> Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun, 2 Dan, Joseph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

3 ¶ The sons of <sup>c</sup> Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah: which three were born unto him of the daughter of Shua the Canaanitess. And Er, the first-born of Judah, was evil in the sight of the LORD; and he slew him.

4 And <sup>d</sup> Tamar his daughter-in-law bare him Pharez and Zerah. All the sons of Judah were five.

5 The sons of <sup>e</sup> Pharez; Hezron, and Hamul.

6 And the sons of Zerah; <sup>f</sup> Zimri, and Ethan, and Heman, and Calcol, and <sup>g</sup> Dara: five of them in all.

7 And the sons of Carmi; <sup>h</sup> Achar, the troubler <sup>i</sup> of Israel, who transgressed in the thing accused.

8 And the sons of Ethan; Azariah.

9 The sons also of Hezron, that were born unto him; Jerahmeel, and <sup>j</sup> Ram, and <sup>k</sup> Chetubai.

10 And Ram <sup>l</sup> begat Amminadab; and Amminadab begat Nahshon, <sup>m</sup> prince of the children of Judah;

11 And Nahshon begat <sup>n</sup> Salma, and Salma begat Boaz, 12 And Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse,

13 ¶ And <sup>o</sup> Jesse begat his first-born Eliab, and Abinadab the second, and <sup>p</sup> Shimma the third,

14 Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth,

15 Ozem the sixth, David the seventh:

16 Whose sisters were Zeruiah, and Abigail. And <sup>q</sup> the sons of Zeruiah; Abishai, and Joab, and Asahel, three.

17 And Abigail bare <sup>r</sup> Amasa: and the father of Amasa was <sup>s</sup> Jether the Ishmaelite.

18 ¶ And Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife, and of Jerioth: her sons are these; Jeshier, and Shobab, and Ardon.

19 And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him <sup>t</sup> Ephrath, which bare him Hur.

20 And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat <sup>u</sup> Bezaleel.

21 ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of Machir <sup>v</sup> the father of Gilead, whom he <sup>w</sup> married when he was threescore years old; and she bare him Segub.

A. M. cir.
2387, &c.
B. C. cir.
1017, &c.

z or, Aluah.

A. M. 2252.
B. C. 1752.

a or, Jacob.

b Ge. 29.32.
&c.
30.5, &c.
35.18, &c.
46.8, &c.

c Ge. 38.3,
&c.
46.12.
Nu. 26.19.

d Ge. 38.29, 30.
Mat. 1.3.

e Ge. 46.12.
Ru. 4.18.

f or, Zabdai.
Jos. 7.1.

g or, Darda.

h or, Achan.

i Jos. 6.18.
7.1.25.

j or, Aram.
Mat. 1.3,4.

k or, Caleb.
ver. 18,42.

l Ru. 4.19, 20.

m Nu. 1.7.

n or, Salmon.
Ru. 4.21.

o 1 Sa. 16.6,
&c.

p or, Sham-
mah.
1 Sa. 16.9.

q 2 Sa. 2.18.

r 2 Sa. 17.25.

s 2 Sa. 17.25.
Ithra, an Israelite.

A. M.
2387, &c.
B. C.
1470, &c.

t ver. 50.

u Ex. 31.2.

v Nu. 27.1.

w took.

—

x Nu. 32.41.
De. 3.14.
Jos. 13.30.

y c. 4.5.

z ver. 34,35.

A. M.
2454, &c.
B. C.
1550, &c.

a c. 11.41.

b ver. 9.

22 And Segub begat Jair, who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead.

23 And <sup>x</sup> he took Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even threescore cities. All these belonged to the sons of Machir, the father of Gilead.

24 And after that Hezron was dead in Calebephratah, then Abiah Hezron's wife bare him Ashur <sup>y</sup> the father of Tekoa.

25 ¶ And the sons of Jerahmeel the first-born of Hezron were, Ram the first-born, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah.

26 Jerahmeel had also another wife, whose name was Atarah; she was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of Ram the first-born of Jerahmeel were, Maaz, and Jamin, and Eker.

28 And the sons of Onam were, Shammai, and Jada. And the sons of Shammai; Nadab, and Abishur.

29 And the name of the wife of Abishur was Abihail, and she bare him Ahban, and Molid.

30 And the sons of Nadab; Seled, and Appaim: but Seled died without children.

31 And the sons of Appaim; Ishi. And the sons of Ishi; Sheshan. And the children of <sup>z</sup> Sheshan; Ahlai.

32 And the sons of Jada the brother of Shammai; Jether, and Jonathan: and Jether died without children.

33 And the sons of Jonathan; Peleth, and Zaza. These were the sons of Jerahmeel.

34 ¶ Now Sheshan had no sons, but daughters. And Sheshan had a servant, an Egyptian, whose name was Jarha.

35 And Sheshan gave his daughter to Jarha his servant to wife; and she bare him Attai.

36 And Attai begat Nathan, and Nathan begat <sup>a</sup> Zabad,

37 And Zabad begat Ephlal, and Ephlal begat Obed,

38 And Obed begat Jehu, and Jehu begat Azariah,

39 And Azariah begat Helez, and Helez begat Eleasah,

40 And Eleasah begat Sisamai, and Sisamai begat Shallum, 41 And Shallum begat Jekamiah, and Jekamiah begat Elishama.

42 ¶ Now the sons of <sup>b</sup> Caleb the brother of Jerahmeel were, Mesha his first-born, which was the father of Ziph; and the sons of Mareshah the father of Hebron.

43 And the sons of Hebron; Korah, and Tappuah, and Rekem, and Shema.

44 And Shema begat Raham, the father of Jorkoam: and Rekem begat Shammai.

45 And the son of Shammai was Maon; and Maon was the father of Beth-zur.

46 And Ephah, Caleb's concubine, bare Haran, and Moza, and Gazez: and Haran begat Gazez.

47 And the sons of Jahdai; Regem, and Jotham, and Gesham, and Pelet, and Ephah, and Shaaph.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. The sons of Israel.—See Gen. xxix. and following chapters.

Ver. 6. Zimri.—[Zibdi is apparently here called Zimri, in consequence of a bath being mistal en for a mem, and a daleth for a raish.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. David the seventh.—[It appears from the parallel places of Samuel, that Jesse had eight sons, of whom David was the eighth and youngest; but it is probable that one died before David came to the throne, and therefore was not reckoned in this genealogy.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Jether.—[Jether is essentially the same with Ithra, the latter only having the addition of an aleph; and it is probable that he was an Ishmaelite by birth, but an Israelite by religion.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Caleb.—[Caleb is the same as Chetubai, the latter simply having a tau inserted, and a good affixed. This person must have lived some time before Israel left Egypt; for Bezaleel, the principal person employed in constructing the tabernacle, was his grandson.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Kenath.—[Kenath was situated in the tribe of Manasseh, east of Jordan. Eusebius says it was called in his time Kanatha; and was a town in the Trachonitis, near Bozra. Josephus places it in Colosynia; and Pliny reckons it among the cities of the Decapolis. It was also called Nobah, after Nobah an Israelite, who conquered it; which is placed by Eusebius, 8 miles south of Heshbon.]—Bagster.

Ver. 34. Sheshan.—[When the people of the East have no sons, they frequently marry their daughters to their slaves, even when they have much property to bestow on them. Hassan had been the slave of Kamel, his predecessor; but Kamel, according to the custom of the country, gave him one of his daughters in marriage, and left him at his death one part of the great riches which he had amassed in the course of a long and prosperous life.]—Maillet,—Bagster.

Ver. 45. Beth-zur.—[Beth-zur was situated in the tribe of Judah, twenty miles south from Jerusalem, towards Hebron, according to Eusebius. It was fortified by Rehoboam, (2 Ch. xi. 7.) and was a fortress of great consequence, principally in the time of the Maccabees.]—Bagster.

48 Maachah, Caleb's concubine, bare Shesher, and Tirhanah.

49 She bare also Shaaph the father of Madmannah, Sheva the father of Machbenah, and the father of Gibeā: and the daughter of Caleb was Achsa.

50 ¶ These were the sons of Caleb the son of Hur, the first-born of Ephratah; Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim.

51 Salma the father of Beth-lehem, Hareph the father of Beth-gader.

52 And Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim had sons; Haroeh, and half of the Manahethites.

53 And the families of Kirjath-jearim; the Ithrites, and the Puhites, and the Shumathites, and the Mishraites; of them came the Zerahites, and the Eshtaulites.

54 The sons of Salma; Beth-lehem, and the Netophathites, Ataroth, the house of Joab, and half of the Manahethites, the Zorites.

55 And the families of the scribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, and Suchathites. These are the Kenites that came of Hemath, the father of the house of Rechab.

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of David. 10 His line to Zedekiah. 17 The successors of Jeconiah.

NOW were the sons of David, which were born unto him in Hebron; the first-born Amnon, of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess; the second, Daniel, of Abigail the Carmelitess:

2 The third, Absalom the son of Maachah the daughter of Talmi king of Geshur: the fourth, Adonijah the son of Haggith:

3 The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital: the sixth, Ithream by Egla his wife.

4 These six were born unto him in Hebron; and there he reigned seven years and six months: and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years.

5 And these were born unto him in Jerusalem; Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, four, of Bathshua the daughter of Ammiel:

6 Ithar also, and Elishama, and Eliphelet,

7 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

8 And Elishama, and Eliada, and Eliphelet, nine.

9 These were all the sons of David, beside the sons of the concubines, and Tamar their sister.

10 ¶ And Solomon's son was Rehoboam,

Abia his son, Asa his son, Jehoshaphat his son,

11 Joram his son, Ahaziah his son, Joash his son,

12 Amaziah his son, Azariah his son, Jotham his son,

13 Ahaz his son, Hezekiah his son, Manasseh his son,

A. M.

2531, &c.

B. C.

1470, &c.

c Jos. 15. 17.

d or, Ephraim.

ver. 19.

e or, Reaiah.

c. 12.

f or, half of the Mer-nuchites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

hannethites, or, Hasi-

14 Amon his son, Josiah his son.

15 And the sons of Josiah were, the first-born Johanan, the second Jehoiakim, the third Zedekiah, the fourth Shallum.

16 And the sons of Jehoiakim: Jeconiah his son, Zedekiah his son.

17 ¶ And the sons of Jeconiah; Assir, and Sathiel his son, 18 Malchiram also, and Pedaiiah, and She-nazar, Jecamiah, Hoshama, and Nedabiah.

19 And the sons of Pedaiiah were, Zerubbabel, and Shimei: and the sons of Zerubbabel; Meshullam, and Hananiah, and Shelomith their sister:

20 And Hashubah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Hasadiah, Jushab-hesed, five.

21 And the sons of Hananiah; Pelatiah, and Jesaiah: the sons of Rephaiah, the sons of Arnan, the sons of Obadiah, the sons of Shechaniah.

22 And the sons of Shechaniah; Shemaiah: and the sons of Shemaiah; Hattush, and Igeal, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphat, six.

23 And the sons of Neariah; Elioenai, and Hezekiah, and Azrikam, three.

24 And the sons of Elioenai were, Hodaiah, and Eliashib, and Pelaiah, and Akkub, and Johanan, and Dalaiah, and Anani, seven.

CHAPTER IV.

1, 11 The posterity of Judah by Caleb the son of Hur. 5 Of Ashur the posthumous son of Hezron. 9 Of Jabez, and his prayer. 21 The posterity of Shelaiah. 24 The posterity and cities of Simeon. 39 Their conquest of Gedor, and of the Amalekites in mount Seir.

THE sons of Judah; Pharez, Hezron, and Carmi, and Hur, and Shobal.

2 And Reaiah the son of Shobal begat Jahath; and Jahath begat Ahumai, and Lahad. These are the families of the Zorathites.

3 And these were of the father of Etam; Jezreel, and Ishma, and Idbash: and the name of their sister was Hazel-poni:

4 And Penuel the father of Gedor, and Ezer the father of Hushah. These are the sons of Hur, the first-born of Ephratah, the father of Beth-lehem.

5 ¶ And Ashur the father of Tekoa had two wives, Helah and Naarah.

6 And Naarah bare him Ahuzam, and Hephher, and Temeni, and Haahashtari. These were the sons of Naarah.

7 And the sons of Helah were, Zereth, and Jezoar, and Ethnan.

8 And Coz begat Anub, and Zobebah, and the families of Aharhel the son of Harum.

9 ¶ And Jabez was more honourable than his brethren: and his mother called his name Jabez, saying, Because I bare him with sorrow.

10 And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thy hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me! And God granted him that which he requested.

Ver. 49. Madmannah.—[Madmannah was a city situated in the southern part of Judah, and towards Gaza, according to Eusebius.—Gibeā.—It is probable, this was not Gibeah of Benjamin, and the royal residence of Saul; but Gibeah in the tribe of Judah, to which tribe all these other cities belonged.]—Bagster.

Ver. 52. Harosh.—[As Harosh and Reaiah have nearly the same signification, it is probable they were deemed perfectly interchangeable, and indifferently applied.]—Bagster.

Ver. 54. Ataroth.—[Margin, "Asarites," (crowns of the house of Joab.) See Josh. xvi. 2.]

In this chapter, (says Dr. Clarke), many names of cities are given as the names of men.

CHAP. III.—Compare the nine first verses with 2 Sam. iii. 1—6.

Ver. 1. Daniel.—[It is probable this person had two names. The Targumist says, he was "called Childeab, because he was in every respect like his father."]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Shallum.—[The Targumist says he was called Shallum, "because the kingdom departed from the house of David in his days."]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Zedekiah his son.—The word "son," is here used, probably, in the sense of successor—so perhaps ver. 17, and elsewhere. See Jer. xxii. 30.

11 ¶ And Chelub the brother of Shuah begat Mehir, which was the father of Eshton.

12 And Eshton begat Beth-rapha, and Pa-seah, and Tehinnah the father of <sup>a</sup> Irnahash. These are the men of Rechah.

13 And the sons of Kenaz; Othniel, and Seraiah: and the sons of Othniel; <sup>1</sup> Hathath.

14 And Meonothai begat Ophrah: and Seraiah begat Joab, the father of the valley of <sup>a</sup> Charashim; for <sup>1</sup> they were craftsmen.

15 And the sons of Caleb the son of Jephunneh; Iru, Elah, and Naam: and the sons of Elah, <sup>m</sup> even Kenaz.

16 And the sons of Jehaleleel; Ziph, and Ziphah, Tiria, and Asareel.

17 And the sons of Ezra were, Jether, and Mered, and Ephraim, and Jalon: and she bare Miriam, and Shammai, and Ishbah the father of Eshtemoa.

18 And his wife <sup>a</sup> Jehudijah bare Jered the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of Socho, and Jekuthiel the father of Zanoah. And these are the sons of Bithiah the daughter of Pharaoh, which Mered took.

19 And the sons of <sup>his</sup> wife <sup>a</sup> Hodiah the sister of Naham, the father of Keilah the Garmite, and Eshtemoa the Maachathite.

20 And the sons of Shimon were, Amnon, and Rinnah, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the sons of Ishi were, Zoheth, and Ben-zoheth.

21 ¶ The sons of Shelah the son of Judah were, Er the father of Lecah, and Laadah the father of Mareshah, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen, of the house of Ashbea, 22 And Jokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Joash, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jashubi-ilehem. And these are ancient times.

23 These were the potters, and those that dwelt among plants and hedges: there they dwelt with the king for his work.

24 ¶ The sons of Simeon were, <sup>a</sup> Nemuel, and Jamin, <sup>a</sup> Jarib, Zerah, and Shaul:

25 Shallum his son, Mibsam his son, Mishma his son.

26 And the sons of Mishma; Hamuel his son, Zacchur his son, Shimei his son.

27 And Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters; but his brethren had not many children, neither did all their family multiply, <sup>a</sup> like to the children of Judah.

28 And they dwelt at Beer-sheba, and Moladah, and Hazar-shual, 29 And at <sup>a</sup> Bilhah, and at Ezem, and at <sup>a</sup> Tolad,

30 And at Bethuel, and at Hormah, and at Ziklag,

31 And at Beth-marcaboth, and <sup>a</sup> Hazar-susim, and at Beth-birei, and at Shaaraim. These were their cities unto the reign of David.

32 And their villages were, <sup>a</sup> Etam, and Ain, Rimmon, and Tochen, and Ashan, five cities:

A. M.
2504, &c.
B. C.
1500, &c.

h or, the city of Nahash.

i or,
Hathath, and Meonathai,
who begat

j or, inhabitants of the valley.

k That is,
craftsmen.

l Ne. 11.35.
m or,
Uthaz.

n or, the Jewess.

o or, Jehudijah,
mentioned before.

p or,
Jemuel.
Ge. 46.10.
Ex. 6.15.
Nu. 26.12.

q or,
Jechin,
Zohar.

r unto.

s or,
Shelah.
Jos. 19.3.

t or,
Ellolad.
Jos. 19.4.

u or, Ha-
zar-susim.
Jos. 19.5.

v or, Ether.
Jos. 19.7.

w or, Baal-
athbeth.
Jos. 19.8.

x or, as they divided themselves by nations
among them.

A. M. 3289.
B. C. 715.
y coming.

z 2 Ki. 18.8,
&c.

a Nu. 32.1-4.
b Ex. 17.16.
De. 25.17,
19.

c 1 Sa. 15.8.
30.17.
2 Sa. 8.12.

A. M.
2294, &c.
C.
1710, &c.

a Ge. 29.32.
b Ge. 35.22.
c Ge. 43.15.

d Ge. 49.8, 10.
Ps. 60.7.
Mt. 5.2.
He. 7.14.

e or, prince.

f Ge. 46.9.
Ex. 6.14.
Nu. 26.5.

g or, Tig-lath-pi-
neser.
2 Ki. 15.29.
16.7.

h or, She-
maiah.
ver. 4.

i Jos. 13.16.

33 And all their villages that were round about the same cities, unto <sup>a</sup> Baal. These were their habitations, and <sup>a</sup> their genealogy.

34 And Meshobab, and Jamlech, and Joshah the son of Amaziah,

35 And Joel, and Jehu the son of Josibiah, the son of Seraiah, the son of Asiel,

36 And Elieonai, and Jaakobah, and Jeshohaiah, and Asaiah, and Adiel, and Jesimiel, and Benaiah, 37 And Ziza the son of Shiphi, the son of Allon, the son of Jedaiah, the son of Shimri, the son of Shemaiah;

38 These <sup>a</sup> mentioned by their names were princes in their families: and the house of their fathers increased greatly.

39 ¶ And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the east side of the valley to seek pasture for their flocks.

40 And they found fat pasture and good, and the land was wide, and quiet, and peaceable; for they of Ham had dwelt there of old.

41 And these written by name came in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and smote <sup>a</sup> their tents, and the habitations that were found there, and destroyed them utterly unto this day, and dwelt in their rooms: because there was pasture <sup>a</sup> there for their flocks.

42 And some of them, even of the sons of Simeon, five hundred men, went to mount Seir, having for their captains Pelatiah, and Neariah, and Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi.

43 And they smote the rest of the Amalekites <sup>b</sup> that were escaped, and dwelt there unto this day.

CHAPTER V.

<sup>1</sup> The line of Reuben (who lost his birthright) under the captivity. <sup>9</sup> Their habitation and conquest of the Hagrites. <sup>11</sup> The chief men and habitations of Gad. <sup>13</sup> The number and conquest of Reuben, Gad, and the half of Manasseh. <sup>23</sup> The habitations and chief men of that half tribe. <sup>25</sup> Their captivity for their sin.

NOW the sons of Reuben the first-born of Israel, (for <sup>a</sup> he was the first-born; but, forasmuch as he <sup>b</sup> defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given <sup>c</sup> unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel: and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright.

2 For Judah <sup>d</sup> prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief <sup>e</sup> ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's:)

3 The <sup>f</sup> sons, I say, of Reuben the first-born of Israel were, Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi.

4 The sons of Joel; Shemaiah his son, Gog his son, Shimei his son,

5 Micah his son, Reaia his son, Baal his son,

6 Beerah his son, whom <sup>a</sup> Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria carried away captive: he was prince of the Reubenites.

7 And his brethren by their families, when the genealogy of their generations was reckoned, were the chief, Jeiel, and Zechariah,

8 And Bela the son of Azaz, the son of <sup>b</sup> Shema, the son of Joel, who dwelt in <sup>1</sup> Aroer, even unto Nebo and Baal-meon:

9 And eastward he inhabited unto the enter-

Ver. 15. Caleb.—See Numb. xiii. 6, 30.; xiv. 6.
Ver. 17. Ezra.—See Numb. xiii. 6, 30.; xiv. 6. In verse 16. —She bare Miriam.—It is probable that the latter part of ver. 13 should be transposed before this passage, which Michaelis thinks its right place: for otherwise we have the pronoun she without an antecedent, and children born without their father being mentioned.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Gedor.—(Gedor was a city in the tribe of Judah: and probably the name which Eusebius calls Kedous, and Jerome, Gedrus, 10 miles from Diospolis or Lydda, towards Eleutheropolis.)—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Shimon.—(Shimon is supposed to have been another son of Mered, by Jehudijah. As this latter name signifies a Jewess, it rather favours the opinion that Bithiah was not a Jewess, but an Egyptian.)—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Shelah.—Gen. xxxviii. 1-5. —Mareshah.—(Mareshah was a city of Judah, situated two miles from Eleutheropolis, according to Eusebius, in whose time it was deserted. In the latter times of the Jewish commonwealth it be- longed to the Idumeans; was peopled by the Jews and their allies in the time of John Hyrcanus, was taken from the Arabians by king Alexander Jannæus; re- stored to its first inhabitants by Pompey; rebuilt by Gabinius; and destroyed by the Parthians, in the war of Antigonos against Herod.)—Josephus.—Bagster.

Ver. 24. Sons of Simeon.—See Gen. xlii. 10.

Ver. 28. Beer-sheba.—See Josh. xix. 2, &c. [Beer-sheba was situated 20 miles south of Hebron, according to Eusebius and Jerome, in whose time it was occupied by a Roman garrison.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Unto the reign of David.—David added some cities to the tribe of Judah, Ziklag for instance, 1 Sam. xxvii. 8, and probably others.

Ver. 41. In the days of Hezekiah.—See 2 Kings xviii. 8. [This expedition of the Simeonites took place in the days of Hezekiah; and, as Cabnet conjectures, near the time of the captivity of the ten tribes, when the remnant of Simeon would feel themselves obliged to retire more southward into Arabia Petrea, for fear of the Jews, and to seek pasture for their flocks.]—Bagster.

Ver. 43. Rest of the Amalekites.—Who had escaped from Saul, 1 Sam. xiv 48, and from David, 2 Sam. viii. 12.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. The sons of Reuben.—See Gen. xxix. 32.; xlix. 10.

Ver. 2. Chief ruler.—[By the chief ruler is meant, first David, and after him the Messiah, agreeably to the celebrated prophecy of Jacob. The Syrian calls him, "Christ the king," and the Arabic, "Messiah the king."]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Pilneser.—[After their separation from the house of David, the ten tribes continued to have princes of the tribes, till the time that Tiglath-pilneser ing in of the wilderness from the river Euphrates: because their cattle were multiplied in the land of <sup>1</sup> Gilead.

10 And in the days of Saul they made war with the <sup>k</sup> Hagarites, who fell by their hand: and they dwelt in their tents <sup>1</sup> throughout all the east land of Gilead.

11 ¶ And the children of Gad dwelt over against them, in the land of Bashan, unto Salcah:

12 Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaanai, and Shaphat in <sup>m</sup> Bashan.

13 And their brethren of the house of their fathers were, Michael, and Meshullam, and Sheba, and Jorai, and Jachan, and Zia, and Heber, seven.

14 These are the children of Abihail the son of Huri, the son of Jaroah, the son of Gilead, the son of Michael, the son of Jeshishai, the son of Jahdo, the son of Buz;

15 Ahi the son of Abdiel, the son of Guni, chief of the house of their fathers.

16 And they dwelt in Gilead in Bashan, and in her towns, and in all the suburbs of <sup>n</sup> Sharon, upon their <sup>o</sup> borders.

17 All these were reckoned by genealogies in the days of <sup>p</sup> Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam <sup>q</sup> king of Israel.

18 ¶ The sons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, <sup>r</sup> of valiant men, men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out to the war.

19 And <sup>s</sup> they made war with the Hagarites, with Jetur, and Nephish, and Nodab.

20 And <sup>t</sup> they were helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: for they <sup>u</sup> cried to God in the battle, and he was entreated of them; because <sup>v</sup> they put their trust in him.

21 And they <sup>w</sup> took away their cattle; of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of <sup>x</sup> men a hundred thousand.

22 For there fell down many slain, because <sup>y</sup> the war was of God. And they dwelt in their steads until the <sup>z</sup> captivity.

23 ¶ And the children of the half tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land: they increased from Bashan unto Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount Hermon.

24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Ephraim, and Ishi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, <sup>a</sup> famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers.

25 ¶ And <sup>b</sup> they transgressed against the God of their fathers, and went a whoring after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them.

26 And <sup>c</sup> the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of Pul king of Assyria, and the spirit of Tilgath-Pilneser king of Assyria, and he carried them away, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and brought them unto <sup>d</sup> Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan, unto this day

CHAPTER VI.

<sup>1</sup> The sons of Levi. <sup>4</sup> The line of the priests unto the captivity. <sup>16</sup> The families of Gershon, Merari, and Kohath. <sup>49</sup> The office of Aaron, and his line unto Ahimae. <sup>54</sup> The cities of the priests and Levites.

THE <sup>a</sup> sons of Levi; <sup>b</sup> Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

2 And the sons of Kohath; Amram, <sup>c</sup> Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel.

3 And the children of Amram; Aaron, and Moses, and Miriam. The sons also of Aaron; <sup>d</sup> Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

4 ¶ Eleazar begat <sup>e</sup> Phinehas, Phinehas begat Abishua,

5 And Abishua begat Bukki, and Bukki begat Uzzi,

6 And Uzzi begat Zerachiah, and Zerachiah begat Meraioth,

7 Meraioth begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub,

8 And <sup>f</sup> Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat Ahimaaz,

9 And Ahimaaz begat Azariah, and Azari begat Johanan,

10 And Johanan begat Azariah, (he it is that executed the priest's office in the <sup>g</sup> temple that Solomon built in Jerusalem:)

11 And Azariah begat <sup>h</sup> Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub, 12 And Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat Shallum,

13 And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, 14 And Azariah begat <sup>i</sup> Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Jehozadak, 15 And Jehozadak went into captivity, when the Lord carried away Judah and Jerusalem by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar.

16 ¶ The sons of Levi; <sup>m</sup> Gershom, Kohath, and Merari.

17 And these be the names of the sons of Gershom; Libni, and Shimei.

18 And the sons of Kohath were, Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel.

19 The sons of Merari; Mahli, and Mushi. And these are the families of the Levites according to their fathers.

20 ¶ Of Gershom; Libni <sup>h</sup> his son, Jehath his son, Zimma his son, 21 <sup>n</sup> Joah his son, <sup>o</sup> Iddo his son, Zerah his son, <sup>p</sup> Jeaterai his son.

22 ¶ The sons of Kohath; <sup>q</sup> Amminadab his son, Korah his son, Assir his son, 23 Elkanah his son, and Ebiasaph his son, and Assir his son, 24 Tahath his son, <sup>r</sup> Uriel his son, Uzziel his son, and Shaul his son.

25 And the sons of Elkanah; Amasai, and Ahimoth.

26 As for Elkanah: the sons of Elkanah <sup>s</sup> Zophai his son, and <sup>t</sup> Nahath his son, carried them captive; at which time Beera, who according to the Targum was the same as Baruch, was their prince. 2 Kings xv. 29. — Bagster.

Ver. 11. Gad.—[The Gadites and the half tribe of Manasseh are joined to the genealogy of Reuben, because they inhabited the same country, and formed a sort of separate colony east of Jordan.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Sharon.—[There were three places of this name in Palestine; which was almost proverbial, to express a place of extraordinary beauty and fertility. There was a district of Sharon between mount Tabor and the sea of Tiberias, mentioned by Eusebius and Jerome; another, which lay between Casarea of Palestine and Joppa, celebrated by the Jewish Rabbins for its wines; and that mentioned here, which must have been east of Jordan, in the country of Bashan, because inhabited by the Gadites.]—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Camels.—[The camel, in Hebrew gamal, retained with little variation in all languages, is, according to the Linnæan system, a genus of quadrupeds of the order pecora; comprehending the camel, properly so called, with two promiscuous; the dromedary with a single one; the glama, or Persian camel, with the back even and breast gibbous; and the pacos, or camel without any gibbosity. The camel, properly so called, is about 6-1-2 feet in height: its head is small; ears short; neck long, slender, and bending; legs long and slender, having four callosities on the fore legs and two on the hinder, on which it rests; feet soft, parted, but not thoroughly divided; bottom of the foot tough and plant; tail about two feet in length, terminating in a tuft; and hair fine, soft, of considerable length, and of a dusky reddish colour. Besides the same internal structure as other ruminating animals, it is furnished with an additional bag for containing a quantity of water till wanted.]—B.

Ver. 26. Pul, &c.—[See 2 Kings xv. 19, 29. xvi. 6. xviii. 11. CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Sons of Levi, Gershom.—Or Gershom, ver. 16. Compare this genealogy with Gen. xli. 11. Exod. vi. 16. Num. xxvi. 57. and chap. xxiii. 5 of this book.

Ver. 10. Johanan.—[Johanan is supposed to be the same as Jehoiada, as he would otherwise not be mentioned.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Seraiah.—[Seraiah was carried to Riblah, and there put to death by order of Nebuchadnezzar: so that with him ended the succession of high priests in the first temple.]—Bagster.

27 Eliab his son, Jeroham his son, Elkanah his son.

28 And the sons of Samuel; the first-born <sup>a</sup> Vashni, and Abiah.

29 ¶ The sons of Merari; Mahli, Libni his son, Shimei his son, Uzza his son, 30 Shimei his son, Haggiah his son, Asaiah his son.

31 ¶ And these are they whom David set over the service of song in the house of the LORD, after that the ark had <sup>v</sup> rest.

32 And they ministered before the dwelling place of the tabernacle of the congregation with singing, until Solomon had built the house of the LORD in Jerusalem: and then they waited on their office according to their order.

33 And these are they that <sup>w</sup> waited with their children. Of the sons of the Kohathites: Heman <sup>x</sup> a singer, the son of Joel, the son of Shemuel, 34 The son of Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eliel, the son of <sup>y</sup> Toah,

35 The son of <sup>z</sup> Zuph, the son of Elkanah, the son of Mahath, the son of Amasai,

The son of Elkanah, the son of <sup>a</sup> Joel, the son of Azariah, the son of Zephaniah,

The son of Tahath, the son of Assir, the son of <sup>b</sup> Ebiasaph, the son of Korah,

The son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, the son of Israel.

And his brother <sup>c</sup> Asaph, who stood on right hand, even Asaph the son of Berechiah, the son of Shimea, 40 The son of Michael, the son of Baaseiah, the son of Malchiah.

41 The son of <sup>d</sup> Ethni, the son of Zerah, the son of Adaiah, 42 The son of Ethan, the son of Zimnah, the son of Shimei, 43 The son of Jahath, the son of Gershon, the son of Levi.

44 And their brethren the sons of Merari stood on the left hand: <sup>e</sup> Ethan <sup>f</sup> the son of Kishi, the son of Abdi, the son of Malluch,

45 The son of Hashabiah, the son of Amaziah, the son of Hilkiah,

46 The son of Amzi, the son of Bani, the son of Shamer, 47 The son of <sup>g</sup> Mahli, the son of Mushi, the son of Merari, the son of Levi.

48 Their brethren also the Levites were appointed <sup>h</sup> unto all manner of service of the tabernacle of the house of God.

49 ¶ But Aaron and his sons offered upon the altar of the burnt-offering, and on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all <sup>i</sup> work of the place most holy, and to make atonement for Israel, according to all that Moses the servant of God had commanded.

50 And these are the sons of Aaron; Eleazar <sup>k</sup> his son, Phinehas his son, Abishua his son,

51 Bukki his son, Uzzi his son, Zerariah his son,

52 Meraioth his son, Amariah his son, Ahitub his son, 53 Zadok his son, Ahimaaz his son.

A. M. 2203, &c.
B. C. 1100, &c.

u called also Joel, ver. 33.
1 Sa. 8.2.

A. M. 2262.
B. C. 1042.

v c. 16.1.
w stood.

x Ps. 88. title.

y ver. 26. Nahath.

z or, Zophai.

a ver. 21. Uzzi, Uzzi, Uriel.

b Ex. 6.24.
c Ne. 7.44. Ps. 73, &c. titles.

d ver. 21.
e called Jeduthan. c. 9.16. 25.1, 3, 6.

f Ps. 89. title.

g or, Kachiah. c. 15.17.

h Na. 8.5. 11.

A. M. 2513.
B. C. 1491.

i Le. 1.9.
j Ex. 30.7.

k ver. 4.8.

A. M. 2561.
B. C. 1443.

l Jos. 21.3.8.
m Jos. 14.13. 15.13.

n or, Holon. Jos. 21.15.

o or, Ain. Jos. 21.16.

p or, Almon. Jos. 21.18.

q Here there are only eleven enumerated; but two more are added in the book of Joshua.

r Jutta and Gibeon, which make thirteen.

None of the Levites give the full number of names, though they all give the whole sum.

thirteen; and it is probable, that these two cities had been destroyed and lay in ruins, when this book was written, and hence were not enumerated.

q ver. 66.
r Nu. 3.20.

s ver. 61.
t Jos. 22.21.. 35. where many of these cities have other names.

54 ¶ Now these are their dwelling places throughout their castles in their coasts, of the sons of Aaron, of the families of the Kohathites: for theirs was the lot.

55 And they gave them Hebron in the land of Judah, and the suburbs thereof round about it.

56 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to <sup>m</sup> Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

57 And to the sons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron, the city of refuge, and Libnah with her suburbs, and Jattir, and Eshtemoa, with their suburbs,

58 And <sup>n</sup> Hilan with her suburbs, Debir with her suburbs, 59 And <sup>o</sup> Ashan with her suburbs, and Bethshemesh with her suburbs:

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin; Geba with her suburbs, and <sup>p</sup> Alemeth with her suburbs, and Anathoth with her suburbs. All their cities throughout their families were <sup>q</sup> thirteen cities.

61 And unto the sons of Kohath, which were left <sup>r</sup> of the family of that tribe, were cities given out of the half tribe, namely, out of the half tribe of Manasseh, by lot, ten cities.

62 And to the sons of Gershon throughout their families out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

63 Unto the sons <sup>s</sup> of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities with their suburbs.

65 And they gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities, which are called by their names.

66 And <sup>t</sup> the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also Gezer with her suburbs,

68 And <sup>u</sup> Jokmeam with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs, 69 And Aijalon with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs:

70 And out of the half tribe of Manasseh; Aner with her suburbs, and Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto the sons of Gershon were given out of the family of the half tribe of Manasseh, Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, and Ash-taroath with her suburbs:

72 And out of the tribe of Issachar; Kedesh with her suburbs, Daberath with her suburbs, 73 And Ramoth with her suburbs, and Anem with her suburbs:

74 And out of the tribe of Asher; Mashal with her suburbs, and Abdon with her suburbs, Ver. 28. The first-born Vashni.—[It appears that the word Joel is here lost out of the text; and that vashni, which signifies and the second, and which refers to Abiah, is made into a proper name. The Syriac and Arabic read as in Samuel.]—Bagster.

Ver. 50. Sons of Aaron.—[We have already had a list of these, though more extensive; and it is a proof that the writer of this book had several lists before him, from which he borrowed as he judged proper.]—Bagster.

Ver. 54. Theirs was the lot.—That is, the first lot.—Syriac and Arabic.

Ver. 65. Called by their names.—That is, each family gave its own name to the city it acquired.

Ver. 69. Aijalon.—Two cities are here omitted; see Josh. xxi. 23.

Compare with this account Josh. xiv. xv. xx. xxi. where, says Dr. Clarke, many of the cities have other names.

Ver. 70. Aner.—[Aner is probably another name of Tanach, which was a city of the half tribe of Manasseh, west of Jordan; and Eusebius, Jerome, and Procopius of Gaza, say that it was in their time a considerable place, a transposition of letters common to all languages. It is evident, however, that many of these cities or their names have been changed since the time of Joshua; but, as it has been well observed, Salop and Shrewsbury Salom and Salisbury, are as different names as any in these catalogues; yet those who live in their vicinity are not at all confused by them.]—Some cities also are 75 And Hukok with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs.

76 And out of the tribe of Naphtali; Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, and Hammon with her suburbs, and Kirjathaim with her suburbs.

77 Unto the rest of the children of Merari were given out of the tribe of Zebulun, Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs:

78 And <sup>a</sup> on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer in the wilderness with her suburbs, and Jahzah with her suburbs,

79 Kedemoth also with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs:

80 And out of the tribe of Gad; <sup>a</sup> Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, and <sup>a</sup> Mahanaim with her suburbs, 81 And Heshbon with her suburbs, and Jazer with her suburbs.

CHAPTER VII.

<sup>1</sup> The sons of Issachar, 6 of Benjamin, 13 of Naphtali, 14 of Manasseh, 20, 24 and of Ephraim. <sup>21</sup> The calves of Ephraim by the men of Gath. <sup>23</sup> Beriah is born. <sup>28</sup> Ephraim's habitations. <sup>30</sup> The sons of Asher.

NOW <sup>a</sup> the sons of Issachar were, Tola, and <sup>a</sup> Puah, Jashub, and Shimrom, four.

2 And the sons of Tola; Uzzi, and Rephaiah, and Jeriel, and Jahmai, and Jibsam, and Shemuel, heads of their father's house, to wit, of Tola: they were valiant men of might in their generations; whose number <sup>a</sup> was in the days of David two and twenty thousand and six hundred.

3 And the sons of Uzzi; Izrahiah: and the sons of Izrahiah; Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel, Ishiah, five: all of them chief men.

4 And with them, by their generations, after the house of their fathers, were bands of soldiers for war, six and thirty thousand men: for they had many wives and sons.

5 And their brethren among all the families of <sup>a</sup> Issachar were valiant men of might, reckoned in all by their genealogies fourscore and seven thousand.

6 ¶ The sons of <sup>a</sup> Benjamin; Bela, and Becher, and Jediahel, three.

7 And the sons of Bela; Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five; heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour; and were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thousand and thirty and four.

8 And the sons of Becher; Zemira, and Joash, and Eliezer, and Elieonai, and Omri, and Jerimoth, and Abiah, and Anathoth, and Alameh. All these are the sons of Becher.

9 And the number of them, after their genealogy by their generations, heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, was twenty thousand and two hundred.

10 The sons also of Jediahel; Bilhan: and the sons of Bilhan; Jeush, and Benjamin, and Ehud, and Chenaanah, and Zethan, and Tharshish, and Ahishahar.

11 All these the sons of Jediahel, by the heads of their fathers, mighty men of valour, were seventeen thousand and two hundred soldiers, fit to go out for war and battle.

12 Shuphim <sup>a</sup> also, and Huphim, the children of <sup>a</sup> Iri, and Hushim, the sons of <sup>a</sup> Aher.

13 ¶ The sons of Naphtali; Jahziel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shallum, the sons of Bilhah.

14 ¶ The sons of Manasseh; Ashriel, whom she bare: (but his concubine the Aramitess bare Machir the father of Gilead;

15 And Machir took to wife the sister of <sup>a</sup> Huphim and Shuphim, whose sister's name was Maachah;) and the name of the second was Zelophehad: and Zelophehad had daughters.

16 And Maachah the wife of Machir bare a son, and she called his name Peresh; and the name of his brother was Sheresh; and his sons were Ulam and Rakem.

17 And the sons of Ulam; <sup>a</sup> Bedan. These were the sons of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh.

18 And his sister Hammoleketh bare Ishod, and <sup>a</sup> Abiezer, and Mahalah.

19 And the sons of Shemidah were, Ahian, and Shechem, and Likhi, and Aniam.

20 ¶ And <sup>a</sup> the sons of Ephraim; Shuthelah, and Bered his son, and Tahath his son, and Eladah his son, and Tahath his son, 21 And Zabab his son, and Shuthelah his son, and Ezer, and Elead, whom the men of Gath that were born in that land slew, because they came down to take away their cattle.

22 And Ephraim their father <sup>a</sup> mourned many days, and his brethren came <sup>a</sup> to comfort him.

23 ¶ And when he went in to his wife, she conceived, and bare a son, and he called his name <sup>a</sup> Beriah, because <sup>a</sup> it went evil with his <sup>a</sup> house.

24 (And his daughter was Sherah, who built Beth-horon the nether, and the upper, and Uzzen-sherah.)

25 And Rephah was his son, also Resheph, and Telah his son, and Tahan his son,

26 Laadan his son, Ammihud his son, Elishama his son,

27 <sup>a</sup> Non his son, Jehoshua his son.

28 ¶ And their possessions and habitations were, Beth-el and the towns thereof, and eastward <sup>a</sup> Naaran, and westward Gezer, with the here mentioned as belonging to Ephraim, which in Joshua are spoken of as cities of Dan; but various changes in such matters would occur in a course of ages.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VII.—With this chapter compare Gen. xlii. 13, &c. Num. xxvi. 23, &c. Ver. 2. Whose number.—[This was probably the number returned by Joab and his assistants, when they made that census of the people with which God was so much displeased. We find that the effective men of Issachar amounted to 37,000, (ver. 5.) 22,600 of whom descended from Tola his eldest son; but whether the 36,000 (ver. 4.) were descendants of Tola by Uzzi; and the 22,600, his descendants by Tola's other sons; or whether another of Issachar's sons be intended, does not clearly appear; though the former seems the more obvious meaning.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Five.—[There are, however, only four names in the text; and instead of five, the Syriac and Arabic read four. If five be the true reading, then it is probable that Izrahiah is reckoned with his four sons.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Sons.—[In the parallel place of Genesis, ten sons of Benjamin are reckoned, Bela, Becher, Ashbel, Gera, Naaman, Ehi, Rosh, Muphim, Huphim, and Ard; and in Numbers, five only are mentioned, Bela, Ashbel, Ahiram, Shupham, and Hupham; and Ard and Naaman are said to be the sons of Bela, and consequently Benjamin's grandsons. In the beginning of the following chapter also five are only mentioned, Bela, Ashbel, Aharah, Nohah, and Rapha; and Addar, Gera, Abihud, Abishua, Naaman, Ahohah, another Gera, Shephuphan, and Huram, are all represented as grandsons, not sons of Benjamin: hence we see that, in many cases, grandsons are called sons, and both are often confounded in the genealogical tables. It seems also, that the persons mentioned in the following verses were neither sons nor grandsons of Bela and Becher, but distinguished persons among their descendants.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Sons of Manasseh.—[The text in these two verses seems to be strangely corrupted; and, as it stands, is scarcely intelligible. Probably it should be rendered, 'The sons of Manasseh were Ashriel, whom his Syrian concubine bore to him; and Machir the father of Gilead, whom (his wife) bore to him. Machir took for a wife Maachah, sister to Huphim and Shuphim.'—This is nearly the version of Dr. Geddes.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Zelophehad.—[It is certain that Zelophehad was not a son, but a descendant of Manasseh's, three generations having intervened; for he was the son of Hephher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh. 'How this fragment got in here,' says Dr. Geddes, 'it is impossible to say; but this is not surely its place: nor does it appear to be connected with any part of the genealogy.']—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Because they came down.—[Or rather, 'when they came down to take away their cattle;' for it does not appear that the sons of Ephraim were the aggressors, but the men of Gath, who appear to have been born in Egypt. This is the only place in the Sacred Writings where this piece of history is mentioned, and the transaction seems to have happened before the Israelites came out of Egypt; for it appears, from the following verse, that Ephraim was alive when those children of his were slain.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23. Beriah.—[That is, 'in evil,' because, &c. This incident is not elsewhere mentioned.]

Ver. 28. Naaran.—[Naaran, or Naarah. Eusebius says, was a town in * towns thereof; Shechem also and the towns thereof, unto <sup>v</sup> Gaza and the towns thereof:

29 And by the borders of the children of <sup>k</sup> Manasseh, Beth-shean and her towns, Taanach and her towns, Megiddo and her towns, Dor and her towns. In these dwelt the children of Joseph the son of Israel.

30 ¶ The sons of * Asher; Imnah, and Isuah, and Ishuai, and Beriah, and Serah their sister.

31 And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel, who is the father of Birzavith.

32 And Heber begat Japhlet, and <sup>v</sup> Shomer, and Hotham, and Shua their sister.

33 And the sons of Japhlet; Pasach, and Bimhal, and Ashvath. These are the children of Japhlet.

34 And the sons of * Shamer; Ahi, and Rohgah, Jehubbah, and Aram.

35 And the sons of his brother Helem; Zophah, and Imna, and Shelesh, and Amal.

36 The sons of Zophah; Suah, and Harnepher, and Shual, and Beri, and Imrah, 37 Bezer, and Hod, and Shamma, and Shilshah, and Ithran, and Beera.

38 And the sons of Jether; Jephunneh, and Pispah, and Ara.

39 And the sons of Ulla; Arah, and Haniel, and Rezia.

40 All these were the children of Asher, heads of their father's house, choice and mighty men of valour, chief of the princes. And the number throughout the genealogy of them that were apt to the war and to battle was twenty and six thousand men.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The sons and chief men of Benjamin. 33 The stock of Saul and Jonathan.

NOW Benjamin begat Bela his first-born, Ashbel the second, and Aharah the third, 2 Nohah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth.

3 And the sons of Bela were, * Addar, and Gera, and Abihud,

4 And Abishua, and Naaman, and Ahoah, 5 And <sup>b</sup> Gera, and <sup>c</sup> Shephuphan, and Huram,

6 And these are the sons of Ehud: these are the heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Geha, and they removed them to <sup>d</sup> Manahath:

7 And Naaman, and Ahiah, and Gera, he removed them, and begat Uzza, and Ahihud.

8 And Shaharaim begat children in the country of <sup>e</sup> Moab, after he had sent them away; Hushim and Baara were his wives.

9 And he begat of Hodesh his wife, Jobab, and Zibia, and Mesha, and Malcham, 10 And Jeuz, and Shachia, and Mirma. These were his sons, heads of the fathers.

11 And of Hushim he begat Abitub, and Elpaal.

12 The sons of Elpaal; Eber, and Misham, and Shamed, who built <sup>f</sup> Ono, and Lod, with the towns thereof:

13 Beriah also, and <sup>g</sup> Shema, who were heads

A. M.
2204, &c.
B. C.
1700, &c.

u daughters.

v or, Adasa.

w Jos. 17.7.

11.

x Ge. 46.17.

Nu. 26.44.

y ver. 34.

Shamer.

z ver. 32.

Shomer.

a or, Ard.

Ge. 40.21.

b Ju. 3.15.

c or, Shugham.

Nu. 26.33.

c. 7.12.

d c. 2.52.

e Ru. 1.11.

f Ezr. 2.33.

Ne. 6.2.

11.55.

g ver. 21.

h or, Shema.

ver. 13.

i Jos. 18.23.

Ne. 11.1.

j called

Jehiel.

c. 9.55.

k or, Zechariah.

c. 9.37.

l or, Shi-meam.

c. 9.33.

m 1 Sa. 14.

49.

Ishui.

n or, Ishhodah.

2 Sa. 2.8.

o or, Mophi-

hodah.

2 Sa. 4.4.

9.6, 10.

p or, Tahrea.

c. 9.41.

q Jarah.

c. 9.42.

r Rephaiah.

c. 9.43.

of the fathers of the inhabitants of Aijaion, who drove away the inhabitants of Gath:

14 And Ahio, Shashak, and Jeremoth,

15 And Zebadiah, and Arad, and Ader,

16 And Michael, and Ispah, and Joha, the sons of Beriah;

17 And Zebadiah, and Meshullam, and Hezeki, and Heber,

18 Ishmerai also, and Jezliah, and Jobab, the sons of Elpaal;

19 And Jakim, and Zichri, and Zabdi,

20 And Elienai, and Zilthai, and Eliel,

21 And Adaiah, and Beraiah, and Shimrath, the sons of <sup>h</sup> Shimhi;

22 And Ishpan, and Heber, and Eliel,

23 And Abdon, and Zichri, and Hanan,

24 And Hananiah, and Elam, and Antothijah,

25 And Iphedeiah, and Penuel, the sons of Shashak;

26 And Shamsherai, and Shehariah, and Athaliah,

27 And Jaresiah, and Eliah, and Zichri, the sons of Jeroham.

28 These were heads of the fathers, by their generations, chief men. <sup>1</sup> These dwelt in Jerusalem.

29 And at Gibeon dwelt the <sup>i</sup> father of Gibeon; whose wife's name was Maachah:

30 And his first-born son Abdon, and Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Nadab, 31 And Gedor, and Ahio, and <sup>k</sup> Zacher.

32 And Mikloth begat <sup>l</sup> Shimeah. And these also dwelt with their brethren in Jerusalem, over against them.

33 ¶ And Ner begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchishua, and <sup>m</sup> Abinadab, and <sup>n</sup> Esh-baal.

34 And the son of Jonathan was <sup>o</sup> Merib-baal; and Merib-baal begat Micah.

35 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and <sup>p</sup> Tarea, and Ahaz.

36 And Ahaz begat <sup>q</sup> Jehoadah; and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza, 37 And Moza begat Binea: Rapha <sup>r</sup> was his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son:

38 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. All these were the sons of Azel.

39 And the sons of Eshek his brother were, Ulam his first-born, Jehush the second, and Eliphelet the third.

40 And the sons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, archers, and had many sons, and sons' sons, a hundred and fifty. All these are of the sons of Benjamin.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The original of Israel's and Judah's genealogies. 2 The Israelites, 10 the priests, 14 and the Levites, with Neothims, which dwelt in Jerusalem. 27 The charge of certain Levites. 35 The stock of Saul and Jonathan.

SO all Israel were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book his time, called Noorath, five miles from Jericho. It appears to be the same as Neara, mentioned by Josephus, from whence, he says, they brought the water which watered the palm trees of Jericho.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 9. Hodesh.—This, according to the Targum, was another name for Baara, whom he had put away, and re-married, and therefore called her Hodesh, or Chodesh, which means new; i. e. married anew.

Ver. 12. Lod.—Lod, or Lydda, was situated about four leagues from Joppa, and a day's journey, or about 32 miles N. W. from Jerusalem; and, according to the Antonine Itinerary, 12 miles from Jammia, 18 from Eleutheropolis, and 22 from Bethar. Josephus says it was a village, not yielding to a city in greatness; and that it was one of three toparchies dismembered from Samaria, and given to the Jews. It was destroyed by Cestius in the Jewish war, and, when rebuilt, was called Diospolis. It is now called Loudd, and is a poor village, situated in a fine plain about a league to the E. N. E. of Ramla.]—Bagster.

Ver. 28. Jerusalem.—Jerusalem, the ancient capital of Judea, is situated in long. 35° 20' E. lat. 31° 47' 47" N.; and, according to the best authorities, 136 miles S. W. of Damascus, 34 miles S. of Shechem or Nablous, 45 miles E. of Jaffa, 27 miles N. of Hebron, and about 20 miles W. of Jericho. The city of Jerusalem was built on hills, and encompassed with mountains, (Ps. cxxv. 2.) to a stony and barren soil and was about 16 furlongs in length, says Strabo.

The ancient city of Jebus, taken by David from the Jebusites, was not large; and stood on a mountain south of that on which the temple was erected. Here David built a new city, called the city of David, wherein was the royal palace. Between these two mountains lay the valley of Milo, filled up by David and Solomon; and after the reign of Manasseh, another city is mentioned called the second. The Maccabees considerably enlarged Jerusalem on the north, enclosing a third hill; and Josephus mentions a fourth hill, called Bezetha, which Agrippa joined to the former: this new city lay north of the temple, along the brook Kidron. See note on ch. iv. 3.]—Bagster.

Ver. 38. Six sons.—Rabbi Sol. Jarchi says, that the allegorical expositions of these six ingenious men, would load 18,000 camels: what a treasure to some preachers and commentators!

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Reckoned by genealogies.—The Rabbins account for the varieties and repetitions in these genealogies, by supposing that Ezra preserved the different accounts as he found them in different records, without attempting to correct or harmonize them. On these dry and seemingly discordant accounts, Dr. Clarke has this beautiful remark: "How barren is this register, both of incident and interest; and yet, as barren rocks and sandy deserts make integral and necessary parts of the globe, so do these genealogical tables make necessary parts of the history of providence and grace: no one that fears God will therefore despise or lightly esteem them."

of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their transgression.

2 ¶ Now <sup>a</sup> the first inhabitants that dwell in their possessions in their cities were, the Israelites, the priests, Levites, and the <sup>b</sup> Nethinims.

3 ¶ And in Jerusalem <sup>c</sup> dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and <sup>d</sup> of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh;

4 Uthai the son of Ammihud, the son of Omri, the son of Imri, the son of <sup>e</sup> Bani, of the children of <sup>f</sup> Pharez the son of Judah.

5 And of the <sup>g</sup> Shilonites; Asaiah the first-born, and his sons.

6 And of the sons of <sup>h</sup> Zerah; Jeuel, and their brethren, six hundred and ninety.

7 And of the sons of Benjamin; <sup>i</sup> Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, the son of Hasenuah,

8 And Ibsaiah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the son of Shephathiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibnijah;

9 And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men were chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

10 ¶ And of the priests; Jedaiah, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin,

11 And <sup>k</sup> Azariah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, the <sup>l</sup> ruler of the house of God;

12 And Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchijah, and Maasiah the son of Adiel, the son of Jahzerah, the son of Meshullam, the son of <sup>m</sup> Meshillemith, the son of <sup>n</sup> Immer;

13 And their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore; <sup>o</sup> very able men for the work of the service of the house of God.

14 ¶ And of the Levites; Shemaiah the son of Hasshub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, of the sons of Merari;

15 And Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph;

16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites.

17 And the porters were, Shallum, and Akub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: Shallum was the chief;

18 Who hitherto waited in the king's gate eastward: they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates of the tabernacle: and their fathers, being over the host of the Lord, were keepers of the entry.

20 And <sup>p</sup> Phinehas the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and the Lord was with him.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom <sup>q</sup> David and Samuel the <sup>r</sup> seer <sup>s</sup> did ordain in their <sup>t</sup> set office.

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the Lord, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In four quarters were the porters toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after <sup>u</sup> seven days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their <sup>v</sup> set office, and were over the <sup>w</sup> chambers and treasuries of the house of God.

27 And they lodged round about the house of God, because the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should <sup>x</sup> bring them in and out by tale.

29 Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the <sup>y</sup> instruments of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincense, and the spices.

30 And some of the sons of the priests made the <sup>z</sup> ointment of the spices.

31 And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, who was the first-born of Shallum the Korahite, had the <sup>a</sup> set office over the <sup>b</sup> things that were made <sup>c</sup> in the pans.

32 And other of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, were over the <sup>d</sup> shew-bread, to prepare it every sabbath.

33 And these are the <sup>e</sup> singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free: for <sup>f</sup> they were employed in that work day and night.

34 These chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations; these dwelt at Jerusalem.

35 ¶ And in Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whose wife's name was <sup>g</sup> Maachah:

36 And his first-born son Abdon, then Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth.

38 And Mikloth begat Shimeam. And they

A. M. 3463.
B. C. 536.

a Ex. 2. 70.
Nu. 7. 73.

b Jos. 2. 27.
Ex. 2. 43.
8. 20.

c Ne. 11. 1.

d 2 Ch. 11. 16
30. 11.

e Ne. 8. 7.
10. 13.

f ch. 2. 5.
4. 1.

g ch. 36. 12.
Nu. 26. 20.
Ne. 11. 4, 5.
Perez.

h Nu. 26. 20.
Shilonites.
Ne. 11. 5.
Shiloni.

i ch. 2. 4, 5.
Ge. 38. 30.
Zerah.
Nu. 26. 20.

j Ne. 8. 4.
Nu. 30.
11. 7.

k Ne. 11. 10.
&c.

l Ne. 11. 11.
Seraiah.

m ch. 24. 5.
Nu. 4. 15.
16. 23, 33.
2. 13. 32. 4.
25. 18.

n Ne. 11. 11.
Ac. 6. 24.
26.

o Ne. 11. 12.
13.

p Meshillemith.

q ch. 24. 14.
25. 4.

r Ne. 7. 40.

s mighty men of valour.

t thresholds.

u Nu. 31. 6.

v re. 26. 1, &c.

w 1 Sa. 9. 9.

x founded.

y u. or, trust.

z 2 Ki. 11. 5.

a w. or, trust.

b x. or, store-houses.

c bring them in by tale, and carry them out by tale.

d z. or, pessels.

e a. Ex. 30. 23, 25.

f b. or, trust.

g c. Le. 2. 5.
6. 21.

h d. or, on flat plates, or, slices.

i e. bread of ordering, Le. 24. 5.

j f. c. 6. 31.

k g. upon them was.

l h. c. 8. 29.

Ver. 2. The first inhabitants.—That is, after the captivity; for this, and parts of the preceding chapters, were evidently written, or at least collected, after their return. The Israelites.—That is, individuals of different tribes, chiefly Judah, Benjamin, and Joseph. See Ezra ii. 70, &c.—Nethinims.—These were the slaves or servants of the temples; i. e. the Gibeonites, and the remains of other conquered nations.

Ver. 3. Jerusalem.—[We have already seen the situation and extent of this ancient city, (note on ch. viii. 28.) but the Jerusalem of Sacred History is no more. And, after having been successively destroyed by the Babylonians and Romans, and taken by the Saracens, Crusaders, and Turks, in the possession of the latter of whom it still continues, not a vestige remains of the capital of David and Solomon; not a monument of Jewish times is standing. The very course of the walls is changed, and the boundaries of the ancient city are become doubtful. The Monks pretend to show the sites of the sacred places; but they have not the slightest pretensions to even a probable identity with the real places. The Jerusalem that now is, however, called by the Arabs El Kouda, or "the holy city," is still a respectable, good looking town, of an irregular shape: it is surrounded by high embattled walls, enclosing an area not exceeding two miles and a half, and occupying two small hills, having the valley of Jehoshaphat on the east, the valley of Siloam and Gehinnom on the south, and the valley of Rephaim on the west; and containing a population variously estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000 souls.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. And their brethren.—1760 priests, "very able men," which expression seems used in the sense of "able-bodied men."

Ver. 18. Who hitherto waited, &c.—(The original is wad-hennah, which Houbigant and Dr. Geddes consider as a proper name, and render, "And Adah was over the eastern gate, called the king's;" i. e. the gate by which the kings of Judah went to the temple. The list is here nearly the same with those found in Ezra and Nehemiah, and contains those who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel; but the list in Nehemiah is more ample, probably because it contains those who came afterwards; the object of the sacred writer here being to give the names of those who came first, (ver. 2.) These consisted of men belonging not only to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but to many of the other tribes of Israel, who took advantage of the proclamation of Cyrus to return to Jerusalem. Properly speaking, the divisions mentioned here constituted the whole of the Israelitish people, who were divided into Priests, Levites, common Israelites, and Nethinims.—Bagster.

Ver. 26. Chambers.—Many of the priests' chambers were probably used for stores of provisions and garments.

Ver. 33. Employed.—[A number of Levites were employed, by rotation, in singing the praises of Jehovah; and they seem to have continued the service day and night.]—Bagster.

Ver. 35. Whose wife.—[Some editions read achatho, "his sister;" but in the parallel place, ch. viii. 29, it is ishto, "his wife," which is also the reading also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusalem, over against their brethren.

39 And Ner begat Kish; and Kish begat Saul; and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchishua, and Abinadab, and Esh-baal.

40 And the son of Jonathan was Merib-baal; and Merib-baal begat Micah.

41 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrea, and Ahaz.

42 And Ahaz begat Jarah; and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza;

43 And Moza begat Binea; and Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son.

44 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan: these were the sons of Azel.

CHAPTER X.

1 Saul's overthrow and death. 8 The Philistines triumph over Saul. 11 The kindness of Jabesh-gilead towards Saul and his sons. 13 Saul's sin, for which the kingdom was translated from him to David.

NOW <sup>a</sup> the Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down <sup>b</sup> slain in mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew Jonathan, and <sup>c</sup> Abinadab, and Malchishua, the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, and the <sup>d</sup> archers <sup>e</sup> hit him, and he was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armour-bearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith; lest these uncircumcised come and <sup>f</sup> abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not, for he was sore afraid. So Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword, and died.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house died together.

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their <sup>g</sup> cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 And <sup>h</sup> they put his armour in the house of their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.

of the LXX. Vulgate, Arabic, and Syriac here, and is undoubtedly the true reading. This repetition of part of Benjamin's genealogy seems to have been intended merely as an introduction to the ensuing history.]—Bagster.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Now the Philistines.—This chapter, except the two last verses, is a mere transcript of the last chapter of the First Book of Samuel; to which, therefore, we refer.

Ver. 4. Saul took a sword.—[Or, rather, "the sword," i.e. of his armour-bearer, whom, as we have seen, on the parallel passage, the Jews say was Doeg; and, if so, they both died by the same weapon by which the priests of God were slain. So Brutus and Cassius killed themselves with the same swords with which they stabbed Cæsar; and Calippus was slain with the same sword with which he killed Dio.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. All his house died.—"All his men," in Samuel, that is, all who were present with him in the battle; and his family received such a blow, that it never recovered itself again. For, though Ish-bosheth reigned over a part of the country, yet it was not in any splendour. This history seems to be repeated here, as an introduction to that of the kingdom of David.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13, 14. So Saul died.—These verses give us, as the reason of Saul's calamitous death, that he turned his back upon the Lord, and in many instances either sought him not, or disobeyed the divine direction, until he was at length left to himself, and sought counsel of a witch.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. Then all Israel, &c.—The first nine verses of this chapter are almost verbatim the same with the first nine of the fifth chapter of

A. M. 3468.
B. C. 536.
i c.8.33.

j c.8.35.

A. M. 2945.
B. C. 1056.

a 1 Sa.31.1,
&c.

b or,
wounded.

c or, Ishui.
1 Sa.14.49.

d shooters with bones

e found.

f or, mock.

g 1e.26.31.

h 1Sa.31.10.

i trans-
gressed.

1Sa.13.13.

15.23.

k 1 Sa.28.7,
&c.

l 1 Sa.16.1, 13.

2 Sa.3.9,
10.

5.3.

m Isai.

A. M. 2956.
B. C. 1048.

a 2 Sa.5.1,
&c.

b both yesterday and the third day

c or, rule.

d Ps.78.71.
Je.3.15.

e by the hand of.

f 1 Sa.16.1, 12.

g Ja.1.21.
19.10.

h head.

i 1 e. Zion,
2 Sa.5.7.

j revived.

k sent in going and increasing.

A. M. 2919.
B. C. 1055.
1015.

l or, held strongly with him.

m 1 Sa.16.1, 12.

n or, son of Hachmoni.

11 ¶ And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul,

12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted seven days.

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he <sup>i</sup> committed against the Lord, even <sup>j</sup> against the word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking <sup>k</sup> counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to inquire of it;

14 And inquired not of the Lord: therefore he slew him, and turned <sup>l</sup> the kingdom unto David the son of <sup>m</sup> Jesse.

CHAPTER XI.

1 David by a general consent is made king at Hebron. 4 He winneth the castle of Zion from the Jebusites by Joab's valour. 10 A catalogue of David's mighty men.

THEN <sup>a</sup> all Israel gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 And moreover <sup>b</sup> in time past, even when Saul was king, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the Lord thy God said unto thee, Thou shalt <sup>c</sup> feed <sup>d</sup> my people Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the Lord; and they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the Lord <sup>e</sup> by <sup>f</sup> Samuel.

4 ¶ And David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, which is <sup>g</sup> Jebus; where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land.

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David.

6 And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be <sup>h</sup> chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

7 And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called <sup>i</sup> it the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from Milo round about: and Joab <sup>j</sup> repaired the rest of the city.

9 So David <sup>k</sup> waxed greater and greater: for the Lord of hosts was with him.

10 ¶ These also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who <sup>l</sup> strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, according to the <sup>m</sup> word of the Lord concerning Israel.

11 And this is the number of the mighty men whom David had; Jashobeam, <sup>n</sup> a Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three hundred slain by him at one time.

12 And after him was Eleazer the son of the 2d Book of Sam. From ver. 10 to 41, it corresponds nearly with 2 Samuel xxiii. ver. 8 to the end, the most material variations being marked in the notes on that chapter: but the six last verses contain a few names, of which we know nothing.

In addition to the hints in Samuel, we here leave to subjoin the following judicious remarks of the discrepancies of these historic books, from a work of established credit for biblical and classical literature.

"It must be admitted, that some passages of Scripture have suffered more from frequent transcription than others; but the passages which have suffered most, are commonly of inferior importance. The books of Moses, the most important portion of the Old Testament, notwithstanding their remote antiquity, have come to us with comparatively few errors or defects; whilst the account of David's warriors, contained in the books of Samuel and Chronicles, which seem to have suffered more perhaps than any other portion of the Bible, either from the negligence of transcribers, or more probably from the rarity and mutilated state of the MSS., is of very inferior interest and value. I may here repeat the observation, that even the most corrupt MSS. contain all the important history, and all the essential doctrines and precepts of revelation; and the vast number of MSS. and versions which have been collected, furnish the biblical critic with the means of restoring the Sacred Writings to a degree of purity unattainable in works far less liable to corruption from the similarity of letters, and of very inferior antiquity. Enough of defect has been left, by divine providence, in our copies of the Sacred Writings, to stimulate and to reward the labours of the biblical critic, but not Dodo, the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighty.

13 He was with David at ° Pas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley, and the people fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and the LORD saved them by a great deliverance.

15 Now three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of Rephaim.

16 And David was then in the hold, and the Philistines' garrison was then at Beth-lehem.

17 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate!

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the LORD,

19 And said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it. Therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty.

20 And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

21 Of the three, he was more honourable than the two; for he was their captain: howbeit he attained not to the first three.

22 Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts; he slew two lion-like men of Moab: also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, a man of great stature, five cubits high; and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear like a weaver's beam; and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mighty.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, but attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.

26 Also the valiant men of the armies were, Asahel the brother of Joab, Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem,

27 Shammoth the Harorite, Helez the Pelonite,

28 Ira the son of Ikkeish the Tekoite, Abiezer the Antothite,

A. M.
2919. 2939.
B. C.
1053. 1015.

o or, Ephes-dammim,
1 Sa. 17.1.

p or, stood.

q or, salvation.

r or, three captains over the thirty.

s 2 Sa. 23.13,
&c.

t c. 14.9.

u Pa. 107.5.

v 1 Sa. 7.6.

w Le. 17.10,
11.
Ps. 72.14.

x with their lives.

y Ju. 5.18.
9.17.
1 Sa. 19.5.

z 2 Sa. 23.
18, &c.

a great of deeds.

b of measure.

c 1 Sa. 17.51.

d or, Sham-
mah.

e or, Harodite.
2 Sa. 23.25.

f or, Palitie.
2 Sa. 23.26.

g or, Mo-
bunnai.

h or, Zal-
mon.

i or, Heleb.

j or, Haddai.

k or, Abi-albon.

l or, Jashen.
2 Sa. 23.
32, 33.

m or, Sha-rar.

n or, Ezi-phalel.

o or, Ahasbai.

p or, Hezrai.

q or, Paar-rai the Arvite.

r or, the Haggerite.

s or, Shim-
rite.

A. M. 2946.
B. C. 1053.

1 Sa. 27.2, 6.

b being yet shut
up.

c Ju. 20.16.

d or, Hasmaah.

29 Sibbecai the Hushathite, Ilai the Ahohite,

30 Maharai the Netophathite, Heled the son of Baanah the Netophathite, 31 Ithai the son of Ribai of Gibeah, that pertained to the children of Benjamin, Benaiah the Pirathonite, 32 Hurai of the brooks of Gaash, Abiel the Arbathite,

33 Azmaveth the Baharumite, Eliabha the Shaalbonite, 34 The sons of Hashem the Gizonite, Jonathan the son of Shage the Hararite, 35 Ahiam the son of Sacar the Hararite, Eliphal the son of Ur, 36 Hepher the Mecherathite, Ahijah the Pelonite,

37 Hezro the Carmelite, Naarai the son of Ezbai,

38 Joel the brother of Nathan, Mibhar the son of Haggeri,

39 Zekek the Ammonite, Naharai the Berothite, the armour-bearer of Joab the son of Zeruiah, 40 Ira the Ithrite, Gareb the Ithrite,

41 Uriah the Hittite, Zabad the son of Ahlai,

42 Adina the son of Shiza the Reubenite, a captain of the Reubenites, and thirty with him,

43 Hanan the son of Maachah, and Joshaphat the Mithnite, 44 Uzzia the Ashterathite, Shama and Jehiel the sons of Hothan the Aroerite, 45 Jediael the son of Shimri, and Joha his brother, the Tizite, 46 Eliel the Mahavite, and Jeribai, and Joshaviah, the sons of Elnaam, and Ithmah the Moabite, 47 Eliel, and Obed, and Jasiel the Mesobaite.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The companies that came to David at Ziklag. 23 The armies that came to him at Hebron.

NOW these are they that came to David to Ziklag, while he yet kept himself close because of Saul the son of Kish: and they were among the mighty men, helpers of the war.

2 They were armed with bows, and could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin.

3 The chief was Ahiezer, then Joash, the sons of Shemaah the Gibeathite; and Jeziel, and Pelet, the sons of Azmaveth; and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Josabad the Gederathite,

5 Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite,

6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah, and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor, enough to mislead, to embarrass, or to perplex the serious and intelligent inquirer after divine truth."—Valpy's Classical Journal.

Ver. 23. Went down with a staff.—[We have a good illustration of this action in the duel between Dioxippus the Athenian, and Horratas a Macedonian, before Alexander. The Macedonian had on his left arm a brazen shield, and in the same hand the spear called sarissa; a javelin in his right hand, and a sword girded on his side. Dioxippus came with a chaplet on his head, a purple sash on his left arm, his body naked and smeared with oil, and in his right hand a knotty club. Horratas, supposing he could easily kill his antagonist at a distance, threw his javelin; which Dioxippus dexterously avoided; and, before Horratas could transfer his spear from his left to his right hand, sprang forward, and with one blow of his club broke it in two. The Macedonian began to draw his sword; but before he could draw it, Dioxippus tripped up his heels, and threw him on the ground. He then put his foot on his neck, and lifting up his club, would have dashed out his brains, if not prevented by the king.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. These . . . came to David at Ziklag.—The account of David's residence at Ziklag, which was given to him by Achish, we have already seen, 1 Sa. xxvii and xxix, and have there offered some remarks. The chief additions here met with, consist in the names of the several captains which there joined him, and the forces they brought with them.—Kept himself close.—[Heb. being yet shut up.—Sometimes, in the East, when a successful prince endeavoured to extirpate the preceding royal family, some of them escaped the slaughter, and secured themselves in an impregnable fortress, or in a place of great secrecy; while others have been known to seek an asylum in a foreign country, from whence they have occasionally, from time to time, great anxiety, and great difficulties to the usurper of the crown. The expression shut up, so often applied to the extermination of eastern royal families, (De. xxxi. 36 1 Ki. xiv. 10. xxi. 21. 2 Ki. ix. 8. xiv. 25.) strictly speaking, refers to the two first of these cases; but the term may be used in a more extensive sense;—for those who, by retiring into deserts, or foreign countries, preserve themselves from being slain by the men who usurp the dominions of their ancestors. Thus the term is here applied to David, though he did not shut himself up strictly speaking, in Ziklag. It is described as a town in the country, and was

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David into the hold to the wilderness men of might, and men <sup>e</sup> of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were <sup>f</sup> as swift as the roes <sup>g</sup> upon the mountains;

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: <sup>a</sup> one of the least was over a hundred, and the greatest over a thousand.

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it had <sup>i</sup> overflowed <sup>j</sup> all his banks; and they put to flight all <sup>k</sup> them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah to the hold unto David.

17 And David went out <sup>k</sup> to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, my heart shall <sup>l</sup> be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no <sup>m</sup> wrong in my hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it.

18 Then <sup>n</sup> the spirit came upon <sup>o</sup> Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thy helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when <sup>p</sup> he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle: but they helped them not: for the lords of the Philistines upon advisement sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul <sup>q</sup> to the jeopardy of our heads.

20 As he went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David <sup>r</sup> against the band <sup>s</sup> of the rovers: for they were all mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

22 For at that time day by day there came to David to help him, until it was a great host, like the host of God.

23 ¶ And these are the numbers of the <sup>t</sup> bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron, to <sup>u</sup> turn the kingdom of Saul to him, according to the word of the LORD.

24 The children of Judah that bare shield and spear were six thousand and eight hundred, ready <sup>v</sup> armed to the war.

25 Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

A. M. 2946.

B. C. 1058.

e of the host.

f as the roes upon the mountains to make haste.

g 2 Sa. 12.18. Ca. 8.14.

h or, one that was less could resist a hundred, and the greatest a thousand.

i filled over.

j Jos. 3.15.

k before them.

l be one.

m or, violence.

n clothed.

Jo. 5.34. Is. 58.17.

o 2 Sa. 17.25.

p 1 Sa. 29.2, 3.

q on our heads.

r or, with a band.

s or, prepared.

t heads, or, captains, or, men.

u all.

v or, prepared.

w 2 Sa. 3.17.

x brethren.

Ge. 31.23.

A. M. 2956.

B. C. 1048.

y 2 Sa. 2.8, 9.

z a multitude.

a men of names.

b Ps. 1.13.

Is. 33.6.

Mi. 6.9.

Ja. 3.13, 17.

c or, rangers of battle, or, ranged in battle.

d or, set battle in array.

e without a heart and a heart.

Ps. 12.2.

f or keeping their rank.

ver. 33.

Joel 2.7.

g or, mutual of meal.

A. M. 2962.

B. C. 1042.

a break forth and send.

26 Of the children of Levi four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada was the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred;

28 And <sup>w</sup> Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

29 And of the children of Benjamin, the <sup>x</sup> kindred of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto <sup>y</sup> the <sup>z</sup> greatest part of them had kept the ward of the house of Saul.

30 And of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, <sup>a</sup> famous throughout the house of their fathers.

31 And of the half tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, to come and make David king.

32 And of the children of Issachar, which <sup>b</sup> were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do; the heads of them were two hundred; and all their brethren were at their commandment.

33 Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, <sup>c</sup> expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could <sup>d</sup> keep rank: they were <sup>e</sup> not of double heart.

34 And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them with shield and spear thirty and seven thousand.

35 And of the Danites expert in war twenty and eight thousand and six hundred.

36 And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, <sup>f</sup> expert in war, forty thousand.

37 And on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, a hundred and twenty thousand.

38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali, brought bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and <sup>g</sup> meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly: for there was joy in Israel.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 David fetcheth the ark with great solemnity from Kirjath-jearim. 9 Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obad-edom.

AND David consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us <sup>a</sup> send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are left probably an unwall town; and it is certain he did not confine himself to it, but, on the contrary, was continually making excursions from thence.—Harmer.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Went to Ziklag.—[These captains of Manasseh seem to have met David, as he was returning from the army of the Philistines to Ziklag. It is probable, that they did not bring their companies with them; yet they both assured him of future assistance, and very seasonably helped him against the Amalekites who had spoiled Ziklag.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23—40, relate to the army which joined him about ten years afterwards at Hebron, upon the death of Saul, of which we have a short account in the 5th chapter of the 2d Book of Samuel, where the reader will also find some expository remarks. It will be enough to insert here a few marginal notes and references.

Ver. 23. Came to David to Hebron.—[Some learned men understand this as relating to the time when David was made king over Judah, on his first coming to Hebron; but it seems wholly to refer to his being made king over all Israel, after the death of Ish-bosheth; for there was no such union, or assembly, of the several tribes, on the former occasion, as is here described.]—B.

Ver. 27. Aaronites.—[That is, warriors of the house of Aaron.

Ver. 29. Kept the ward.—[That is, had been the guards of Saul, and of his son Ish-bosheth.

Ver. 32. Understanding.—[That is, as the following words indicate, intelligent men who understood the signs of the times; well versed in political affairs, and knew what was proper to be done in all the exigencies of human life; and who now perceived that it was both the duty and political interest of Israel to advance David to the throne.]—Bagster.

Ver. 33. Perfect heart.—[The meaning of this expression may be inferred from that of a double heart in ver. 35. If a double heart be expressive of insincerity or duplicity, a perfect heart, which seems to be put in opposition to it, must signify a sincere, faithful, and entire attachment.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1 to the last.—This chapter relates the bringing up the ark from Kirjath-jearim to the house of Obad-edom, and there leaves it, on an

* in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in * their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us <sup>d</sup> bring again the ark of our God to us: for * we inquired not at it in the days of Saul.

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So <sup>r</sup> David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor * of Egypt even unto the entering of Hemath, to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to <sup>b</sup> Baalah, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, that dwelleth <sup>i</sup> between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

7 And they <sup>j</sup> carried the ark of God in a new cart out of the house of <sup>k</sup> Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drove the cart.

8 And <sup>i</sup> David and all Israel played before God with all their might, and with <sup>m</sup> singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the threshing-floor of <sup>n</sup> Chidon, Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen <sup>o</sup> stumbled.

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, because <sup>p</sup> he put his hand to the ark: and there he <sup>q</sup> died before God.

11 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called <sup>r</sup> Perez-uzza to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David <sup>s</sup> brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And the LORD blessed <sup>t</sup> the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Hiram's kindness to David. 2 David's felicity in people, wives, and children. 8 His two victories against the Philistines.

NOW <sup>u</sup> Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him a house.

2 ¶ And David perceived that the LORD had confirmed him king over Israel, for his kingdom was lifted up on high, because of his people Israel.

3 ¶ And David took <sup>v</sup> more wives at Jerusalem: and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now these are the names of his children * which he had in Jerusalem; Shammua, and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon,

5 And Ibhaz, and Elishua, and Elpalet, 6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and <sup>w</sup> Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

count of the death of Uzza, which is already stated, 2 Sam. vi. and there followed by its farther removal to the city of David.

CHAP. XIV.—The whole of this chapter, except the last verse, we have already considered in 2 Sam. v. 11–25.

Ver. 5, 6. Elpalet and Nogah.—Here are two more of David's children than in the chapter just referred to.

Ver. 11. They came.—"He came," two MSS., LXX., Arabic and Syriac versions.

Ver. 15. A sound of going.—[Some taking the word bechaim, translated "mulberry trees," as a proper name, render, "when thou shalt hear a sound of going upon the summits of Bechaim;" others understanding rosh, "a top," in the sense of beginning or entrance, read, "when thou hearest a sound of

A. M. 2962.
B. C. 1042.

b 1 Sa. 31. 1.

c The cities of their suburbs.

d about.

e 1 Sa. 7. 1, 2.

f 2 Sa. 6. 1, &c.

g Jos. 13. 3. Je. 2. 18.

h Jos. 15. 9, 59.

i 1 Sa. 4. 4.

j made the ark to ride.

k 1 Sa. 7. 1.

l 2 Sa. 6. 5, &c.

m songs.

n called Nodiam.

o shook it.

p Nu. 4. 15. e. 15. 13, 15.

q Le. 10. 2.

r i. e. the breach of Uzza.

s removed.

t Ge. 30. 27. c. 26. 5. Fr. 10. 22.

u A. M. 2961. B. C. 1043.

v 2 Sa. 5. 11, &c.

w yet.

x c. 3. 5, &c.

y or, Ellada.

z 2 Sa. 5. 16.

A. M. 2957. B. C. 1047.

a c. 11. 15.

b i. e. a place of breaches.

c ver. 9.

d 2 Sa. 5. 25. Geba.

e Jos. 6. 27. 2 Ch. 26. 9. Pa. 18. 44.

f De. 2. 25. 11. 25.

g A. M. 2962. B. C. 1042.

h a. c. 16. 1.

i It is not to carry the ark of God, but for the Levites.

j Nu. 4. 2. 15. De. 10. 8. 31. 5.

k 1 Ki. 8. 1. c. 13. 5.

l or, kinsmen.

m Ex. 6. 22.

n Ex. 6. 18.

8 ¶ And when the Philistines heard that David was anointed king over all Israel, al the Philistines went up to seek David. And David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves * in the valley of Rephaim.

10 And David inquired of God, saying, Shal. I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into my hand? And the LORD said unto him, Go up; for I will deliver them into thy hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, God hath broken in upon mine enemies by my hand like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place <sup>r</sup> Baal-perazim.

12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they were burned with fire.

13 And the Philistines yet again <sup>s</sup> spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 Therefore David inquired again of God; and God said unto him, Go not up after them; turn away from them, and come upon them over against the mulberry trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou shalt hear a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt go out to battle: for God is gone forth before thee to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from <sup>t</sup> Gibeon even to Gazer.

17 And the fame <sup>u</sup> of David went out into all lands; and the LORD <sup>v</sup> brought the fear of him upon all nations.

CHAPTER XV.

1 David, having prepared a place for the ark, ordereth the priests and Levites to bring it from Obed-edom. 25 He performeth i. e. solemnity thereof with great joy. 26 Michal despiseth him.

AND <sup>w</sup> David made him houses in the city of David, and prepared a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a * tent.

2 Then David said, * None <sup>x</sup> ought to carry the ark of God but the Levites: for them hath the LORD chosen to carry the ark of God, and to minister unto him for ever.

3 And David gathered all Israel together to Jerusalem, to bring up <sup>y</sup> the ark of the LORD unto his place, which he had prepared for it.

4 And David assembled the children of Aaron, and the Levites:

5 Of the sons of Kohath; Uriel the chief, and his <sup>z</sup> brethren a hundred and twenty:

6 Of the sons of Merari; Asaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred and twenty:

7 Of the sons of Gershom; Joel the chief, and his brethren a hundred and thirty:

8 Of the sons of <sup>a</sup> Elizaphan; Shemaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred:

9 Of the sons of <sup>b</sup> Hebron; Eliel the chief and his brethren fourscore:

10 Of the sons of Uzziel; Amminadab the chief, and his brethren a hundred and twelve.

11 And David called for Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and for the Levites, for Uriel, footsteps at the entrance of the grove of mulberry trees:" and others think a rustling among the leaves is intended. The Targumist reads, "When thou shalt hear the sound of the angels coming to thy assistance, then go out to battle; for an angel is sent from the presence of God, that he may render thy way prosperous."

If there had not been an evident supernatural interference, David might have thought that the ruse de guerre, which he had used, was the cause of his victory.—Bugster.

Ver. 16. They smote.—"He smote;" one MS., LXX., Arabic and Syriac versions.—De Rossi.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 3. David gathered, &c.—This has been already twice related; in 2 Sam. vi. and in this book, chap. xiii.

Asaiah, and Joel, Shemaiah, and Elieh, and Amminadab,

12 And said unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: <sup>h</sup>sanctify yourselves, both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it.

13 For because ye did it not at the first, the LORD our God made a breach <sup>i</sup>upon us, for that we sought him not after the due <sup>j</sup>order.

14 So the priests and the Levites sanctified themselves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the children of the Levites bare the ark of God upon their shoulders with the staves thereon, as Moses <sup>k</sup>commanded according to the word of the LORD.

16 And David spake to the chief of the Levites to appoint their brethren to be the singers with instruments of music, psalteries and harps and cymbals, sounding, by lifting <sup>l</sup>up the voice with joy

17 So the Levites appointed <sup>m</sup>Heman the son of Joel; and of his brethren, <sup>n</sup>Asaph the son of Berechiah; and of the sons of Merari their brethren, <sup>o</sup>Ethan the son of Kushaiah;

18 And with them their brethren of the second degree, Zechariah, Ben, and Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Maaseiah, and Mattithiah, and Elipheh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters.

19 So the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were appointed to sound with cymbals of brass;

20 And Zechariah, and <sup>p</sup>Aziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, and Eliab, and Maaseiah, and Benaiah, with psalteries on <sup>q</sup>Alamoth;

21 And Mattithiah, and Elipheh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azaziah, with harps on the <sup>r</sup>Sheminith to excel.

22 And Chenaniah, chief of the Levites, <sup>s</sup>was for <sup>t</sup>song: he instructed about the song, because he was skilful.

23 And Berechiah and Elkanah were door-keepers for the ark.

24 And Shebaniah, and Jehoshaphat, and Nethaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer, the priests, did blow <sup>u</sup>with the trumpets before the ark of God: and Obed-edom and Jehiah were door-keepers for the ark.

25 ¶ So <sup>v</sup>David, and the elders of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the house of Obed-edom with joy.

26 And it came to pass, when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered seven bullocks and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and Chenaniah the master of the <sup>w</sup>song with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

28 Thus <sup>x</sup>all Israel brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with shouting, and with sound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, as the ark of the

A. M. 2962.
B. C. 1042.
h 2 Ch. 5. 11.
29.5.
Eze. 48. 11.

i 2 Sa. 6. 7, 8.
c. 13. 9, 10.
j 2 Ch. 13. 17
.20.
l 1 Co. 11. 2.
14. 40.

k Ex. 25. 14.
Nu. 4. 15.
7. 9.

l 2 Ch. 5. 13.

m c. 6. 33.

n c. 6. 39.

o c. 6. 44.

p ver. 18.
Jaaziel.

q Ps. 46. title.

r or, eighth
to oversee.
Ps. 6. title.

s or, was for the carriage:
he instructed about the carriage.

t lifting up.

u Nu. 10. 3.
Ps. 31. 3.
Joel 2. 1, 15.

v 2 Sa. 6. 15,
&c.
1 Ki. 8. 1.

w or, carriage.

x c. 13. 2.
2 Ch. 5. 12.
Ezr. 3. 10,
11.
Ps. 47. 1,
&c.
68. 25.
88. 2, 3.
150. 3. 5.

y Ps. 149. 3.
Ec. 3. 4.

z Ps. 69. 7. 9.

a 2 Sa. 6. 17
.19.

b Ps. 39. 70.
titles.

c instruments of psalteries
and harps.

d 2 Sa. 22. 1
23. 1.

e Ps. 105. 1.
15.

f Mal. 3. 16.

g Ge. 17. 2.

h Ge. 26. 3.

i Ge. 28. 13.
35. 11.

j Ex. 3. 17.
Jos. 24. 11
.13.

k Je. 11. 2. 7.

l cord.

m men of number.

n Ge. 34. 30.

o Ge. 12. 17.
20. 3.
Ex. 7. 15,
&c.

p Ps. 96.

covenant of the LORD came to the city of David, that Michal the daughter of Saul looking out at a window saw king David <sup>v</sup>dancing and playing: and she despised him <sup>z</sup>in her heart.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 David's festival sacrifice. 4 He ordereth a choir to sing thanksgiving. 7 The psalm of thanksgiving. 37 He appointeth ministers, porters, priests, and musicians, to attend continually on the ark.

SO <sup>a</sup>they brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it: and they offered burnt-sacrifices and peace-offerings before God.

2 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings and the peace-offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the LORD, and to <sup>b</sup>record, and to thank and praise the LORD God of Israel:

5 Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom: and Jeiel with <sup>c</sup>psalteries and with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals;

6 Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

7 ¶ Then <sup>d</sup>on that day David delivered first this psalm to thank the LORD into the hand of Asaph and his brethren.

8 Give <sup>e</sup>thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people.

9 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk <sup>f</sup>ye of all his wondrous works.

10 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

11 Seek the LORD and his strength, seek his face continually.

12 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth, 13 O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.

14 He is the LORD <sup>g</sup>our God; his judgments are in all the earth.

15 Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations;

16 Even of the covenant which he made with <sup>h</sup>Abraham, and of his oath unto <sup>i</sup>Isaac;

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob <sup>j</sup>for a law, and to Israel <sup>k</sup>for an everlasting covenant,

18 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, <sup>l</sup>the lot of your inheritance;

19 When ye were but <sup>m</sup>few, even a <sup>n</sup>few, and strangers in it.

20 And when they went from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people;

21 He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reproveth <sup>o</sup>kings for their sakes, 22 Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.

23 Sing <sup>p</sup>unto the LORD, all the earth; show forth from day to day his salvation.

Ver. 29. With psalteries, &c.—On these musical instruments, see our Introduction to the Book of Psalms.

Ver. 27. Robe of fine linen.—Heb. Butz: "Byssus," which Dr. Boothroyd renders "muslin;" but others think it was more like silk, and made of the beard of a species of muscle on the shores of the Mediterranean. Dr. Clarke

(in loc.) says he has seen it grow "to the length of a foot and a half," and has seen a pair of gloves made of "this very rich stuff—the colour, a deep dark yellow."

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 8—22, contain the first 15 verses of Psal. cv.

Ver. 23—33, contain the whole 96th Psalm, with some slight variations.

24 Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations.

25 For great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised: he also is to be feared above all gods.

26 For all the gods of the people are <sup>a</sup> idols: but the LORD made the <sup>r</sup> heavens.

27 Glory and honour are in his presence; strength and gladness are in his place.

28 Give unto the LORD, ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

29 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come before him: worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.

30 Fear before him, all the earth: the world also shall be stable, that it be not moved.

31 Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice: and let men say among the nations, The LORD reigneth.

32 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein.

33 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the LORD, because he cometh to judge the earth.

34 O <sup>a</sup> give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

35 And say ye, Save <sup>us</sup>, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praise.

36 Blessed <sup>a</sup> be the LORD God of Israel for ever and ever. And all <sup>v</sup> the people said, Amen, and praised the LORD.

37 ¶ So he left there before the ark of the covenant of the LORD Asaph and his brethren, to minister before the ark continually, as every day's work required:

38 And Obed-edom with their brethren, three-score and eight; Obed-edom also the son of Jeduthun and Hosah to be porters:

39 And Zadok the priest, and his brethren the priests, before the tabernacle of the LORD in the high place that was at <sup>w</sup> Gibeon,

40 To offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD upon the altar of the burnt-offering continually <sup>x</sup> <sup>v</sup> morning and evening, and to do according to all that is written in the law of the LORD, which he commanded Israel;

41 And with them Heman and Jeduthun, and the rest that were chosen, who were expressed by name, to give thanks to the LORD, <sup>a</sup> because his mercy endureth for ever;

42 And with them Heman and Jeduthun with trumpets and cymbals <sup>a</sup> for those that should make a sound, and with musical instruments of God. And the sons of Jeduthun were <sup>b</sup> <sup>c</sup> porters.

43 And <sup>d</sup> all the people departed every man to his house: and David returned to bless his house.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Nathan first approving the purpose of David to build God a house, 3 after by the word of God forbiddeth him. 11 He promiseth him blessings and benefits in his seed. 16 David's prayer and thanksgiving.

NOW <sup>a</sup> it came to pass, as David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell in a house of cedars,

Ver. 31. Let the heavens be glad.—[All the parts of nature are here addressed as if sentient beings, by the royal poet, to join the universal song of joy and praise; in their several ways, to welcome Jehovah as the sovereign of the universe; and to witness the great decisive day, when he will judge the world in righteousness.]—Bagster.

Ver. 34.—Psalm cvii. 1. verbatim.

Ver. 35, 36.—Psalm cvi. 47, 48.

Ver. 39. Zadok the priest.—According to Bp. Patrick and Scott, Abiathar the high priest resided with the ark, in a temporary tent which David made for it in Zion: but the tabernacle of Moses, having been made above 400 years, must be now fallen into decay, and was left at Gibeon, and not brought to Jerusalem, probably because David already contemplated the building a house instead; but Zadok, who was next to Abiathar, remained with the tabernacle, to offer the appointed sacrifices on the brazen altar, and the musicians here named, remained with him to perform the service; while Asaph and his brethren performed the same service in the city of David, where the ark was.

Ver. 42. Musical instruments of God.—The expression seems elliptical; Musical instruments (for the worship) of God. But Dr. Boothroyd renders it sacred instruments.

A. M. 2962.
B. C. 1042.

q Le. 19.4.
Is. 40.3, 4.
Je. 10.10.
14.

r Ps. 102.25.
Is. 40.26.
44.24.
Re. 14.7.

s 2 Ch. 5.13.
7.3.
Ps. 106.1.
107.1.
118.1.
136.1.

t Ps. 106.47.
49.

u 1 Ki. 8.15.

v De. 27.15.
Ne. 8.6.
1 Co. 14.
16.

w 2 Ch. 1.3.
13.

x in the morning and in the evening.

y Ex. 29.38.
Nu. 28.3.
4.

z ver. 31.
Ezr. 3.11.
Ps. 103.17.
Je. 33.11.

a Ps. 150.5.
b for the gate.

c Ps. 84.10.
d 2 Sa. 6.19.
20.

e 2 Sa. 7.1.
&c.
2 Ch. 6.7.
9.

f Ge. 28.15.
1 Sa. 18.14.
2 Sa. 5.6.
14.

g Ps. 18. title.
Is. 9.13.
Is. 61.3.
Je. 21.6.

i Re. 3.12.

j Eze. 26.24.
Re. 21.4.

k Ju. 2.14.
18.

l Ps. 18.40.
&c.
1 Co. 15.
25.

m 2 Sa. 7.14.
15.

n Ps. 89.28.
&c.
Is. 50.3.

o Lu. 1.33.

p Ps. 72.17.

q Ge. 32.10.
Ep. 3.8.

r Ju. 6.15.

but the ark of the covenant of the LORD remaineth under curtains.

2 Then <sup>b</sup> Nathan said unto David, Do all that is in thy heart; for God is with thee.

3 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not build me a house to dwell in 5 For I have not dwelt in a house since the day that I brought up Israel unto this day; but have <sup>c</sup> gone from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another.

6 Wheresoever I have walked with all Israel spake I a word to any of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me a house of cedars?

7 Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I took thee from the <sup>d</sup> sheepcote, even from <sup>e</sup> following the sheep, that thou shouldst be ruler over my people Israel:

8 And <sup>f</sup> I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies <sup>g</sup> from before thee, and have made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth.

9 Also I will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will plant <sup>h</sup> them, and they shall dwell in their place, and shall be moved <sup>i</sup> no more; <sup>j</sup> neither shall the children of wickedness waste them any more, as at the beginning,

10 And since the time that I commanded judges <sup>k</sup> to be over my people Israel. Moreover I will subdue all thine <sup>l</sup> enemies. Furthermore I tell thee that the LORD will build thee a house.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom.

12 He shall build me a house, and I will establish his throne for ever.

13 I <sup>m</sup> will be his father, and he shall be my son: and <sup>n</sup> I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee:

14 But <sup>o</sup> I will settle him in my house and in my kingdom for ever: and <sup>p</sup> his throne shall be established for evermore.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ¶ And David the king came and sat before the LORD, and said, Who <sup>q</sup> am I, O LORD God, and what is my <sup>r</sup> house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

17 And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O LORD God:

CHAP. XVII.—This chapter is the same for sense and substance as the 7th of the 2d Book of Samuel, to which, therefore, we refer, and beg our readers to compare the notes here given with the exposition there offered.

Ver. 5. From tent to tent.—The ark was moved every time the tabernacle was taken down; and when the ark was carried to Zion, it was placed in a tent, which David had prepared for it, ch. xvi. 1.

Ver. 9. As at the beginning.—Namely, in the Egyptian bondage, and often since.

Ver. 13. From him that was before thee.—i. e. from Saul, so as to cut off his family. Saul's kingdom lasted but 40 years; that of David remained in his family between 4 and 500 years; and though then interrupted by the captivity in which he died, it was afterwards restored in the spiritual kingdom of the Messiah, which is to last for ever.

Ver. 14. My house.—[In the parallel passage, it is "thy house, and thy kingdom." Jehovah was Israel's king; and David and Solomon were merely his vice-gerents, as well as types of the Messiah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. A great while to come.—Namely, till the days of the Messiah, as just remarked.—And hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree.—That is, though originally a shepherd boy, (ver. 7.) thou hast 18 What can David speak more to thee for the honour of thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant.

19 O LORD, for <sup>a</sup> thy servant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all this greatness, in making known all these <sup>a</sup> great things.

20 O LORD, <sup>a</sup> there is none like thee, neither is there any God beside thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And <sup>a</sup> what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatness and terribleness, by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For thy people Israel didst thou make thine <sup>a</sup> own people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, LORD, let the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant and concerning his house be established <sup>a</sup> for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, that thy name may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to <sup>a</sup> Israel: and let the house of David thy servant be established <sup>a</sup> before thee.

25 For thou, O my God, hast <sup>a</sup> told thy servant that thou wilt build him a house: therefore thy servant hath found in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now, LORD, thou art God, and hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

27 Now therefore <sup>a</sup> let it please thee to build the house of thy servant, that it may be before thee for ever: for thou blessest, O LORD, and <sup>a</sup> it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines and the Moabites. 3 He smiteth Hadarezer and the Syrians. 9 Tou sendeth Hadoram with presents to bless David. 11 The presents and the spoil David dedicateth to God. 15 He putteth garrisons in Edom. 14 David's officers.

NOW <sup>a</sup> after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

3 ¶ And David smote <sup>b</sup> Hadarezer king of Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to establish his dominion by the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven <sup>a</sup> thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also houghed all the chariot horses, but reserved of them a hundred chariots.

5 And when the Syrians of <sup>d</sup> Damascus came to help Hadarezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that

A. M. 2969.
B. C. 1042.
s Is. 37. 35.
42. 1.
49. 5. 6.
Da 9. 17.
t Mat. 11. 26.
u great-
nesses.
v De. 33. 26.
Ps. 36. 8.
Ep. 3. 20.
w De. 4. 7. 32.
33. 29.
x Ex. 19. 5. 8.
1 Sa. 12. 22.
Ro. 9. 4. 5.
11. 1. 2. &c.
y Ps. 119. 49.
Je. 11. 5.
z He. 8. 10.
11. 16.
Re. 21. 3.
a Ps. 90. 17.
b revealed the ear of thy servant.
c or, it hath pleased.
d Ro. 11. 29.
A. M. 2964.
B. C. 1040.
a 2 Sa. 8. 1.
&c.
b or, Hadarezer.
c 2 Sa. 8. 4.
d Darmesek.
e called in the book of Samuel, Betsai, and Berothai.
f 1 Ki. 7. 15, &c.
g or, Tot.
2 Sa. 8. 9.
h or, Joram.
2 Sa. 8. 10.
i or, salute.
j bless.
k was the man of wars.
l Jos. 6. 19.
m Abishai.
n 2 Sa. 8. 13, 14.
Ps. 60.
o Ge. 18. 19.
1 Ki. 10. 9.
Ps. 78. 72.
89. 14.
Je. 9. 7.
32. 1.
p or, remembrance.
q called, Abimelech.
2 Sa. 8. 17.
r called, Sereiah.
2 Sa. 8. 17.
and Shishai.
1 Ki. 4. 3.
s at the hand of.
A. M. 2969.
B. C. 1036.
a 2 Sa. 10. 1, &c.
b In divine eyes doth David.
c Ge. 42. 9.
d Ps. 35. 12.
109. 4, 5.

were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from <sup>a</sup> Tibhath, and from Chun, cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, wherewith <sup>a</sup> Solomon made the brasen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 ¶ Now when <sup>a</sup> Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah;

10 He sent <sup>b</sup> Hadoram his son to king David, to inquire of his welfare, and to congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer <sup>b</sup> had war with Tou;) and with him all manner of vessels of gold and silver and brass.

11 Them also king David dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

12 Moreover <sup>a</sup> Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the <sup>a</sup> Edomites in the valley of salt eighteen thousand.

13 ¶ And he put garrisons in Edom; and all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people.

15 And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, recorder.

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests, and <sup>a</sup> Shavsha was scribe;

17 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were chief <sup>a</sup> about the king.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun the son of Nahash, are villainously treated. 6 The Ammonites, strengthened by the Syrians, are overcome by Joab and Abishai. 16 Shophach, making a new supply of the Syrians, is slain by David.

NOW <sup>a</sup> it came to pass after this, that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead.

2 And David said, I will show kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, because his father showed kindness to me. And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father. So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him.

3 But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, <sup>b</sup> Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for to search, and to overthrow, and to spy out the land?

4 Wherefore <sup>d</sup> Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 Then there went certain, and told David honoured me as if I had been descended from the most ancient and honourable race of kings. It is proper, however, to remark, that some very learned and excellent writers give a widely different sense, both to this and to the parallel passage in 2 Samuel vii. 19. Rev. Mr. Peters, in the preface to his "Critical Dissertation on Job," renders the passage before us thus; "Thou hast regarded me according to the law of the future Adam—or Adam from above." (Compare 1 Cor. xv. 45—48.) And the parallel passage in Samuel, "And this is the law of the Adam, (or the man), O Lord God;" Heb. Adonai Jehovah. Dr. Kennicott, in his remarks on the Old Testament, argues largely in defence of this sense of the passage, and explains "the law of the Adam," to refer to the original promise of the Messiah, "the seed of the woman—him that was to come—the Lord from heaven."

This sense has been also adopted by some very learned and respectable critics still living; Dr. A. Clarke in his Commentary, and Dr. J. Pye Smith in his Scripture Testimony to the Messiah. Bishop Horsley explains these passages in a manner very similar.

Ver. 18. For the honour of thy servant.—"For the honour (conferred on) thy servant."—Dr. Boothroyd.

CHAP. XVIII.—This chapter is also the same for substance with the 8th of the 2d Book of Samuel: the principal variations were pointed out in the notes subjoined to that chapter, particularly ver. 1 to 6.

Ver. 4. Houghed the chariot horses.—(The words uyakker David eth haraichev, should be rendered, "And David disjointed all the chariots;" which is nearly the rendering of the LXX. To have houghed the horses would have been both unreasonable and inhuman; for, as he had gained so complete a victory, there was no danger of their falling into the hands of the enemy; and if he did not choose to keep them, which indeed the law would not permit, he ought to have killed them outright.)—Baber.

Ver. 12. Abishai.—This word, though marked in Italics, is in all the ancient versions, and at least one MS.—De Rossi.

Ver. 12. Abishai.—In Samuel, this victory is attributed to David, whose general Abishai was.

Ver. 16. Zadok . . . and Abimelech.—Both high priests, one at Gibeon the other at Mount Zion. See note on chap. xv. 38.

CHAP. XIX.—This chapter equally corresponds with the 10th of the 2d Book of Samuel.

how the men were served. And he sent to meet them: for the men were greatly ashamed. And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves <sup>a</sup> odious to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousand talents of silver to hire <sup>1</sup> them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah, and out of <sup>2</sup> Zobab.

7 So they hired thirty and two thousand chariots, and the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before Medeba. And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.

8 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the city: and the kings that were come were by themselves in the field.

10 Now when Joab saw that the <sup>a</sup> battle was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the <sup>1</sup> choice of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

13 Be <sup>k</sup> of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God: and <sup>1</sup> let the Lord do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab and the people that were with him drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and they fled <sup>m</sup> before him.

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the <sup>a</sup> river: and <sup>o</sup> Shophach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And <sup>p</sup> when the servants of Hadarezer

Ver. 7. Thirty and two thousand.—[Thirty-two thousand soldiers, exclusive of the thousand sent by the king of Maachah, are mentioned in the parallel passage, (2 Sa. x. 6.) but of chariots or cavalry there is no mention; and the number of chariots stated here is prodigious and beyond all credibility. But, as the word raitcher, denotes not only a chariot, but a rider, (see Is. xli. 7.) it ought most probably to be rendered here, in a collective sense, cavalry; and then the number of troops will exactly agree with the passage of Samuel. It is probable, that they were a kind of auxiliary troops who were usually mounted on horses, or in chariots, but who occasionally served as foot-soldiers.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Seven thousand.—[In the parallel passage, "the men of seven hundred chariots;" which difference probably arose from mistaking noon final, which stands for 700, for zayin, with a dot above, which denotes 7000, or then verat: the great similarity of these letters might easily cause the one to be mistaken for the other.—Footmen.—If these troops were, as we have supposed, a kind of dismounted cavalry, the terms footmen and horsemen might be indifferently applied to them.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XX.—This chapter goes on with the narrative in the 11th and 12th chapters of the 2d Book of Samuel, only it is remarkable, that the important

A. M. 2969.
B. C. 1035.

e to stink.
Ge. 34. 40.

f Ps. 46. 9.

g c. 18. 5, 9.

h face of the battle.

i or, young men.

j Abshai.

k Ne. 4. 11.

l Ju. 10. 15.

m Je. 46. 15, 16.

n i. e. Euphrates.

o or,
Shophach.

2 Sa. 10.
16.

p Ps. 18. 39
44.

q 2 Sa. 11. 1.

r at the return of the year.

c. 2 Sa. 12. 26,
&c.

d the weight of.

e 2 Sa. 21. 18,
&c.

f stood, or,
continued.

g or, Gob.

h or, Saph.

2 Sa. 21. 15.

i or, Rapha.

j called also Jaareoregim.

2 Sa. 21. 19.

k 2 Sa. 21. 20.

l measure.

m born to the giant,
or, Rapha
ver. 4.

n or, reproached.

o called Shammah

1 Sam. 16. 9.

A. M. 2987.
B. C. 1017.

a 2 Sa. 24. 1,
&c.

b Job 1. 6,
&c.

2. 1, &c.
Zec. 3. 1

c c. 27. 28.

d Ec. 8. 4.

saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Rabbah is besieged by Joab, spoiled by David, and the people thereof tortured. 4 Three giants are slain in three several overthrowes of the Philistines.

AND <sup>a</sup> it came to pass, that <sup>b</sup> after the year was expired, at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried at Jerusalem. And <sup>c</sup> Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it <sup>d</sup> to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

3 And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes. Even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

4 ¶ And <sup>e</sup> it came to pass after this, that there <sup>f</sup> arose war at <sup>g</sup> Gezer with the Philistines; at which time Sibbechai the Hushathite slew <sup>h</sup> Sippai, that was of the children of <sup>i</sup> the giant: and they were subdued.

5 And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan the son of <sup>j</sup> Jair slew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear staff was like a weaver's beam.

6 And <sup>k</sup> yet again there was war at Gath, where was <sup>l</sup> a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot: and he also was <sup>m</sup> the son of the giant.

7 But when he <sup>n</sup> defied Israel, Jonathan the son of <sup>o</sup> Shimea, David's brother, slew him.

8 These were born unto the giant in Gath; and they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 David, tempted by Satan, forceth Joab to number the people. 5 The number of the people being brought, David repenteth of it. 9 David having three plagues pronounced by Gad, chooseth the pestilence. 14 After the death of seventy thousand, David by repentance reverseth the destruction of Jerusalem. 18 David, by Gad's direction, purchaseth Ornan's threshing-floor: where having built an altar, God giveth a sign of his favour by fire, and stayeth the plague. 28 David sacrificeth there, being restrained from Gibeon by fear of the angel.

AND <sup>a</sup> Satan stood up <sup>b</sup> against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

2 And David said to Joab and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from Beer-sheba even to Dan; and bring <sup>c</sup> the number of them to me, that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered, The Lord make his people a hundred times so many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?

4 Nevertheless the king's word prevailed <sup>d</sup> against Joab. Wherefore Joab departed, episode of David's sin in the matter of Uriah, his reproof, and his repentance are entirely omitted: and this Book of Chronicles passes immediately from the 1st verse of the 11th to the 26th of the 12th chapter. It omits also the crimes of Ammon and Absalom, David's sons, and passes to the 18th verse of the 21st chapter of the 2d Book of Samuel, the last five verses of which, with some variations, conclude this chapter.

Ver. 2. David took the crown, &c.—Instead of He cut, five of Kennicott's MSS. read, "He put": see note to 2 Sam. xii. 30—31.

Ver. 6. Fingers and toes.—[This is not a solitary instance; the daughters of Caius Horatius, of patrician dignity, were called sedigitæ; because they had six fingers on each hand; and Volcatus, a poet, was called sedigitus, for the same reason. (See Pliny.) Maupertius, in his seventh letter, says he met with two families near Berlin, where sedigitism was equally transmitted on both sides.]—Bagster. See note on 2 Sam. xxi. 19, 20.

CHAP. XXI.—Our historian here passes on to David's sin in numbering the people, which is nearly a repetition (enlarged in some parts, and abridged in others) of the last chapter of the 2d Book of Samuel.

Ver. 1. And Satan stood.—"Satan" means an adversary. See the exposition of the chapter just referred to.

and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and a hundred thousand men that drew sword: and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

6 But <sup>a</sup>Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

7 ¶ And <sup>c</sup>God was displeased with this thing; therefore he smote Israel.

8 And David said unto God, I have sinned greatly, because I have done this thing: but now, I beseech thee, do <sup>e</sup>away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very <sup>b</sup>foolishly.

9 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Gad, David's <sup>d</sup>seer, saying,

10 Go and tell David, saying, Thus saith the Lord, I <sup>f</sup>offer thee three things: choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

11 So Gad came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, <sup>g</sup>Choose thee

12 Either three years famine; or three months to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days the sword of the Lord, even the pestilence, in the land, and the angel of the Lord destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

13 And David said unto Gad, I am in a great <sup>h</sup>straight: let me fall <sup>i</sup>now into the hand of the Lord; for very <sup>a</sup>great <sup>o</sup>are his mercies: but let me not fall into the hand of <sup>p</sup>man.

14 ¶ So the Lord sent pestilence <sup>q</sup>upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men.

15 And God sent an angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the Lord beheld, and he <sup>r</sup>repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough, stay <sup>s</sup>now thy hand. And the angel of the Lord stood by the threshing-floor of <sup>t</sup>Ornan the <sup>u</sup>Jebusite.

16 ¶ And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the angel <sup>v</sup>of the Lord stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem. Then David and the elders of Israel, who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed; but as for these <sup>w</sup>sheep, what have they done? let thy hand, I pray thee, O Lord my God, be on <sup>x</sup>me, and on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

A. M. 2887.

B. C. 1017.

e c. 27. 24.

f it was evil in the eyes of the Lord concerning.

g 2 Sa. 12. 13.

h 1 Sa. 26. 21.

i 1 Sa. 9. 9.

j stretch out.

k Take so thee.

l 1 Ju. 12. 27.

m He 10. 31.

n or, many.

o Pa. 86. 5, 15.

p 2 Ch. 28. 9.

Pr. 12. 10.

Is. 46. 7.

La. 5. 5, 2.

15.

q Nu. 16. 46.

-49.

r Ju. 2. 18.

Jo. 4. 2.

s Pa. 73. 38.

t or, Araunah.

2 Sa. 24. 18.

u 2 Ch. 3. 1.

v Ge. 3. 24.

Nu. 22. 31.

Jos. 5. 13.

14.

w Pa. 44. 11.

x Ju. 10. 11.

12.

y ver. 15.

z or, When.

a or, then.

he and.

b Give.

c Ge. 23. 13.

d De. 16. 17.

e Le. 9. 24.

Ju. 6. 21.

1 Ki. 18. 24.

38.

f 2 Ch. 7. 1.

g Ex. 40.

h c. 16. 39.

i 1 Ki. 3. 4.

15.

j Pa. 50. 11.

Je. 5. 22.

10. 7.

He. 12. 28.

29.

Re. 15. 4.

a De. 12. 5.

c. 21. 28.

2 Ch. 3. 1.

b 1 Ki. 9. 21.

18 ¶ Then the angel <sup>v</sup>of the Lord commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the Lord in the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

19 And David went up at the saying of Gad which he spake in the name of the Lord.

20 <sup>a</sup>And Ornan turned back, and saw <sup>a</sup>the angel; and his four sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was threshing wheat.

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and saw David, and went out of the threshing-floor, and bowed himself to David with his face to the ground.

22 Then David said to Ornan, <sup>b</sup>Grant me the place of this threshing-floor, that I may build an altar therein unto the Lord: thou shalt grant it me for the full price: that the plague may be stayed from the people.

23 And Ornan said unto David, Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee the oxen also for burnt offerings, and the threshing instruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat-offering; I give it all.

24 And king David said to Ornan, Nay; but I will verily buy <sup>c</sup>it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the Lord, nor offer burnt-offerings without <sup>d</sup>cost.

25 So David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight.

26 And David built there an altar unto the Lord, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, and called upon the Lord; and <sup>e</sup>he answered him from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt-offering.

27 And the Lord commanded the angel; and he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof.

28 ¶ At that time when David saw that the Lord had answered him in the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite, then he sacrificed there.

29 For the tabernacle of the Lord, which Moses made <sup>f</sup>in the wilderness, and the altar of the burnt-offering, were at that season in the high place <sup>g</sup>at Gibeon.

30 But David could not go before it to inquire of God: for he was <sup>h</sup>afraid because of the sword of the angel of the Lord.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 David, foreknowing the place of the temple, prepareth abundance for the building of it. 6 He instructeth Solomon in God's promises, and his duty in building the temple. 17 He chargeth the princes to assist his son.

THEN David said, This <sup>a</sup>is the house of the Lord God, and this <sup>b</sup>is the altar of the burnt-offering for Israel.

2 And David commanded to gather together the <sup>c</sup>strangers that were in the land of Israel; and he set masons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God.

Ver. 5. Number of the people.—See note on 2 Sam. xxiv. 9.

Ver. 12. Three years.—[In 2 Sam. xxiv. 13, it is seven years; but the Septuagint has there three years, as here; which, is no doubt, the true reading, the letter zayin, seven, being mistaken for gimel, three.]—BAGSTER.

Ver. 13. Let me now fall, &c.—[David here acted nobly.—had he chosen war, his personal safety was in no danger, as there was an ordinance preventing him from going to battle; and in famine, his wealth would have secured him and his family's support; but all were equally exposed to the pestilence.]—BAGSTER.

Ver. 17. Is it not I that commanded, &c.—It is hence very clear that David did not think himself exculpated, either by the conduct of Providence, or the force of temptation. It is one of the strongest marks of guilt to attempt to excuse our sin.

Ver. 20. Saw the angel.—[The Syriac and Arabic say, "David saw the angel," and make no mention of Ornan in this place; but the Septuagint says, "And Ornan turned, and saw the king;" and one of Dr. Kennicott's MSS. has hammelech, "the king," instead of hammalach, "the angel." Houbigant translates it in the same manner; and vindicates his version from the parallel place, (2 Sa. xxiv. 20.) where it is said he saw David; but not a word is there of his seeing the angel. It is true that the seeing of David is mentioned in ver. 21; but Houbigant supposes that this verse refers to his seeing the king while he was at a distance; and the 21st, to his seeing him when he came into his threshing-floor. In the first case, he and his sons were afraid when they saw the king coming, and hid themselves; but when he entered the threshing-floor, they were obliged to appear before him.]—BAGSTER.

Ver. 24. Will not take.—[It is a maxim from heaven, "Honour the Lord with thy substance." He who has a religion that costs him nothing, has a religion that is worth nothing: nor will any man esteem the ordinances of God, if those ordinances cost him nothing. Had Araunah's noble offer been accepted, it would have been Araunah's sacrifice, not David's; nor would it have answered the end of turning away the displeasure of the Most High. It was David that sinned, not Araunah; therefore David must offer sacrifice.]—B.

Ver. 30. Because of the sword.—Lest the angel should slay him, if he went farther.

CHAP. XXII.—This and the seven following chapters, as already mentioned, fall in after the 2d Book of Samuel, and before the 1st Book of Kings.

Ver. 1. This is the house.—Dr. Boothroyd very properly (as we conceive) connects this verse with the preceding chapter, to which it forms an appropriate close, as thus: David being afraid to go to Gibeon, as there stated, says, "This is the house, and this the altar," &c. and accordingly there he made his offering. [David perhaps had some assurance that this was the place on which God designed that His house should be built; and perhaps it was this that induced him to buy not only the threshing-floor, but probably some adjacent ground also, as Cabnet supposes, that there might be sufficient room for such a structure.]—BAGSTER.

Ver. 2.—Here properly begins the chapter, which contains a general account of the preparations which David made toward the building of the temple; in which very little new occurs, as will appear in the references subjoined. The first measure was, "to gather together the strangers," which we find was done accordingly, 1 Kings ix. 20, 21.

3 And David prepared <sup>a</sup> iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, and for the joinings; and brass in abundance without <sup>a</sup> weight;

4 Also cedar trees in abundance: <sup>a</sup> for the Zidonians and they of Tyre brought much cedar-wood to David.

5 And David said, Solomon my son is <sup>a</sup> young and tender, and the house that is to be build for the LORD must be exceeding <sup>a</sup> magnificent, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it. So David prepared abundantly before her death.

6 ¶ Then he called for Solomon his son, and charged him to build a house for the LORD God of Israel.

7 And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, it was <sup>a</sup> in my mind to build a house <sup>a</sup> unto the name of the LORD my God:

8 But the word of the LORD came to me, saying, Thou <sup>a</sup> hast shed blood <sup>a</sup> abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou shalt not build a house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight.

9 Behold, a son shall be born to thee, who shall be a man of rest; and I will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be <sup>a</sup> Solomon, and I will give <sup>a</sup> peace and quietness unto Israel in his days.

10 He <sup>a</sup> shall build a house for my name; and he shall be my <sup>a</sup> son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

11 Now, my son, the LORD <sup>a</sup> be with thee; and prosper thou, and build the house of the LORD thy God, as he hath said of thee.

12 Only the LORD give <sup>a</sup> thee wisdom and understanding, and give thee charge concerning Israel, that thou mayest keep the law of the LORD thy God.

13 Then <sup>a</sup> shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed to fulfil the statutes and judgments which the LORD charged Moses with concerning Israel: be <sup>a</sup> strong, and of good courage; dread not, nor be dismayed.

14 Now, behold, in my <sup>a</sup> trouble I have prepared for the house of the LORD a hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver; and of brass and iron without weight; for it is in abundance: timber also and stone have I prepared; and thou mayest add thereto.

15 Moreover there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers and <sup>a</sup> workers of stone and timber, and all manner of cunning men for every manner of work.

16 Of the gold, the silver, and the brass, and the iron, there is no number. Arise therefore, and be doing, and the LORD <sup>a</sup> be with thee.

17 ¶ David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is not the LORD your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on <sup>a</sup> every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into my hand; and the land is subdued before the LORD, and before his people.

19 Now set <sup>a</sup> your heart and your soul to seek <sup>a</sup> the LORD your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to bring <sup>a</sup> the ark of the covenant of the LORD and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 David in his old age maketh Solomon king. 2 The number and distribution of the Levites. 7 The families of the Gershonites. 12 The sons of Kohath. 21 The sons of Merari. 24 The office of the Levites.

SO <sup>a</sup> when David was old and full of days, he made Solomon his son king over Israel.

2 ¶ And he gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites.

3 Now the Levites were numbered from the age of thirty <sup>a</sup> years and upward: and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thousand.

4 Of which, twenty and four thousand were to <sup>a</sup> set forward the work of the house of the LORD; and six thousand were <sup>a</sup> officers and judges:

5 Moreover four thousand were porters; and four thousand praised the LORD with the instruments <sup>a</sup> which I made, said David, to praise therewith.

6 And David divided them into <sup>a</sup> courses among the sons of Levi, namely, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

7 ¶ Of the Gershonites were, <sup>a</sup> Laadan, and Shimei.

8 The sons of Laadan; the chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three.

9 The sons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan.

10 And the sons of Shimei were, Jahath, <sup>a</sup> Zina, and Jeush, and Beriah. These four were the sons of Shimei.

11 And Jahath was the chief, and Zizah the second: but Jeush and Beriah <sup>a</sup> had not many sons; therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's house.

12 ¶ The sons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four.

13 The sons of Amram; Aaron and Moses: and <sup>a</sup> Aaron was separated, that he should sanctify the most holy things, he and his sons for ever, to <sup>a</sup> burn incense before the LORD, to minister unto him, and to bless <sup>a</sup> in his name for ever.

14 Now concerning Moses the man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi.

15 The sons of Moses were, Gershom, and Eliezer.

16 Of the sons of Gershom, <sup>a</sup> Shebuel was the chief.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were, Rehabiah the <sup>a</sup> chief. And Eliezer had none other sons; but the sons of Rehabiah were <sup>a</sup> very many.

18 Of the sons of Izhar; <sup>a</sup> Shelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, and Jakameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel; Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

21 ¶ The sons of Merari; Mahli, and Mushi. The sons of Mahli; Eleazar, and Kish.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters: and their <sup>a</sup> brethren the sons of Kish took them.

A. M. 2887.
B. C. 1017.

c ver. 14.

d 1 Ki. 7. 47.

e 1 Ki. 5. 6.

f 1 Ki. 3. 7.

g Est. 3. 12.

Is. 64. 11.

Eze. 7. 20.

Hag. 2. 3.

h c. 17. 1, &c.

28. 2, &c.

i De. 12. 5, 11.

j 1 Ki. 3. 12.

k Nu. 31. 19.

l That is,

peaceable.

m 1 Ki. 4. 25.

Ps. 72. 7.

n 2 Sa. 7. 13.

o Ps. 89. 26.

He. 1. 5.

p ver. 16.

q 1 Ki. 3. 9.

Ps. 72. 1.

Pr. 2. 7.

Ja. 1. 5.

r 2 Ch. 20. 20.

Ps. 118. 6.

s De. 31. 7, 8.

Job. 1. 6, 9.

t or, poverty.

u That is,

masons

and carpenters.

v ver. 11.

w De. 12. 10.

Job. 22. 4.

2 Sa. 7. 1.

c. 23. 25.

x 2 Ch. 20. 3.

y Ps. 27. 4.

z 1 Ki. 3. 6,

21.

A. M. 2889.

B. C. 1015.

a 1 Ki. 1. 33,

&c.

c. 28. 5.

b Nu. 4. 3, 47.

c or, oversee.

d De. 16. 18.

e 2 Ch. 29.

35. 26.

Am. 6. 5.

f divisions.

g or, Libni.

c. 6. 17.

h or, Zizah.

ver. 11.

i did not multiply sons.

j Ex. 28. 1,

&c.

He. 5. 4.

k Nu. 16. 40.

l Nu. 6. 23.

26.

m <sup>a</sup> Shebuel.

c. 24. 20.

n or, first.

o highly multiplied.

p Shelomith.

c. 24. 22.

q or, kins-

men.

Ver. 3, 4. David prepared iron, . . . and brass, . . . and cedar wood. —Which last he received from Tyre, as Solomon did afterwards, 1 Ki. v. 5–10.

Ver. 7. It was in my mind, &c. —See 2 Sam. vii. 2. 1 Kings viii. 17, &c.

Ver. 8. Thou hast shed blood abundantly. —See chap. xxviii. where the most of this charge is repeated and amplified.

Ver. 14. In my trouble. —i. e. he had avoided show and splendour in his own establishment for this purpose. —A hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver, would, according to the usual reckoning, amount to a sum so vast and incredible, that it is not without reason supposed that there must be some mistake, either in the number of talents, or in estimating their value. Yet the accounts of the immense treasures of other eastern princes, seem to render the account credible.

Ver. 19. Now set your heart. —See chap. xxviii. 9.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 5. Four thousand praised. —See Introduction to the book of Psalms.

Ver. 7. Laadan. —(Laadan and Libni seem to have been two distinct names of this person; but the variation of Shimi and Shimeel exists only in the translation, the original being uniform.) —Bagster.

23 The sons of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth, three.

24 ¶ These were the sons of Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were<sup>r</sup> counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of twenty<sup>a</sup> years and upward.

25 For David said, The LORD God of Israel hath given rest<sup>i</sup> unto his people,<sup>u</sup> that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever:

26 And also unto the Levites: they shall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

27 For by the last words of David the Levites were<sup>v</sup> numbered from<sup>w</sup> twenty years old and above:

28 Because their<sup>x</sup> office was to wait on the sons of Aaron for the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house of God;

29 Both for the<sup>y</sup> shew-bread, and for the fine<sup>z</sup> flour for meat-offering, and for<sup>a</sup> the unleavened cakes, and for that which is baked in the<sup>b</sup> pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of<sup>c</sup> measure and size;

30 And<sup>d</sup> to stand every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and likewise at even;

31 And to offer all burnt-sacrifices unto the LORD in<sup>e</sup> the sabbaths, in the new moons, and on the set<sup>f</sup> feasts, by number, according to the order commanded unto them, continually before the LORD:

32 And that they should keep<sup>g</sup> the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and<sup>h</sup> the charge of the sons of Aaron their brethren, in the service of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

<sup>i</sup> The divisions of the sons of Aaron by lot into four and twenty orders. <sup>20</sup> The Kohathites, <sup>27</sup> and the Merarites divided by lot.

NOW<sup>a</sup> these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron. The sons of Aaron; Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

2 But Nadab and Abihu died<sup>b</sup> before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech<sup>c</sup> of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were they divided by<sup>d</sup> lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the

A. M. 2969

B. C. 1015.

r Nu. 10. 17.

21.

s ver. 27.

Ezr. 3. 8.

t c. 22. 18.

u or, and he dwell-

eth.

v numbers.

w ver. 3. 24.

x station was at the

hand of

Ne. 11. 24.

y Ex. 23. 30.

z Le. 6. 30.

a Le. 2. 4. 7.

b or, flat

plate.

c Le. 19. 35.

d 2 Ch. 29.

25. 26.

Ezr. 3. 10.

11.

Ps. 135. 1, 2.

e Nu. 10. 10.

Ps. 81. 3.

f Le. 23. 4.

&amp;c.

g Nu. 1. 53.

h Nu. 3. 6. 9.

a Le. 10. 1. 6.

Nu. 36. 60.

b Nu. 3. 4.

c 1 Sa. 21. 1.

22. 9, &amp;c.

d Jos. 18. 10.

Pr. 16. 33.

Jo. 1. 7.

Ac. 1. 26.

e house of the father.

f Ne. 12. 4.

17.

La. 1. 5.

g c. 9. 25.

h c. 23. 16.

Shubael.

i c. 23. 18.

Shelomoth.

j Ex. 6. 19.

k c. 23. 22.

l c. 25. 8.

scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one<sup>e</sup> principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah,

8 The third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin,

10 The seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to<sup>f</sup> Abijah.

11 The ninth to Jeshuah, the tenth to Shecaniah,

12 The eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim,

13 The thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeah,

14 The fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer,

15 The seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphses,

16 The nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezkel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul, 18 The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Maaziah.

19 These were the orderings<sup>g</sup> of them in their service to come into the house of the LORD, according to their manner, under Aaron their father, as the LORD God of Israel had commanded him.

20 ¶ And the rest of the sons of Levi were these: Of the sons of Amram;<sup>h</sup> Shubael: of the sons of Shubael; Jehdeiah.

21 Concerning Rehabiah: of the sons of Rehabiah, the first was Isshiah.

22 Of the Izharites;<sup>i</sup> Shelomoth: of the sons of Shelomoth; Jahath.

23 And the sons of Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth.

24 Of the sons of Uzziel; Michah: of the sons of Michah; Shamir.

25 The brother of Michah was Isshiah: of the sons of Isshiah; Zechariah.

26 ¶ The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi; the sons of Jaaziah; Beno.

27 The sons of Merari by Jaaziah; Beno, and Shoham, and Zaccur, and Ibri.

28 Of Mahli came Eleazar, who<sup>k</sup> had no sons.

29 Concerning Kish: the son of Kish was Jerahmeel.

30 The sons also of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jerimoth. These were the sons of the Levites after the house of their fathers.

31 These likewise cast lots over<sup>l</sup> against their brethren the sons of Aaron in the presence of David the king, and Zadok, and Ahimelech, and the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites, even the principal fathers over against their younger brethren.

Ver. 24. From the age of twenty.—[At first, David appointed the Levites to serve from thirty years old and upwards; but considering, probably, that the temple, which was about to be built, with its courts, chambers, &c. would require a more numerous ministry, he fixed this period, by this subsequent regulation, at twenty years and upwards. In the time of Moses, the age was from thirty years to fifty; here this latter period is not mentioned, probably because the service was not so laborious now; for the ark being fixed, they had no longer any burthens to carry; and therefore even an old man might continue to serve.]—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Shew-bread.—[It was the priest's office to place this bread before the LORD; and it was their privilege to feed on the old loaves when they were replaced by the new.—Measure and size.—The standards of all weights and measures were in the sanctuary; and therefore the Levites had the inspection of weights and measures of every kind, that no fraud might in this way be committed. Honesty is inseparably connected with piety; and hence the Levites, being sufficiently numerous were employed to superintend the former as well as the latter.]—Bagster

CHAP. XXIV.—In this chapter, the priests and Levites are divided into 24 courses.

Ver. 2. Nadab and Abihu died before their father.—Levit. x. 1, &c.

Ver. 3. Ahimelech.—[The same as Abiathar, who was high priest in the time of David. See note on 1 Sam. xxi. 1.]

Ver. 7. Jehoiarib.—[Joiarib, is merely a contraction of Jehoiarib, by the omission of hay. It was thought, by the Jews of after ages, to be a great honour to be descended from this person. The Maccabees were descended from him; and Josephus thought himself noble, because he sprang from the first of the 24 courses.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Abijah.—[As the Evangelist Luke mentions the course of Abia, it is evident that these courses of the priests, established by David, no doubt under divine direction, were continued, with some alteration, till the days of Christ: these records must therefore have been very useful after the Babylonian captivity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. These likewise cast lots.—The Levites were divided into 24 orders, corresponding to those of the priests. [The whole company being ranged, &c.]

CHAPTER XXV.

The number and offices of the singers. 8 Their division by lot into four and twenty orders.

MOREOVER David and the captains of the host separated to the service of the sons of <sup>a</sup> Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should prophesy with harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen according to their service was:

2 Of the sons of Asaph; Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nathaniah, and <sup>b</sup> Asarelah, the sons of Asaph under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied <sup>c</sup> according to the order of the king.

3 Of Jeduthun: the sons of Jeduthun; Gedaliah, and <sup>d</sup> Zeri, and Jeshaiiah, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah, <sup>e</sup> six, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp, to give thanks and to praise the Lord.

4 Of Heman: the sons of Heman; Bukkiah, Mattaniah, <sup>f</sup> Uzziel, <sup>g</sup> Shebuel, and Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, and Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth:

5 All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the <sup>h</sup> words of God, to lift up the horn. And God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

6 All these were under the hands of their father for song in the house of the Lord, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, <sup>i</sup> according to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman.

7 So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the Lord, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight.

8 ¶ And they cast lots, ward against ward, as well the small as the great, the teacher <sup>k</sup> as the scholar.

9 Now the first lot came forth for Asaph to Joseph: the second to Gedaliah, who with his brethren and sons were twelve:

10 The third to Zaccur, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

11 The fourth to Izri, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

12 The fifth to Nathaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

13 The sixth to Bukkiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

14 The seventh to Jesharelah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

15 The eighth to Jeshaiiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

16 The ninth to Mattaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

17 The tenth to Shimei, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

18 The eleventh to <sup>l</sup> Azareel, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

A. M. 2289.
B. C. 1015.

a. c. 6.33, &c.

b otherwise called Je-sharelah.
ver. 14.

c by the king of the king.
ver. 6.

d or, Izri.
ver. 11.

e with Shimei,
mentioned
ver. 17.

f or,
Azareel,
ver. 18.

g or, Shu-
buel.
ver. 20.

h or, matters.

i by the hands of the king.
ver. 2.

j c. 24.5.

k 2Ch. 23.13.

l Uzziel.
ver. 1.

λ Probably this person was called by both names;
or Uzziel may have a mistake
for Azareel.
In the Sy-riac and Arabic,
the name
is nearly the same in both places.

a or, Shele-minah.
ver. 14.

b or, Ebi-
saph.
c. 6.37.
9.19.

c c. 15.19,
21.
16.5, 38.

d i.e. Obed-edom.
see 13.11.
Ps. 128.1, 2.

e Ne. 11.14.

f Mat. 25.15.
1 Co. 12.4.
11.
2 Co. 3.6.
1 Pe. 4.11.

g c. 16.38.

19 The twelfth to Hashabiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

20 The thirteenth to Shubael, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

21 The fourteenth to Mattithiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

22 The fifteenth to Jeremoth, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

23 The sixteenth to Hananiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

24 The seventeenth to Joshbekashah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

25 The eighteenth to Hanani, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

26 The nineteenth to Mallothi, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

27 The twentieth to Eliathah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

28 The one and twentieth to Hothir, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

29 The two and twentieth to Giddalti, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

30 The three and twentieth to Mahazioth, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

31 The four and twentieth to Romamti-ezer, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 The divisions of the porters. 13 The gates assigned by lot. 20 The Levites that had charge of the treasures. 29 Officers and judges.

CONCERNING the divisions of the porters: Of the Korhites was <sup>a</sup> Meshelemiah the son of Kore, of the sons of <sup>b</sup> Asaph.

2 And the sons of Meshelemiah were, Zechariah the first-born, Jediel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth,

3 Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh.

4 Moreover the sons of <sup>c</sup> Obed-edom were, Shemaiah the first-born, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth,

5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Peulthai the eighth: for God blessed <sup>d</sup> him.

6 Also unto Shemaiah his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their father: for they were mighty <sup>e</sup> men of valour.

7 The sons of Shemaiah; Othni, and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, whose brethren were strong men, Elihu, and Semachiah.

8 All these of the sons of Obed-edom: they and their sons and their brethren, able <sup>f</sup> men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-edom.

9 And Meshelemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen.

10 Also <sup>g</sup> Hosah, of the children of Merari, had sons; Simri the chief, (for though he was not the first-born, yet his father made him the chief;)

11 Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

according to their families, with the proper number of divisions, the order of their courses was assigned them by lot, without respect to rank, or seniority.]—B.

CHAP. XXV.—This chapter describes the number and offices of the singers and musicians, divided also into 24 courses.

Ver. 1. Captains.—[That is, the chiefs of the several orders; not military captains.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Which prophesied.—[The word prophesy, here seems to mean no more than praising God by singing inspired prophetic hymns.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Six.—[One seems wanting, and some of the versions supply "Shimei," mentioned ver. 17. But others include the father, Jeduthun, to make up the number.]

Ver. 5. Three daughters.—These were also singers. See Eccles. ii. 8.

Ver. 7. Cunning.—That is, skillful.—[These two hundred and eighty-eight, being twenty-four courses of 12 each, were more skillful than the other Levites; and being placed under the twenty-four sons of the chief singers, they had the four thousand before mentioned divided among them, to officiate by courses, according to their instructions: ch. xxiii. 5.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Ward.—[That is, one class against another, with a view to determine who should have the preference or precedence. Ward formerly signified a class or division: we still apply the term to the different apartments in hospitals; and to the more extensive districts into which cities are divided.—Teacher.—Even among the twenty-four leaders, some were more expert than others: some were teachers, and others were scholars; but every one was taken by the solemn casting of lots, without any regard to these distinctions. Thus all things were disposed for the preserving of order, and avoiding all disputes about precedence; there being no respect had, to this divine distribution, to birth; but the younger in course preceded the elder.]—B.

CHAP. XXVI.—This chapter assigns "the divisions of the porters," who were to keep the gates, and guard the treasures in the Lord's house.

Ver. 1. Divisions.—[There were four classes of these, each of which belonged to the four gates of the temple, which opened to the four cardinal points of heaven. Thus all things were disposed for the preserving of order, and avoiding all disputes about precedence; there being no respect had, to this divine distribution, to birth; but the younger in course preceded the elder.]—B.

Ver. 6. Mighty men.—[They were not only porters, or door-keepers, in the ordinary sense of the word, but they were a military guard to the gate, as Dr. Delaney suggests that the word shammim should be rendered here: and perhaps in this sense alone are we to understand their office, which appears to have been of considerable dignity, and conferred only on men of the first rank.]—Bagster.

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, having wars one against another, to minister in the house of the LORD.

13 ¶ And they cast lots,<sup>h</sup> as well the small as the great, according to the house of their fathers, for every gate.

14 And the lot eastward fell to <sup>i</sup> Shelemiah. Then for Zechariah his son, a wise counsellor, they cast lots; and his lot came out northward.

15 To Obed-edom southward; and to his sons the house of <sup>j</sup> Asuppim.

16 To Shuppim and Hosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shallecheth, by the causeway of the going <sup>k</sup> up, ward against ward.

17 Eastward were six Levites, northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asuppim <sup>l</sup> two and two.

18 At Parbar westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar.

19 These are the divisions of the porters among the sons of Kore, and among the sons of Merari.

20 ¶ And of the Levites, Ahijah was over the treasures of the house of God, and over the treasures <sup>m</sup> of the <sup>n</sup> dedicated things.

21 As concerning the sons of <sup>o</sup> Laadan; the sons of the Gershonite Laadan, chief fathers, even of Laadan the Gershonite, were <sup>p</sup> Jehieli.

22 The sons of Jehieli; Zetham, and Joel his brother, which were over the treasures of the house of the LORD.

23 Of the Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites:

24 And Shebuel the son of <sup>q</sup> Gershom, the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures.

25 And his brethren by Eliezer; Rehabiah his son, and Jeshaiiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri his son, and <sup>r</sup> Shelomith his son.

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated.

27 Out <sup>s</sup> of the <sup>t</sup> spoils won in battles did they dedicate to maintain the house of the LORD.

28 And all that Samuel the <sup>u</sup> seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.

29 ¶ Of the Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were for the outward business over Israel, for <sup>v</sup> officers and judges.

30 And of the Hebronites, Hashabiah and his brethren, men <sup>w</sup> of valour, a thousand and seven hundred, were <sup>x</sup> officers among them of Israel on this side Jordan westward in all the business of the LORD, and in the service of the king.

31 Among the Hebronites was <sup>y</sup> Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In the

A. M. 2889
B. C. 1015.

h or, as sell for the small as for the great.

i called Meshe-
mah.
ver. 1.

j gatherings.

k 1 Ki. 10. 5.
2 Ch. 9. 4.

l ver. 15.

m c. 28. 12.
Mal. 3. 10.

n holy

o or, Libni.
c. 6. 17.

p or, Jehiel.
c. 23. 8.
29. 8.

q c. 23. 16.

r c. 23. 18.

s Jos. 6. 19.

t battles
and spoils.

u 1 Sa. 9. 9.

v c. 23. 4.

w ver. 6.

x over the charge.

y c. 23. 19.

z Jos. 21. 39.

a thing.

b 2 Ch. 19. 11.

a 1 Ki. 4. 7.
27.

b c. 11. 11.

c or, Dodo.
2 Sa. 23. 9.

d or, principal
officer.
1 Ki. 4. 5.

e 2 Sa. 23. 20.
22.
c. 11. 22.
24.

f 2 Sa. 2. 18.
23.
23. 24.
c. 11. 26.

g c. 11. 28.

h c. 11. 27.

i 2 Sa. 21. 19.
c. 11. 23.

j c. 11. 28.

k 2 Sa. 23.
28.
c. 11. 30.

l c. 11. 31.

fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour at Jazer <sup>z</sup> of Gilead.

32 And his brethren, men of valour, were two thousand and seven hundred chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, for every matter pertaining to God, and <sup>a</sup> affairs <sup>b</sup> of the king.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 The twelve captains for every several month. 16 The princes of the twelve tribes. 23 The numbering of the people is hindered. 25 David's several officers.

NOW the children of Israel after their number, to wit, the chief fathers and captains of thousands and hundreds, and their officers that served the king in any matter of the courses, which came in and went out month <sup>a</sup> by month throughout all the months of the year, of every course were twenty and four thousand.

2 Over the first course for the first month was Jashobeam <sup>b</sup> the son of Zabdiel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

3 Of the children of Perez was the chief of all the captains of the host for the first month.

4 And over the course of the second month was <sup>c</sup> Dodai an Ahohite, and of his course was Mikloth also the ruler: in his course likewise were twenty and four thousand.

5 The third captain of the host for the third month was Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, a <sup>d</sup> chief priest: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

6 This is that Benaiah <sup>e</sup> who was mighty among the thirty, and above the thirty: and in his course was Ammizabad his son.

7 The fourth captain for the fourth month was Asahel <sup>f</sup> the brother of Joab, and Zebadiah his son after him: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

8 The fifth captain for the fifth month was Shamhuth the Izrahite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

9 The sixth captain for the sixth month was Ira <sup>g</sup> the son of Ikkesh the Tekoite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

10 The seventh captain for the seventh month was Helez <sup>h</sup> the Pelonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

11 The eighth captain for the eighth month was <sup>i</sup> Sibbecai the Hushathite, of the Zarahites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

12 The ninth captain for the ninth month was Abiezer <sup>j</sup> the Anetothite, of the Benjamites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

13 The tenth captain for the tenth month was Maharai <sup>k</sup> the Netophathite, of the Zarahites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

14 The eleventh captain for the eleventh month was Benaiah <sup>l</sup> the Pirathonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

15 The twelfth captain for the twelfth month

Ver. 24. Ruler of the treasures.—That is, treasurer.

Ver. 27. Spoils won in battle.—The spoils of their enemies were devoted to the expenses of the temple. So the heathen always devoted a portion of the spoil taken from the enemy to their deities.

CHAP. XXVII.—We have here an account of 12 chief captains, with their courses of 24,000 men each, and various other officers. The first fifteen verses partly correspond with 2 Sam. xxiii. 8—24.

Ver. 1. Chief fathers.—[The patriarchs, chief generals, or generals of brigade. This enumeration is widely different from that of the preceding. In that, we have the order and courses of the priests and Levites, in their ecclesiastical ministrations: in this, we have the account of the order of the civil service, what related simply to the political state of the king and the kingdom. Twenty-four persons, chosen out of David's worthies, each of whom had a second, were placed over 24,000 men, who all served a month in turn, at a time; and this was the whole of their service during the year, after which they attended to their own affairs. Thus the king had always on foot a regular force of 24,000, who served without expense to him or the state, and were not oppressed by the service, which took up only a twelfth part of their time; and by this plan he could, at any time, bring into the field 12 times 24,000, or 288,000 fighting men, independently of the 12,000 officers, which made, in the whole, an effective force of 300,000 soldiers; and all these men were prepared, disciplined, and ready at a call, without the smallest expense to the state or the king. These were, properly speaking, the militia of the Israelitish kingdom.]—Bagster

Ver. 8. Shamhuth.—[If this person was the same as Shammoth the Hara was <sup>m</sup> Heldai the Netophathite, of Othniel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

16 ¶ Furthermore over the tribes of Israel: the ruler of the Reubenites was Eliezer the son of Zichri: of the Simeonites, Shephatiah the son of Maachah:

17 Of the Levites, Hashabiah <sup>n</sup> the son of Kemuel: of the Aaronites, Zadok:

18 Of Judah, <sup>o</sup> Elihu, one of the brethren of David: of Issachar, Omri the son of Michael:

19 Of Zebulun, Ishmaiah the son of Obadiah: of Naphtali, Jerimoth the son of Azriel:

20 Of the children of Ephraim, Hoshea the son of Azaziah: of the half tribe of Manasseh, Joel the son of Pedaiah:

21 Of the half tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo the son of Zechariah: of Benjamin, Jaasiel the son of Abner:

22 Of Dan, Azareel the son of Jeroham. These were the princes of the tribes of Israel.

23 ¶ But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under: because the Lord had said <sup>p</sup> he would increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens.

24 Joab the son of Zeruiah began to number, but he finished not, because there fell <sup>q</sup> wrath of it against Israel; neither <sup>r</sup> was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David.

25 ¶ And over the king's treasures was Azmaveth the son of Adiel: and over the store-houses in the fields, in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jehonathan the son of Uziah:

26 And over them that did the work of the field for tillage of the ground was Ezri the son of Chelub:

27 And over the vineyards was <sup>s</sup> Shimei the Ramathite: over <sup>t</sup> the increase of the vineyards for the wine cellars was Zabdi the Shiphmite:

28 And over the olive trees and the <sup>u</sup> sycamore trees that were in the low plains was Baal-hanan the Gederite: and over the cellars of oil was Joash:

29 And over the herds that fed in Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite: and over the herds that were in the valleys was Shaphat the son of Adlai:

30 Over the camels also was Obil the Ishmaelite: and over the asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite:

31 And over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagerite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's.

32 Also Jonathan David's uncle was a counsellor, a wise man, and a <sup>v</sup> scribe: and Jehiel the <sup>w</sup> son of Hachmoni was with the king's sons.

A. M. 2939.
B. C. 1015.

m or, Heled.

c. 11.30.

n c. 26.30.

o 1 Sa. 16.6.

Etioh.

p Ge. 15.5.

q 2Sa. 24.15.

c. 21.7.

r ascended.

s that which was of the vineyards

t 1 Ki. 20.27.

u or, secretary.

v or, Hachmoni.

w 2Sa. 15.12.

x 2Sa. 15.37.

16.16.

y 1 Ki. 1.7.

z c. 11.6.

a c. 27.16.

b c. 27.1.2.

c. 27.25.

d or, cattle.

e or, and his sons.

f or, camels.

g c. 11.10.

h c. 2 Sa. 7.2.

Ps. 132.2.

7.

i Ps. 99.5.

La. 2.1.

j 1 Ki. 5.3.

k bloods.

l 1 Sa. 16.7.

13.

m Ge. 49.8.

10.

n c. 5.2.

Ps. 60.7.

78.63.

He. 7.14.

o 1 Sa. 16.1.

p c. 3.1, &c.

q 2 Sa. 7.13.

14.

r c. 22.13.

s strong.

t De. 4.6.

Mat. 5.14

.16.

u De. 29.10.

15.

v Ps. 119.4.

10.

w 1a. 34.15.

Ac. 17.11.

x De. 6.1.3.

y Ezr. 9.12.

Pr. 13.22.

z Je. 9.24.

Ju. 17.3.

a Job 36.11.

12.

b 2 Ki. 20.3.

Ps. 101.2.

Job 4.24.

Ho. 1.9.

He. 12.28.

c 1 Sa. 16.7.

Ps. 7.9.

Je. 17.10.

Re. 2.23.

d Ps. 139.2.

e 2 Ch. 15.2.

33 And Ahithophel <sup>w</sup> was the king's counsellor: and Hushai <sup>x</sup> the Archite was the king's companion:

34 And after Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of Benaiah, and <sup>y</sup> Abiathar: and the general of the king's army was <sup>z</sup> Joab.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 David in a solemn assembly having declared God's favour to him, and promise to his son Solomon, exhorted them to fear God. 9, 20 He encouraged Solomon to build the temple. 11 He gives him patterns for the form, and gold and silver for the materials.

AND David assembled all the princes of Israel, the princes <sup>a</sup> of the tribes, and the captains of the companies that <sup>b</sup> ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the stewards <sup>c</sup> over all the substance and <sup>d</sup> possession of the king, <sup>e</sup> and of his sons, with the <sup>f</sup> officers, and with the <sup>g</sup> mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

2 Then David the king stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, my brethren, and my people: As for me, <sup>h</sup> I had in my heart to build a house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and for the footstool <sup>i</sup> of our God, and had made ready for the building:

3 But God said unto me, Thou shalt not build a house for my name, <sup>j</sup> because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed <sup>k</sup> blood.

4 Howbeit the Lord God of Israel chose me <sup>l</sup> before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath chosen Judah <sup>m</sup> to be the ruler; and of the house of Judah, the house <sup>n</sup> of my father; and among the sons of my father he liked me to make <sup>o</sup> me king over all Israel:

5 And of all my sons, (for <sup>p</sup> the Lord hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen Solomon <sup>q</sup> my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel.

6 And he said <sup>r</sup> unto me, Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father.

7 Moreover I will establish his kingdom for ever, if <sup>s</sup> he be <sup>t</sup> constant to do my commandments and my judgments, as at this day.

8 Now therefore in the sight <sup>u</sup> of all Israel the congregation of the Lord, and in the audience of our <sup>v</sup> God, <sup>w</sup> keep and <sup>x</sup> seek for all the commandments of the Lord your God: that <sup>y</sup> ye may possess this good land, and leave <sup>z</sup> it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

9 ¶ And thou, Solomon my son, <sup>a</sup> know thou the God of thy father, and <sup>b</sup> serve him with a perfect <sup>c</sup> heart and with a willing mind: for the Lord searcheth <sup>d</sup> all hearts, and understandeth <sup>e</sup> all the imaginations of the thoughts: if <sup>f</sup> <sup>g</sup> thou seek him, he will be found of thee;

rite, or Shammah the Harodite, it is probable that he took the denomination Erahite, from one of his progenitors of the name of Isra, and derived the other from the place of his residence.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Tribes of Israel.—[These persons, called "princes of the tribes" in ver. 22, and ch. xxviii. 1. appear to have been civil rulers over their several tribes, and honorary men, without pay, not unlike the lords lieutenants of English counties. In this enumeration there is no mention of the tribes of Gad and Asher, probably because they were joined to the neighbouring tribes: Or, perhaps, the account of these has been lost from the register.]—Bagster.

Ver. 23. David took not, &c.—[It seems probable, from this passage, that Joab began, by David's order, to number the children, as well as adults, but was prevented from finishing the account, probably because the plague had begun. The numbering of the effective men might have been deemed a political expedient: but pride and ostentation alone could dictate the numbering of minors and infants, especially as God had pronounced the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, innumerable.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Store-houses in the fields.—[That is, subterranean store-houses. See Orient. Lit. No. 621.

Ver. 28. Sycamore.—[Heb. Shikmim, Syriac, shkmo, and Arabic, jummeez, is the sycamore of the Greeks, so called from a fig-tree and a mulberry-tree, because it resembles the latter in its leaves, and the former in its fruit. "The sycamore," says Norden, "is of the height of a bench, and bears its fruit in a manner quite different from other trees: it has them on the trunk itself, which shoots out little sprigs, in form of grape stalks, at the end of which grow the fruit close to one another, almost like a cluster of grapes. The tree is always green, and bears fruit several times in the year, without observing any certain seasons; for I have seen some sycamores that have given fruit two months after others. The fruit has the figure and smell of real figs, but is inferior to them in the taste, having a disgusting sweetness. Its colour is a yellow, inclining to an ochre, shadowed by a flesh colour. In the inside it resembles the common figs, excepting that it has a blackish colouring with yellow spots. This sort of tree is pretty common in Egypt; the people, for the greater part, live upon its fruit, and think themselves well regaled when they have a piece of bread, a couple of sycamore figs, and a pitcher of water."—Bagster.

Ver. 33. Ahithophel . . . and Hushai.—See 2 Sam. xv. 12; xvi. 16. Ver. 34. Jehoiada son of Benaiah.—Or, "Benaiah son of Jehoiada;" two MSS. and Targum. See ver. 5; xi. 22.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. And of his sons.—Meaning that the king's sons were members of this grand council.—With the officers.—Meaning, doubtless, civil officers, as chamberlains, &c.

Ver. 4. Hast shed blood.—So chap. xxii. 8. "much blood." The heathen had a sense of the inconsistency of war with devotion. When, therefore, Aeneas carried off his aged father, to save him from the enemy, and with him their household gods; not daring to carry them in his own hands, he put them into the hands of his father, saying,

"Our country's gods, our relics, and the bands,
Hail you, my father, in your guiltless hands;
In me 'tis impious holy things to bear,
Red as I am with slaughter, new from war."
Dryden's Virgil, Æn. ii

but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

10 Take heed now; for <sup>t</sup> the LORD hath chosen thee to build a house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it.

11 ¶ Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasures thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy-seat,

12 And the pattern <sup>o</sup> of all that <sup>b</sup> he had by the spirit, <sup>i</sup> of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasures of the house of God, and of the treasures <sup>j</sup> of the dedicated things:

13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels <sup>k</sup> of service in the house of the LORD.

14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service:

15 Even the weight for the <sup>l</sup> candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick.

16 And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shew-bread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver:

17 Also pure gold for the <sup>m</sup> flesh-hooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basins he gave gold by weight for every basin; and likewise silver by weight for every basin of silver:

18 And for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the <sup>n</sup> cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

19 All this, said David, the LORD <sup>o</sup> made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

20 ¶ And David said to Solomon his son, Be <sup>p</sup> strong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; <sup>q</sup> he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the LORD.

21 And, behold, the courses <sup>r</sup> of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee for all manner of workmanship every willing skilful <sup>s</sup> man, for any manner of service: also the princes and all the people will be wholly <sup>t</sup> at thy commandment.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 David, by his example and entreaty, 6 causeth the princes and people to offer willingly. 10 David's thanksgiving and prayer. 20 The people, having blessed God, and sacrificed, make Solomon king. 26 David's reign and death.

FURTHERMORE David the king said unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom God alone hath chosen, is yet young

A. M. 2989.
B. C. 1015.

( ver. 6.

g Ex. 31. 2, 3.

h was with him.

i Ex. 25. 40.

He. 8. 5.

j c. 25. 20.

k 1 Ki. 7. 13.

l Zec. 4. 2.

Re. 1. 13.

20.

m 1 Sa. 2. 13.

14.

n Ex. 25. 18.

1 Sa. 4. 4.

1 Ki. 6. 23.

He. 9. 5.

o ver. 11, 12.

p De. 31. 7, 8.

1 Sa. 1. 9.

c. 22. 13.

q He. 13. 5.

r c. 24 to 26.

s Ex. 35. 25.

26.

36. 1, 2.

Ro. 13. 1.

t Tit. 3. 1.

u 1 Sa. 1. 3, 7.

c. 22. 5.

Pr. 4. 3.

v Ex. 23. 20.

39. 6, c.

Is. 54. 11.

12.

Re. 21. 18.

c 1 Ki. 9. 28.

Job 28. 16.

d fill his hand.

e c. 27, & c.

f 2 Co. 9. 7.

g c. 26. 21.

h Pr. 23. 15.

i 2 Ch. 20. 26.

28.

j Ps. 89. 52.

1 Th. 1. 17.

Re. 5. 12.

13.

k Ge. 33. 20.

l Mat. 6. 13.

m De. 8. 18.

Pr. 18. 18.

Ec. 5. 19.

Ro. 11. 36.

n Ps. 75. 6, 7.

o Is. 40. 20.

p retain, or, obtain strength.

q Ro. 11. 36.

Ja. 1. 17.

r hand.

s Ps. 39. 12.

He. 11. 13.

1 Pe. 2. 11.

t Job. 14. 2.

Ps. 90. 9.

102. 11.

114. 4.

Is. 40. 6, 8.

Ja. 4. 14.

u expectation.

* and tender, and the work is great: for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God.

2 Now I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; <sup>b</sup> onyx stones, and stones to be set, glistering stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones in abundance.

3 Moreover, because I have set my affection to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

4 Even three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of <sup>c</sup> Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal:

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to <sup>d</sup> consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 ¶ Then <sup>e</sup> the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers of the king's work, offered <sup>f</sup> willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God, of gold five thousand talents and ten thousand drachms, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of Jehiel <sup>g</sup> the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and David the king also <sup>h</sup> rejoiced with great joy.

10 ¶ Wherefore David blessed <sup>i</sup> the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, Blessed <sup>j</sup> be thou, LORD God of Israel <sup>k</sup> my father, for ever and ever.

11 <sup>l</sup> Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine: thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all.

12 Both <sup>m</sup> riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thy hand is power and might; and in thy hand it is <sup>n</sup> to make great, and to give strength <sup>o</sup> unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But who am I, and what is my people that we should be <sup>p</sup> able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and <sup>q</sup> of thy <sup>r</sup> own have we given thee.

15 For <sup>s</sup> we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our <sup>t</sup> days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none <sup>u</sup> abiding.

16 O LORD our God, all this store that we have

Ver. 11. Pattern.—[He gave him an ichnograph of the building, with elevations, sections, and specifications of every part: and all this he himself received by inspiration from God himself, (ver. xii. 19.) just as Moses had received the plan of the tabernacle.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. The Candlesticks.—"There was but one chandelier in the tabernacle; ten in the temple," says Dr. Clarke, 1 Kings vii. 49. But this is not clear to us; we rather conceive the meaning to be, that as that chandelier in the tabernacle had three lamps on each side, and one in the middle, so that in the temple had five on each side; by this verse it should seem, however, that there were other candlesticks and lamps, both of gold and silver.

Ver. 18. Chariot of the cherubim.—As these splendid figures had their wings spread out on each side, this would have somewhat the appearance of a grand war-chariot, while the mercy-seat beneath those wings was always considered as the throne of Deity. See also 2 Sam. xxii. 11.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1. Young and tender.—Solomon appears to have been at this time not more than 18.

Ver. 2. Marble stones.—Josephus says the temple was built of large blocks of white marble, beautifully polished.

Ver. 5. To consecrate his service.—Here is a beautiful allusion to the form of consecrating a priest, namely, by putting into his hand the sacrifice he was to offer; so now, if any man wished to consecrate his service or his property to the Lord, let him "fill his hand" with a present for the occasion.

Ver. 15. None abiding.—i. e. no dependence on our continuance in life prepared to build thee a house for thy holy name cometh of thy hand, and is all thine own.

17 I know also, my God, that <sup>w</sup> thou triest the heart, and hast pleasure <sup>x</sup> in uprightness. As for me, in the uprightness of my heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with joy thy people; which are <sup>y</sup> present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

18 O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and <sup>z</sup> prepare <sup>a</sup> their heart unto thee:

19 And give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for the which <sup>b</sup> I have made provision.

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, Now bless <sup>c</sup> the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and bowed down their heads, and worshipped the LORD, and the king.

21 And they sacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink-offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel:

22 And did eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness. And they

A. M. 2689.
B. C. 1015.
v Ps. 24. 1.
w c. 28. 9.
x Pr. 11. 20.
y or, found.

z or, establish.
Ps. 10. 17.
a Pr. 16. 1.
b c. 22. 14.
c Ps. 145. 1.

d 1 Ki. 1. 34, &c.

e gave the hand under.
Ge. 24. 2.
47. 29.
2 Ch. 30. 8.
Eze. 17. 18.

f Ec. 2. 9.

g 1 Ki. 2. 11.

h Ge. 25. 8.

i Job. 5. 26.

j words, or, history.

k Da. 4. 23, 25.

made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and <sup>d</sup> anointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be priest.

23 ¶ Then Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father: and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him.

24 And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, <sup>e</sup> submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.

25 And the LORD magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and bestowed <sup>f</sup> upon him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

26 ¶ Thus David the son of Jesse reigned over all Israel.

27 And <sup>g</sup> the time that he reigned over Israel was forty years; seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

28 And he <sup>h</sup> died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour: and Solomon his son reigned in his stead.

29 Now the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the <sup>i</sup> book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer, 30 With all his reign and his might, and the times <sup>j</sup> that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries.

Ver. 20. Worshipped God and the king.—Not in the same act of worship, we presume; but when they had worshipped the Lord, they then bowed also to the king.

Ver. 22. King the second time.—Before, he was made king by his father David, 1 Kings vi. 32—34, now by the people.

Ver. 23. Sat on the throne of the LORD.—Notwithstanding the Israelites were suffered to have a king, there was always a reserve of the supreme authority to the Lord. Isa. xxviii. 22.

Ver. 28. Died in a good old age.—David at his death had every thing that his heart could wish:—“he died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour;” having gained more renown than any crowned head ever did. “David,” says Dr. Delaney, “was a true believer, a zealous adorer of God, teacher of His law and worship, and inspirer of His praise. A glorious example, a perpetual and inexhaustible fountain of true piety. A consummate and unrivalled hero; a skilful and fortunate captain; a steady patriot; a wise ruler; a faithful, generous, and magnanimous friend; and what is yet rarer, a no less generous and magnanimous enemy. A true penitent, a divine musician, a sublime poet, and an inspired prophet. ‘Ere birth a peasant, by merit a prince! In youth a hero, in manhood a monarch, and in age a saint.’”—Bagster.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THIS book is a continuation of the history begun in the former book. It in some respects coincides with the books of Kings. But there, the histories of Judah and Israel are carried on together; as those of England and Scotland are by some of their historians: here, the affairs of Judah are more fully and distinctly recorded, while those of Israel are only mentioned occasionally, when required by the main subject; as an English historian would sometimes digress concerning the affairs of France or Germany, in elucidating his narrative. “There are several things contained in this book, of which no mention is made there,” (in Kings,) “particularly in the history of Jehoshaphat and Hezekiah: and many other things there mentioned, are here more fully and clearly explained, as will be observed in the acts of Ahijah, Asa, Joash, and other kings of Judah.”—Bp. Patrick. The history opens with the accession of Solomon, and contains a narrative of the several kings of his race, who reigned in succession, till the Babylonish captivity; and it concludes with an intimation of Cyrus’s decree for the restoration of the Jews and the rebuilding of the temple, about four hundred and eighty years after.—Besides the additional practical instruction here afforded, especially in respect of the different effects of piety, or profaneness, in the affairs of nations favoured with revelation; this history throws great light on the prophetic writings, which can by no means be well understood without constantly adverting to it. The prophecies contained in it either were fulfilled soon after they were spoken, or coincide with those before considered; and it is not always easy to determine concerning subsequent scriptural references, whether they relate to this book or to the book of Kings. Only a part of the chapters will require an exposition.

CHAPTER I.

1 The solemn offering of Solomon at Gibeon. 7 Solomon’s choice of wisdom is blessed by God. 13 Solomon’s strength and wealth.

AND <sup>a</sup> Solomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, and the LORD <sup>b</sup> his God was with him, and magnified <sup>c</sup> him exceedingly.

2 Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, to the captains <sup>d</sup> of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers.

3 So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went <sup>e</sup> to the high place that was at Gibeon; for there <sup>f</sup> was the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses the servant of the LORD had made in the wilderness.

4 But <sup>g</sup> the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

5 Moreover the brazen altar, <sup>h</sup> that Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, <sup>i</sup> he

A. M. 2689.
B. C. 1015.

a 1 Ki. 2. 16.

b Ge. 38. 2.

c 1 Ch. 29. 25.

d 1 Ch. 27. 1.

e 1 Ki. 3. 4, &c.

f 1 Ch. 16. 29.

g 1 Ch. 15. 1, &c.

h Ex. 38. 1, 2.

i or, was there.

j 1 Ch. 28. 5.

k much as the dust of the earth.

l Pr. 4. 7.

m Nu. 27. 17.

n Pr. 23. 7.

He. 4. 12.

put before the tabernacle of the LORD: and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brazen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered a thousand burnt-offerings upon it.

7 ¶ In that night did God appear unto Solomon and said unto him, Ask what I shall give thee.

8 And Solomon said unto God, Thou hast showed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me to reign in his <sup>j</sup> stead.

9 Now, O LORD God, let thy promise unto David my father be established: for thou hast made me king over a people <sup>k</sup> like the dust of the earth in multitude.

10 Give me now wisdom <sup>l</sup> and knowledge, that I may go <sup>m</sup> out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

11 And God said to Solomon, Because this was in thy <sup>n</sup> heart, and thou hast not asked CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Then Solomon.—[This seems to have taken place a short time after David’s decease, and according to some, in the second year of Solomon’s reign; when, being established in his kingdom, he convened his chief men, and spake to them concerning the solemn sacrifice which he purposed to offer to God.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. From Kirjath-jearim.—[The tabernacle and the brazen altar still remained at Gibeon; but David had brought away the ark out of the tabernacle, and placed it in a tent at Jerusalem.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7—12. In that night, &c.—[This was the night following the sacrifice which Solomon had offered.]—Bagster. The same dream is related, and that more fully, in 1 Kings iii. 5—15.

Ver. 11. This was in thy heart.—[This does not occur in Kings: and it riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

12 Wisdom and knowledge is <sup>a</sup> granted unto thee; and <sup>v</sup> I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as none <sup>a</sup> of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

14 And Solomon gathered <sup>r</sup> chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

15 And <sup>a</sup> the king made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the vale for abundance.

16 And <sup>a</sup> Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and a horse for a hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their <sup>v</sup> means.

CHAPTER II.

.. 17 Solomon's labourers for the building of the temple. 3 His embassy to Hiram for workmen and provision of stuff. 11 Hiram sendeth him a kind answer.

AND Solomon determined to build a house for the name of the LORD, and a house for his kingdom.

2 And Solomon told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.

3 ¶ And <sup>a</sup> Solomon sent to <sup>b</sup> Hiram the king of Tyre, saying, As thou didst deal with David <sup>c</sup> my father, and didst send him cedars, to build him a house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

4 Behold, I build a house to the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to him, and to burn <sup>d</sup> before him <sup>e</sup> sweet incense, and for the continual <sup>f</sup> shew-bread, and for the burnt-offerings <sup>g</sup> morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

5 And the house which I build is great; for <sup>h</sup> great <sup>i</sup> is our God above all gods.

6 But <sup>j</sup> who <sup>k</sup> is able to build him a house, seeing <sup>l</sup> the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then, that I should build him a house; save only to burn sacrifice before him?

implies, that the request of Solomon, as arising from a spiritual judgment and heart, was peculiarly acceptable to that God who searches, regards, and demands the heart. God promised Solomon all the things which he had not asked, except the life of his enemies; for he was to be a peaceable king, a type of the prince of peace.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14—17. Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen, &c.—See 1 Kings x. 26—29, which is the same almost verbatim. This intercourse with Egypt had been strictly forbidden, Deut. xvii. 16, and no doubt produced very evil consequences.

Ver. 16. Linen yarn.—[The word miktoeh, is regarded by the ancient translators as a proper name: the LXX. has ek-tékouē, "from Tekoa," the Vulgate, de Coa, "from Koa," which is adopted by Dr. Geddes; the Syriac, "from the city Aphelia;" and the Arabic, "ex urbe Australium." Boothart thinks it signifies a tribute; others suppose that it signifies a string or drove of horses; or, as Jarchi says, what the Germans call a stud; but Houbigant supposes it to be a corruption for mercenary, "chariots." Our English translation, however, which regards it as synonymous with telephah, seems by far the best. According to Norden, linen yarn is still one of the principal articles of commerce in Egypt, and is exported in very large quantities, together with unmanufactured flax and spun cotton; and Seraputis, 400 years ago, remarked, that though Christian countries abounded in flax, yet the goodness of the Egyptian was such, that it was dispersed even to the west.]—Bagster.

A. M. 2989.
B. C. 1015.

o c. 9.22.
Ec. 2.9.
Ja. 1.5.

p Mat. 6.33.

q 1 Ch. 29.25.

r 1 Ki. 10.16, &c.

s 1 Ki. 10.27, &c.
Job 22.24.

t gave.

u the going forth of the horses which was Solomon's.

v hands.

a 1 Ki. 5.2, &c.

b or, Hiram.
1 Ki. 5.1.

c 1 Ch. 14.1.

d Ex. 30.7.

e incense of spices.

f Ex. 25.30.
Le. 24.5, 9.

g Nu. 23.3, &c.

h Ps. 135.5.
1 Ti. 6.15.

i Is. 66.1, 2.

j hath received it, and obtained strength.

k e. 6.18.

l to grave

gravings.

m 1 Ch. 22.15.

n or, almug-gin.
1 Ki. 10.11.

o great and wonderful.

p 1 Ki. 10.9.
Ps. 72.17.

q Ps. 73.6.
Je. 10.10, 11.

r Ac. 14.15.
Ro. 10.6.

r knowing.

s 1 Ki. 7.13, 14.

t according to all thy need.

u Japho.
Jos. 19.46.
Ac. 9.36.

v 1 Ki. 9.20, 21.
c. 8.7, 8.

w the men, the strangers.

x 1 Ch. 22.2.

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill <sup>i</sup> to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, whom <sup>m</sup> David my father did provide.

8 Send me also cedar trees, fir trees, and <sup>n</sup> algum trees, out of Lebanon: for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon; and, behold, my servants shall be with thy servants, 9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be <sup>o</sup> wonderful great.

10 And, behold, I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.

11 ¶ Then Hiram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, Because <sup>p</sup> the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

12 Hiram said moreover, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, that made <sup>q</sup> heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, <sup>r</sup> endued with prudence and understanding, that might build a house for the LORD, and a house for his kingdom.

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, of Hiram my father's,

14 The <sup>s</sup> son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, skillful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father.

15 Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine, which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants:

16 And we will cut wood out of Lebanon, as much as thou shalt need: and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to <sup>t</sup> Joppa; and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 ¶ And <sup>v</sup> Solomon numbered all <sup>w</sup> the strangers that were in the land of Israel, after the numbering <sup>x</sup> wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found a hundred and fifty thousand and three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a-work.

CHAP. II. The substance of this whole chapter will be found in the 5th of the 1st Book of Kings, but with some transpositions and slight variations. See also 1 Ki. vii. 13, 14.

Ver. 8. Algum trees.—[Called in the parallel passage, by a transposition of letters, almuggin, or "almug trees," which is rendered by the Vulgate the thuya or lignus thuyæ wood. Theophrastus says, that "the thuyon or thuya tree grows near the temple of Jupiter Ammon (in Africa) and in the Cyrenaica; that it resembles the cypress in its boughs, leaves, stalk, and fruit; and that its wood (from its close texture) never rots." Josephus calls it torch or pine trees; but cautions us against supposing that the wood was like what was known in his time by that name; for these "were to the sight like the wood of the fig tree, but more white and shining." The Syriac version has kaiso of the fig tree, but more white and shining." Celsus queries whether it may not be the sandal tree, as the Rabbins and Dr. Geddes suppose.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Blessed be the LORD.—See 1 Ki. x. 9.
Ver. 13. Of Hiram my father's.—Some, as Dr. Boothroyd, make the latter word a part of this man's proper name; Hiram (or Hiram) Abiu. Others think Hiram refers to his own father. "A cunning workman of my father's," the late king. A third class consider it a term of courtesy and respect, as a man of superior talents; "My father Hiram."

CHAPTER III.

1 The place, and time, of building the temple. 3 The measure and ornaments of the house. 11 The cherubim. 14 The vail and pillars.

THEN <sup>a</sup> Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem in mount <sup>b</sup> Moriah, <sup>c</sup> where the LORD <sup>d</sup> appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshing-floor of <sup>e</sup> Ornan the Jebusite.

2 And he began to build in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein Solomon was <sup>f</sup> instructed <sup>g</sup> for the building of the house of God. The length by cubits after the first measure was threescore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the porch <sup>h</sup> that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was a hundred and twenty: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And the greater house he ceiled with fir tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm trees and chains.

6 And he <sup>i</sup> garnished the house with precious stones <sup>j</sup> for beauty: and the gold was gold of Parvaim.

7 He overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and graved cherubims on the walls.

8 ¶ And he made the most <sup>k</sup> holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 And in the most holy house he made two cherubims <sup>l</sup> of image work, and overlaid them with gold.

11 And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were <sup>m</sup> inward.

14 ¶ And he made the vail <sup>n</sup> of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and <sup>o</sup> wrought cherubims thereon.

15 ¶ Also he made before the house two pillars <sup>p</sup> of thirty and five cubits <sup>q</sup> high, and the chapter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits.

A. M. 2993.
B. C. 1011.

a 1 Ki. 6.1,
&c.

b Ge. 22.2, 14.

c or, which was seen of David his father.

d 1 Ch. 21.18.

e or, Arau-
nah.
2Sa. 24.18.

f founded.

g 1 Ch. 23.11.

h Jn. 10.23.
Ac. 3.11.
5.12.

i covered.

j 1 Ch. 29.2, 8.
Is. 54.11,
12.
Re. 21.18.
21.

k He. 9.3.9.

l or, (as some think) of moveable work.

m or, toward the house.

A. M.
2993, 3000.
B. C.
1011, 1004.

n Ex. 26.31.

o caused to ascend.

p 1 Ki. 7.15.
21.
Jc. 32.20, 21.

q long.

r i. e. he shall establish.

s i. e. in it is strength.

a Ex. 27.1,2
2Ki. 16.14.
Eze. 43.13
..17.

b 1 Ki. 7.23,
&c.

c from his brim to his brim.

d or, like a
lily-flower

e the work of burnt-offering.

f He. 9.23.

g Ex. 25.31.
40.
1 Ch. 23.12
..19.
He. 8.5.

h or, bowls.

i 1 Ki. 6.36.

j or, bowls.

k finished
to make.

16 And he made chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars; and made a hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains.

17 And he reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand <sup>r</sup> Jachin, and the name of that on the left <sup>s</sup> Boaz.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The altar of brass. 2 The molten sea upon twelve oxen. 6 The ten lavers, candlesticks, and tables. 9 The courts, and the instruments of brass. 19 The instruments of gold.

MOREOVER he made an altar <sup>a</sup> of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 ¶ Also he made a molten sea <sup>b</sup> of ten cubits <sup>c</sup> from brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 And under it was the similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was a hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, <sup>d</sup> with flowers of lilies; and it received and held three thousand baths.

6 ¶ He made also ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: <sup>e</sup> such things as they offered for the burnt-offering they washed <sup>f</sup> in them; but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ten candlesticks of gold according to their <sup>g</sup> form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. And he made a hundred <sup>h</sup> basins of gold.

9 ¶ Furthermore he made the court <sup>i</sup> of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 ¶ And Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the <sup>j</sup> basins. And Hiram <sup>k</sup> finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

12 To wit, the two pillars, and the pommels, and the chapters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the CHAP. III. The chapter parallel to this, is 1 Ki. vi. where some of the particulars are detailed more minutely, and others added.

Ver. 1. In mount Moriah.—This is generally understood to be the hill on which the temple was built, and adjacent to mount Zion. It was on some part of this hill that Abraham offered up his son Isaac.

Ver. 3. The first measure.—[It is supposed, with much probability, that the first measure means the cubit used in the time of Moses, contradistinguished from that used in Babylon, and which the Israelites used after their return from captivity: and, as these books were written after the captivity, it was necessary for the writer to make this remark, lest it should be thought that the measurement was by the Babylonish cubit, which was a palm or one sixth shorter than the cubit of Moses; which may serve to reconcile some variations in the historical books, with respect to numbers when applied to measures.]—B.

Ver. 4. One hundred and twenty.—[As the height of the temple was only 30 cubits, 120 seems too great a height for the porch; but the Syrian, Arabic, and the LXX. in the codex Alexandrianus have only twenty, probably reading instead of matlah veesrim, "one hundred and twenty," anmatoh esrim, "twenty cubits;" which brings it within the proportion of the other measures.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Gold of Parvaim.—Parvaim is supposed by Calmet to be the same as Sepharvaim in Armenia or Media; Bochart is of opinion that it is Taprobane, now the island of Ceylon, which he derives from taph, a border, and Parvan, i. e. "the coast of Parvan;" but the late Editor of Calmet thinks it the same as the Parvatoï mountains of Ptolemy at the head of the Indus.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Nails.—Under this term, bolts, &c. are supposed to be included.

Ver. 15–17. Two pillars, &c.—See 1 Ki. vi. 15–22. Isolated pillars of this nature were common among the ancients. Savary mentions two obelisks before the temple of Luxore, each 72 feet high; and some were higher.

CHAP. IV. This chapter is a repetition of great part of 1 Ki. vii.

Ver. 3. Under it was the similitude of oxen.—In 1 Kings vii. 24. we read "knops." Dr. Clarke supposes they might be ornaments, in the shape of "grapes, mushrooms, apples," or something else: but if we suppose they were the eyes of oxen, (or rather bulls,) it will solve the difficulty. Houbigant says, the original Bakarim signifies a species of black grape, or plum, called ox, or bull eyes. It can plainly have no reference to the figures of oxen, on which the sea stood.

Ver. 5. Three thousand baths.—The parallel passage in Kings says 2000, but as the Babylonians shortened the Mosaic cubit, (see note on ch. iii. 3.) so it is thought they lessened the measure of a bath; or else we must suppose some error in the transcribers.

Ver. 7. Ten candlesticks.—Or perhaps, "ten branches," or sconces. See 1 Chron. xxviii. 12, 19, and note.

Ver. 8. Ten tables.—The parallel text mentions one table only; perhaps the word should have been plural.—A hundred basins.—A sort of patera, or sa. critical spoons, with which they made libations.—Dr. Clarke.

two pommels of the chapters which were on the pillars;

13 And four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were upon the pillars.

14 He made also <sup>m</sup> bases, and <sup>n</sup> lavers made he upon the bases;

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The pots also, and the shovels, and the flesh-hooks, and all their instruments, did Huram <sup>o</sup> his father make to king Solomon for the house of the LORD of <sup>p</sup> bright brass.

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the <sup>q</sup> clay ground between Succoth and Zeredathah.

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 ¶ And Solomon made all the vessels that were for the house of God, the golden altar also, and the tables whereon the shew-bread <sup>r</sup> was set;

20 Moreover the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should burn <sup>s</sup> after the manner before the oracle, of pure gold;

21 And the <sup>t</sup> flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that <sup>v</sup> perfect gold;

22 And the snuffers, and the <sup>w</sup> basins, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and the entry of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

CHAPTER V.

1 The dedicated treasures. 2 The solemn induction of the ark into the oracle. 11 God being praised giveth a visible sign of his favour.

THUS <sup>a</sup> all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished: and Solomon brought in all the <sup>b</sup> things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

2 ¶ Then <sup>c</sup> Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark <sup>d</sup> of the covenant of the LORD out of the city <sup>e</sup> of David, which is <sup>f</sup> Zion.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king in the feast <sup>g</sup> which was in the seventh month.

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up.

6 Also king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in <sup>h</sup> the ark of the

A M.
2993.3000.
B C.
1011.1004.

1 face of
the.

m 1 Ki.7.27,
43.

n or, cal-
drons.

o 1 Ki.7.14, 45.

p made bright, or,
soured.

q thickness-es of the ground.

r Ex.25.30.

s Ex.27.30, 21.

t Ex.25.31,
&c. u perfec-tions of gold.

v or, bowls.

A M. 3000.
B C. 1004.

1 Ki.7.51.

b 1 Ch.22.14.

c 1 Ki.8.1,
&c.

d Nu.10.33, 38.

e 2 Sa.6.12.

f Ps.2.6.
32.2.
132.13.17.

g c.7.8.10.

h Ps.132.8.

i Ex.37.7.9.
He.9.4.5.

j Ex.37.3.5.

k or, they are there,
as 1 Ki.8.9.

l De.10.2.5.

m or, where.

n found.

o c.35.4.

p 1 Ch.25.1.

q 1 Ch.15.24.
Ps.68.25.

r Re.5.8.14.

s 1 Ch.16.34
41.
Ps.136.

t Ex.40.35.
c.7.2.
Eze.10.4.
Re.15.8.

u 1 Ki.8.12,
&c.

v 1 Le.16.2.
Ps.18.11.
He.12.18.

w Nu.6.23.
27.

x Ne.8.5.

y Lu.1.68.
70.

f De.12.5,11
g c.12.13.

h 1 Ch.28.4.

i 2 Sa.7.2,
&c.

l Ch.23.2,
&c.

covenant of the LORD unto his place, to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle; but they were not seen without. And <sup>k</sup> there it is unto this day.

10 There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses <sup>l</sup> put therein at Horeb, <sup>m</sup> when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place: (for all the priests that were <sup>n</sup> present were sanctified, and did not then wait by <sup>o</sup> course:

12 Also <sup>p</sup> the Levites which were the singers, all of them of Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being arrayed in white linen, having cymbals and psalteries and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them a hundred and twenty priests sounding <sup>q</sup> with trumpets:)

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one <sup>r</sup> sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music, and praised the LORD, saying, For <sup>s</sup> he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD;

14 So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for <sup>t</sup> the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Solomon, having blessed the people, blesteth God. 12 Solomon's prayer in the consecration of the temple, upon the brazen scaffold.

THEN <sup>a</sup> said Solomon, The LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick <sup>b</sup> darkness.

2 But I have built a house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 And the king turned his face, and blessed <sup>c</sup> the whole congregation of Israel: and all the congregation of Israel <sup>d</sup> stood.

4 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, who <sup>e</sup> hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt, I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build a house in, that <sup>f</sup> my name might be there; neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel.

6 But I have chosen <sup>g</sup> Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have chosen David <sup>h</sup> to be over my people Israel.

7 Now <sup>i</sup> it was in the heart of David my father to build a house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

Ver. 22. Entry, &c.—[Capellus, Houbigant, and Dr. Geddes, are persuaded, that we should read, agreeably to 1 Kings vii. 50, "The hinges also of the doors of the inner house," &c.; the word pothoth, "hinges," being mistaken for pathach, "an entry," or "door-way;" which mistake might easily occur in transcribing.]—Bagster.

CHAP. V. Ver. 2—14. Then Solomon assembled, &c.—These verses are a repetition of 1 Kings viii. 1—14, except that something is here added more fully as to the sacred music performed on this occasion: the performers being 120 priests with trumpets, besides a great number of voices, harps, psalteries, and cymbals. From the multitude of these, Dr. Clarke concludes that there could not be "much harmony;" as to "melody," (he says,) that must have been, as possible, as the noise was too great. From this we may infer, that the Doctor was not present at the Abbey performances in 1784 and 5; nor, we should think, at the anniversary of the charity children at St. Paul's, London, when 5000 or more voices united in the solemn assembly of Old Hundredth, a service with which the celebrated Haydn professed himself more affected than with all the music he had before heard. From the circumstance, however, of their all making but "one sound," there seems to be just reason for concluding, that they knew nothing of musical counterpoint, or modern harmony.

Ver. 2. In the feast.—Name of Tabernacles.

Ver. 9. Unto this day,—i. e. the day when these events were recorded; not the day when these extracts were made, after the captivity, and consequently long after the destruction of the temple.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Nothing in the ark.—In the Epistle to the Hebrews, it is expressly stated that in the ark were "the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant;" but it is evident that the apostle speaks there of the tabernacle erected by Moses, and of the state and contents of that tabernacle in the time of Moses; and in the temple there were several things added, and several left out.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VI. This chapter contains Solomon's prayer on this occasion; and it corresponds in sense, and for the most part in words, with the 8th chapter of the 1st Book of Kings. We may add, however, that the narrative may be illustrated by comparing the dedication of this temple with that of the Mosaic tabernacle related in Ex. xl. 33—38.

Ver. 5. Neither chose I any man, &c.—[The Judges and Saul were chosen by God, for a season, to be rulers of Israel; but not to establish a permanent and hereditary authority over that people, as was the case with David. This clause is wanting in the parallel passage of Kings; but it helps to clear the sense.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Chosen Jerusalem.—[This clause is also not found in Kings. Jerusalem was expressly marked out, by the building of the temple, to be the centre of the worship of Israel; as Jehovah had before spoken by Moses.]—Bagster.

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thy heart to build a house for my name, thou didst well in that it was in thy heart:

9 Notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house; but thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken: for I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as the LORD <sup>k</sup> promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

11 And in it have I put <sup>l</sup> the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And <sup>m</sup> he stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands:

13 For Solomon had made a brazen scaffold, of five cubits <sup>n</sup> long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court: and upon it he <sup>o</sup> stood, and kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven,

14 And said, O LORD God of Israel, there is <sup>p</sup> no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which <sup>q</sup> keepest covenant, and showest <sup>r</sup> mercy unto thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised <sup>s</sup> him; and spakest with thy mouth, and <sup>t</sup> hast fulfilled it with thy hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised <sup>u</sup> him, saying, There shall not <sup>v</sup> fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so <sup>w</sup> that thy children take heed to their way to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 Now then, O LORD God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 But will God in very deed dwell with <sup>x</sup> men on the earth? <sup>y</sup> behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I have built!

19 Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee:

20 That thine eyes may be open <sup>z</sup> upon this house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldst put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth <sup>a</sup> toward this place.

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall <sup>b</sup> make toward this place: hear thou from thy <sup>c</sup> dwelling place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, forgive.

22 ¶ If a man sin against his neighbour, and <sup>d</sup> an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house;

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by requiting the wicked, by recompensing <sup>e</sup> his way upon his own

A. M. 3000.
B. C. 1004.

j 1 Ch. 28. 23.

k 1 Ch. 17. 11.

l c. 5. 7, 10.

m 1 Ki. 8. 22.

&c.

n the length thereof, &c.

o Ne. 8. 4.

p Ex. 15. 11.

De. 4. 39.

7. 9.

q Ne. 1. 5.

Da. 9. 4.

r 1 Ch. 22. 9.

s ver. 4.

t Sa. 7. 12.

16.

u 1 Ki. 2. 4.

6. 12.

v a man be cut off.

w Ps. 132. 12.

x Ex. 29. 45.

46.

y Ps. 63. 13.

z or, in.

a pray.

b c. 30. 27.

c he require an oath of him.

d 2 Ki. 9. 26.

Ps. 10. 14.

e 28. 16.

17.

51. 56.

eor, emitted.

for, toward.

g Ps. 106. 40.

47.

h 1 Ki. 17. 13.

15. 6.

i 1. 5. 24.

Exe. 34. 26.

1 Thes. 2. 21.

22.

j c. 20. 5. 13.

k Joel 1. 4.

11. 2. 25.

l land of their gates.

m c. 32. 24.

Ja. 5. 13.

n Ps. 32. 2. 6.

142. 1, 2.

o or, toward.

p Ps. 62. 12.

q all the days which.

r upon the face of.

s 1. 56. 3. 6. 7.

10. 16.

Ac. 5. 27.

29.

t Ec. 2. 12.

13.

u 1. 46. 10.

v thy name is called upon this house.

w c. 14. 11. 12.

20. 6. c.

x Ps. 9. 3. 4.

y or, right.

z Ec. 7. 30.

Ja. 3. 2.

1. 1. 8.

a they that take them captives carry them away.

b bring back to their heart.

head; and by justifying the righteous by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 ¶ And if thy people Israel be <sup>e</sup> put to the worse before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee; and shall return and confess thy name, and pray and make supplication before thee <sup>f</sup> in this house;

25 Then <sup>g</sup> hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 ¶ When the heaven is shut up, and there is no <sup>h</sup> rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them;

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk; and send rain <sup>i</sup> upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there be <sup>j</sup> dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew <sup>k</sup> locusts, or caterpillars; if their enemies besiege them in the <sup>l</sup> cities of their land; whatsoever <sup>m</sup> sore or whatsoever sickness there be:

29 Then what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall know his <sup>n</sup> own sore and his own grief, and shall spread forth his hands <sup>o</sup> in this house:

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and <sup>p</sup> render unto every man according unto all his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men:)

31 That they may fear thee, to walk in thy ways, <sup>q</sup> so long as they live <sup>r</sup> in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

32 ¶ Moreover concerning the <sup>s</sup> stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and thy mighty hand, and thy stretched out arm; if they come and pray in this house;

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all <sup>t</sup> people of the earth may know thy name, and fear <sup>u</sup> thee, as doth thy people Israel, and may know that <sup>v</sup> this house which I have built is called by thy name.

34 ¶ If thy people go out to war <sup>w</sup> against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they pray unto thee toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name;

35 Then hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and maintain <sup>x</sup> their <sup>y</sup> cause.

36 ¶ If they sin against thee, (for <sup>z</sup> there is no man which sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and <sup>a</sup> they carry them away captives unto a land far off or near;

37 Yet if they <sup>b</sup> bethink themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly:

Ver. 13. A brazen scaffold.—This verse, which is an evident parenthesis, of the nature of an explanatory note is not to be found in the chapter of Kings above referred to.

Ver. 18. Heaven of heavens.—[Which words seem to imply, that there are systems and systems of systems, each possessing its sun, its primary and secondary planets; all extending beyond each other in unlimited space, in the same regular and graduated order which we find to prevail in our solar system; which, probably, in its thousands of millions of miles in diameter, is to some others, no more than the area of the lunar orbit of the Georgium Sidus.—Bagster.

Ver. 28. Dearth in the land.—[“Persia,” says Chardin, “is subject to have its harvest spoiled by hail, by drought, or by insects: either locusts or small insects, which they call sim, which are small white lice;” probably the caterpillars of the text.]—Bagster.

38 If<sup>e</sup> they return to thee with all their heart and with all their soul in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward the city<sup>a</sup> which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name :

39 Then<sup>e</sup> hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their<sup>f</sup> cause, and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

40 ¶ Now, my God, let, I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be attent<sup>g</sup> unto the prayer that is made in this place.

41 Now therefore<sup>h</sup> arise, O LORD God, into thy<sup>i</sup> resting place, thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let thy saints rejoice in<sup>j</sup> goodness.

42 O LORD God, turn not away the face of thine anointed: remember the<sup>k</sup> mercies of David thy servant.

CHAPTER VII.

1 God having given testimony to Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven, and glory in the temple, the people worship him. 4 Solomon's solomn sacrifice. 8 Solomon, having kept the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication of the altar, dismisseth the people. 12 God appearing to Solomon, giveth him promises upon condition.

NOW<sup>a</sup> when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire<sup>b</sup> came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices; and the glory<sup>c</sup> of the LORD filled the house.

2 And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good; for<sup>d</sup> his mercy endureth for ever.

4 ¶ Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

6 And the priests waited on their offices: the<sup>e</sup> Levites also with instruments of music of the LORD, which David the king had made to praise the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their<sup>f</sup> ministry; and<sup>g</sup> the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, because the brazen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

8 ¶ Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath<sup>h</sup> unto the river of Egypt.

9 And in the eighth day they made a<sup>i</sup> solomn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had showed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus<sup>j</sup> Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

12 ¶ And the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, and<sup>k</sup> have chosen this place to myself for a house of sacrifice.

13 If<sup>l</sup> I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people;

14 If my people,<sup>m</sup> which are called by my name, shall humble<sup>n</sup> themselves, and<sup>o</sup> pray, and seek<sup>p</sup> my face, and turn<sup>q</sup> from their wicked ways; then<sup>r</sup> will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

15 Now mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent<sup>s</sup> unto the prayer that is made in this place.

16 For now have I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe my statutes and my judgments;

18 Then will I establish the throne of thy kingdom, according as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not<sup>t</sup> fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 But<sup>u</sup> if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;

20 Then will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it to be a proverb and a by-word among all nations.

21 And this house, which is high, shall be an astonishment to every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?

22 And it shall be answered, Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Solomon's buildings. 7 The Gentiles which were left Solomon made tributaries; but the Israelites rulers. 11 Pharaoh's daughter removeth to her house. 12 Solomon's yearly solomn sacrifices. 14 He appointeth the priests and Levites to their places. 17 The navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.

AND<sup>a</sup> it came to pass at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the house of the LORD, and his own house, Ver. 41. Arise, O Lord.—[These concluding words are not in the books of Kings; but are taken, with some variation, from Psalm cxxxii. which probably was composed with reference to the removal of the ark at this time.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Fire came down.—This was the appointed token of acceptance, as we have repeatedly shown.

Ver. 4, 5. Offered sacrifices, &c.—Upon the extent of these sacrifices we have already remarked, note on 1 Kings viii. 63. The sacrifices were offered before the prayers, though mentioned afterwards. See Townsend's Old Testament.

Ver. 7—22. Moreover Solomon hallowed, &c.—These verses correspond to the eighth chapter of 1 Kings, from the 64th verse to the end of the 9th verse of the following chapter, with no material variation.

Ver. 9. A solomn assembly.—See Margin; so called from the strictness with which it was observed.

Ver. 13. If I shut up heaven.—[Famine and pestilence were two severe punishments inflicted on the Jewish people by God for their sins. The former was sometimes caused by want of rain, and sometimes by locusts, which devoured all the fruits of the earth; and a pestilence not unfrequently followed in their train.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. The first thirteen verses of this chapter nearly correspond with 1 Kings ix. 10—25, and the last three verses to 26—28 of the same chapter.

2 That the cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to <sup>b</sup> Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built Beth-horon <sup>c</sup> the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars;

6 And Baalath, and all the store cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and all <sup>d</sup> that Solomon desired <sup>e</sup> to build in Jerusalem, and in <sup>f</sup> Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

7 ¶ As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute <sup>g</sup> until this day.

9 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even two <sup>h</sup> hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 ¶ And Solomon brought up the daughter <sup>i</sup> of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are <sup>j</sup> holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD on the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the <sup>k</sup> porch, 13 Even after a certain rate <sup>l</sup> every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, three times <sup>m</sup> in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

14 ¶ And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, the courses <sup>n</sup> of the priests to their service, and the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required: the porters <sup>o</sup> also by their courses at every gate: for so <sup>p</sup> had David the man of God commanded.

15 And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites concerning any matter, or concerning the treasures.

16 ¶ Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD, and until it was finished. So the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 ¶ Then <sup>q</sup> went Solomon to Ezion-geber, and to <sup>r</sup> Eloth, at the sea side in the land of Edom.

18 And <sup>s</sup> Hiram sent him by the hands of his servants ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of <sup>t</sup> gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

CHAPTER IX.

<sup>1</sup> The queen of Sheba admireth the wisdom of Solomon. <sup>13</sup> Solomon's gold. <sup>15</sup> His targets. <sup>17</sup> The throne of ivory. <sup>20</sup> His vessels. <sup>23</sup> His presents. <sup>25</sup> His chariots and horse. <sup>26</sup> His tributes. <sup>29</sup> His reign and death.

AND <sup>a</sup> when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and camels that bare spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon told her all <sup>b</sup> her questions: and there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had seen the wisdom of Solomon, and the house that he had built,

4 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his <sup>c</sup> cup-bearers also, and their apparel; and his ascent by which he went up into the house of the LORD; there was no more spirit in her.

5 And she said to the king, It was a true <sup>d</sup> report which I heard in mine own land of thine <sup>e</sup> acts, and of thy wisdom:

6 Howbeit I believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the <sup>f</sup> one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou exceedest the fame that I heard.

7 Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 Blessed <sup>g</sup> be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the LORD thy God: because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment <sup>h</sup> and justice.

9 And <sup>i</sup> she gave the king a hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices great abundance, and precious stones: <sup>j</sup> neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, which <sup>k</sup> brought gold from Ophir, brought <sup>l</sup> algum trees and precious stones.

11 And the king made of the algum trees <sup>m</sup> terraces to the house of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and harps <sup>n</sup> and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

13 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold;

14 Beside that which chapmen and merchants brought. And all the <sup>o</sup> kings of Arabia and <sup>p</sup> governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred

A. M. 3013.
B. C. 991.

b Nu. 34.8.
2 Sa. 8.3.

c Jos. 16.3,5.
1 Ch. 7.24.

d the desire of Solomon which he.

e Ec. 2.4,
&c.

f 1 Ki. 7.2.
Ca. 4.8.

g Jos. 16.10.
17.13.

h 1 Ki. 9.23.

i 1 Ki. 3.1.
7.8.

j holiness.

k Ju. 10.23.

l Ex. 29.38.

m Ex. 23.14.
De. 16.16.

n 1 Ch. 24.25.

o 1 Ch. 9.17.
26.1.

p was the commandment of David the man of God.

q 1 Ki. 9.26, 27.

r Eloth.
De. 2.8.
2 Ki. 14.22.

s c. 9.10,13.

t Ec. 2.8.

A. M. 3014.
B. C. 990.

a 1 Ki. 10.1,
&c.
Mat. 12.42
Lu. 11.31.

b Pr. 18.4.
Ja. 1.5.

c or, butlers.

d word.

e or, sayings.

f Ps. 31.19.

g Ps. 72.18, 19.

h 1 Ki. 3.23.
Pr. 21.3.

i Ps. 72.10, 15.

j Ec. 2.8.

k c. 8.18.

l 1 Ki. 10.11.
almug.

m highways
or, etays.

n Ps. 92.3.
Rt. 5.8.
14.2.

A. M.
2989, 3029.
B. C.
1015, 975.

o Ps. 68.29.

p or, captaine.

Ver. 2. The cities which Hiram (or Hiram) had restored.—That is, gave back, because he disliked them. See the exposition of the above chapter.
Ver. 18. Ophir.—[Josephus says, that Ophir is the Indies, called the Gold country; by which he is supposed to mean Chersonesus Aurea, now Malacca, opposite Sumatra; and Le Poivre observes that the inhabitants of these places call their gold mines ophire.]—Bagster.

CHAP. IX. This chapter corresponds throughout with the 10th chapter of the 1st Book of Kings: but we shall offer a few notes of farther elucidation.

Ver. 9. Sheba.—[Josephus says, that Sheba was the ancient name of the city of Meroe, (south of Egypt, and sometimes comprehended in Ethiopia,) and that this princess came from thence. Those who think this princess came from Arabia rely chiefly on the fact, that gold, silver, spices, and precious stones, which were the presents she made to Solomon, are the natural products of that country; and that it may well be placed at the uttermost parts of the earth, as it borders on the southern ocean, and formerly they knew no land beyond it.]—Bagster.

targets <sup>a</sup> of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them in the house <sup>a</sup> of the forest of Lebanon.

17 ¶ Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and <sup>a</sup> stays on each side of the sitting place, and two lions standing by the stays:

19 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps. There was not the like made in any kingdom.

20 ¶ And all the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold: <sup>a</sup> none were of silver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

21 For the king's ship went to Tarshish with the servants of Huram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, <sup>a</sup> ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

22 And <sup>a</sup> king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

23 ¶ And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart.

24 And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

25 ¶ And Solomon had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

26 ¶ And he reigned <sup>a</sup> over all the kings from the <sup>a</sup> river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.

27 And <sup>a</sup> the king <sup>a</sup> made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the low plains in abundance.

28 And they brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.

29 ¶ Now <sup>b</sup> the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the <sup>a</sup> book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of Ahijah <sup>d</sup> the Shilonite, and in the visions of Iddo <sup>e</sup> the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat?

30 And Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years.

31 And Solomon <sup>f</sup> slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

A. M.
2589, 3029.
B. C.
1015, 975.
Q. C. 12, 9, 10.

r 1 Ki. 7.2.

s hands.

t shut up.

u or, there was no silver in them.

v or, elephant's teeth.

w 1 Ki. 13. 12, 13, 4. 30, &c.

x Ge. 15. 18. 1 Ki. 4. 21. Ps. 72. 8.

y i. e. Euphrates.

z 1 Ki. 10. 27, &c. c. 1. 15. 17.

a gave.

b 1 Ki. 11. 41, &c.

c swords.

d 1 Ki. 11. 29.

e c. 12. 15, 13. 22.

A. M. 3029.
B. C. 975.

f 2 Sa. 7. 12. 1 Ki. 1. 1. 2. 10.

a 1 Ki. 12. 1, &c.

b Ge. 37. 12, 13. Ju. 9. 1.

c 1 Ki. 11. 26, 40.

d Pr. 12. 15, 19. 20.

e Job 12. 12, 13.

f Pr. 27. 10.

g Pr. 15. 1.

h Is. 30. 1.

i laden.

j Pr. 19. 27.

k Is. 30. 12, 13.

CHAPTER X.

1 The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him. 6 Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men answereth them roughly. 16 Ten tribes revolting, kill Hadadorn, and make Rehoboam to flee.

AND <sup>a</sup> Rehoboam went to <sup>b</sup> Shechem: for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when <sup>c</sup> Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king, heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And they sent and called him. So Jeroboam and all Israel came and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam took <sup>d</sup> counsel with the old <sup>e</sup> men that had stood before Solomon his father <sup>f</sup> while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and speak <sup>g</sup> good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and <sup>h</sup> took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 For whereas my father <sup>i</sup> put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king answered them roughly; and king Rehoboam <sup>j</sup> forsook the counsel of the old men, 14 And answered them after the advice of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So <sup>k</sup> the king hearkened not unto the peo-

Ver. 17. A great throne of ivory.—The epithet "great" (gadol) refers rather to the throne than to the tooth: probably the gold was chiefly used in the ornamental figures, the lions, &c. Nothing can well be conceived more magnificent than an intermixture of gold and ivory. That ivory was at this time curiously carved, we learn from Psalm xiv. 8. See also Sol. Songs v. 14. Amos iii. 15.

Ver. 21. Tarshish.—[Bochart thinks this Tarshish was probably the promontory Cory, on the north of the island of Ceylon, which, according to him, was the land of Opshir. The name of a place in the East Indies, seems the probable from the articles brought thence, and also from the ships sent thither being built at Ezion-gaber, on the Red sea: though Michaelis supposes, that the fleet coasted along the shore of Africa, doubling the Cape of Good Hope, and came to Tartessus in Spain, and thence back again the same way; that this accounts for their three years' voyage out and home; and that Spain, and the coasts of Africa, furnish all the commodities which they brought back.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Four thousand stalls.—The parallel passage in 1 Kings (iv. 26.) says, "40,000," but the learned Wm. Robertson remarking the insertion of a Yod in this text, would here render the word "stables;" and supposing each stable to contain ten stalls, that would remove the contradiction. Still, however, as we read of only 12,000 horsemen, 40,000 stalls seem far too many. But these stables are said to be for the horses, chariots, and horsemen, so that possibly the barracks of the horse soldiers were included also.

Ver. 28. Horses out of Egypt.—"Moses" says Ep. Warburton "had expressly prohibited the multiplying of horses, (De. xvii. 16.) by which the future king was forbidden to establish a body of cavalry, because this could not be effected without sending into Egypt, with which people God had forbidden any communication, as this would be dangerous to religion. When Solomon had violated this law, and multiplied horses to excess, (1 Kings iv. 16.) it was soon attended with those fatal consequences that the law foretold: for this wisest of kings, having likewise in violation of another law, married Pharaoh's daughter, (the early fruits of this commerce;) and then, by a repetition of the same crime, but a transgression of another law, had espoused more strange women, (1 Kings iv. 26; xi. 1.) they first, in defiance of a fourth law, persuaded him to build them idol temples for their use; and afterwards, against a fifth law, brought him to erect other temples for his own."—Bagster.

CHAP. X. This chapter answers, verse by verse, the first nineteen verses of the 12th chapter of the 1st Book of Kings.

Ver. 8. Young men, &c.—[It was a custom in different countries to educate with the heir to the throne young noblemen of nearly the same age. This, as Calmet observes, answered two great and important ends: 1. It excited the prince to emulation; that he might, as far as possible, surpass them in all many exercises, and in all acts of prudence and dignity of his station. 2. That he might acquire a correct knowledge of the disposition and views of those who were likely to be, under him, the highest officers of the state, and consequently, know the better how to trust and employ them.]—Bagster.

ple : for <sup>1</sup> the cause was of God, that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake <sup>m</sup> by the hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, <sup>n</sup> What portion have we in David ? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse : every man to your tents, O Israel : and now, David, see to thine own house. So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent <sup>o</sup> Hadoram that was over the tribute ; and the children of Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. But king Rehoboam <sup>p</sup> made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 And <sup>q</sup> Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

CHAPTER XI.

<sup>1</sup> Rehoboam, raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by Shemaiah. 5 He strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and provision. 13 The priests and Levites, and such as feared God, forsaken by Jeroboam, strengthen the kingdom of Judah. 18 The wives and children of Rehoboam.

AND <sup>a</sup> when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin a hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam.

2 But <sup>b</sup> the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah <sup>c</sup> the man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your <sup>d</sup> brethren : return every man to his house : for <sup>e</sup> this thing is done of me. And they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam.

5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for defence in Judah.

6 He built even Beth-lehem, and Etam, and Tekoa,

7 And Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam,

8 And Gath, and Mareshah, and Ziph,

9 And Adoraim, and Lachish, and Azekah,

10 And Zorah, and Aijalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah and in Benjamin fenced cities.

11 And he <sup>f</sup> fortified the strong holds, and put captains <sup>g</sup> in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel <sup>h</sup> resorted to him out of all their coasts.

14 For the Levites left their <sup>i</sup> suburbs and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem : for Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off <sup>j</sup> from executing the priest's office unto the LORD :

15 And <sup>k</sup> he ordained him priests for the high

A. M. 3029.
B. C. 975.

1 De. 2.30.
1 Sa. 2.25.
Is. 19.14.

m 1 Ki. 11.
31.

n 2 Sa. 20.1.

o 1 Ki. 4.6.
5.1.
Adoniram.

p strengthened himself.

q Ps. 80.30.
&c.

a 1 Ki. 12.21.
&c.

b Pr. 21.30.

c c. 12.5.

d Ge. 13.5.

e c. 10.15.
Ps. 33.11.

f Is. 22.10, 11.

g c. 17.19.

h presented themselves.

A. M. 3030.
B. C. 974.

i Nu. 35.7.
&c.

j c. 13.9.

k 1 Ki. 12.31.
13.33.

—

l Le. 17.7.
De. 32.17.
1 Co. 10.30.

m 1 Ki. 12.
28. 14.9.
Hos. 13.2.

n c. 15.9.
30. 11.18.
Ps. 64.5.7.

A. M. 3029. 3032.
B. C. 975. 972.

o c. 12.1.

p 1 Ki. 15.2.
She is called Michal the daughter of Uriel, c. 13.2.

q De. 21.15
..17.
c. 12.16.

r a multitude of wives.

A. M. 3032.
B. C. 972.

a c. 11.17.

b 1 Ki. 14.22

c De. 32.15,
18.

A. M. 3034.
B. C. 970.

d c. 16.8.

e c. 11.2.

f c. 15.2.

g Ja. 13.15,
18.

Ja. 4.6, 10.

h Ex. 9.27.

i 1 Ki. 21.28, 29.

j Le. 25.41, 42.

k or, a little while.

places, and for the <sup>m</sup> devils, and for the <sup>n</sup> calves which he had made.

16 And after them out of all <sup>n</sup> the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.

17 So they strengthened <sup>o</sup> the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years : for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the son of Jesse ;

19 Which bare him children ; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.

20 And after her he took <sup>p</sup> Maachah the daughter of Absalom ; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines : (for he took eighteen wives, and threescore concubines ; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.)

22 And Rehoboam made <sup>q</sup> Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his brethren : for he thought to make him king.

23 And he dealt wisely, and dispersed of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city : and he gave them victual in abundance. And he desired <sup>r</sup> many wives.

CHAPTER XII.

<sup>1</sup> Rehoboam, forsaking the Lord, is punished by Shishak. 5 He and the princes, repenting at the preaching of Shemaiah, are delivered from destruction, but not from spoil. 13 The reign and death of Rehoboam.

AND it came to pass, when Rehoboam had established <sup>a</sup> the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, he <sup>b</sup> forsook <sup>c</sup> the law of the LORD, and all Israel with him.

2 And it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the LORD,

3 With twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen : and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt ; the <sup>d</sup> Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians.

4 And he took the fenced cities which per- tained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came Shemaiah <sup>e</sup> the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Ye <sup>f</sup> have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king humbled <sup>g</sup> themselves ; and they said, The <sup>h</sup> LORD is righteous.

7 And <sup>i</sup> when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves ; therefore <sup>j</sup> I will not destroy them, but I will grant them <sup>k</sup> some deliverance ; and

Ver. 15. He ordained priests for the high places.—Which were now generally resorted to instead of the sacred temple : and not only so, but “ for the devils, and the calves.” By the former are doubtless meant, Pan and his satyrs, or wood-demons. See Le. xvii. 7. For the “ calves,” and for Jeroboam’s motive in erecting them, we must refer to the parallel history. There is no doubt but that Jeroboam was well schooled in the idolatry of Egypt, while he remained there ; yet it is evident that they were not intended to represent Apis, because he says, “ Behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.”

CHAP. XII. This chapter opens with the apostasy of Rehoboam, as already mentioned, 1 Kings xiv. 23—25.

Ver. 2. Shishak, here mentioned, is said by Rabbi Sol. Jarchi to be Pharaoh-necho ; but is supposed by Sir Isaac Newton to have been the celebrated Sesostrius.

Ver. 5. Shemaiah the prophet.—This prophet has been already mentioned as sent to Rehoboam on a former occasion ; ch. xi. 2.

CHAP. XI. The first four verses of this chapter are a continuation of 1 Ki. xii. from ver. 21—24. To ver. 11—15, we have no parallel passage, but it is merely a list of the towns which Rehoboam fortified.

Ver. 6. Bethlehem.—[Bethlehem, called Bethlehem Judah, (Ju. xvii. 7.) to distinguish it from another Bethlehem in Zebulun, (Jos. xix. 15.) and also Ephrathah, (i. e. fruitful,) and by the Arabs, Bait-ellahm, is situated on a rising ground on the southern side of a deep and extensive valley, and reclining from E. to W. not quite six miles S. of Jerusalem. The surrounding country is full of hills and valleys ; and the soil is the best in all these districts : fruits, vines, olives, and sesamum, succeed extremely well. The village contains about 300 inhabitants, the greater part of whom gain their livelihood by making beads, carving mother of pearl shells with sacred subjects, and manufacturing small tables and crucifixes.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. The priests and Levites in all Israel resorted.—Jeroboam perceiving the tribe of Levi faithful to God and to their king, expelled them from the land of Israel, whereby Rehoboam was greatly strengthened.

my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

8 Nevertheless they shall be his servants: that they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the Lord, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber.

12 And when he humbled himself, the wrath of the Lord turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: and also in Judah things went well.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the book of Shemalah the prophet, and of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

Abijah, succeeding, maketh war against Jeroboam. 4 He declareth the right of his cause. 13 Trusting in God he overcometh Jeroboam. 21 The wives and children of Abijah.

Now in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Michaiiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah set the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.

4 ¶ And Abijah stood upon mount Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

5 Ought ye not to know that the Lord God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt?

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath rebelled against his lord.

Ver. 13. Rehoboam was one and forty.—See note on 1 Ki. xiv. 21. To what is there said, it should be added, that Rehoboam was evidently a young man when he began to reign.

Ver. 15. Concerning genealogies.—“In the book of the genealogy of the family of David.”—Targum.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 8. Golden calves, which Jeroboam made for gods.—We have before expressed our opinion of this calf-worship, as an imitation rather of the Jewish than the heathen worship; and we are happy to see our opinion confirmed by some very judicious remarks of the Rev. G. Townsend, in his Old Testament arranged. Our remarks on Aaron's calf will be found, Exod. xxxii. 1-14; and on Jeroboam's calves, 1 Kings, chap. xii.

Ver. 9. To consecrate himself.—It is supposed that any one who could furnish a bullock and seven lambs, was immediately accepted.

Ver. 10. The Lord is our God.—We have not abandoned the Lord; and we

A. M. 3034.

B. C. 970.

1 Ne. 9. 36,

37.

Is. 26. 13.

m De. 28. 47,

48.

n e. 9. 15, 16.

o 2 Sa. 8. 18.

p e. 33. 12, 13.

Is. 57. 15.

1 Pe. 5. 6.

q or, and yet in Judah there were good things.

(Ge. 18. 24.

1 Ki. 14. 13.

e. 19. 3.)

r fixed.

s De. 5. 29.

Eze. 33. 31.

t words.

u ver. 5.

v e. 9. 23.

w 1 Ki. 14. 13.

Abijah.

A. M.

3046. 3049.

B. C.

968. 955.

a 1 Ki. 15. 1.

&c.

b e. 11. 20.

c bound together.

d Jos. 18. 22.

e 2 Sa. 7. 12.

16.

f Nu. 18. 19.

g 1 Ki. 11. 25.

12. 20.

h Ju. 9. 4.

i e. 10. 16.

j 1 Ki. 12. 28.

Hos. 8. 5, 6.

A. M. 3047.

B. C. 957.

k e. 11. 14, 15.

l fill his

hand.

(Is. 34. 1.

Le. 8. 2.)

m e. 24.

n Le. 24. 5, 9.

o Ex. 27. 20.

Le. 24. 2, 3.

p Is. 8. 10.

q Jos. 5. 14,

15.

r Nu. 10. 8.

Jos. 6. 13.

20.

s Job. 9. 4.

Is. 50. 24.

Ac. 5. 29.

t e. 14. 12.

u 1 Ch. 5. 20.

Ps. 22. 5.

Da. 3. 23.

Nu. 1. 7.

v Ps. 18. 37,

38.

w 1 Sa. 25. 38.

7 And there are gathered unto him vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and tender-hearted, and could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 Have ye not cast out the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods.

10 But as for us, the Lord is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and the priests, which minister unto the Lord, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business, 11 And they burn unto the Lord every morning and every evening burnt-sacrifices and sweet incense: the shew-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and the candlestick of gold with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the Lord our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the Lord God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the Lord, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah: and God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the Lord God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and the Lord struck him, and he died.

21 ¶ But Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

still serve Him according to His own law. But what Abijah urged concerning the state of religion in Judah was not strictly just; and, as spoken by him, it savoured of ostentation. Abijah himself was but an indifferent character; and idolatry was evidently connived at in his days. Yet it was true, that the men of Judah had the priests, ordinances, and worship of Jehovah among them; that there were numbers of pious worshippers in the land; that theirs was the more righteous cause; that Jehovah was on their side as their Captain, while Israel fought against him; and that the presence of the priests with the sacred trumpets was a token of His presence and favour.—Eag-ster.

Ver. 20. The Lord struck him, and he died.—That is, Jeroboam, we presume; yet he died not immediately, for he survived Abijah; (1 Kings xv. 9.) But it is probable that his ill success brought on a depression of spirits, and he died with lingering disease.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the story of the prophet <sup>v</sup> Iddo.

CHAPTER XIV.

Asa succeeding, destroyed idolatry. <sup>6</sup> Having peace, he strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and armies. <sup>9</sup> Calling on God, he overthroweth Zerah, and spoils the Ethiopians.

SO <sup>a</sup> Abijah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned in his stead. In his days the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God:

3 For he took away the altars of the strange gods, and <sup>b</sup> the high places, and brake down the <sup>c</sup> images, and cut <sup>d</sup> down the groves:

4 And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the <sup>e</sup> images: and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6 ¶ And they built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because <sup>f</sup> the Lord had given him rest.

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought <sup>g</sup> the Lord our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side. So they built and prospered.

8 ¶ And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and four score thousand; all these were mighty men of valour.

9 ¶ And <sup>h</sup> there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian with a host of a thousand thousand and three hundred chariots, and came unto Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether <sup>i</sup> with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name <sup>j</sup> we go against this multitude. O Lord, thou art our God; let not <sup>k</sup> man prevail against thee.

12 So the Lord smote <sup>l</sup> the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.

13 And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them unto <sup>m</sup> Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were <sup>n</sup> destroyed

A. M. 3047.

B. C. 937.

x or, commentary.

y c.12.15.

A. M. 3049.

B. C. 935.

a 1 Ki.15.9,

&amp;c.

b 1 Ki.11.7.

c.15.17.

c statues.

d Ex.34.13.

e sun

images.

A. M. 3063.

B. C. 941.

f Jos.23.1.

g Ps.105.3,4.

Je.29.13.

h c.16.8.

i Jos.15.44.

j Ex.14.10.

c.13.14.

Ps.18.6.

120.1.

k 1 Sa.14.6.

11 Sa.17.45.

Pr.18.10.

m or, mortal

man.

n c.13.15.

o Ge.20.1.

p broken.

q Ge.35.5.

Jos.2.9,24.

c.17.10.

Is.31.9.

a Nu.24.2.

Ju.3.10.

c.20.14.

24.20.

b before.

c Ja.4.8.

d ver.4.15.

1 Ch.24.9.

c.33.12,13.

Je.29.12,

13.

Mat.7.7,8.

e c.24.20.

He.10.38.

f Hos.3.4.

g Le.10.11.

Mal.2.7.

h De.4.29.

Ps.106.44.

i Ju.5.6.

1 Sa.13.6.

j benten in pieces.

k Mat.24.7.

l Am.3.6.

m Jos.1.7,9.

1 Ch.28.20.

n abominations.

o c.13.19.

p c.11.16.

q in that day.

r c.14.13,15.

s 2 Ki.23.3.

c.34.31.

He.10.29.

t Ac.24.14.

u Ex.22.20.

De.13.5.

17.2.5.

ed before the Lord, and before his host; and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for the fear <sup>a</sup> of the Lord came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Asa, with Judah, and many of Israel, moved by the prophecy of Azariah the son of Oded, make a solemn covenant with God. 16 He putteth down Maachiah his mother for her idolatry. 18 He bringeth dedicate things into the house of God, and enjoyeth a long peace.

AND the spirit <sup>a</sup> of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

2 And he went out <sup>b</sup> to meet Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; The <sup>c</sup> Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if <sup>d</sup> ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake <sup>e</sup> him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for <sup>f</sup> a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching <sup>g</sup> priest, and without law.

4 But when <sup>h</sup> they in their trouble did turn unto the Lord God of Israel, and sought him, he was found of them.

5 And in those times <sup>i</sup> there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And nation was <sup>j</sup> destroyed of <sup>k</sup> nation, and city of city: for God did <sup>l</sup> vex them with all adversity.

7 Be ye <sup>m</sup> strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak: for your work shall be rewarded.

8 ¶ And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away the <sup>n</sup> abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities which he had taken <sup>o</sup> from mount Ephraim, and renewed the altar of the Lord, that was before the porch of the Lord.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin: and the <sup>p</sup> strangers with them out of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him.

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they offered unto the Lord <sup>q</sup> the same time, of the spoil <sup>r</sup> which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep.

12 And they entered into a <sup>s</sup> covenant to seek the Lord God of their <sup>t</sup> fathers with all their heart and with all their soul;

13 That <sup>u</sup> whosoever would not seek the Lord

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1—15. Asa commences a great reform, in the midst of which he is attacked by an Ethiopian army, and obtains a signal victory.—While thus laudably employed in reform, it appears Asa was unexpectedly attacked by a formidable foreign enemy, Zerah, the Ethiopian, a sable prince, perhaps from the northeast of Africa, with his confederate neighbours, the Lubims, (or Lybians,) “a huge host,” as the prophet Hanani calls them, (chap. xvi. 8.) containing a million of undisciplined barbarians. Such an assemblage may appear incredible to many; but we have already noticed the vast armies of Judah and of Israel; and the army of Xerxes, king of Persia, is said to have amounted to near a million, if not more. So in times comparatively modern, (the 15th century) the army of Tamerlane is said to have amounted to 300,000 horse, and 500,000 foot, and that of his antagonist Bajazet, to 300,000 horse, and 200,000 foot. It was the same with the Ver. 22. In the story.—“This, (says Dr. Clarke,) as far as I recollect, is the first place in which the word midrash, or commentary, is mentioned.”

CHAP. XIV.—The first five verses of this chapter correspond nearly with 1 Kings xv. 8—14.

Ver. 9. The Ethiopian.—His country was not Ethiopia, properly so called, or Abyssinia, the name of which, in the Old Testament, is Lud; but the part of Arabia which lay contiguous to Canaan and Egypt. The same correction of the English version requires to be made in several other places. See the note on Numb. xii. 1.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 8. Prophecy of Oded.—This is evidently either an ellipsis, or an error of the transcriber. We should read, “of Azariah, the son of Oded the prophet.”

God of Israel should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman.

14 And they swore unto the Lord with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah rejoiced at the oath: for they had sworn with all their heart, and sought him with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the Lord gave them rest round about.

16 ¶ And <sup>also concerning</sup> Maachah the mother <sup>of</sup> Asa the king, he removed her from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove: and Asa cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron.

17 But the high places <sup>were</sup> not taken away out of Israel: nevertheless the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 ¶ And he brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels.

19 And there was no more war unto the five and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Asa, by the aid of the Syrians, diverteth Baasha from building of Ramah. 7 Being reproved thereof by Hanani, he putteth him in prison. 11 Among his other acts, in his disease he seeketh not to God, but to the physicians. 13 His death and burial.

IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa, Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, to the intent <sup>b</sup> that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the Lord and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at <sup>c</sup> Damascus, saying,

3 There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

4 And Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of <sup>d</sup> his armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote Ijon, and

A. M. 3063.
B. C. 941.
v ver. 12.—
w 1 Ki. 15.
13, &c.
x i. e. grand-mother.
1 Ki. 15.2, 16.
y horror.
z c. 14.3, 5.
A. M. 3074.
B. C. 930.
a From the reign of the tribes from Judah, over which Asa was now
king.
1 Ki. 15.17,
&c.
b c. 15.5.
c Darneseek.
d armies which were his.

e 1 Ki. 15.1.
c. 19.2.
f Ps. 146.3, 6.
Is. 31.1.
Je. 17.5.
g c. 12. R.
14.9.
h in abundance.
i Job 34.21.
Pr. 5.21.
Is. 3.
Je. 16.17.
32.19.
Zec. 4.10.
j or, strong-tyed to hold them.
k 1 Ki. 15.32.
l c. 18.26.
Je. 20.2.
m crushed.
n digged.

Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the store cities of Naphtali.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was building; and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time Hanani <sup>the seer</sup> came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, Because <sup>thou</sup> hast relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the Lord thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thy hand.

8 Were not the Ethiopians <sup>and</sup> the Lubims <sup>a</sup> a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, because thou didst rely on the Lord, he delivered them into thy hand.

9 For <sup>the</sup> eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of <sup>them</sup> whose heart <sup>is</sup> perfect toward him. Herein thou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have <sup>k</sup> wars.

10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and put him in a <sup>l</sup> prison-house; for he was in a rage with him because of this <sup>thing</sup>. And Asa <sup>m</sup> oppressed <sup>some</sup> of the people the same time.

11 ¶ And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they <sup>are</sup> written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding <sup>great</sup>: yet in his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians.

13 ¶ And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign.

14 And they buried him in his own sepulchres, which he had <sup>n</sup> made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours and divers kinds of <sup>of</sup> spices prepared by the apothecaries' art: and they made a very great burning for him.

Israel, through their ignorance and apostacy; and of the readiness of the God of Israel, in all cases, to receive and to assist a repentant and returning people, of which they had so recently an instance, in their deliverance from their Ethiopian enemies.

Asa, in consequence, collects together all Judah and Benjamin, with a multitude from other tribes, who had been induced to come to Judah from a conviction that God was with them, and from a desire to worship him according to his own laws. So they were gathered together in the 15th year of Asa, probably at the feast of pentecost, to make a covenant with a solemn oath, and to oblige all to adhere thereto, under the penalty of death.

This may seem to some a measure of intolerance and severity; but several things must be here remarked: 1. That God was the supreme Ruler in all Israel, and the worship of idols was an overt act of treason. 2. That the people had not only covenanted with the Lord to be their God, but had sworn to it with a hearty and voluntary oath: so that, after this, every idolater was a rebel, and guilty of perjury.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—14. Asa seeks to Ben-hadad for protection against Baasha king of Israel, for which he is reproved by a prophet, whom he imprisons, and himself dies soon after.—The first six verses of this chapter have already been noticed, 1 Kings xv. 17—22. We only add, that it seems very extraordinary that Asa, after having been so remarkably rescued from the immense host of Zerah, should be so soon terrified by the threats of Baasha, whose conduct only went to cut off all communication between the two kingdoms, which, as they possessed the capital, with the temple, the ark, &c. must be of less importance to Judah than to Israel.

In going through these very ancient histories, in an obsolete language, we have many obscurities to explain, and many seeming inconsistencies to reconcile; but nothing is so hard to reconcile or explain, as the conduct of some men, and particularly of some public and religious characters. What can be more inexplicable, for instance, than the conduct of Asa, who, after having been so remarkably rescued by the hand of Jehovah, flies for aid to the natural enemy of his country? and who, after putting down idolatry with so much zeal, sends the sacred treasures of the temple to purchase the protection of an idolatrous prince?

Nor is this all; being reproved for this inconsistency of conduct, by a prophet of the Lord, instead of receiving his message with becoming reverence, he commits the holy seer to the prison-house and to the stocks, for presuming to address him in the name of that God to whom he had himself sworn obedience. However, he goes not unpunished.—He had fettered the prophet, and the Lord fetters him with some painful disease, which confines him to his couch; and to whom shall he now apply? Not, surely, to the seer in prison, but to the physicians; very proper persons, certainly, to consult in such a case, were it not that this was in opposition to his applying to the Lord; but when they are consulted, he should not be neglected. Asa had his reward. He trusted to the physicians, and they consigned him to the tomb.

He received, indeed, great posthumous honours. Commentators are not agreed whether his body was burned on a funeral which account, Usher, agreeably to the marginal note, reckons it the 36th, after the division of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, but many authors, from Josephus to Houbigant, are of opinion, that an error has crept into the text, and that it was the 26th year of Asa, and the last of Baasha, that he went up against Judah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. In a prison-house.—Literally, "A house of stocks;" for this was one method of securing their prisoners. Acts xv. 24.

Ver. 12. Diseased in his feet.—C. Taylor thinks the original term implies a disorder ascending upwards; i. e. from the feet to the vital parts, which was apply either to gout or dropsy, both of which often become fatal when they reach the stomach.

Ver. 16—19. Concerning Maachah, &c.—These four verses correspond to 1 Kings xv. 13—15.

Ver. 19. The five and thirtieth year.—It seems impossible to reconcile this verse and the date of the ensuing chapter with the other history, except by allowing a trivial error of the transcribers, and reading the 25th instead of the 35th year in this verse, and the 26th instead of the 36th in ver. 1. of the chapter following. This is the date which Josephus affixes to these events, and it is very probable in itself.—Scott. So Dr. Hales, and most modern critics.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. In the six and thirtieth year.—[Baasha died in the 26th year of Asa, and therefore could not come up against him in the 36th; on

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Jehoshaphat, succeeding Asa, reigneth well, and prospereth. 7 He sendeth Levites with the princes to teach Judah. 10 His enemies being terrified by God, some of them bring him presents and tribute. 12 His greatness, captains, and armies.

AND Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, and strengthened himself against Israel.

2 And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his father David, and sought not unto Baalim;

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel.

5 Therefore the LORD established the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah brought to Jehoshaphat presents; and he had riches and honour in abundance.

6 And his heart was lifted up in the ways of the LORD: moreover he took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

7 Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Michaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah.

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nathaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, priests.

9 And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

10 And the fear of the LORD fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so that they made no war against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he-goats.

12 And Jehoshaphat waxed great exceedingly; and he built in Judah castles, and cities of store.

13 And he had much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are the numbers of them according to the house of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour three hundred thousand.

pile, like the Pagan emperors; or whether he was in a manner embalmed, by sleeping on a bed of spices, and a great burning made for him after he was entombed. Much rather should we have heard that he died in peace, and was gathered to his fathers.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1—19. Jehoshaphat, copying the early zeal and piety of Asa his father, begins his reign with reform, and sends itinerant teachers through the country.—The early part of this reign being sketched with so much brevity in the contemporary history of the 1st Book of Kings, (ch. xv. 41—45), we pause here, to notice an example worthy of imitation among Christian rulers, (see note); namely, his special encouragement of religious education, and the circulation of the Scriptures throughout his kingdom. To this end, he sent CHAP. XVII. Ver. 7. Sent to his princes.—[In these verses we have an account of a remarkable itinerant ministry established by Jehoshaphat; in which three classes of men were employed: 1. the Princes; 2. the Levites; 3. the Priests. We may presume that the Princes instructed the people in the nature of the civil law and constitution of the kingdom; that the Levites instructed them in every thing that appertained to the temple service, and ritual law; and that the Priests instructed them in the nature and design of their religion. Thus the nation became thoroughly instructed in their duty to God, to the king, and to each other; they, therefore, became as one man; and

A. M. 3174.
B. C. 930.

a 1Ki. 15.24.

b c. 15.8.

c or, of his father, and of David.

d 1Ki. 12.30.

A. M. 3091.

B. C. 913.

e gave.

f i. e. was encouraged.

g Ps. 18.21, 22.

h c. 19.3.

29.33.

A. M. 3092.

B. C. 912.

i c. 15.3.

j c. 15.3.

k Ne. 8.7.

l Mal. 2.7.

m was.

n Ex. 34.24.

Pr. 15.7.

o 2 Sa. 8.2.

ver. 5.

A. M.

3092. 3115.

B. C. 912. 889.

por. palaces.

q c. 26.10, 15.

1 Co. 27.25.

—31.

r at his hand.

s Ju. 5.2.9.

2 Co. 8.5.

t ver. 2.

A. M. 3107.

B. C. 897.

a c. 17.5.

b 2 Ki. 8.18.

2 Co. 6.14.

c at the end of years.

d 1 Ki. 22.2, &c.

e 1 Sa. 23.2, 4.9.

2 Sa. 2.1.

f Je. 23.14.

23.1, &c.

g yet, or, more.

h Ps. 34.21.

53.3.

69.14.

Pr. 29.10.

Am. 5.10.

Lu. 6.22.

i or, cornucopia.

j Hasten.

k or, floor.

15 And next to him was Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand.

16 And next him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, who willingly offered himself unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valour.

17 And of Benjamin; Eliada a mighty man of valour, and with him armed men with bow and shield two hundred thousand.

18 And next him was Jehozaabab, and with him a hundred and fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war.

19 These waited on the king, beside those whom the king put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Jehoshaphat, joined in affinity with Ahab, is persuaded to go with him against Ramoth-gilead. 4 Ahab, seduced by false prophets, according to the word of Micaiah is slain there.

NOW Jehoshaphat had riches and honour in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab.

2 And after certain years he went down to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and persuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war.

4 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he never prophesied good unto me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla.

And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so. 8 And the king of Israel called for one of his officers, and said, Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imla.

9 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah sat either of them on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they sat in a void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them.

forth certain of his princes, no doubt of pious character, attended by a deputation of priests and Levites; "and they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people."

King Edward VI., of England, who seems to have made Jehoshaphat his model, took this method, in an early stage of the Reformation, and on account of the ignorance and prejudices of the Popish clergy, sent out learned laymen also, to assist in the pious and benevolent design. Bibles being at that time also very scarce, copies, in the large folio size, were placed in all the parish churches, and those who could not procure copies of their own, were encouraged to come there and read them.

against a people thus united, on such principles, no enemy could be successful.—Bagster.

CHAP. XVIII.—This chapter corresponds to the 22d of the 1st Book of Kings, ver. 2—37, to which therefore we refer. Compare 2 Kings iii. 1—11.

Ver. 1. Joined affinity with Ahab.—[He took Athaliah the daughter of Ahab to be wife to his son Joram, (2 Ki. viii. 18.) which fatal connexion was highly displeasing to God, and Jehoshaphat was severely reproved for it by Jehu the seer, ch. xix. 1—3.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Void place.—[Threshing-floors, among the ancient Jews, as we

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him horns of iron, and said, Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed.

11 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with one assent; let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand.

15 ¶ And the king said to him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD?

16 Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, but evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the LORD; I saw the LORD sitting upon his throne, and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

20 Then there came out a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

22 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 ¶ Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the

A. M. 3107.

B. C. 897.

e c. 30. 19.

Ezr. 7. 10.

f returned and went out.

g De. 16. 18.

1 Je. 28. 10.

11.

m thou consume

them.

n mouth.

o Is. 30. 10.

Mi. 2. 6.

p Nu. 22. 18.

20.

23. 12. 26.

24. 13.

q Je. 23. 1. 2.

Eze. 34. 5.

6. 8.

Zec. 10. 2.

13. 7.

r 2 Sa. 2. 7.

2 Ki. 10. 3.

s for evil.

t Is. 6. 1, &amp;c.

Da. 7. 9, 10.

Ez. 7. 55.

55.

Is. 1. 10.

12, &amp;c.

u Ge. 32. 2.

Ps. 103. 21.

v Job 1. 6.

w Job 12. 16.

2 Th. 2. 11.

12.

x Is. 19. 14.

Eze. 14. 3.

y Je. 18. 11.

Mi. 2. 3.

z Je. 20. 2.

Ma. 14. 65.

Ac. 23. 2.

a or, from chamber to chamber.

b a chamber in a

chamber.

1 Ki. 20. 30.

c e. 16. 10.

d Am. 9. 10.

e Nu. 16. 29.

f c. 35. 22, 23.

g Ps. 34. 7.

h after.

i in his simplicity.

2Sa. 15. 11.

j and between the breast-

plate.

k made rich.

A. M. 3108.

B. C. 896.

a c. 16. 7.

b Ps. 139. 21.

c c. 32. 25.

d c. 12. 12.

17. 4.

governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction, until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, Harken, all ye people.

28 ¶ So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel.

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel. Therefore they compassed about him to fight; but Jehoshaphat cried out, and the LORD helped him; and God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from pursuing him.

33 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot man, Turn thy hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even: and about the time of the sun going down he died.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Jehoshaphat, reproved by Jehu, visiteth his kingdom. 5 His instructions to the judges, & to the priests and Levites.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the LORD? therefore is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.

3 Nevertheless there are good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thy heart to seek God.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he went out again through the people from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim, and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And he set judges in the land throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city,

6 And said to the judges, Take heed what

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—11. Jehoshaphat reproved for uniting with Ahab: he returns home, and prosecutes his designed reforms.—It is the great advantage of having contemporary histories, that though they often repeat the same facts, they have before remarked, were only, as they are to this day in the East, (see Shan's Travels), round level plats of ground in the open air, like the Libyæ area of Horace. Hence a floor might well be near the gate of Samaria, which was built on a hill, and afford no improper place for the kings of Judah and Israel to give audience to the prophets. —Bagster.

Ver. 10. Horns of iron.—[Bruce, in describing the head-dress of the governors of Abyssinia, says, "a large broad fillet was bound upon their forehead, and tied behind their head. In the middle of this was a horn, or conical piece of silver, gilt, about four inches long, much in the shape of our common candle-extinguishers. This is called kirn, (keeren), and is only worn in reviews, or parades after victory." Such, it may be supposed, were the horns of iron which Zedekiah, (who appears to have acted the hero returning from a military triumph,) made for himself when he presumed, in the name of Jehovah, to flatter his prince with the promise of victory: "Thus saith the Lord, With generally add others, or insert incidents which render them explanatory of each other. The author of Kings mentions the circumstance of Jehoshaphat having joined with Ahab in the battle of Ramoth-gilead; but as his object appears to have these thou shalt push Syria, until they be consumed." Homer, speaking of Achilles, uses a similar expression: "He pushed with horns the Trojans." —Bagster.

Ver. 24. Inner chamber.—"In one of the halls of the Seraglio at Constantinople," says De la Motraye, "the eunuch made us pass by several little chambers, with doors shut, like the cells of monks or nuns, as far as I could judge by one that another eunuch opened."—This exactly corresponds with the idea of a "chamber within a chamber," and it would appear that Micaiah predicted, that Zedekiah should fly for shelter to a Harém, which we have seen was deemed inviolate. See 1 Ki. xx. 30. Is. xvi. 30. —Bagster.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 2. There is wrath.—That is, God is angry. Ver. 4. Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim.—Before the separation, Dan and Beer-sheba were the boundaries of the country; afterwards, Ephraim became the northern boundary of Judah.

ye do: for <sup>h</sup> ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who <sup>i</sup> is with you in <sup>j</sup> the judgment.

7 Wherefore now let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is no iniquity <sup>k</sup> with the LORD our God, nor respect <sup>l</sup> of persons, nor taking of gifts.

8 ¶ Moreover in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the <sup>m</sup> Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear <sup>n</sup> of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even warn <sup>o</sup> them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so wrath <sup>p</sup> come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

11 And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you in all matters <sup>q</sup> of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters: also the Levites shall be officers before you. Deal courageously, and the LORD <sup>r</sup> shall be with the good.

CHAPTER XX.

Jehoshaphat in his fear proclaimeth a fast. 5 His prayer. 14 The prophecy of Jahaziel. 20 Jehoshaphat exhorteth the people, and setteth singers to praise the Lord. 22 The great overthrow of the enemies. 26 The people, having blessed God at Beraiah, return in triumph. 31 Jehoshaphat's reign. 33 His convoy of ships, which he made with Aliazah, according to the prophecy of Eliezer, unhappily perished.

IT came to pass after this also, that the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, came against Jehoshaphat to battle.

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea on this side Syria; and, behold, they be in <sup>a</sup> Hazazon-tamar, which is <sup>b</sup> Eng-gedi.

3 And Jehoshaphat feared, and set <sup>c</sup> himself to seek <sup>d</sup> the LORD, and proclaimed a fast <sup>e</sup> throughout all Judah.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the LORD: even out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court,

6 And said, O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in <sup>f</sup> heaven? and rulest not thou over all the <sup>g</sup> kingdoms of the heathen? and in thy hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee?

7 Art not thou our God, <sup>h</sup> who didst drive

A. M. 3108.
B. C. 896.

h De. 1.17.

i Ps. 82.1.

j Ec. 5.8.

k matter of judgment.

l De. 32.4.

m Ro. 3.5,6.

n 9.14.

o De. 10.17.

p Job. 34.19.

q Ac. 10.34.

r Ec. 3.11.

s Ep. 6.9.

t 1 Pe. 1.17.

m De. 17.8,9.

n 2 Sa. 23.3.

o Ec. 3.18.

p Na. 16.46.

q 1 Ch. 26.30.

r Take courage and do.

s Ec. 15.2.

t Ec. 3.26.

a Ge. 14.7.

b J. 5.16,2.

c his face.

d c. 19.3.

e Ezr. 8.21.

f Je. 36.9.

g De. 3.1.

h Joel 2.15, &c.

i Jon. 3.5.

j De. 4.39.

k Jos. 2.11.

l Ps. 115.3.

m De. 4.17, 28.

n thou.

o —

i Ps. 44.2.

j Is. 41.8.

k Ja. 2.23.

l c. 6.28.30.

m Mat. 18.20.

n c. 6.20.

o De. 2.4,9, 19.

p Nu. 20.21.

q Ps. 83.12.

r Ps. 123.1,2.

s Is. 65.24.

t Ps. 39.20, 21.

u Nu. 11.25, 26; 24.2.

v c. 15.1,2.

w 24.20.

x Ex. 14.13, 14.

y De. 1.29, 30.

z 31.6,8.

a c. 32.7,8.

b Is. 43.1,2.

v ascent.

w or, valley.

x Is. 30.7,15.

y Is. 3.35.

z Na. 14.9.

a Ro. 8.31.

b Ex. 4.31.

c Job. 1.20.

d Ps. 35.6.

e Ne. 12.42, 43.

f Ps. 81.1.

g 95.1,2.

out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy friend <sup>k</sup> for ever?

8 And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying

9 If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy <sup>m</sup> presence, (for thy name <sup>n</sup> is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon and Moab and mount Seir, whom thou wouldest not <sup>o</sup> let Israel invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they <sup>p</sup> turned from them, and destroyed them not;

11 Behold, I say, how they reward us, to <sup>q</sup> come to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, wilt thou not judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do: but our eyes <sup>r</sup> are upon thee.

13 And all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

14 ¶ Then <sup>s</sup> upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, came the Spirit <sup>t</sup> of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Harken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, Be <sup>u</sup> not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but God's.

16 To-morrow go ye down against them. behold, they come up by the <sup>v</sup> cliff of Ziz; and ye shall find them at the end of the <sup>w</sup> brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel.

17 Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand <sup>x</sup> ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to-morrow go out against them: for <sup>y</sup> the LORD will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat bowed <sup>z</sup> his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell <sup>a</sup> before the LORD, worshipping the LORD.

19 And the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise <sup>b</sup> the LORD God of Israel with a loud <sup>c</sup> voice on high.

20 ¶ And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa: and been chiefly to expose the wickedness of Ahab, he passed over, very briefly, the subsequent history of Jehoshaphat. The author of Chronicles, on the other hand, is more brief on the history of Ahab, but enlarges on that of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. He informs us, that after the defeat and death of Ahab, Jehoshaphat, being reproved by a prophet for joining with Jehovah's enemies, instead of resenting it, as Asa did, returned immediately to Jerusalem; and not only prosecuted his intended reforms there, but made a tour among the people of Israel in person, from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim, to persuade them to renounce idolatry, and return to the worship of the LORD. Moreover, he enjoined upon the secular judges of the land, upon the priests and Levites, and the chief fathers of Israel, that they should do their duty faithfully, and take no bribes, in the administration of justice; and as, in times of general corruption, it required no little courage and resolution to do right, and stem the tide of profligacy, he says, "Deal courageously, and the LORD shall be with thee for good."

Ver. 9. When they returned to Jerusalem.—That is, the Levites, priests, and fathers.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. Others beside the Ammonites.—That is, some of their allies, which, according to the next verse, were probably Edomites.

Ver. 2. On this side Syria.—The ablest modern critics read, "from Edom."

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—37. Judah being invaded by confederate powers, Jehoshaphat proclaims a fast, and a prophet assures them of victory. Their enemies become so confounded that they destroy each other, and the land enjoys an interval of peace.—A grand confederacy is now formed against Jehoshaphat, by the children of Moab and Ammon, and their confederates. Instead of seeking help from man, as had generally been the case, he proclaims a fast, and calls upon the nation to humble themselves before God; and on this occasion the king himself offers up a most excellent and solemn prayer for the divine blessing and protection, in which he makes a striking allusion to the inspired prayer that his predecessor, Solomon, had offered at the dedication of the temple. And impressive indeed must have been the sight, when, as we are told, "all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives and children." In consequence of this national humiliation, a prophet is sent to assure them of an answer to their prayers, and to inform them, that they would have no oc-

Ver. 5. The new court.—Probably that recently repaired by Asa, ch. xv. 8.

Ver. 7. Art not thou, &c.—The Hebrew reads, more literally, "Art not thou our God? Thou didst drive," &c. So the Targum.

Ver. 11. They reward us.—Six MSS. and the Targums insert here the word "evil," which the sense seems to require.

as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; Believe in <sup>a</sup>the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers <sup>c</sup>unto the LORD, and <sup>f</sup>that should praise the <sup>g</sup>beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise <sup>h</sup>the LORD; <sup>i</sup>for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 ¶ And <sup>j</sup>when they began <sup>k</sup>to sing and to praise, the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and they <sup>l</sup>were smitten.

23 For <sup>m</sup>the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped <sup>n</sup>to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, they were dead <sup>o</sup>bodies fallen to the earth, and <sup>p</sup>none escaped.

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and precious jewels, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it <sup>q</sup>was so much.

26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of <sup>r</sup>Berachah; for there they blessed the LORD: therefore the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, unto this day.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the <sup>s</sup>forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy; for <sup>t</sup>the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries and harps and trumpets unto the house of the LORD.

29 And the fear <sup>u</sup>of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they had heard that the LORD fought against the enemies of Israel.

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet: for <sup>v</sup>his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ And <sup>w</sup>Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi.

32 And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and departed not from it, doing <sup>x</sup>that which was right in the sight of the LORD.

33 Howbeit <sup>y</sup>* the high places were not taken away: for as yet the people had not prepared <sup>z</sup>their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first and last, behold, they are written in the <sup>a</sup>book of Jehu the son of Hanani, who <sup>b</sup>* is mentioned in the book of the kings of Israel.

35 ¶ And after this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, who did very wickedly:

36 And <sup>c</sup>he joined himself with him to make ships to go to Tarshish: and they made the ships in Ezion-gaber.

37 Then Eliezer the son of Dodavah of Mare-shah prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, Because <sup>d</sup>* thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, the LORD hath broken thy works. And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to <sup>e</sup>Tarshish.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Jehoram, succeeding Jehoshaphat, slayeth his brethren. 5 His wicked reign. 8 Edom and Libnah revolt. 12 The prophecy of Elijah against him in writing. 16 The Philistines and Arabians oppress him. 18 His incurable disease, infamous death, and burial.

NOW <sup>f</sup>* Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And Jehoram his son reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.

3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom gave he to <sup>g</sup>Jehoram; because he was <sup>h</sup>* the first-born.

4 Now when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and slew all his brethren with the sword, and <sup>i</sup>divers also of the princes of Israel.

5 ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

6 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for <sup>j</sup>* he had the daughter of Ahab to wife: and he wrought <sup>k</sup>that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

7 Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised to give <sup>l</sup>* a light <sup>m</sup>* to him and to his sons for ever.

casion to fight; but only, as Israel when pursued by Pharaoh, to "stand still, and see the salvation of God." On the morrow, therefore, instead of great military preparations, the king arranges the singers to praise the Lord, in anticipation of deliverance, and exhorts the people to faith and confidence in him.

By what means their deliverance was actually effected, is by no means clear. Some learned men translate the passage thus: "The Lord set against the children of Ammon and Moab, ambushments of those who came up from mount Seir against Judah; and the children of Ammon and Moab were smitten: but they afterwards rose up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, and utterly destroyed them; who, being destroyed, they rose up one against another, and mutually destroyed each other."

Various are the methods by which the God of Israel delivered his people from their enemies. Sometimes he strengthened them to gain the victory over very superior forces; at others, (as here,) he so disposes circumstances, that the enemies themselves destroy one another; and in other instances, he terrifies them with thunder, or destroys them by fire from heaven. Either way, his power and goodness were equally displayed to Israel.

Ver. 22. And when they began, &c.—See Margin. [Houbtiant's version is, "the Lord set against the children of Ammon and Moab ambushments of those who came from mount Seir against Judah: and the children of Ammon and Moab were smitten; but they afterwards rose up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, and utterly destroyed them; who being destroyed, they rose up one against another, and mutually destroyed each other."]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Both riches with the dead bodies.—[Instead of garments, "dead bodies," eight MSS., and several ancient editions read, segadim, "garments." None of the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, have dead bodies: garments would therefore appear to be the true reading; and the succeeding clause should be rendered, "which they seized for themselves."]—Bagster.

Ver. 28. Psalteries.—[Instead of celebrating his own heroism or the valour of his troops on this memorable occasion, this excellent prince sung with his whole army the praises of Jehovah the God of hosts, who disposes of the victory according to his pleasure. This conduct was becoming the descendant and successor of David, the man after God's own heart, and of a religious people, the peculiar inheritance of Jehovah.]—Bagster.

Ver. 33. The high places were not taken away.—Their idolatries were suppressed, but the places not destroyed.

Ver. 36. Tarshish.—["Tarso in the great sea," says the Targumist, by which is meant a place in the Mediterranean, called the Great Sea by the Hebrews.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXI.—The principal events of this ch. will be found in 2 Ki. viii. 16–22. Ver. 2. King of Israel.—But we know that Jehoshaphat was king, not of Israel, but of Judah; and so read the Syriac, Arabic, LXX., and Vulgate, also 40 of Kennicott and De Rossi's MSS.

Ver. 5. Began to reign.—That is, in concert with his father. See note on 1 Kings viii. 16.

8 ¶ In his days the Edomites revolted from under the <sup>1</sup> dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did Libnah revolt from under his hand; because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

11 Moreover he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit <sup>2</sup> fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

12 ¶ And there came a writing to him from Elijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah,

13 But hast walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go <sup>3</sup> a whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of <sup>4</sup> Ahab, and also hast slain <sup>5</sup> thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself:

14 Behold, with a great <sup>6</sup> plague will the LORD smite thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods:

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy <sup>7</sup> bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

16 ¶ Moreover the LORD stirred <sup>8</sup> up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians:

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and <sup>9</sup> carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save <sup>10</sup> Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD <sup>11</sup> smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases. And his people made no burning for him, like the burning <sup>12</sup> of his fathers.

20 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed without <sup>13</sup> being <sup>14</sup> desired. Howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

A. M. 3115.
B. C. 888.

f hand.

g Le. 20.5.
ver. 13.
Re. 2.20.
22.

h Ex. 34.15.
De. 31.16.
Je. 3.8, 9.

i 1 Ki. 16.31.
33.
2 Ki. 9.22.

j ver. 4.

k stroke.

l ver. 18, 19.

A. M. 3117.

B. C. 887.

m 1 Ki. 11.

14, 23.

Is. 10.5, 6.

n captive.

c. 22.1.

o or, Aha-ziah.

c. 22.1.

or, Aza-

riah.

c. 22.6.

p ver. 15.

Ac. 12.23.

q c. 16.14.

r desire.

A. M. 3119.

B. C. 885.

s Je. 22.18.

t

a 2 Ki. 8.24,

&c.

c. 21.7.

ver. 6.

b c. 21.6.

c Ge. 27.12,

13.

De. 7.3, 4.

13.6, 10.

Mat. 10.37.

Ac. 4.19.

d Pr. 12.5.

A. M. 3120.

B. C. 884.

e Mi. 6.16.

f 2 Ki. 9.15.

g wherever they

wounded

him.

h called

Ahaziah,

ver. 1. and Jehoiada.

c. 21.17.

i treading

down.

j Je. 32.35.

Ju. 14.4.

1 Ki. 12.15.

c. 10.15.

Hos. 14.9.

k 2 Ki. 9.21.

l 2 Ki. 9.5, 7.

m 2 Ki. 10.12

14.

n 2 Ki. 9.27.

o 1 Ki. 11.13.

p c. 17.4.

q 2 Ki. 11.1,

&c.

r 2 Ki. 11.2.

Jehoshapha.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Ahaziah succeeding reigned wickedly. 5 In his confederacy with Joram the son of Ahab, he is slain by Jehu. 10 Athaliah, destroying all the seed royal, save Joash whom <sup>11</sup> Jehoshabeath his aunt hid, usurpeth the kingdom.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah <sup>2</sup> his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Athaliah <sup>3</sup> the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for his mother <sup>4</sup> was his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors <sup>5</sup> after the death of his father to his destruction.

5 ¶ He walked <sup>6</sup> also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And <sup>7</sup> he returned to be healed in Jezreel because of the wounds <sup>8</sup> which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And <sup>9</sup> Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the <sup>10</sup> destruction of Ahaziah was <sup>11</sup> of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, he <sup>12</sup> went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that, when Jehu was <sup>13</sup> executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found <sup>14</sup> the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 And <sup>15</sup> he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hid in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had slain him, they buried him: <sup>16</sup> Because, said they, he is the son of Jehoshaphat, who <sup>17</sup> sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ But <sup>18</sup> when Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed royal of the house of Judah.

11 But <sup>19</sup> Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a bed chamber. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not.

Ver. 11. In the mountains.—For mountains, the LXX., Vulgate, and 49 MSS. read, "cities." The fornication here referred to is doubtless idolatry; and this also generally involved the literal crime.

Ver. 12. A writing to him from Elijah.—But Elijah, it is calculated, must have died 13 years before this period. Our translators subjoin this note: "Which was writ before his assumption, 2 Kings i. 1." Elijah might have known Jehoram before he came to the crown, and foreseeing his character and conduct, might have left this warning to be delivered to him after he became king.

Ver. 14. Smite thy people.—[Many of the people had concurred in Jehoram's idolatry: and some of them must have been instruments in his base, unnatural murders: they were therefore joined in his punishment, and he suffered by the loss of his subjects.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Disease of bowels.—[This is supposed to have been a violent dysentery, a disease which is often attended with symptoms similar to those described in the text, (Dr. Mead,) by the same death perished Antiochus, Epiphanes, and Herod Agrippa.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. An incurable disease.—An inflammation, probably, that ended in mortification.

Ver. 19. Like the burning of his fathers.—Dr. John Edwards was of opinion that when the Jews embalmed the bodies of their kings for burial, they usually extracted the bowels, and buried them with a quantity of spices: but he bowels having already been brought away by disease, therefore they made <sup>20</sup> no burning for him.

Ver. 20. Without being desired.—[That is, without being regretted: no one wished him to live any longer. He was hated while he lived, and neglected when he died. Ch. xxiii. 31. Pr. x. 7. Je. xxiii. 18, 28.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXII.—The facts of this chapter may be found, 2 Kings viii. 24—29., ix. 10—27.; xi. 1—8.

Ver. 2. Forty and two.—2 Kings viii. 26, we read, "Twenty and two," which must doubtless be the true reading, as the reading here makes him two years older than his father, for he died at 40; 2 Kings viii. 17. The Syriac and Arabic, and one Heb. MS. read 22. Of the LXX., the Vatican and Alexandrian copies read, "twenty," the Aldine, 22.

Ver. 6. Azariah.—This appears to be another mistake of the copyists: every where else he is called Ahaziah, or Jehoiada, which last was probably the name he bore before he came to the crown. 17 MSS., LXX., Syriac, &c. read Ahaziah in this place.—De Rossi.

Ver. 9. They brought him to Jehu.—[The account in the parallel passage is somewhat different. "The current of the story at large is this," says Dr. Lightfoot, "Jehu slayeth Joram in the field of Jezreel, as Ahaziah and Joram were together: Ahaziah seeing this, flies, and gets into Samaria, and hides himself there. Jehu marcheth to Jezreel, and makes Jezabel dog's meat: from thence sends to Samaria for the heads of Ahab's children and posterity: which are brought him by night, and showed to the people in the morning. Then he marcheth to Samaria, and, by the way, slayeth forty-two of Ahab's kinsmen, and finally slayeth Jehonadab, the father of the Rechabites. Coming into Samaria, he maketh search for Ahaziah: they find him hid, bring him to Jehu, and he 12 And he was with them hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Jehoiada, having set things in order, maketh Joash king. 12 Athaliah is slain. 16 Jehoiada restoreth the words of God.

AND <sup>a</sup> in the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant with him.

2 And they went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the congregation made a covenant <sup>b</sup> with the king in the house of God. And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD hath said <sup>c</sup> of the sons of David.

4 This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, shall be porters of the <sup>d</sup> doors;

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house; and a third part at the gate of the foundation: and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

6 But let none come into the house of the LORD, save the priests, and they <sup>e</sup> that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD.

7 And the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whosoever else cometh into <sup>f</sup> the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not the <sup>g</sup> courses.

9 Moreover Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which <sup>h</sup> were in the house of God.

10 And he set all the people, every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right <sup>i</sup> side of the temple to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then they brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and gave him the <sup>k</sup> testimony, and made him king. And Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, <sup>l</sup> God save the king.

12 ¶ Now when Athaliah heard the noise of

A. M. 3126.
B. C. 873.
a 2 Ki. 11. 4, &c.
b 2 Sa. 5. 3.
c 2 Sa. 7. 12, 16.
d 1 Ki. 9. 5.
e 2 Ch. 23. 19.
f 2 Ch. 23. 19.
g 2 Ch. 23. 19.
h 2 Ch. 23. 19.
i 2 Ch. 23. 19.
j 2 Ch. 23. 19.
k 2 Ch. 23. 19.
l 2 Ch. 23. 19.
m Pa. 14. 5.
n Pr. 11. 10.
o 1 Ch. 25. 8.
p Ec. 3. 12.
q conspiracy.
r Ex. 21. 14.
s Ne. 5. 23.
t Ps. 5. 6.
u 55. 23.
v Ja. 2. 13.
w De. 22. 1.
x De. 19. 17.
y De. 13. 9.
z 1 Ch. 23. 21.
aa Nu. 23.
ab by the hands of.
ac 1 Ch. 26. 1, &c.
ad 2 Ki. 11. 19.
ae Ps. 53. 10.
af Re. 18. 40.
ag 19. 1, 2.
ah A. M. 3126. 3165. ai B. C. 873. 839.
aj 2 Ki. 11. 21.
ak 12. 1, &c. al A. M. 3126. 3162. am B. C. 873. 842.
an Is. 26. 5.
ao Is. 29. 13.
ap A. M. 3148. aq B. C. 856.
ar revere.

the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And, <sup>m</sup> she looked, and, behold, the king stood at his pillar at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land <sup>n</sup> rejoiced, and sounded with trumpets, also the <sup>o</sup> singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. Then <sup>p</sup> Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, <sup>q</sup> Treason, Treason.

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth <sup>r</sup> of the ranges: and whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her; and when she was come to the entering of the horse gate <sup>s</sup> by the king's house, they slew <sup>t</sup> her there.

16 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant <sup>u</sup> between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that <sup>v</sup> they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to the house of Baal, and brake it down, and brake his altars and his images in pieces, and <sup>w</sup> slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had distributed <sup>x</sup> in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, as it is written <sup>y</sup> in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained <sup>z</sup> by David.

19 And he set the porters <sup>a</sup> at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took the captains <sup>b</sup> of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And all the people of the land <sup>c</sup> rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 15 Jehoiada's death and honourable burial. 17 Joash, falling to idolatry, slayeth Zachariah the son of Jehoiada. 23 Joash is spoiled by the Syrians, and slain by Zabad and Jehoahab. 27 Amaziah succeedeth him.

JOASH <sup>a</sup> was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all the days <sup>b</sup> of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada took for him two wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded to <sup>c</sup> repair the house of the LORD.

commands to carry him towards Gur, by Ibleam, and there to slay him.—They do so: smite him in his chariot, and his charioteer driveth away to Megiddo before he dies.”—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Fathers of Israel.—[Houbigant omits the words of Israel. Ep. Patrick, however, is of opinion, that Judah is here called by the general name of Israel: but it is probable, that these “chief of the fathers of Israel” were the descendants of those priests and Levites, and other pious persons of the ten tribes, who left their cities and possessions, and joined themselves to Judah, in the days of Jeroboam.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Which were in the house of God.—[When the soldier retired from the tumults of war, to the bosom of his family, he frequently hung up his arms in the temple, as a grateful acknowledgment of the protection he had received, and of the victories he had won. Ovid more than once alludes to this custom: “The battered soldier, worn out with age and the toils of war, then votes the arms which he formerly bore to his ancient household gods.” It is highly probable, therefore, that the arms of David which Jehoiada delivered to the captains of hundreds, “which were in the house of God,” were laid up in the tabernacle by David when he resigned the command of his armies to his generals; and there is reason to believe that his conduct, in this respect, was followed by many of his companions in arms.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. The crown.—[The Rabbins say, that this was the crown of the king of the Ammonites, which David wore, and which was preserved in the house of Judah. See 2 Sam. xx. 30. 31.]

Ver. 14. Of the ranges.—[The Vulgate has here, and in the parallel place, “Take her out beyond the precincts of the temple.” These were walls erected in parallel lines, and forming an extensive range of buildings around the sacred edifice.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Horse gate.—[This gate was in the eastern wall of the city, towards the Brook Kidron, (Je. xxi. 46.) at which the king's horses probably went out from the stables at Millo. It was near the temple; and some Rabbins suppose that, in order to go to the temple, a person might go on horseback to this place, but was then obliged to alight.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Ordained by David.—[For the regulations of David relative to the priests, the singers, and the porters, see 1 Chron. xxiii. 6, &c. and following chapters.]

Ch. XXIV. This chapter, in like manner, corresponds to 2 Kings ch. xii. throughout, with some variations as noticed below.

Ver. 1. Joash.—[As Joash was hidden six years in the temple, and was but seven when he came to the throne, he could have been but one year old when secreted by his aunt.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Took for him two wives.—[Not for himself, as the Jewish expositors suppose, but for Joash: for Jehoiada's advanced age renders it highly im-

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter. Howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah and out of Jerusalem the collection, according to the commandment <sup>d</sup> of Moses the servant of the Lord, and of the congregation of Israel, for the <sup>e</sup> tabernacle of witness?

7 For the sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up <sup>f</sup> the house of God; and also all the dedicated <sup>g</sup> things of the house of the Lord did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the Lord.

9 And they made a <sup>h</sup> proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the Lord the collection <sup>i</sup> that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people <sup>j</sup> rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by <sup>k</sup> day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the Lord, and hired masons and carpenters to repair the house of the Lord, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the Lord.

13 So the workmen wrought, and <sup>l</sup> the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it.

14 And when they had finished <sup>m</sup> it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made vessels for the house of the Lord, even vessels to minister, and <sup>n</sup> to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. And they offered burnt-offerings in the house of the Lord continually all the days of Jehoiada.

15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died; a hundred and thirty years old <sup>o</sup> was he when he died.

16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good <sup>p</sup> in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 ¶ Now after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance <sup>q</sup> to the king. Then the king hearkened <sup>r</sup> unto them.

A. M. 3148.

B. C. 856.

d Ex. 30.12.

16.

e Nu. 1.50.

Ac. 7.44.

f e. 21.17.

g Eccl. 16.17.

-19.

Hos. 2.8.

13.

h voice.

i ver. 6.

j 2 Co. 9.7.

A. M. 3162.

B. C. 842.

k 1 Co. 16.2.

l the healing went up upon the work.

m or, pests.

n e. 23.

ver. 2, 12.

14.

A. M.

3162. 3165.

B. C.

842. 839.

o Pr. 26.8.

p Pr. 29.12.

q 1 Ki. 14.23.

r Ju. 8.5.

c. 24.13.

23.8.

35.14. 16.

Ho. 5.10.

14.

Zep. 1.4.

6.

Ep. 5.6.

s Je. 7.25. 26.

26.5.

A. M. 3160.

B. C. 840.

t Ps. 95.7. 8.

Ac. 7.51.

u clothed.

Ju. 6.34.

v Nu. 14.41.

w e. 15.2.

x Je. 18.18.

y Mat. 21.35.

23.35.

Ac. 7.58.

59.

z Pr. 17.13.

a Ps. 10.14.

Je. 51.56.

Lu. 11.31.

2 Ti. 4.16.

A. M. 3165.

B. C. 839.

b in the revolution of.

c 2 Ki. 12.17.

d Darneseek.

e Le. 26.37.

Je. 32.20.

Is. 30.17.

f Le. 26.35.

De. 28.25.

48.

g e. 22.8.

Is. 10.5.

h ver. 21. 22.

i or, Jozach-

ar.

2 Ki. 12.21.

j or, Shomer.

k founding.

l or, commentary.

a 2 Ki. 14.1.

&amp;c.

b Ps. 78.37.

Is. 29.13.

Ho. 10.2.

Ja. 1.8.

4.8.

18 And they left the house of the Lord God of their fathers, and served <sup>a</sup> groves and idols: and wrath came <sup>b</sup> upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet <sup>c</sup> he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto <sup>d</sup> the Lord; and they testified against them: but <sup>e</sup> they would not give ear.

20 And the Spirit of God <sup>f</sup> came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why <sup>g</sup> transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that <sup>h</sup> ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they conspired <sup>i</sup> against him, and stoned <sup>j</sup> him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the Lord.

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but <sup>k</sup> slew his son. And when he died, he said, The Lord look upon <sup>l</sup> it, and require <sup>m</sup> it.

23 ¶ And it came to pass <sup>n</sup> at the end of the year, that <sup>o</sup> the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of <sup>p</sup> Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small <sup>q</sup> company of men, and the Lord delivered <sup>r</sup> a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers. So they executed judgment <sup>s</sup> against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for <sup>t</sup> the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these are they that conspired against him; <sup>u</sup> Zabad the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of <sup>v</sup> Shimrith a Moabitess.

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the burdens laid upon him, and the <sup>w</sup> repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the <sup>x</sup> story of the book of the kings. And Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXV

1 Amaziah beginneth to reign well. 2 He executeth justice on the traitors. 3 Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, at the word of a prophet, he loatheth the hundred talents, and dismisseth them. 11 He overthroweth the Edomites. 10, 13 The Israelites, discontented with their dismissal, spoil as they return home. 14 Amaziah, proud of his victory, serveth the gods of Edom, and despiseth the admonitions of the prophet. 17 He provoketh Joash to his overthrow. 25 His reign. 27 He is slain by a conspiracy.

AMAZIAH <sup>a</sup> was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, but not <sup>b</sup> with a perfect heart.

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom probable that he should take them for himself. He was born in the reign of Solomon, and lived through six successive reigns; and must, on any computation, have been upwards of 100 years old when Joash began to reign. See ver. 15.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Collection.—[This was the poll-tax fixed by Moses, of half a shekel, which was levied on every man of twenty years old and upwards, as "a ransom for their souls that there might be no plague among them."—Bagster.

Ver. 13. The work was perfected.—(See Margin.) A peculiar idiom, comparing the dilapidated state of the temple to a person deeply wounded, and its repairs to the process of healing, in which, first the flesh is made sound, and then skinned over gradually.

Ver. 14. And when they had finished.—The parallel passage states, that in the first instance they made no "vessels of gold or silver, only the house itself was substantially repaired;" but when these repairs were finished, this chapter informs us there was a surplus of money, and then were vessels made of gold and silver for the temple service, as already remarked in 1 Ki. xi. 13.

The melancholy fact of the murder of Zechariah is also there introduced and remarked upon, which makes repetition here unnecessary.

Ver. 15. Full of days.—[Wyyisba yamim, "satiated with days;" which was established to him, that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father.

4 But he slew not their children, but did as it is written <sup>a</sup> in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also a hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for a hundred talents of silver.

7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle: God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for God <sup>e</sup> hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the <sup>b</sup> army of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is able <sup>i</sup> to give thee much more than this.

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in <sup>k</sup> great anger.

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the valley of salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were broken in pieces.

13 ¶ But <sup>l</sup> the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought <sup>m</sup> the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed <sup>n</sup> down himself before them, and burned incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which <sup>o</sup> could not deliver their own people out of thy hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath <sup>p</sup> determined to destroy thee, because <sup>q</sup> thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then <sup>r</sup> Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us see one another in the face.

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The <sup>s</sup> thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a <sup>t</sup> wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites; and thy heart lifteth thee up to boast: abide now at home; why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

20 But Amaziah would not hear; for it <sup>u</sup> came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom.

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up; and they saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

22 And Judah was <sup>v</sup> put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to his tent.

23 And Joash the king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of <sup>w</sup> Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to <sup>x</sup> the <sup>y</sup> corner-gate, four hundred cubits.

24 And he took all the gold and the silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria.

25 ¶ And <sup>z</sup> Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel?

27 ¶ Now <sup>a</sup> after the time that Amaziah did turn away from <sup>b</sup> following the LORD they <sup>c</sup> made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish: but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of <sup>d</sup> Judah.

A. M. 3166.

B. C. 538.

o confirmed upon him.

d De. 24. 16.

e Je. 34. 30.

Eze. 18. 20.

A. M. 3177.

B. C. 527.

f Nu. 1. 3.

g e. 20. 6.

Ps. 62. 11.

Ec. 9. 11.

h band.

i Ps. 94. 1.

Pr. 10. 22.

Phil. 4. 13.

j to their place.

k heat of anger.

l sons of the band.

m c. 28. 23.

n Ex. 20. 3. 5.

Is. 44. 19.

o ver. 11, 12.

Ps. 96. 5.

p counselled.

q 1 Sa. 2. 25.

A. M. 3178.

B. C. 526.

r 2 Ki. 14. 5.

&amp;c.

s or, furze bush, or, thorn.

t beast of the field.

u 1 Ki. 12. 15.

c. 22. 7.

ver. 15.

v smitten.

w c. 21. 17.

x c. 26. 9.

y gate of it that looked.

A. M. 3179.

3194.

B. C. 525.

820.

z 2 Ki. 14. 17.

&amp;c.

A. M. 3194.

B. C. 510.

a e. 15. 2.

b after.

c conspired a conspiracy.

d i. e. the city of David.

2 Ki. 14. 30.

Ver. 3. Was established.—[No doubt those wicked men, Jozachar and Jeho-zabab, who murdered his father, had considerable power and influence; and, therefore, he found it dangerous to bring them to justice, till he was assured of the loyalty of his other officers: when this was clear, he called them to an account, and justly put them to death for treason and murder; for, if even these conspirators against Joash intended to avenge upon him the death of Zechariah, they acted without a commission from that God "to whom vengeance belongeth."—Baster.

Ver. 12. Ten thousand.—[No intimation is given on what account, or on what provocation, this most cruel conduct towards the prisoners of war was adopted. The enmity between Israel and Edom seems to have been reciprocal, and deeply malignant. The victorious king and his army considered every individual of Edom as a traitor and rebel; and so adjudged them to death, and acted on this judgment. But their conduct was wholly inexcusable, and could only perpetuate rancour to future generations, and provoke the surviving Edomites to cruel retaliations whenever they had it in their power.]—Baster.

Ver. 13. The soldiers of the army.—[These Israelites seem to have returned home, when discharged by Amaziah, whose powerful army deterred them from attempting revenge at that time: but when he was engaged in war with the Edomites, they marched from Samaria, and plundered all the cities till they came to Beth-horon, where they slew 3000 of the inhabitants.]—Baster.

Ver. 21. Saw one another in the face.—[That is, "they fought against each other." To face an enemy, or to face one another, is still a common expression. The reason of this war was evidently the injury the army of Joash had done to the unoffending inhabitants of Judah. The ravages committed by them were totally unprovoked, base, and cowardly: they fell upon women, old men, and children, and butchered them in cold blood, when all the effective men were gone with their king against the Edomites. The quarrel of Amaziah was certainly just, yet he was put to the rout: he fell, and Judah, with him, as Joash had said; and the reason was, because "it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hands of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom." This was the reason why the Israelites triumphed.]—Baster.

Ver. 24. All the vessels with Obed-edom.—To him was allotted the house of Asuppim, or collections for the sacred treasury. See 1 Chron. xxi. 5.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Uzziah succeeding, and reigning well in the days of Zechariah, prospereth. 16 Waxing proud, he invadeth the priest's office, and is smitten with leprosy. 22 He dieth, and Jotham succeedeth him.

THEN <sup>a</sup> all the people of Judah took <sup>b</sup> Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built Eloth, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old was Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah did.

5 And he sought God in the days <sup>c</sup> of Zechariah, who had understanding in the <sup>d</sup> visions of God: and as long <sup>e</sup> as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

6 And he went forth and warred against the Philistines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities <sup>f</sup> about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And God helped him against <sup>g</sup> the <sup>h</sup> Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts <sup>i</sup> to Uzziah: and his name <sup>j</sup> spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 ¶ Moreover Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the <sup>k</sup> corner-gate, and at the valley-gate, and at the turning of the wall, and <sup>l</sup> fortified them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert, and <sup>m</sup> digged many wells: for he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains: husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in <sup>n</sup> Carmel: for he loved <sup>o</sup> husbandry.

11 ¶ Moreover Uzziah had a host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the <sup>p</sup> and of Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was <sup>q</sup> an army, three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and <sup>r</sup> slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal. And his name <sup>s</sup> spread far abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.

16 ¶ But <sup>t</sup> when he was strong, his heart

A. M. 3194.
B. C. 810.

a 2Ki. 14.21,
22.

b or, Azariah.

A. M. 3194, 3246.
B. C. 810, 758.

c 2Sa. 2, 38, 41, 15,
Da. 1.17, 10.1.

d seeing.

e 1Ch. 22.13.

f or, in the country of Ashdod.

g 1Ch. 5.20.

h 2Sa. 16, 17.

i went.

k 2Sa. 23, Ne. 3.13, 22.

l or, repaired.

m or, cut out many cisterns.

n or, fruitful fields.

o ground.

p the power of an army.

q stones of slings.

r went forth.

s De. 8.14, 32.15, c. 35.19.

t Pr. 16.18.

u 2Ki. 16.12, 13.

v 1 Ch. 6.10.

w Nu. 16.40, 18.7.

x Ex. 20.7, 8, He. 5.4.

y 1 Co. 5.5.

z 1 Sa. 2.30.

a 2Sa. 16.

b Nu. 12.10, 2 Ki. 5.27.

c Es. 6.12.

A. M. 3239, 3246.
B. C. 763, 753.

d 2 Ki. 15.5.

e free.

f Le. 13.46, Nu. 5.2, 12.15.

g 1Sa. 1.1.

A. M. 3246.
B. C. 758.

h 1Sa. 6.1.

A. M. 3246, 3302.
B. C. 758, 712.

a 2 Ki. 15.32, &c.

b or, the tower.

c 33.14, Nu. 3.23, 27.

d This.

e or, established.

f 19.3.

was lifted up to his <sup>u</sup> destruction: for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and went <sup>v</sup> into the temple of the LORD to burn incense upon the altar of incense.

17 And Azariah <sup>w</sup> the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were valiant men:

18 And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth not <sup>x</sup> unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but to the priests <sup>y</sup> the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated <sup>z</sup> to burn incense: go out <sup>a</sup> of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thy honour <sup>b</sup> from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was <sup>c</sup> wroth, and had a censor in his hand to burn incense: and while <sup>d</sup> he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense altar.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself <sup>e</sup> hasted also to go out, because the LORD had smitten him.

21 And <sup>f</sup> Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a <sup>g</sup> several <sup>h</sup> house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah <sup>i</sup> the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So <sup>j</sup> Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Jotham, reigning well, prospereth. 5 He smiteth the Ammonites. 7 His reign. 9 Ahaz succeedeth him.

JOTHAM <sup>a</sup> was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the LORD. And the people did yet corruptly.

3 ¶ He built the high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of <sup>b</sup> Ophel he built much.

4 Moreover he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

5 ¶ He fought also with the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year a hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. <sup>c</sup> So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year, and the third.

6 So Jotham became mighty, <sup>d</sup> because he <sup>e</sup> prepared <sup>f</sup> his ways before the LORD his God.

CHAP. XXVI. This chapter corresponds with 2 Ki. xiv. 1—3, and xv. 1—7, and all the important facts here mentioned are there introduced; only it must be remarked, that king Uzziah is there called Azariah.

Ver. 5. In the visions of God.—Twelve MSS. and the ancient versions, "In the fear of God."—De Rossi. "So forty MSS."—Kennicott. We suppose the Zechariah here mentioned to have been the priest martyred in the latter days of king Joash. See ch. xxiv. 20.

Ver. 10. Built towers in the desert.—These were for the purpose of watching and guarding their cattle.—Orient. Lit. No. 635.—And in Carmel.—There were "two districts so called in Judea, and both fertile in vines."—Origen.

Ver. 15. Shoot arrows.—These engines, it is probable, bore some resemblance to the ballista and catapulta of the Romans, which were employed for throwing stones and arrows, and were in reality the mortars and carriages of antiquity. With respect to the towers which Uzziah built in the wilderness, ver. 10.) Harmer appears to have given a truer view of the subject than commentators in general have done, who suppose that they were conveniences made only for sheltering the shepherds from bad weather, or to defend them from incursions of enemies; for they might rather be designed to keep the nations that pastured there in awe, and also to induce them quietly to pay the tribute to which the 8th verse seems to refer.—William of Tyre describes a country not far from the Euphrates as inhabited by Syrian and Armenian Christians, who fed great flocks and herds there, but were kept in subjection to the Turks, in consequence of their living among them in strong places.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXVII. This very short chapter nearly corresponds with the last seven verses of 2 Kings xv. with some additional circumstances.

Ver. 5. The king of the Ammonites.—[We find here, that he brought the Ammonites under a heavy tribute for three years; but whether this was the effect of his prevailing against them is not so evident. Some think that they paid this tribute for three years, and then revolted; that, in consequence, he attacked them, and their utter subjection was the result.]—Bagster.

7 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 And Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Ahaz reigning very wickedly is greatly afflicted by the Syrians. 6 Judah being captured by the Israelites is sent home by the counsel of Uled the prophet. 16 Ahaz sending for aid to Assyria is not helped thereby. 22 In his distress he groweth more idolatrous. 26 He dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him.

AHAZ <sup>a</sup> was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, like David his father:

2 For he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also <sup>b</sup> molten images for <sup>c</sup> Baalim.

3 Moreover he <sup>d</sup> burnt incense in the valley <sup>e</sup> of the son of Hinnom, and <sup>f</sup> burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

4 He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore <sup>g</sup> the LORD his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to <sup>h</sup> Damascus. And he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For <sup>i</sup> Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah a hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all <sup>j</sup> valiant men; because <sup>k</sup> they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was <sup>l</sup> next to the king.

8 ¶ And the children of Israel carried away captive of their brethren <sup>m</sup> two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and <sup>n</sup> ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth <sup>o</sup> up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for <sup>p</sup> bondmen and bondwomen unto you: but are there not with you, even <sup>q</sup> with you, sins against the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and <sup>r</sup> deliver the

A. M. 3262. 3278. B. C. 742. 726.

a 2Ki.18.2, &c.

b Ex.34.17. Le.19.4.

c Ju.2.11. 17.

d A. M. 3263. B. C. 741.

e or, offered sacrifice.

f 2Ki.23.10.

g Le.18.21.

h Ps.106.37. Je.32.35. Eze.16.20, 21.

i Mi.6.7.

j Is.7.1.

k Darneseek.

l 2Ki.15.27.

m sons of valour.

n De.31.16, 17.

o Ju.24.20.

p Is.1.28.

q Je.15.6.

r the second.

s m. c. 1.4.

t Ps.69.26.

u Is.10.5.7. 47.6.

v Je.50.17, 18.

w Eze.25.12. 17.

x 2S.3.

y Or. 10. &c. Zec.1.15.

z Ge.4.10.

a Je.36.6.

b Re.18.5.

c Le.25.39, &c.

d Je.25.29.

e Mat.7.2. 4.

f Is.58.6.

g Je.34.14.

h s. a. 2.13.

i ver. 12.

j u 2 Ki. 6.22.

k Ps. 25.21, 22.

l Lu. 3.27, 33.

m Ro. 15.1.

n w De. 34.3.

o Ju. 1.16.

p x 2 Ki. 16.7.

q y Ob. 10.13, 14.

r z captivity.

s a Eze. 16. 27, 51.

t b Ps. 106.43.

u c Ex. 32.25. Ro. 3.17, 18.

v 16.15.

w A. M. 3264. B. C. 740.

x d 2Ki.15.29. 16.7.9.

y e Darneseek.

z f Ju. 10.5.

a 44.17. 23.

b g Is. 1.28.

c Ho. 13.9.

d h c. 29.3, 7.

captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for <sup>a</sup> the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend to add more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were expressed by name <sup>b</sup> rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and gave them to eat <sup>c</sup> and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble <sup>d</sup> of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, the city <sup>e</sup> of palm trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

16 ¶ At that time <sup>f</sup> did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For again the Edomites <sup>g</sup> had come and smitten Judah, and carried away <sup>h</sup> captives.

18 The Philistines <sup>i</sup> also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shochu with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof: and they dwelt there.

19 For the LORD brought Judah <sup>j</sup> low because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah <sup>k</sup> naked, and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And Tilgath-pilneser <sup>l</sup> king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.

21 For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of <sup>a</sup> Damascus, which smote him: and he said, Because the gods of the king of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may <sup>b</sup> help me. But they were the ruin <sup>c</sup> of him, and of all Israel.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up <sup>d</sup> the doors of the house of the LORD, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

Ver. 7. Book of the kings, &c.—[There is not so much found in the book of Kings, which we have now, as here: in both places we have abridged accounts; the larger histories having been lost.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Carried away captive.—This act of taking captive 200,000 women and children, after slaying 120,000 of the men of Judah, reflects great disgrace upon the Israelites; and was directly in opposition to the law that forbade the reducing of their brethren into slavery, which was evidently the design of this capture; their conduct is described as an enormity reaching up to heaven. (See note of next verse.)

Ver. 9. And said unto them.—[To this beautiful speech nothing can be added by the best comment: it is simple, humane, pious, and overwhelmingly convincing; and it is no wonder that it produced the effect here described.—That there was much humanity, as well as firmness, in the heads of the children of Ephraim, who joined with the prophet of Jehovah on this occasion, their subsequent conduct, as detailed in the fifteenth verse, sufficiently proves. They do not barely dismiss these most unfortunate captives, but they took that very spoil which their victorious army had taken, and with it clothed, shod, fed, and anointed these distressed people, set the feeblest of them upon asses, and escorted them safely to Jericho! We can scarcely find a parallel to this in the universal history of the wars which savage man has carried on against his fellows from the foundation of the world. The compliance also of the whole army, in leaving both the captives and spoil to the disposal of the princes, was really wonderful; and perhaps unparalleled in history. Both the princes and army are worthy to be held up to the admiration and imitation of mankind.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Ahaz king of Israel.—This seems a similar mistake to chap. xxi. 2, where Jehoshaphat is also called king of "Israel;" though many manuscripts, here as well as there, and several versions, read Judah.—De Rossi.

Ver. 21. He helped him not.—He helped him as confederate kings often do, by impoverishing him, and hastening on his ruin. See expos. of the parallel chapter above referred to.

Ver. 23. To the gods of Damascus.—[This passage, says Hallet, greatly surprises me; for the sacred historian himself is here represented as saying, "The gods of Damascus had smitten Ahaz." But it is impossible to suppose that an inspired author should say this; for the Scripture every where represents the heathen idols as nothing and vanity, and as incapable of doing either good or 25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now the rest of his acts, and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem: and they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 3 He restoreth religion. 5 He exhorteth the Levites. 12 They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God. 20 Hezekiah offereth solemn sacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the priests.

HEZEKIAH began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He in the first year of his reign, in the first month, opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.

6 For our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and turned their backs.

7 Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burned incense nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons and our daughters and our wives are in captivity for this.

10 Now it is in my heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons, be not now negligent: for the LORD hath chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that you should minister unto him, and burn incense.

A. M. 3264.
B. C. 740.
1 Je. 11. 13.
1 offer.
A. M.
3274. 3306.
B. C.
726. 693.
2 Ki. 18. 1,
&c.
b c. 26. 5.
A. M. 3278.
B. C. 726.
c Pa. 101. 3.
Ga. 1. 18.
d ver. 7.
e 1 Ch. 15. 12.
c. 35. 6.
f Eze. 8. 3, 9,
&c.
g Ne. 9. 16.
h Je. 2. 27.
Eze. 8. 16.
i given the rack.
j c. 23. 21.
Mat. 1. 10.
k c. 24. 18.
l commo-
tion.
De. 28. 25.
m 1 Ki. 9. 8.
J. 18. 15,
16.
25. 9, 18.
n c. 28. 5, 8,
&c.
La. 5. 7.
o c. 15. 12.
p or, deceived.
q Nu. 3. 6, 7.
18. 2. 6.
r or, offer
each.
s Nu. 4. 2, &c.
t ver. 5.
u or, in the business.
v 1 Ch. 23. 28.
w Mat. 21.
12, 13.
x 1 Ki. 6. 3.
y c. 28. 24.
z Le. 4. 3, 14.
a Le. 8. 14,
&c.
He. 9. 21.

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai; and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari, Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

13 And of the sons of Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; She-maiah and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, by the words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into the inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the shew-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah. And he commanded the priests the sons of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and sprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1—36. Hezekiah cleanses the temple, and restores the worship of the true God.—In our remarks on the contemporary history in Kings, we have referred to this and the two following chapters for a particular account of the early years of Hezekiah's reign. We find (in the preceding chapter) that when Ahaz gave himself up to the worship of idols, that he "shut up the doors of the house of the Lord: the first thing, therefore, that Hezekiah did toward restoring divine worship, was to open those doors, and the next to cleanse the house, and sanctify the priests and Levites who were to perform the service therein. He also endeavoured to restore the order of the sacrifices, and of prayer and praise, as in the times of David and of Solomon.

The sacrifices, it appears, were very numerous, and the gifts of "a free heart:" and "Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people, for the thing was done sudhurt. All difficulty is avoided if we follow the old Hebrew copies, from which the Greek translation was made: "And king Ahaz said, I will seek to the gods of Damascus which have smitten me."—Bagster.

Ver. 27. Kings of Israel.—(Or, "the kings of Judah;" the name Israel being sometimes applied, by the writer of this book, in a general way to Judah. The Hebrews were accustomed to honour the memory of those kings who had reigned well, by depositing their remains in the royal cemetery. On the contrary, those who died under the disapprobation of the people, as a mark of posthumous disgrace, were denied interment with their predecessors, and were buried in some other place in Jerusalem. So it was with Ahaz, who, though brought into the city, was not buried in the sepulchres of the kings of Judah. It was doubtless with a design to make a suitable impression on the minds of their kings while living, that such distinctions were observed. They might thus restrain them from evil, or excite them to good, according as they were fearful of being execrated, or desirous of being honoured when dead.)—Bagster.

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 8. To trouble.—(It is probable, Hezekiah refers to that dreadful defeat by the Israelites, in which one hundred and twenty thousand were slain, and two hundred thousand taken prisoners: see ch. xxviii. 6—8.)—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Covenant.—[To renew that covenant under which the whole people were constantly considered, and of which circumcision was the sign, and the spirit of which was, "I will be your God—ye shall be my people."]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Priests went in.—[The priests and Levites cleansed first the courts both of the priests and of the people. On this labour they spent eight days. Then they cleansed the interior of the temple; but, as the Levites had no right to enter the temple, the priests carried all the dirt and rubbish to the brook, whence they were collected by the Levites, carried away, and cast into the brook Kidron: in this work, eight days more were occupied; and thus the temple was purified in eighteen days.]—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Seven bullocks.—[The law only required one bullock for the sins of the high-priest, another for the sins of the people, and one he-goat for the sins of the prince: but Hezekiah offered many more, and the reason appears sufficiently evident: the law only speaks of sins of ignorance, but here there were sins of every dye—idolatry, apostasy from the Divine worship, profanation of the temple, &c. &c. The sin-offerings, we are informed, were offered, first, for the KINGDOM—for the transgressions of the king and his family—secondly, for the SANCTUARY—which had been defiled and polluted; and for 23 And they brought <sup>b</sup> forth the he-goats for the sin-offering before the king and the congregation; and they laid their hands upon them:

24 And the priests killed them, and they made reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, according <sup>c</sup> to the commandment of David, and of <sup>d</sup> Gad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet: for <sup>e</sup> so was the commandment of the LORD <sup>f</sup> by his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood with the instruments <sup>g</sup> of David, and <sup>h</sup> the priests with the <sup>i</sup> trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar. <sup>j</sup> And when the burnt-offering began, the <sup>k</sup> song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with the <sup>l</sup> instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And all the congregation worshipped, and the <sup>m</sup> singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king and all that were <sup>n</sup> present with him bowed <sup>o</sup> themselves and worshipped.

30 Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And they sang praises with <sup>p</sup> gladness, and they <sup>q</sup> bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have <sup>r</sup> consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near and bring sacrifices and <sup>s</sup> thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank-offerings; and as many as were of a free heart burnt-offerings.

32 And the number of the burnt-offerings, which the congregation brought, was three-score and ten bullocks, a hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt-offering to the LORD.

A. M. 3278.
B. C. 726.
b near.
c 1 Ch. 16.4.
23.5.
25.1, &c.
c. 8.14.
d 2Sa. 21.1.
e c. 30.12.
f by the hand of.
g 1 Ch. 23.5.
Ps. 87.7.
130.3.5.
Is. 33.20.
h 1 Ch. 16.6.
i in the time.
j c. 23.18.
Ps. 127.3, 4.
k hands of instruments.
l song.
m found.
n c. 30.18.
Ps. 72.11.
o Ps. 100.2.
p Ps. 95.6.
q or, filled your hand.
c. 13.9.
r Le. 7.12.
s strengthened.
t c. 35.11.
u c. 30.3.
v Ps. 26.6.
94.15.
w Le. 3.16.
x Nu. 15.5. 10.
y Ezr. 6.22.
z Ps. 10.17.
Pr. 16.1.
a Nu. 9.10, 11.
b Ez. 12.6, 18.
c c. 29.34.
d voice right in the eyes of.
e De. 12.32.
1 Co. 11.2.
f from the hand of.
g Je. 4.1.
Le. 5.21.
Jed. 2.13, 14.
h Is. 6.13.
i Ez. 20.13, &c.
He. 3.7. 11.

33 And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep.

34 But the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore their brethren the Levites <sup>a</sup> did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for <sup>b</sup> the Levites were more upright <sup>c</sup> in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with the fat <sup>d</sup> of the peace-offerings, and the <sup>e</sup> drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And <sup>f</sup> Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared <sup>g</sup> the people: for the thing was done suddenly.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover on the second month for Judah and Israel.
13 The assembly, having destroyed the altars of idolatry, keep the feast fourteen days.
27 The priests and Levites bless the people.

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover in the second <sup>a</sup> month.

3 For they could not keep it at that <sup>b</sup> time, because the priests had not <sup>c</sup> sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing <sup>d</sup> pleased the king and all the congregation.

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done <sup>e</sup> it of a long time in such sort as it was <sup>f</sup> written.

6 So the posts went with the letters from <sup>g</sup> the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn <sup>h</sup> again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the <sup>i</sup> remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

7 And be not ye like your <sup>j</sup> fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the denly," and quickly; even the whole work seems to have been performed in sixteen days, and that without any previous notice; for it was began in the first year of Hezekiah's reign, and on the first day of the first month of that year.

It is particularly remarked, that in this instance "the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than were the priests." It is, indeed, to be feared, that wicked Ahaz had bribed many of the priests to assist in his idolatrous services; we need not, therefore, wonder that they were backward to sanctify themselves unto the Lord. A divided heart is a great impediment in religion.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1—27. Hezekiah invites Israel to unite with Judah in the celebration of the Passover, and the king offers a solemn prayer on the occasion.—This was in the second month, which the law allowed, when the people could not be prepared sooner. But the good king's invitation was received by many with contempt and ridicule; for Israel was generally more given up to idolatry than was Judah. Many, however, the priests, who had been profane, negligent, and unholy; and finally, for JUDAH—for the whole mass of the people, who had been led away into every kind of abomination by the above examples.]—Bagster.

Ver. 27. Instruments ordained by David.—The word "ordained" is supplementary, and might have been "made," as 1 Chron. xxiii. 5, or "invented," as Amos vi. 5. But Dr. Clarke appears to be in error, in saying that David was "solemnly reproved" for this; for David is not reproved at all; and the Jews are reproved, not simply for inventing or using instruments of music, any more than for chanting; but for applying to purposes of luxury and riot those instruments which David had invented, wherewith to praise the Lord.

Ver. 31. Free heart.—[As the burnt-offerings were wholly consumed on the altar, the offering of them evinced greater zeal and liberality than the oblation of peace-offerings, the greater part of which was eaten by the offerer and his friends.]—Bagster.

Ver. 32. Number of the burnt-offerings.—[Comparing the sacrifices offered came and united with Judah, and they were "all of one heart and one soul." So "sudden," indeed, was the celebration, that many who came from a distance had not had opportunity to prepare themselves according to the prescribed rules. For these, therefore, the Levites slew, and prepared the Passover; and Hezekiah offered this short but excellent prayer on their behalf: "The good Lord pardon every one that prepareth his heart to seek God, the Lord God of his fathers, though he be not prepared according to the purification of the sanctuary." Upon this, "the Lord hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people." If we look back to the origin of this institution, we shall find the observance of the divine law connected with the health of the people. "I will put none of those diseases upon thee which I have brought on the Egyptians; for I am the Lord that healeth thee." (Exod. xv. 26.) It is a part of the physician's art to preserve health, as well as to restore it; and such is, perhaps, the sense of the text before us: the irregularities attending this Passover were visited with no punishment on this occasion with those of Solomon at the dedication of the temple, we may form some idea of the decrease of the prosperity and riches of Judah, or of the decline of the general spirit of piety.]—Bagster.

Ver. 36. Hezekiah rejoiced.—[Both Hezekiah and the people rejoiced, that God had prepared the hearts of the people to bring about so great and glorious a reformation in so short a time. This good king's example and influence were here, as in many other cases, under God, the grand spring of all those mighty movements.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 2. Second month.—[In Iyar, as they could not celebrate it in Nisan, the fourteenth of which month was the proper time. But Hezekiah and his counsellors justly concluded, that the regulation of the fourteenth day of the second month, which had been made for individuals, who were hindered from eating the passover at the appointed season, might, in their present circumstances, be extended to the people at large.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. The posts went.—[Ratzim, "runners," or couriers, of the same

LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, as you see.

8 Now <sup>k</sup> be ye not stiff-necked, as your fathers were, but <sup>m</sup> yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: and serve the LORD your God, that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them <sup>p</sup> that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious <sup>q</sup> and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return <sup>r</sup> unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh: even unto Zebulun: <sup>a</sup> but they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless divers <sup>t</sup> of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah the hand of God <sup>v</sup> was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by <sup>w</sup> the word of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there assembled at <sup>x</sup> Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose and took away the altars <sup>y</sup> that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the <sup>z</sup> priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in their <sup>a</sup> place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.

18 For <sup>b</sup> a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed <sup>c</sup> themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one.

19 That prepareth <sup>d</sup> his heart to seek God, ment. It is evident that the hearts of the people were prepared, and therefore "they kept the feast with great gladness," for the sacrifices were most abundant, and far beyond what the law prescribed. "Note, (says Henry,) holy duties should be performed with holy gladness. We should take pleasure in them, relish the sweetness of communion with God, and look upon it as matter of unspeakable joy and comfort that we are thus favoured, and have such earnestness of everlasting joy."

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1—21. Hezekiah puts down all idolatry, and forms arrangements for the restoration of public worship.—The first part of this reform, we have already noticed, (2 Kings xviii. 4.) and nothing could better prepare the people kind as the running footmen, who were formerly, before the establishment of posts, and still are in some places, "rained and kept on purpose to convey dispatches speedily by running."—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Not stiff-necked, but yield.—"Not your necks, but give the hand," as in token of compliance with my wishes.

Ver. 11. Divers of Asher.—[It has been said, that Hezekiah had no right to invite Hoshea's subjects to repair to Jerusalem to his passover; but, it may be presumed, that he was encouraged to do this by Hoshea himself, who was one of their best kings; besides which, both the golden calves having been taken away by the Assyrians, the apostate Israelites, being thus deprived of their idols, had begun to return to the Lord, and to go up to Jerusalem to worship, some time before Hezekiah gave them this invitation. See Prideaux.—Bagster.

Ver. 21. Singing with loud instruments.—"Singing" is here improperly sup-

A. M. 3278.
B. C. 726.

J c. 23.9.

k herden not your necks.

l De. 10. 16.
Ro. 10. 21.

m give the hand.
l Ch. 29. 24
Ez. 10. 19

n Ro. 6. 13.
19.

o c. 29. 10.

p Ps. 106. 46.

q Ex. 34. 6.
Ne. 9. 17.
31.
Ps. 111. 4.
Jo. 4. 2.

r Pr. 23. 13.
Is. 53. 7.

s c. 36. 16.

t c. 11. 16.
ver. 18. 21.

u Jc. 21. 7.
Ez. 36. 36.
Ph. 2. 13.

v c. 29. 25.

w Ps. 94. 7.

x c. 28. 24.

y c. 29. 34.

z standing.

a ver. 11.

b Na. 9. 19.
&c.

c c. 19. 3.

d Ja. 5. 15.

e found.

f instruments of strength.

g to the heart of all.
Is. 40. 2.

h De. 33. 10.

i Ex. 10. 11.

j lifted up, or, offered.

k the habitation of his holiness.
Ps. 85. 5.

a found.

b statutes.

c 2 Ki. 18. 4.

d c. 30. 14.

e to make an end.

f l Ch. 22. 6.
24. 1, &c.

the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

20 And the LORD hearkened <sup>a</sup> to Hezekiah, and healed the people.

21 And the children of Israel that were <sup>b</sup> present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with <sup>c</sup> loud instruments unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake <sup>d</sup> comfortably unto all the Levites <sup>e</sup> that taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat through out the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, and making <sup>f</sup> confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah <sup>g</sup> did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel there was not the like in Jerusalem.

27 ¶ Then the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to <sup>h</sup> his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The people is forward in destroying idolatry. 2 Hezekiah ordereth the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. 5 The people's forwardness in oblations and tithes. 11 Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of the tithes. 20 The sincerity of Hezekiah.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were <sup>a</sup> present went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the <sup>b</sup> images in <sup>c</sup> pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the <sup>d</sup> altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until <sup>e</sup> they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed the <sup>f</sup> courses of the priests and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests for the entire suppression of idolatry than the celebration of the institution described in the preceding chapter. Even those of Ephraim and Manasseh, who appear less devoted to idolatry than the other tribes of Israel, carried back with them the spirit of reform into their own country, and Hosea, king of Israel, probably countenanced their conduct, at least, so far as not to oppose them in the attempt: for though he is said to have done "evil in the sight of the Lord," yet was it "not as the kings of Israel that had been before him."

It was upon the example before us, and other similar ones, that the English Government acted at the time of the glorious Reformation, and which has occasioned them to be stigmatized as Goths and barbarians. We are, for ourselves, by no means plied; the priests did not sing, but sounded the trumpets, the "instruments" of strength here intended.

Ver. 23. Keep other seven days.—[They did not observe other seven days of unleavened bread, but offered sacrifices with praise and thanksgiving, and feasting, other seven days; and, as the people in general, and especially those who came out of the kingdom of Israel, would be unprepared for this additional expense, both Hezekiah and his princes liberally supplied them with cattle for sacrifices.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1. In Ephraim also.—[Either this destruction of the appliances of idolatry in Israel was confined to those cities and villages which had come under the dominion of Judah, or else, probably with the consent of Hosea, the people, in their zeal for the honour of God, went into various parts of his kingdom for this purpose.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Gates of the tents.—[Beshaaray machanoth Yehoneah, "within the and Levites <sup>e</sup> for burnt-offerings and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt-offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and the burnt-offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written <sup>h</sup> in the law of the LORD.

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwell in Jerusalem to give the <sup>i</sup> portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged <sup>j</sup> in the law of the LORD.

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment <sup>k</sup> came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first fruits <sup>l</sup> of corn, wine, and oil, and <sup>m</sup> honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwell in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the tithe <sup>n</sup> of holy things which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them <sup>o</sup> by heaps.

7 In the third <sup>p</sup> month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month.

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the <sup>q</sup> LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left <sup>r</sup> plenty: for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare <sup>s</sup> chambers in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them.

12 And brought in the offerings and the tithes and the dedicated things faithfully: over which Coniah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azariah, and Nahath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers <sup>t</sup> under the hand of Coniah and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the east, was over the free-will-offerings of God, to <sup>u</sup> distribute the oblations of the LORD, and the most holy things.

15 And <sup>v</sup> next him were Eden, and Minia-enemies to the fine arts, when consecrated to the service of the true God; but when they are employed to ensnare persons to idolatry, the first works of art, and the finest remains of antiquity, are but a cheap sacrifice to the God of truth and righteousness. Who would for a moment risk his life for a painting or a statue? much less should we hazard the salvation of the soul on a point of taste. Thus did not Hezekiah:

gates of the camps of Jehovah;" which comprehended the whole of the buildings that surrounded the temple, in which the priests and Levites were stationed, and which resembled military encampments.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. And honey.—[The word devash generally denotes the honey produced by bees; but, as we have already observed, (on Ge. xliii. 11.) the Jewish doctors are of opinion that it here signifies dates, or the fruit of the palm tree; which the Arabians call dabobs, and the honey produced from them, dtbs. "This liquor," says Dr. Shamp, "which has a more luscious sweetness than honey, is of the consistence of a thin syrup, but quickly grows tart and ropy, acquiring an intoxicating quality, and giving by distillation an agreeable spirit, or arday, according to the general name of these people for all hot liquors, extracted by the alembic." Though Jehovah forbid any devash, or honey, to be offered to him upon the altar, yet it appears it might be presented as first-fruits, or in the way of tythes, which were designed for the sustenance of the priests.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Beside their genealogy.—[The priests and Levites, as they attend-

A. M. 3278

B. C. 726.

g 1Ch.23.30.

h Nu.28.29.

i Nu.18.8,

&amp;c.

Nu.18.10

.13.

j Mal.2.7.

1 Co.9.9.

11.

Ga.6.6.

k break

forth.

l Ex.22.29.

m or, dates.

n Le.27.30.

De.14.23.

o heaps,

heaps.

p Le.23.16,

&amp;c.

q 1Ch.29.14.

Ezr.7.27.

2 Co.8.16.

Phil.4.10.

19.

r Mal.3.10.

s or, store-houses.

t 2 Ki.12.15.

u et.

v Ne.13.13.

w at his

hand.

x Jos.21.9.

y or, trust.

1 Ch.9.22.

z 1Ch.23.24,

27.

a or, trust.

b Le.23.31.

Nu.35.2.

c ver.12.15.

d 2 Ki.20.3.

Jn.4.7.

Ac.21.16.

1 Th.2.10.

3 Ju.5.

e Ps.1.2.3.

f c.26.5.

Jos.1.7.8.

Mal.6.33.

7.24. 27.

A. M. 3291.

B. C. 713.

a 2Ki.18.13.

Is.36.1,

&amp;c.

b break

them up.

c his face

was to war.

d Is.22.9,11.

e overflow-

ed.

f c.25.23.

g 2 Sa.5.9.

1 Ki.9.24.

h or, swords, or seapions.

min, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the cities <sup>x</sup> of the priests, in their <sup>y</sup> set office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small:

16 Beside their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, his daily portion for their service in their charges according to their courses;

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from <sup>z</sup> twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their <sup>a</sup> set office they sanctified themselves in holiness:

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in the fields <sup>b</sup> of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, <sup>c</sup> to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good <sup>d</sup> and right and truth before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the <sup>e</sup> law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and <sup>f</sup> prospered.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortified himself, and encompassed his people. 9 Against the blasphemies of Sennacherib, by message and letters, Hezekiah and Isaiah pray. 21 An angel destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah. 24 Hezekiah praying in his sickness, God giveth him a sign of recovery. 25 He waxing proud, is humbled by God. 27 His wealth and works. 31 His terror in the ambush of Babylon. 32 He dying, Manasseh succeedeth him.

AFTER <sup>a</sup> these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to <sup>b</sup> win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that <sup>c</sup> he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters <sup>d</sup> of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that <sup>e</sup> ran through the midst of the land saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come and find much water?

5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall <sup>f</sup> that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired Millo <sup>g</sup> in the city of David, and made <sup>h</sup> darts and shields in abundance.

6 And he set captains of war over the people,

"In every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the laws, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart and prospered."

The remainder of this book, consisting almost entirely of the repetitions of circumstances already related in the Second Book of Kings, we shall refer our readers to the expository remarks there offered.

ed in their courses, had a certain portion allotted to them, according to their office and charge. The sons of the priests, who attended with them, as it seems, from three years of age, to learn the work of the sanctuary, previously taken of the wives, and of the other children, of the priests and Levites, and a proportionable allowance was assigned them: as also to those, who were excluded or excused from attendance; and for all of those who were absent from the temple, employed as magistrates and teachers in their several districts.—Thus none appropriated an exorbitant proportion, and none wanted a suitable provision: "for in their set office they sanctified themselves in holiness;" they separated themselves from other employments, and devoted themselves to serve God.]—Bagster.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 1. After these things.—After Hezekiah had put down idolatry, and celebrated this solemn passover. Then Sennacherib came and attacked the fenced cities in the boundaries of Judah.

Ver. 4 Stopped all the fountains.—[This was prudently done; for, without and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and spake comfortably to them, saying,

7 Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there be more with us than with him:

8 With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all his power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the siege in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, the LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of my hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of my hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of my hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of my hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of my hand?

16 And his servants spake yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah.

17 He wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of my hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of my hand.

18 Then they cried with a loud voice in the Jews' speech unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And the LORD sent an angel, which

20 ¶ And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed, and cried to heaven.

21 And the LORD sent an angel, which

A. M. 3291.

B. C. 713.

i to their heart.

c.30.22.

j Da.31.6.

k e.20.15.

l 2 Ki.6.16.

m Je.17.5.

n e.13.12.

o Ro.8.31.

p 1 Ju.4.4.

q lanned.

r Pr.12.25.

s A. M. 3294.

t B. C. 710.

u dominant

v or, strong

s Is.10.14.

t Da.5.19.

u 2 Ki.19.9.

v &amp;c.

w Ne.6.9.

x Ps.137.36.

y Job.15.25.

z Ps.10.13.

a 72.8.11.

b Is.37.1.

c &amp;c.

d Ps.50.15.

e 91.14.15.

f Is.10.16.

g 13; 42.8.

h a 2Sa.24.16.

i Ps.13.50.

j Da.3.23.

k 6.22.

l b made him

fall.

m c Ps.37.39.

n 40.

o Hos.1.7.

p d Ps.48.14.

q 71.20.21.

r e precious

things.

s A. M. 3291.

t B. C. 713.

u f 2 Ki.20.1.

v &amp;c.

w Is.38.1, &amp;c.

x e or wrought

a miracle

for him.

y h Ps.116.12.

z i e.26.16.

a Da.5.20.

b 22.

c Hab.2.4.

d j e.24.18.

e k lifting up.

f 2 Ki.14.10.

g l Je.25.18.

h 18.

i m 1 Ki.21.29.

j A. M.

k 327.6306.

l B. C.

m 726.693.

n n Pr.10.22.

o o instruments of desire.

p p Job.13.9.

q 42.11.

r q Is.22.9,11.

s r interpreters.

t s 2 Ki.20.12.

u &amp;c.

v Is.39.1, &amp;c.

w t Da.5.2.16.

x Ju.1.13.

y u kindnesses.

z v Is.36.39.

a w 2 Ki.18.20.

x or, highest

y Pr.10.7.

z A. M.

a 3306.3301.

b B. C.

c 693.643.

d a 2 Ki.21.1.

e &amp;c.

cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria. So he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew him there with the sword.

22 Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and guided them on every side.

23 And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and presents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

24 In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.

26 Notwithstanding Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasures for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels;

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance: for God had given him substance very much.

30 This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

31 ¶ Howbeit in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness, behold, they are written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

33 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did him honour at his death. And Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Manasseh's wicked reign. 3 He setteth up idolatry, and would not be admonished. 11 He is carried into Babylon. 12 Upon his prayer to God he is released, and putteth down idolatry. 13 His acts. 20 He dying, Amos succeedeth him. 21 Azor reigning wickedly is slain by his servants. 25 The murderers being slain, Josiah succeedeth him.

MANASSEH was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of water, how could an immense army subsist in an arid country? No doubt the Assyrian army suffered much through this; as a Christian army did, through the same cause, 1800 years afterwards. See Harmer's Bagster.

Ver. 9. Sennacherib sent his servants.—The remainder of this chapter will be found to correspond (in substance) with the 18th, 19th, and 20th chapters of the Second Book of Kings.

Ver. 12. Taken away his high places.—(This was artfully malicious: many of the people had sacrificed to Jehovah on high places, chap. xxxi. 1.) and Hezekiah had removed them, as incentives to idolatry. Hence Rab-shakeh insinuates that, by so doing, he had offended Jehovah, deprived the people of their religious rights, and that, consequently, he could neither expect the blessing of God nor the co-operation of the people.]—Bagster.

Ver. 30. Stopped upper water-courses.—(Or, "Hezekiah stopped the upper going out, (moztza, i. e. the egress into the open air,) of the waters of Gihon, and brought them underneath, (amatah, by a subterraneous course,) to the west of the city of David?" See note on 1 Ki. i. 45.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Ambassadors.—See margin. Interpreters were probably generally sent as ambassadors, on account of their skill in foreign languages.

CHAP. XXXIII. This chapter throughout corresponds nearly with the 21st of the 2d Book of Kings.

the LORD, like unto the <sup>b</sup> abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For he <sup>c</sup> built again the high places which Hezekiah his father <sup>d</sup> had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and made <sup>e</sup> groves, and worshipped <sup>f</sup> all the host of heaven, and served them.

4 Also he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And <sup>g</sup> he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also <sup>h</sup> he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image, the idol which he had made, in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son, in this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people: but they would not hearken.

11 Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host <sup>i</sup> of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the <sup>j</sup> thorns, and bound <sup>k</sup> him with <sup>l</sup> fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

12 And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and <sup>m</sup> humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and <sup>n</sup> he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then <sup>o</sup> Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish gate, and compassed about <sup>p</sup> Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And he took away the strange <sup>q</sup> gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he repaired the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon peace-offerings and <sup>r</sup> thank-offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.

A. M.
3306.—3327.
B. C.
698.—677.

b De. 18. 9, 12
2 Ch. 28. 3.

c returned and built.

d 2 Co. 13. 14.

e De. 16. 21.

f De. 17. 3.

g Exe. 23. 37.

h De. 19. 10.

i or, the tower.

j La. 3. 7.

k Ps. 107. 14.

l or,
chains.

m 2 Ch. 26.

n 1 Ch. 5. 20.

o Ps. 9. 16.

p or, the tower.

q ver. 3. 5, 7.

r Le. 7. 12.

s 2 Ki. 15. 4.

t 1 Ja. 1. 9.

u Ro. 5. 16.

v Ps. 119. 67.

w or, Hosai.

A. M.
3361.—3363.

B. C.
643.—641.

x Ki. 21. 19,

&c.

y Is. 44. 13,

&c.

z multiplied trespass.

a Je. 7. 26.

A. M. 3363.

B. C. 641.

b Ge. 9. 6.

c Na. 35. 31.

A. M. 3363.

B. C. 641.

d 2 Ki. 22. 1,

&c.

e De. 5. 32.

f or, sun
images.

g 2 Ki. 23. 4.

h face of the graves.

i 1 Ki. 13. 2.

j or, mauls.

17 <sup>a</sup> Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer unto his God, and the words of the seers that spake to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel.

19 His prayer also, and how God was entreated <sup>c</sup> of him, and all <sup>d</sup> his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before <sup>e</sup> he was humbled: behold, they are written among the sayings of <sup>f</sup> the seers.

20 ¶ So Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ Amon <sup>g</sup> was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved <sup>h</sup> images which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

23 And humbled not himself before the LORD as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon <sup>i</sup> trespassed more <sup>j</sup> and more.

24 And his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 ¶ But the people of the land <sup>k</sup> slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He destroyeth idolatry. 8 He taketh order for the repair of the temple. 14 Hilkiah having found a book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to inquire of the Lord. 23 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but repeth thereof in Josiah's time. 25 Josiah, causing it to be read in a solemn assembly, reneweth the covenant with God.

JOSIAH <sup>a</sup> was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined <sup>b</sup> neither to the right hand, nor to the left.

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet <sup>c</sup> young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began <sup>d</sup> to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high <sup>e</sup> places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the <sup>f</sup> images, that were on high above them, he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, <sup>g</sup> and strowed it upon the <sup>h</sup> graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

5 And he burnt <sup>i</sup> the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their <sup>j</sup> mattocks round about.

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven

Ver. 7. A carved image.—[The Targumist says, "He set up an image, the likeness of himself, in the house of the sanctuary." In the parallel passage it is, "a graven image of the grove," or rather, Asherah, Astarte, or Venus. Manasseh, as Bp. Patrick observes, seems to have studied to find out what God had forbidden in his law, that he might practise it: a most prodigious change from the height of piety in his father's time, into the sink of impiety in this.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Took Manasseh among the thorns.—It is possible Manasseh might attempt to escape in some wild spot, covered with thorns and briars, and be there taken: and we have ventured to suggest, in the parallel passage of Kings, that they might even have scourged him with thorns; such being the scorpions, possibly, with which Rehoboam threatened his people. See note on 1 Kings xii. 11. But the same word (in the feminine) is sometimes used for "hooks," or spears, for fish; and most remarkable is the threatening of Amos the prophet to the kings of Israel: "I will take you away with hooks (or fish spears) and your posterity with fish hooks."

Ver. 19. His prayer also.—A form of prayer attributed to this king, is inserted in the Apocrypha, and is still used as a form of devotion in the Greek church. Its high antiquity is, however, very doubtful, as it does not exist in Hebrew, and was never received into the sacred canon; not even by the Romish church, though it was anciently used by that church as a form of confession.

CHAP. XXXIV. This chapter agrees with the 22d of the 2d Book of Kings, and the greater part of the chapter following.

Ver. 4. The altars. . . . and the images on high above them.—The altars of the heathen were considered as the footstools of their gods, which were placed upon them.—Jos. Mede.

Ver. 6. With their mattocks.—The instruments wherewith they demolished images <sup>a</sup> into <sup>1</sup> powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maa-seiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered <sup>m</sup> the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house:

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to <sup>a</sup> floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed.

12 And the men did the work <sup>o</sup> faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of music.

13 Also they were over the bearers <sup>p</sup> of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and <sup>q</sup> of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest found a book <sup>r</sup> of the law of the LORD given by <sup>s</sup> Moses.

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16 And Shaphan carried <sup>t</sup> the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to <sup>u</sup> thy servants, they do it.

17 And they have <sup>v</sup> gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read <sup>w</sup> it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard <sup>x</sup> the words of the law, that he rent his clothes.

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and <sup>y</sup> Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, inquire <sup>z</sup> of the LORD for me, and for them that are left <sup>a</sup> in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great <sup>b</sup> is the wrath of the LORD

A. M. 3374.
B. C. 630.

k to make powder.

l De.9.21.

A. M. 3380.
B. C. 624.

m 2 Ki.12.4.

n or, after.

o c.31.12.
Ne.7.21.
1 Co.4.2.

p c.2.13.
Ne.4.10.

q 1 Ch.23.4, 5.

r De.17.18, 19.
Jos.1.8.

s by the hand of.

t Je.38.20,21

u to the hand of.

v poured out, of, melted.

w in it.

x Ro.7.7,9.

y or,
Achbor.

2 Ki.22.12.

z Je.21.2.
Eze.14.1,
&c.
20.1,&c.

a Is.37.4.

b 1 Le.26.14,
&c.
De.23.15,
&c.
29.18. 28.
30.17. 19.
31.16. 22.
32.15. 25.
Ro.1.18.
2.8. 12.

c or, Harbor.

2 Ki.22.14.

d garments.

e or, school,
or, second part.

f Je.6.19.
19.3. 15.
35.17.

g Is.42.25.
Je.7.20.
La.2.4.
4.11.

h c.33.12,13.
Ps.34.18.
51.17.
Is.57.15.
68.2.
Eze.9.4.

i Ja.4.6,10.

j Ps.10.17.
Is.65.24.

k 1 Ki.21.29.
2 Ki.20.19.

l 2 Ki.23.1,
&c.

m from great even to small.

n 2 Ki.11.14.
c.6.13.

o Je.50.5.

p Ps.119.
111,112.

q 1 Sa.119.106

r found.

s 1 Ki.11.5.

t Je.3.10.
Ho.6.4.

u after.

that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the son of <sup>a</sup> Hasrah, keeper of the <sup>a</sup> wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the <sup>a</sup> college:) and they spake to her to that effect.

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I <sup>a</sup> will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out <sup>a</sup> upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard;

27 Because thy heart was <sup>b</sup> tender, and thou didst humble <sup>c</sup> thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee <sup>d</sup> also, saith the LORD.

28 Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither <sup>e</sup> shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ¶ Then <sup>f</sup> the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, <sup>g</sup> great and small: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD.

31 And the king stood <sup>h</sup> in his place, and made a covenant <sup>i</sup> before the LORD, and to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his <sup>j</sup> testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform <sup>k</sup> the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And he caused all that were <sup>l</sup> present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josiah took away all the abominations <sup>m</sup> out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And all his days they departed not from <sup>n</sup> following the LORD, the God of their fathers.

idolatry. Others read, "In their desolate places;" but Dr. Boothroyd, following Capellus and Houbigant, reads, "He destroyed on every hand their (idol) temples."

Ver. 12. All that could skill, &c.—That is, all the Levites that were skilful in instruments of music. Dr. Clarke thinks they played to animate and encourage the workmen. So Orpheus and Amphion animated, not stones and trees, but masons and carpenters, to build the cities of Greece.

Ver. 14. Book of the law by Moses.—Literally "a book of the law of the Lord, by the hand of Moses;" i. e. as Dr. Kennicott understands it, "in the hand writing of Moses;" for, says he, though there are fifteen places in the Old Testament which mention "the law of Moses," and "book of Moses," yet this one place only mentions "the book of the law in, or by, the hand of Moses."—Bagster.

Ver. 27. Thy heart was tender.—"Because," says the Targumist, "thy heart was melted, and thou hast humbled thyself in the sight of the word of the Lord, meymra dyra, when thou didst hear His words, yath pithgami, against this place." Here meymra, the personal word, is plainly distinguished from pithgami, a word spoken.—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Made a covenant, &c.—(This was expressed, 1. In general, To walk after Jehovah; to have no gods beside him. 2. To take his law for the

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 Josiah keepeth a most solemn passover. 20 He, provoking Pharaoh-necho, is slain at Megiddo. 25 Lamentations for Josiah.

MOREOVER <sup>a</sup> Josiah kept a passover unto the Lord in Jerusalem: and they killed the passover on the fourteenth day <sup>b</sup> of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in <sup>c</sup> their charges, and encouraged them to the service of the house of the Lord,

3 And said unto the Levites that taught all <sup>d</sup> Israel, which were holy unto the Lord, Put the holy ark in the house which Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build; it <sup>e</sup> shall not be a burden upon your shoulders: serve now the Lord your God, and his people Israel,

4 And prepare yourselves by the houses of your fathers, after your courses, according to the writing of David <sup>f</sup> king of Israel, and according to the writing of <sup>g</sup> Solomon his son.

5 And stand <sup>h</sup> in the holy place according to the divisions of <sup>i</sup> the families of the fathers of your brethren <sup>j</sup> the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites.

6 So kill the passover, and <sup>k</sup> sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

7 And Josiah <sup>l</sup> gave to <sup>m</sup> the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance.

8 And his princes <sup>n</sup> gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: Hilkiah and Zechariah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah and Jehiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, <sup>o</sup> gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and the priests stood in their place, and the Levites in their <sup>p</sup> courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And <sup>q</sup> they killed the passover, and the priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites flayed them.

12 And they removed the burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the Lord, as it is written <sup>r</sup> in the book of Moses. And so did they with the oxen.

13 And they roasted <sup>s</sup> the passover with fire according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings sod <sup>t</sup> they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and <sup>u</sup> divided them speedily among all the people.

A. M. 3380.
B. C. 624.

a 2Ki.23.21,
&c.

b Ex.12.6.
Ezr.6.19.

c 23.18.

d De.33.10.
c.30.12.
Mal.2.7.

e 1Ch.23.26.

f 1Ch.23.26.

g c.8.14.

h Ps.134.1.

i house.

j sons of the people.

k c.30.15.
Ezr.6.20.

l offered.

m c.7.8.10.
30.24.

n offered.

o offered.

p Ezr.6.18.

q c.29.22,24.

r Le.3.3.

s Ex.12.9,9.
De.16.7.

t 1Sa.2.13.
15.

u made them run.

v station.

w 1Ch.25.1,
&c.

x 1Ch.9.17.

y found.

A. M. 3384.
B. C. 610.

z 2Ki.23.29,
&c.

a house.

b Je.46.2,&c.

c of my
war.

d made sick
1Ki.12.24.

e or, among the sepulchres.

f Zac.12.11.
1.4.120.

g Mat.9.23.

h Je.22.30.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their <sup>v</sup> place, according to the commandment of <sup>w</sup> David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and the porters <sup>x</sup> waited at every gate; they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the Lord was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were present <sup>y</sup> kept the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

20 ¶ After <sup>z</sup> all this, when Josiah had prepared the <sup>a</sup> temple, Necho <sup>b</sup> king of Egypt came up to fight against Charchemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, thou King of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house <sup>c</sup> wherewith I have war: for God commanded me to make haste: forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo.

23 And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore <sup>d</sup> wounded.

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jerusalem, and he died, and was buried <sup>e</sup> in one of the sepulchres of his fathers. And all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

25 ¶ And Jeremiah lamented <sup>f</sup> for Josiah: and all the singing men <sup>g</sup> and the singing women spake of Josiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance <sup>h</sup> in regulation of their conduct. 3. In particular, To bend their whole heart and soul to the performance of it; so that they might not only have religion without, but piety within.—Bagster.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 3. Put the holy ark in the house.—It seems probable, that during the reign of idolatry, the priests had secreted this, to preserve it from injury, or insult.

Ver. 4. After your courses.—[The regulations formed by David, and established by Solomon, concerning the courses of the priests and Levites, were committed to writing, and preserved for them to refer to continually. Josiah, as well as Hezekiah, required the priests and Levites to attend to their several duties, and encouraged them therein; but he neither added, altered, nor retrenched any thing: he merely enforced what had been established in the law, and in the regulations made by David and the contemporary prophets:—“the commandment of the king . . . was by the word of the Lord.”]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Thirty thousand.—[According to the calculation, that not fewer than 10, nor more than 20 persons, were to join for one kid or lamb, the numbers given on this occasion would suffice for above 400,000 persons.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Divided them speedily.—This was done, perhaps, in allusion to the haste with which it was originally commanded to be eaten. See Exod. xii. 10, 11.

Ver. 18. No passover, &c.—[Not one on purer principles, more heartily joined in by the people present, more literally or exactly consecrated, according to the law, or more religiously observed. The words do not refer to the number present, but to the manner and spirit. But that which distinguished this passover from all the former was, says Calmet, the great liberality of Josiah, who distributed to his people a greater number of victims than either David or Solomon had done.]—Bagster.

Ver. 22. Josiah would not turn his face.—[Josiah's conduct in this affair has been treated with great severity; and he has been charged with engaging rashly in an unjust war, and disregarding the express command of God. But Scripture no where condemns him; and Pharaoh, in marching through Josiah's territories, against his will, certainly committed an act of hostility. It is evident that Josiah was in possession of the whole land of Israel. (ch. xxvi. 6;) and probably he held the northern parts of it as a grant from the king of Babylon; and was not only in alliance with him, but bound to guard his frontiers against hostile invaders. He may, therefore, be fairly justified from the ambassadors meddling in a war that did not belong to him. It is the charge of unjustly meddling in a war that did not belong to him. It is true, the ambassadors assured Josiah, that “God had commanded Pharaoh to make haste;” and he is therefore said not to have “hearkened to the words of Necho, from the mouth of God.” But Necho produced no proof that he Israel: and, behold, they are written in the lamentations.

26 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his goodness, according to that which was written in the law of the LORD, 27 And his deeds, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Jehoaħaz succeeding is deposed by Pharaoh, and carried into Egypt. 5 Jehoiaķim reigning ill is carried bound into Babylon. 9 Jehoiaķin succeeding reigneth ill, and is brought into Babylon. 11 Zedekiah succeeding reigneth ill, and despiseth the prophecies, and rebelleth against Nebuchadnezzar. 14 Jerusalem, for the sins of the priests and people, is wholly destroyed. 22 The proclamation of Cyrus.

THEN * the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt put him down at Jerusalem, and condemned the land in a hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold.

4 And the king of Egypt made Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiaķim. And Necho took Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 ¶ Jehoiaķim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God.

6 Against him came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in fetters, to carry him to Babylon.

7 Nebuchadnezzar also carried of the vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiaķim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah: and Jehoiaķin his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ Jehoiaķin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

10 And when the year was expired, king Nebuchadnezzar sent, and brought him to Babylon, with the goodly vessels of the house of the LORD, and made Zedekiah his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem.

11 ¶ Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

12 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God, and humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet speaking from the mouth of the LORD.

was a prophet of Jehovah; and the word he employed, eloħim, may denote gods, or idols; and critics have noticed that the expression, "from the mouth of God," is not used when the true God is meant.—Bagster.

CHAP. XXXVI. This chapter records the principal facts of 2 Kings xiii. from ver. 30, the whole of ch. xxiv. and of chap. xxv. as far as ver. 21.

Ver. 9. Jehoiaķin was eight years old.—[The Syriac, Arabic, and the

A. M. 3394.
B. C. 610.
i kindnesses
c 32.24
a 2 Ki.23.30,
&c. b removed him
c omitted.
A. M. 3397.
B. C. 607.
d 2Ki.24.13,
&c.
A. M. 3398.
B. C. 606.
e co. chains: [foretold,
Hab.1.6,
&c. f or, Jeho-
iaķim
1Ch.3.16.
or, Coniah
Je.24.34.
A. M. 3405.
B. C. 599.
g 2 Ki.24.8,
&c. p at the return of the year.
i vessels of desire.
j Da.1.1,2 k or, Mattaniah, his father's brother.
2Ki.24.17.
l Je.37.1.
m Je.52.1,
&c.
A. M.
3405.3416.
B. C.
599.588.
n Je.52.3.
Eze.17.15,
18.
o 2Ki.17.14.
p Je.25.3,4.
35.15.
q by the
hand of.
r i.e. continually and carefully.
s Is.32.22.
t Pr.1.24.30
a healing.
A. M.
3414.3416.
B. C.
598.588.
v De.28.49.
2Ki.25.1,
&c.
Eze.9.7.
A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.
w Ps.74.6,8
Is.64.11.
x the remainder from the sword.
y Je.25.9,12
26.6,7.
29.10.
z Le.26.34,
43.
A. M. 3416.
B. C. 588.
A. M. 3463.
B. C. 536.
a Eze.1.1,
&c.
b Is.44.28.
45.1,&c.

13 And he also rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God: but he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart from turning unto the LORD God of Israel.

14 ¶ Moreover all the chief of the priests, and the people, transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the LORD which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

15 And the LORD God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, rising up sometimes, and sending; because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place:

16 But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the LORD arose against his people, till there was no remedy.

17 Therefore he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age: he gave them all into his hand.

18 And all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king, and of his princes; all these he brought to Babylon.

19 And they burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and destroyed all the goodly vessels thereof.

20 And them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon; where they were servants to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia:

21 To fulfil the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths: for as long as she lay desolate she kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years.

22 ¶ Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD spoken by the mouth of Jeremiah might be accomplished, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? The LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.

parallel place, (on which see the note 2 Ki. xxiv. 8.) have "eighteen years;" which, as Scaliger observes, is no doubt the genuine reading.]—Bagster.
Ver. 22. First year of Cyrus.—[This and the following verse are supposed to have been written by mistake from the book of Ezra, which begins in the same way. The book of Chronicles properly closes with ver. 21.; and these verses relate to a period 70 years later.]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOKS OF CHRONICLES.

[THESE sacred books have been held in low estimation, and consequently too much neglected both by readers and commentators, induced thereto by the false persuasion, that they contained few things which are not to be found in the preceding books. They ought certainly not to be considered merely as an abridgment of other histories, with some supplementary additions, but as books written with a particular view; in consistency with which, the author sometimes disregards important particulars, in those accounts from which he might have compiled his work, and adheres to the design proposed, which seems to have been, to furnish a genealogical sketch of the twelve tribes deduced from the earliest times, in order to point out those distinctions which were necessary to discriminate the mixed multitude that returned from Babylon; to ascertain the lineage of Judah, from which the Messiah was to spring; and to re-establish them on their ancient footing. The author appears to have intended to furnish, at the same time, an epitome of some parts of the Jewish history, but enriched with many additional particulars. The books of Chronicles, therefore, present us with a lively picture of the state of the kingdom of Judah, and of the various vicissitudes and revolutions which it sustained under different princes. They serve, as the author seems to have designed, greatly to illustrate the necessity of depending on God for defence, without whose protection kingdoms, as well as individuals, must fall. The advantages derived from obedience to God, and the miseries that resulted from wickedness and sin, are strikingly exhibited: they abound with useful examples; and the characters are forcibly displayed by a contrasted individuals, and their decline from righteousness to evil, are shown with much effect; and many interesting incidents are brought forward, which exhibit the interposition of the Almighty, defeating evil, and effecting his concerted purposes. The authenticity and canonical authority of these books have never been disputed.]—Bagster.

THE BOOK OF EZRA.

THIS Book has been generally ascribed to Ezra, who is himself the chief subject of it, by the Jewish as well as the Christian Church, to which we know of no solid objection; for though the history commences before his time, he might doubtless find at Jerusalem the documents necessary to its compilation, and the chief persons were still living on his arrival.

The first party of Jews returned from Babylon under the prince Zerubbabel (or Shazbazzar) and the high priest Jeshua, or Joshua, the son of Josedech, who was put to death by Nebuchadnezzar; the second under Ezra the priest, who brought with him priests and Levites, to instruct the people.

This Ezra was a priest of the house of Aaron, and grandson of Seraiah, who was high priest in the reign of Zedekiah. (2 Kings xxv. 18, compared with Ezra vii. 1.) In this canonical book, from chap. iv. 8, to chap. vi. 19; also chap. vii. from ver. 12 to 27, is written in the Chaldaic dialect.

CHAPTER I.

1 The proclamation of Cyrus for the building of the temple. 5 The people provide for their return. 7 Cyrus restores the vessels of the temple to Shazbazzar.

NOW <sup>a</sup> in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the <sup>b</sup> LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD <sup>c</sup> stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he <sup>d</sup> made a proclamation <sup>e</sup> throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD <sup>f</sup> God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and <sup>g</sup> he hath charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah.

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he <sup>h</sup> is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place <sup>i</sup> help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside the free-will-offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God <sup>j</sup> had raised to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them <sup>k</sup> strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with

(This book contains a continuation of the Jewish history from the time <sup>a</sup> which the Chronicles conclude, to the 20th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, a period of about 80 years; containing an account of the edict of Cyrus, granting a permission to the Jews to return, and rebuild Jerusalem and the temple; the people who returned under Zerubbabel, with their offerings toward rebuilding the temple; the erection of the altar of burnt-offering, and the laying of the foundation of the temple; the opposition of the Samaritans, and consequent suspension of the building of the temple; the decree of Darius Hystaspes granting the Jews permission to complete the building of the temple and city which they accomplish in the sixth year of his reign; the departure of Ezra from Babylon, with a commission from Artaxerxes Longimanus; his return and arrival at Jerusalem; his prayer on account of the intermixture of the Jews with heathen nations; the reformation effected by him.)—Bagster.

A. M. 3468.
B. C. 536.

a 2Ch. 36. 22,
23.
b Je. 25. 12.
29. 10.
33. 7. 13.
c Pr. 21. 1.
Da. 2. 21.
d caused a voice to pass.
e c. 5. 13, 14.
f Da. 2. 21.
g Is. 44. 28.
45. 1. 3.
h Is. 45. 5.
Je. 10. 10.
Da. 6. 28.
i Hithim up.
j Ne. 2. 12.
Pr. 16. 1.
Ph. 2. 13.
3 Ju. 11.
k i. e. helped
them.

l c. 5. 14; 6. 5.
m 2Ki. 24. 13
2Ch. 36. 7.
Da. 5. 2.
n 2 Ti. 2. 20, 21.
o transportation.
Mat. 1. 11,
12.
a Ne. 7. 6, 7.
b 2 Ki. 24. 14
16.
2Ch. 36. 20
Is. 1. 3, 5.
4. 2.
Zep. 2. 7.
c Hag. 1. 1, 2. d or, *Azar-
badda.*
Ne. 7. 7.
e or, Basmiah.
f or, Mis-ner-th.
g or, Nehum.
h c. 1. 8.

precious things, beside all that was willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels <sup>l</sup> of the house of the LORD, which <sup>m</sup> Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them unto Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives,

10 Thirty basins of gold, silver basins of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand.

11 All the vessels <sup>n</sup> of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred. All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the <sup>o</sup> captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

CHAPTER II.

1 The number that return, of the people, 36 of the priests, 40 of the Levites, 43 of the Nethinims, 55 of Solomon's servants, 62 of the priests which could not show their pedigree. 64 The whole number of them, with their substance. 68 Their oblations.

NOW <sup>a</sup> these are the children of the province that went up out of the <sup>b</sup> captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city;

2 Which came with <sup>c</sup> Zerubbabel: Jeshua, Nehemiah, <sup>d</sup> Seraiah, <sup>e</sup> Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, <sup>f</sup> Mizpar, Bigvai, <sup>g</sup> <sup>h</sup> Rehum, Baanah.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—11. Cyrus issues a proclamation for rebuilding the temple, and for the return of the Jews to their own land.

The prophecy of Jeremiah, (chap. xxv. 12.; xxix. 10.) that the Jews (that is, the inhabitants of Judah) should return to their own land, after seventy years captivity, had prepared them for such a happy change; and, if it be true (as Josephus reports) that the prophecy of Isaiah had been shown to him, in which he had been spoken of by name, (Isa. xlv. 23. and xlv. 1.) it might be the means of rendering him more favourable to that object. Providence, however, is never at a loss for means or instruments, to bring about the divine decrees; and when the hand of prophecy points to any period or event, all human opposition is in vain, as we shall find demonstrated in the history now before us. No sooner does Cyrus issue his proclamation, than the chief of the fathers of Benjamin and Judah are stirred up by a divine influence to accept the offer and prosecute the work.

The liberality of Cyrus was also worthy of his character, in returning so many thousand vessels of gold and silver, which his predecessor Nebuchadnezzar had brought away from Jerusalem, and presented to his idols; and the manner in which he speaks of the great JEHOVAH, "He is the God!" seems to indicate a mind half convinced of the unity of the divine Being, and "almost persuaded to be"—a Jew.

It is observable that, in various instances, when the Almighty has designed to introduce any important moral revolution into the world, the way has been prepared by the creation of some vast and paramount empire, which gave facility to the design. Thus in the person of Cyrus was now united, not only the kingdoms of the Medes and Persians, but also the vast Assyrian and Babylonian empires; so that his decree effectually protected them during his lifetime; and even afterwards, when its authenticity was ascertained. (See chap. vi. 1, &c.) In like manner, the magnitude of the Roman empire favoured the introduction of Christianity: and may it not be hoped, that the present prodigious extent of the British dominions may favour the spread of Christianity in every quarter of the globe.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—70. Register of families.—The Register, in the book of Nehemiah, answers to this here given in so many particulars, that there can be no doubt that the same is meant in both places. In general, the names and the numbers of each family are nearly the same; and the sum total is computed in both exactly alike. Yet there are several considerable variations, in names and numbers, which cannot be readily and satisfac-

ti. 13, 14, the amount is 5469, as will be evident from the following statements:

IN EZRA.		IN ESDRAS.
Gold chargers	30	Gold cups	1000
Silver ditto	1000	Silver cups	1000
Knives	29	Silver censers	29
Gold basins	30	Gold vials	30
Silver ditto	410	Silver vials	2410
Other vessels	1000	Other vessels	1000
Said to be	5400	Total	5469
But only	2499	Surplus	69
Deficiency	2901

It is supposed that they actually amounted to 5400, but that only the chief of them were specified, the spoons, &c. being omitted.)—Bagster.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Cyrus.—[Cyrus is said to have been the son of Cambyses king of Persia, and Mandane, daughter of Astyages king of Media: he was born about 600 years before Christ, and died at the age of 70, after a reign of 30 years. He was mentioned by name, and his conquests foretold, by the prophet Isaiah, above a century before his birth; and Josephus accounts for the partiality he evinced towards the Jews, from the circumstance of these prophecies being shown him, probably by Daniel.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. All the kingdoms.—[According to the testimony of ancient writers, Cyrus, at this time, reigned over the Medes, Persians, Hyrcanians, Syrians, Assyrians, Indians, &c., and all lesser Asia.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Nine and twenty knives.—These were doubtless the knives employed in circumcision or sacrifice, and by their being carried away, and returned among the gold and silver vessels, were doubtless of elegant and costly structure, perhaps with blades of flint. (See Josh. v. 2.)

Ver. 11. All the vessels, 5400.—[Instead of 5400, the enumeration of the articles in ver. 9, 10, only amounts to 2499; but in the parallel account, Esdras,

The number of the men of the people of Israel:

3 The children of Parosh, two thousand a hundred seventy and two.

4 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

5 The children of Arah, seven hundred seventy and five.

6 The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and twelve.

7 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

8 The children of Zattu, nine hundred forty and five.

9 The children of Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

10 The children of Bani, six hundred forty and two.

11 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty and three.

12 The children of Azgad, a thousand two hundred twenty and two.

13 The children of Adonikam, six hundred sixty and six.

14 The children of Bigvai, two thousand fifty and six.

15 The children of Adin, four hundred fifty and four.

16 The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

17 The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and three.

18 The children of Jorah, a hundred and twelve.

19 The children of Hashum, two hundred twenty and three.

20 The children of Gibbar, ninety and five.

21 The children of Beth-lehem, a hundred twenty and three.

22 The men of Netophah, fifty and six.

23 The men of Anathoth, a hundred twenty and eight.

24 The children of Azmaveth, forty and two.

25 The children of Kirjath-arim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred and forty and three.

26 The children of Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

27 The men of Michmas, a hundred twenty and two.

28 The men of Beth-el and Ai, two hundred twenty and three.

29 The children of Nebo, fifty and two.

A M. 3468.
B. C. 536.
1 Ne.7.10.

J Ne.7.11

k ver.31.

l or, Binnud.
Ne.7.15.

m or, Hariph.
Ne.7.24.

n or, Gibeon.
Ne.7.25.

o or, Beth-carmoth.
Ne.7.28.

p This Nebo was probably the Nabau which Eusebius and Jerome place eight miles south from Hebron, in whose time it was deserted.

p ver.7.

q or, Harid, as it is in some copies.

r 1 Ch.24.7.

s 1 Ch.24.14.

t 1 Ch.9.12.

u 1 Ch.24.8.

v or, Judah, called also Hodevch.
Ne.7.43.

w ver.58.

x or, Sio.

y or, Shamlai.

z or, Ne-phihesim

a or, Baz-lith.
Ne.7.54.

30 The children of Magbish, a hundred fifty and six.

31 The children of the other Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

32 The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty.

33 The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and five.

34 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

35 The children of Senaah, three thousand and six hundred and thirty.

36 ¶ The priests: the children of Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

37 The children of Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

38 The children of Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

39 The children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

40 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua, and Kadmiel, of the children of Hodaviah, seventy and four.

41 The singers: the children of Asaph, a hundred twenty and eight.

42 The children of the porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, in all a hundred thirty and nine.

43 ¶ The Nethinims: the children of Ziba, the children of Hasupha, the children of Tab bath, 44 The children of Keros, the children of Siah, the children of Padon, 45 The children of Labanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub, 46 The children of Hagab, the children of Shalmal, the children of Hanan, 47 The children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, 48 The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, 49 The children of Uzza, the children of Paseah, the children of Besai, 50 The children of Asnah, the children of Mehunim, the children of Nephusim,

51 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

52 The children of Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha,

53 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of Thamah, torily accounted for. The most material of these are marked in the margin.—It is probable, that Ezra, when he wrote his history, many years after the return of the Jews to Babylon, copied this register from the public records without alteration. Some think, that several who had their names inserted in the register, altered their minds, or died before the company arrived at Jerusalem; and that others came forward, so as to complete the same number in all. The word children is sometimes used for the descendants from the several heads of families: at other times, for those whose ancestors belonged to the cities mentioned in connexion with them.

The number of the several families amounts only to twenty-nine thousand eight hundred and eighteen; and those of Nehemiah to thirty-one thousand and eighty-nine; yet the sum total is in both said to be forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, besides their servants. (Neh. vii. 66, 67.) The surplus are supposed to have been priests and Levites who could not produce their genealogy, and Israelites from the other tribes, who accompanied their brethren of Judah and Benjamin.

Under the divine protection this company arrived safe at Jerusalem, without any memorable occurrence. They found the city and all around it in ruins, and it seems the neighbouring cities totally unoccupied. These they rebuilt as well as they could, and dwelt in them for the present. But the house of God chiefly occupied their thoughts; and it seems that their obligations to it were made before they separated to seek habitations or subsistence. The whole amounted to nearly eighty thousand pounds sterling, besides the priests' garments, which was a considerable sum for them to contribute in their present poverty: but probably their brethren who stayed behind, contributed part of it; as the sacrifices and the burning of incense at the temple, were for the benefit of those who worshipped at, or towards, that typical residence of the God of Israel. 'By this it appears, that the Jews were not made such poor slaves in Babylon as wrought for their . . . masters, but had liberty to trade and get riches for themselves; some of them being advanced to considerable offices in the king's court.' Bp. Patrick. The whole history shows that they were not reduced to personal slavery. Every thing seems to have been conducted with much harmony and regularity. 'The foundation of this poor commonwealth was laid in a marvellous concord. . . . They had one heart and soul like the first Christians, without which unity no people can be preserved. And that it may be cherished, they must avoid those things that destroy it, which are (as Joseph Wolphius here observes) principally . . . self love, and meddling in other men's matters.' Bp. Patrick.—T. Scott.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. The children of Parosh.—Where the word children is found in this table prefixed to the name of a man, it signifies his descendants; 534 as from ver. 3 to 20. Where it is found prefixed to a place, it refers to its inhabitants; as from ver. 21 to 25. Dr. Clarke.

54 The children of Nezhiah, the children of Hatipha.

55 ¶ The children of Solomon's <sup>b</sup> servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophe-reth, the children of <sup>c</sup> Peruda,

56 The children of Jaalah, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 57 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattai, the children of Pochereth of Ze-baim, the children of <sup>d</sup> Ami.

58 All the <sup>e</sup> Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

59 And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, Tel-harsa, Cherub, <sup>f</sup> Addan, and Immer: but they could not show their father's house, and their <sup>g</sup> seed, whether they were of Israel:

60 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred fifty and two.

61 ¶ And of the children of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai: which took a wife of the daughters of <sup>h</sup> Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name:

62 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but <sup>i</sup> they were not found: therefore were <sup>j</sup> they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

63 And the <sup>k</sup> Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat <sup>l</sup> of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with <sup>m</sup> Urim and with Thummin.

64 ¶ The <sup>n</sup> whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 65 Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and there were among them two hundred singing men and singing women.

66 Their horses were seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

67 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 ¶ And <sup>o</sup> some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, offered freely for the house of God to set it up in his place:

CHAP. III. The altar set up, and the foundation of the temple laid.—It seems that the first party of Jews left Babylon in the spring of the year: that, on their arrival in Jerusalem, they constructed huts and sheds to lodge in among the ruins, in which they must have spent some months. After this, they rebuilt the altar of burnt-offerings, and kept the feast of tabernacles," which fell in the month Tisri, corresponding to the beginning of our October. On this occasion, they offered the burnt-offerings according to the law daily—"as the duty of every day required." This may afford us an excellent hint; for, as every day has its duties, if we defer the duties of one day to another, we shall soon find ourselves in arrears that cannot be brought up. Above all, we should not defer the most urgent of all duties—prayer, until to-morrow, and that for two most important reasons: 1. We know not whether we may see to-morrow; and, 2. if we do, it will bring 69 They gave after their ability unto the treasure <sup>p</sup> of the work threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pounds of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.

70 So the priests, and the Levites, and <sup>q</sup> some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

CHAPTER III.

1 The altar is set up. 4 Offerings frequented. 7 Workmen prepared. 8 The foundation of the temple are laid in great joy and mourning.

AND when the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem.

2 Then stood up <sup>a</sup> Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and <sup>b</sup> Zerubbabel the son of <sup>c</sup> Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, as it is written <sup>d</sup> in the law of Moses the man of God.

3 And they set the altar upon his bases; for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries: and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even burnt-offerings morning and evening.

4 ¶ They <sup>e</sup> kept also the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the daily burnt-offerings by number, according to the custom, <sup>f</sup> as the duty of every <sup>g</sup> day required;

5 And afterward offered the continual burnt-offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts <sup>h</sup> of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD. But <sup>i</sup> the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

7 ¶ They gave money also unto the masons, and to the <sup>j</sup> carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon <sup>k</sup> to the sea of Joppa, according to the <sup>l</sup> grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began <sup>m</sup> Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appoint-its duties with it. "To-day, therefore, while it is called to-day," let us hear the voice of God in his word, and let him hear our voice in prayer. "In the morning (said David) will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up." (Psalm v. 3.)

Prayer should always be accompanied with praise. We are never called upon to ask for mercies, but we have also to praise God for mercies that have been received. The Jews, amidst the ruins of their city and the temple, were called upon to praise the LORD, "because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel." "And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid."

All our pleasures on earth, however, are mingled and alloyed with sorrow. Thus, in the case before us, while the young people were "shouting aloud for joy," in the prospect of a new temple and a rising city, "the ancient men," who had seen the

Ver. 55. The children of Solomon's servants.—Of the seven nations of Canaan, whom Solomon had made bond slaves. 1 Kings ix. 20, 21.

Ver. 63. The Tirshatha.—So the word is generally interpreted, and applied to Nehemiah.—Urim.—See note on 1 Sam. xxviii. 6.

Ver. 64. The whole congregation, 42,360.—(Though the sum total, both here and in Nehemiah, is equal, namely, 42,360, yet the particulars reckoned up only make 32,818 in Ezra, and 31,089 in Nehemiah; and we find that Nehemiah mentions 1765 persons which are not in Ezra, and Ezra has 494 not mentioned in Nehemiah. This last circumstance, which seems to render all hope of reconciling them impossible, Alving thinks is the very point by which they can be reconciled; for, if we add Ezra's surplus to the sum in Nehemiah, and Nehemiah's surplus to the number in Ezra, they will both amount to 31,583; which subtracted from 42,360, leaves a deficiency of 10,777, which are not named because they did not belong to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, or to the priests, but to the other Israelitish tribes.)—Bagster.

Ver. 69. Drams.—A Persian coin, value about $4 66; but the whole treasure cannot be valued at much less than $44,000.

CHAP. III. Ver. 2. Jeshua the son of Jozadak.—He was the son of Seraiah the high priest, who was put to death by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings xxv. 18, 21. This Jeshua (or Jeshua) was the first high priest after the captivity.

Ver. 3. They set the altar upon his bases.—That is, raised it on the same spot.

Ver. 7. Joppa.—[Joppa, now Jaffa, or Yaffa, one of the most ancient seaports in the world, is situated in a fine plain on the shore of the Mediterranean, between Jamnia south, and Caesarea of Palestine north, 150 stadia from Antipatris, according to Josephus, thirty miles south of Caesarea, twelve miles north of Ashdod, nine miles west of Ramla, and forty miles west of Jerusalem, according to modern authorities; and in lat. 32° 50' long. 65° 40', according to Ptolemy. It is still a considerable town, containing about 4000 or 5000 souls, and occupying a circular eminence, close to the sea side, with a citadel on the summit; the bottom of the hill being surrounded by a wall twelve or fourteen feet high, and two or three feet thick. The environs are occupied by extensive gardens.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. In the second year.—The first had been spent in preparations.

ed the Levites, from <sup>a</sup> twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the Lord.

<sup>9</sup> Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmil and his sons, the sons of <sup>a</sup> Judah, <sup>b</sup> together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Hena-dad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders <sup>a</sup> laid the foundation of the temple of the Lord, they set <sup>c</sup> the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the Lord, after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because <sup>a</sup> he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation <sup>d</sup> of the house of the Lord was laid.

12 But <sup>a</sup> many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept <sup>e</sup> with a loud voice; and many shouted <sup>f</sup> aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping <sup>g</sup> of the people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The adversaries, being not accepted in the building of the temple with the Jews, endeavour to hinder their letter to Artaxerxes. 17 The decree of Artaxerxes. 23 The building is hindered.

NOW when the adversaries <sup>a</sup> of Judah and Benjamin heard that the <sup>b</sup> children of the captivity builded the temple unto the Lord God of Israel;

2 Then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, Let us build with you: for <sup>c</sup> we seek your God, as ye <sup>d</sup> do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of Esarhaddon <sup>e</sup> king of Assur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye <sup>f</sup> have nothing to do with us to build a house unto our God; but we ourselves toge-glory of the first house, were weeping at the thought, how much inferior the new one must necessarily be; especially as they had lost the ark of the covenant and sacred fire, the cherubim and mercy-seat, and the oracle of Urim and Thummim, with other articles of almost equal interest. The prophet Haggai, however, encouraged them with the assurance that the Messiah himself should come into this temple, and thereby render its glory greater than the former. Haggai ii. 7-9.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-24. The building opposed and stopped by a decree of Artaxerxes.—So good a work as building a temple to the Lord, one might think, would have no enemies nor opposers; but the better the work, the greater the opposition; and that opposition is most to be dreaded which comes under the form of friendship and alliance. The Samaritans, Ver. 9. Then stood Jeshua.—Not the high priest just mentioned, but one of the Levites, ch. ii. 40. where Judah is called Hodaviah.

Ver. 13. People could not discern, &c.—[This sight must have been very affecting: a whole people, one part weeping aloud with sorrow, the other shouting aloud for joy; and on the same occasion too, in which both sides felt an equal interest. The prophet Haggai, (ch. ii. 1-9) comforted them on this occasion, by assuring them that the glory of this latter house should exceed that of the former, because the Lord would come to this temple, and fill it with his glory.]—Bagster.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 5. Hired counsellors.—That is, bribed the counsellors of the king. See ch. vii. 14. Esther i. 14. And thus prevented the benevolent design of Cyrus from being properly executed. The following account of subsequent opposition to the end of this chapter, (ch. ii. 1-9) according to Dr. Hales, here inserted by way of anticipation and parenthesis.

Ver. 6. Ahasuerus.—[This was Cambyzes, son of Cyrus, who succeeded his father. A. M. 3475, and reigned seven years and five months.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Artaxerxes.—[Was one of the Magi, who usurped the throne after <sup>a</sup> the death of Cambyzes, for seven months, feigning himself to be Smerdis, brother of Cambyzes: he is called Oropastus by Justin, Smerdis by Herodotus, Mardus by Eschylus, and Splendatus by Ctesias.—Written in the Syrian tongue, &c.—That is, probably both the language and character were

A. M. 3469.
B. C. 535.

n Ch. 23-24.

o or, Hodaviah.

c. 2-40.

p as one.

q Zec. 4. 10.

r 1 Ch. 6. 31, &c.

s 16. 4, &c.

t 25. 1, &c.

u Ne. 12. 24, &c.

v 1 Ch. 16. 34, &c.

w Ps. 136.

x 145. 1-11.

y Ps. 126.

z 31. 3, 9.

aa Ps. 5. 11.

ab Jo. 2. 5.

ac ver. 7. 9.

ad sons of the transportation.

ae 2 Ki. 17. 30, &c.

af 1 Ki. 19. 37.

ag Ne. 2. 50.

ah Ac. 8. 21.

ai 3 Jo. 9. 10.

aj c. 1. 1-3.

ak A. M.

al 3469. 3475.

am B. C.

an 534. 539.

ao Ne. 6. 9.

ap h. c. 3. 3.

aq i. Ac. 24. 1, &c.

ar A. M. 3475.

as B. C. 529.

at J. Ahasuerosh.

au A. M. 3482.

av B. C. 522.

aw k or, in the city.

ax societies.

ay m or, secretaries.

az n societies.

ba o 2 Ki. 17. 30, &c.

bb p. 13. 7.

bc Q. Cheeneth.

bd r ver. 11. 17.

be c. 7. 12.

bf Ez. 17. 12.

bg .21.

bh tot. finished.

bi u smelt together.

bj v give bk w c. 7. 24.

bl x or,

bm strength.

bn y are salted
with the salt of the palace.

ther will build unto the Lord God of Israel, as king <sup>c</sup> Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land <sup>a</sup> weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled <sup>b</sup> them in building.

5 And hired counsellors <sup>c</sup> against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of <sup>d</sup> Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, wrote they <sup>e</sup> unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote <sup>f</sup> Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their <sup>g</sup> companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter <sup>h</sup> was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor and Shimshai the <sup>i</sup> scribe wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their <sup>j</sup> companions; the <sup>k</sup> Dinaites, the Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archaveites, the Babylonians, the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the Elamites,

10 And the rest of the nations whom the great and noble <sup>l</sup> Asnapper brought over and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest <sup>m</sup> that are on this side the river, and <sup>n</sup> at such a <sup>o</sup> time.

11 ¶ This <sup>p</sup> is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, <sup>q</sup> even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the <sup>r</sup> rebellious and the bad city, and have <sup>s</sup> set up the walls <sup>t</sup> thereof, and <sup>u</sup> joined the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that, if this city be builded, and the walls set up <sup>v</sup> again, then will they not <sup>w</sup> pay toll, <sup>x</sup> tribute, and custom, and <sup>y</sup> thou shalt endamage the <sup>z</sup> revenue of the kings.

14 Now because <sup>a</sup> we have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us

(or Cutheans,) we may recollect, were the Pagan subjects of the king of Assyria, whom he had placed in the cities of Judah, from which he had carried the Jews away captive. (See 2 Kings xvii. 24, &c.) These formed a sort of mongrel religion, by uniting their own superstitions with some crude notions of the divine law. When they heard that the Jews had come back, and were about to rebuild their city and temple under the patronage of the great Cyrus, they were desirous to join with them in the work, that they might share in their prosperity and returning glory. The seed of Abraham, however, justly object to this. With all their pretence to serve Jehovah, these men were uncircumcised idolaters, and had no part nor lot in Israel. The latter, therefore, refuse to unite with them; and because they do, the Samaritans immediately Syrian or Chaldaic; and, therefore, from the eighth verse of this chapter, to chap. vii. 27. the original is not Hebrew, but Chaldean, in those parts which consist of letters, decrees, &c. originally written in that language.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Asnapper—is supposed by many to be Shalmaneser or Esarhaddon, but more probably the commander-in-chief of this expedition.

Ver. 11. And at such a time.—The Hebrew particle (Eveneth) is variously explained, but the rendering of our translation is best supported.

Ver. 14. We have maintenance from the palace.—See Margin. [Salt is reckoned among the principal necessities of life, and Pliny observes, "It is impossible to lead a civilized life without salt." Hence, by a very natural figure, salt is used for food or maintenance in general. I am well informed, says Parkhurst, that it is a common expression of the natives in the East. In dies, "I eat such a one's salt," meaning, I am fed by him. Salt was also, as it still is, among eastern nations, a symbol of friendship and hospitality; and hence to eat a man's salt is to be bound to him by the ties of friendship. The learned Joseph Mede observes, that in his time, when the emperor of Russia would show extraordinary grace and favour unto any, he sent him bread and salt from his table; and when he invited the Baron Segismund, the Emperor Ferdinand's ambassador, he did it in this form. "Segismund, you shall eat our bread: and salt with us."—Bagster.

to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king;

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful <sup>2</sup> unto kings and provinces, and that they have <sup>a</sup> moved sedition <sup>b</sup> within the same of old time: for which cause was this city <sup>c</sup> destroyed.

16 We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 ¶ Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their <sup>d</sup> companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And <sup>e</sup> I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found <sup>f</sup> that this city of old time hath <sup>g</sup> made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which <sup>h</sup> have ruled over all countries beyond <sup>i</sup> the river: and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease <sup>k</sup> by force and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

CHAPTER V.

1 Zerubbabel and Jeshua, incited by Haggai and Zechariah, set forward the building of the temple. 2 Tatnai and Shethar-boznai could not hinder the Jews. 5 Their letter to Darius against the Jews.

THEN the prophets, Haggai <sup>a</sup> the prophet, and Zechariah <sup>b</sup> the son of Iddo, prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Je-become their bitter enemies. First, they attempt privately to circumvent, and afterwards publicly oppose them; and upon the death of Cyrus, so far succeed with his successors, as to impede the progress of the work for more than seven years.

The charge alleged against the Jews is, that they were bad subjects; but the proof lies only in their attachment to their own sovereigns, and aversion to foreign sway; and that lies, not so justly against them as against Zechariah, whom (or his brother Jeconiah rather, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9, 10.) they considered as their lawful sovereign.—As to Nebuchadnezzar, being both a foreigner and a Pagan, he could not constitutionally be their king, though it might be necessary and proper to submit to him as a conqueror. The Samaritans, however, were defeated in their object by the death of Ahasuerus, (or Cambyse;) and his successor, Artaxerxes, (or Smerdis;) but Providence raised them up a protector and a friend in Darius Hystaspes, as we shall see in the next chapter.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1–17. The work resumed and encouraged by Haggai and Zechariah.—Soon after the death of Artaxerxes, above-mentioned, the heads of the Jews, Zerubbabel and Joshua, renew their design, assisted, animated, and encouraged by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah. This im-

Ver. 24. Darius.—[This was Darius Hystaspes, one of the seven princes who slew the usurper Smerdis: he ascended the throne of Persia, A. M. 3483, and reigned thirty-six years.]—Bagster.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Then the prophets.—[These are the same Haggai and Zechariah, whose writings we have among the twelve minor prophets; and, as a great part of them refer to the events here recorded, the reader will find it worth while to compare them with the history.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. Tatnai.—[Tatnai was governor of the provinces which belonged to the Persian empire west of the Euphrates, comprehending Syria, Arabia, Dorset, Phoenicia, and Samaria. He seems to have been a mild and judicious

A. M. 3482.
B. C. 522.
Ez. 3. 8.
made.
in the midst thereof.
2 Ki. 24. 50.
25. 1. 4.
societies.
by me a decree is set.
2 Ki. 13. 7.
lifted up itself.
1 Ki. 4. 21.
24.
Ps. 72. 8.
Ge. 15. 18.
Jos. 1. 3. 4.
Make a decree.
arm.
A. M. 3483.
B. C. 519.
Hag. 1. 1.
Zec. 1. 1.
build?
7. 28.
Ps. 32. 3.
33. 19.
34. 15.
76. 10.
Ps. 129. 2. 5.
c. 5. 6.
A. M. 3485.
B. C. 519.
in the midst whereof.
stones of rolling.
ver. 3. 4.
Da. 3. 26.
Ac. 27. 23.
Ro. 6. 16.
1 Ki. 6. 1.
2 Ch. 36. 16.
17.
2 Ki. 24. 2.
25. 3. 11.
c. 1. 1. 3.

rusalem in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

2 Then rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

3 ¶ At the same time came to them Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, Who hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

4 Then said we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that <sup>e</sup> make this building?

5 But the eye <sup>d</sup> of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, that they could not <sup>e</sup> cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and then they <sup>f</sup> returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

6 ¶ The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king:

7 They sent a letter unto him, <sup>g</sup> wherein was written thus; Unto Darius the king, all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is builded with <sup>h</sup> great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

9 Then asked <sup>i</sup> we those elders, and said unto them thus, Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them.

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, We are the servants <sup>j</sup> of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, which a great king of Israel <sup>k</sup> builded and set up.

12 But after <sup>l</sup> that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them <sup>m</sup> into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon.

13 But <sup>n</sup> in the first year of Cyrus the king of mediately awakened the opposition of their enemies, who demanded by what authority they dared to resume the building? "But the eye of their God (which implies his power and wisdom) was upon the elders of the Jews;" and that eye proved their best protection. "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him; upon them that hope in his mercy." (Psalm lxxiii. 18.)

The letter of Tatnai is an interesting and important document, particularly as it contains the answer which the pious Jews gave to their inquiries—"We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth." If it be an honour to be the servant of an earthly prince, how much more so, to be the servant of the most high God, and "this honour have all his saints." (Acts xvi. 17. Psalm cxlix. 9.) "We build the house (say they) that was builded many years ago," by "a great king of Israel." So that it was no new design, nor by any means calculated to excite their jealousy, since it was not a castle, nor a fortress, but a temple—"a house of God." At the same time, they honestly confess that it was for their sins and provocations against the Lord that they had been deprived of it, and given over into the hands of the king of Babylon. Since his given, however, it had pleased God to give them favour with the man; and to have acted with great prudence and caution, and without any passion or prejudice.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. What are the names. &c.—If these are the words of their enemies, as appears from ver. 10, it should seem that we must read them in the third person, with Dr. Boothroyd: "Then said they unto them," (Tatnai &c. unto the Jews.) "What are the names?" &c. But Dr. Clarke, supposing this verse to be the answer of the Jews, reads the latter clause, "These are the men," &c. But how does this agree with ver. 10?

Ver. 8. Great stones.—See margin; i. e. probably, stones too large to lift by human hands and therefore conveyed on rollers as is common to this day

Babylon the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God.

14 And the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was Sheshbazzar, whom he had made governor;

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished.

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAPTER VI.

Darius, finding the decree of Cyrus, maketh a new decree for the advancement of the building. 13 By the help of the enemies, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished. 16 The feast of the dedication is kept, 19 and the passover.

THEN Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon.

2 And there was found at Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber: and let the expenses be given out of the king's house:

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

6 Now therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place.

8 Moreover I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews for the building of this house of God: that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expenses be given unto these men, that they be not hindered.

9 And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail:

10 That they may offer sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons.

11 Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, let him be hanged thereon; and let his house be made a dunghill for this.

12 And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there destroy all kings and people, that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with speed.

13 Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily.

14 And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded, and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of Persia.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children great and magnanimous Cyrus, who had not only restored them to liberty, but had returned the treasures his predecessor had deprived them of, and sent them back loaded with presents and with favours: on his decree, therefore, they confidently rest their cause, and wish only to stand or fall by the truth and honesty of their averments.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—22. Darius confirms the decree of Cyrus: the temple is finished and dedicated, and its worship re-established.—“The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord: as the rivers of waters he turneth it whithersoever he pleaseth.” (Prov. xxi. 1.) The heart of Darius was turned therefore in favour of the Jews. Having ordered the decree of Cyrus to be sought for, on being found it is confirmed; and orders are issued to Tatnai and the king's other servants, by no means to impede the work, but to forward it; and even to furnish the necessary expenses from the royal treasury, with also cattle and meat-offerings for the sacrifices. And the decree closes (as we suppose was customary) with denouncing the most dreadful punishment on all who neglected to obey it.

The building now proceeded rapidly, and the house was finished and dedicated in the sixth year of king Darius. The feast of dedication was kept with the sacrifice of 100 bullocks, 200 rams, 400 lambs, and 12 he-goats, for a sin-offering, according to the number of the twelve tribes of Israel.

This feast was followed by the Passover observed in due time, and with the proper rites of purification. “And the CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. House of the rolls.—The most ancient books, it is well known, were rolls of parchment, or papyrus, &c.—Laid up.—From this phrase it should seem that these records were, for greater security, deposited under ground.

Ver. 2. At Achmetha.—It was situated in a mountainous region at the foot of mount Orontes, or Jasonius, according to Ammianus, on the southern confines of Media and Persia, and, according to Ptolemy, 750 miles from Seleucia the Great, 20 miles from the Caspian passes, 450 miles from Susa, and the same from Gazæ Atropatene. The building of the city is ascribed to Semiramis by Diodorus, but to Deiochus by Eusebius and Herodotus, who states that it was surrounded by seven walls, strong, and ample, built in circles one within another, rising each above each by the height of their respective battlements; each being distinguished by a different colour—the first white, the second black, the third purple, the fourth blue, the fifth orange, the sixth plated with silver, and the seventh with gold. The largest of these was nearly the extent of Athens, i. e. 200 furlongs, according to Dion Chrysostom, but Diodorus Siculus states the circumference of Ecбатана to be 250 furlongs. Within the inner circle stood the king's palace and the royal treasury; so much celebrated for its splendour and riches by Polybius. It is highly probable, as D'Anville and Major Rennel suppose, that the present Hamadan, whose ruins attend its former splendour, occupies the site of Ecбатана. It is situated in Al Gebal, at the foot of the lofty mountain Alwand, about eighty leagues from Ispahan, and also from Bagdad.—Bagster.

Ver. 3. The breadth threescore cubits.—This is three times the width of Solomon's temple; but Cyrus was probably misinformed, for it is generally believed it was built no larger than the former.

Ver. 10. Pray for the king.—One motive for toleration with the heathen was, that they might have the prayers of persons of all religions.

Ver. 11. Let him be hanged thereon.—Or, more literally, “taken away,” i. e. from life; he was to be executed, and his house made a dunghill, or heap of rubbish.

Ver. 14. Artaxerxes.—This was Artaxerxes, the third son and successor of Xerxes, surnamed Longimanus, or in Persian Ardashir, the long-handed; so called, according to the Greeks, from the extraordinary length of his hands, but according to the Easterns, from the extent of his dominions. He ascended the Persian throne A. M. 3540, B. C. 464, and reigned forty-one years; he is said to have been the most handsome person of his age, and to have been a prince of a very mild and generous disposition.—Bagster.

of the captivity, kept <sup>a</sup> the dedication of this house of God with <sup>d</sup> joy, 17 And offered <sup>e</sup> at the dedication of this house of God a hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they set the priests <sup>f</sup> in their divisions, and the Levites <sup>g</sup> in their courses, for the service of God, which <sup>h</sup> is at Jerusalem; <sup>i</sup> as it is written <sup>j</sup> in the book of Moses.

19 And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day <sup>k</sup> of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were purified <sup>l</sup> together, all of them <sup>m</sup> were pure, and killed <sup>n</sup> the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves.

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness <sup>o</sup> of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, did eat,

22 And kept the feast <sup>p</sup> of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and turned the heart <sup>q</sup> of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Ezra goeth up to Jerusalem. 11 The gracious commission of Artaxerxes to Ezra.

NOW after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes, <sup>a</sup> king of Persia, Ezra the son of <sup>b</sup> Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah,

2 The son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of <sup>c</sup> Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron <sup>d</sup> the chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he <sup>e</sup> was a ready scribe <sup>f</sup> in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king granted him all his request, according <sup>g</sup> to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

7 And <sup>h</sup> there went up <sup>i</sup> some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the <sup>j</sup> Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which <sup>k</sup> was in the seventh year of the king.

children of Israel, which were come out of captivity, and all such [proselytes] as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, did eat, and kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel." Thus it is, that the sacred writers attribute to God all their comforts and their blessings, even though a heathen were the instrument. But the LORD had made them joyful, not only in turning toward them the heart of the king of Assyria; but many of the people had been won by their prudent and religious conduct to become proselytes to the God of Israel, and <sup>l</sup> had separated themselves from the filthiness of the heathen

CHAP. VII. Ver. 12. King of kings.—[The title of the king would, in Persian, run thus: Ardsheer shahinshah, or padshah, "Ardsheer, king of kings," i. e. great or supreme king, or emperor. The Persian monarchs had many kings tributary to them; but this title savours of ostentation, as if they had authority over all kings.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Seven counsellors.—[Seven princes of Persia having conspired against and slain the usurper Smerdis, and thus made way for the family of Darius which afterwards filled the throne the Persian kings of this race had

A. M. 3489.

B. C. 515.

c 1Ki.8.63.

2 Ch.7.5.

d ver.22.

Ne.8.10.

12.43.

Ps.122.1.

e c.8.35.

f 1 Ch.24.1.

g 1 Ch.23.6.

h according to the writings.

i Nu.3.6; 8.9.

j Ex.12.6.

k 2 Ch.30.15.

l 2 Ch.35.11.

m c.9.11.

n Ex.12.15.

13.6.

o 2 Ch.30.21.

35.17.

p 1 Co.5.7,8.

q ver.6.

r Pr.21.1.

A. M. 3547.

B. C. 457.

a Ne.2.1.

b 1 Ch.6.14.

c Nu.25.11.

13.

d He.5.4.

e ver.11,12.

21.

f ver.9.

g c.8.32,31.

Ne.8.13,12.

Pr.3.6.

h c.8.1,15.

&c.

i c.2.43.

j was the foundation of the going up.

k 2 Ch.19.3.

l Pr.119.45.

m Da.16.12.

n De.33.10.

Mal.2.7.

Th.1.1,15.

o Eze.26.7.

Da.5.31.

p q to

Ezra the priest, a perfect scribe of the law of the God of heaven,

peace,&c.

q from before die

king.

r Ea.1.14.

s Ps.65.29.

76.11.

t 2 Ch.6.2.

Ps.9.11.

26.8.

135.21.

u c.8.25.

v 1 Ch.29.6,9.

w Nu.15.4.

13.

x De.12.5.

11.

y Ep.5.17.

z cora.

9 For upon the first day of the first month <sup>a</sup> began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according <sup>b</sup> to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had prepared <sup>c</sup> his heart to seek <sup>d</sup> the law of the LORD, and to <sup>e</sup> do it, and to teach <sup>f</sup> in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 ¶ Now this <sup>g</sup> is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, <sup>h</sup> even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, <sup>i</sup> king of kings, <sup>j</sup> unto Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect <sup>k</sup> peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own free will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent <sup>l</sup> of the king, and of his seven <sup>m</sup> counsellors, to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which <sup>n</sup> is in thy hand;

15 And to carry the silver and gold, which <sup>o</sup> the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation <sup>p</sup> is in Jerusalem,

16 And <sup>q</sup> all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will-offering of the people, and of the priests, offering <sup>r</sup> willingly for the house of their God which <sup>s</sup> is in Jerusalem:

17 That thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their <sup>t</sup> meat-offerings and their drink-offerings, and offer them upon the <sup>u</sup> altar of the house of your God which <sup>v</sup> is in Jerusalem.

18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that <sup>w</sup> do after the will of your God.

19 The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, <sup>x</sup> those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow <sup>y</sup> it out of the king's treasure-house.

21 And I, <sup>z</sup> even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which <sup>a</sup> are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily, 22 Unto a hundred talents of silver, and to a hundred <sup>b</sup> measures of wheat, and to a hundred baths of wine, and to a hundred baths of oil, and salt without prescribing <sup>c</sup> how much.

of the land." No man is either religious or irreligious for himself only: our example will either benefit or injure those around us.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—28. Ezra, the priest, and many of his brethren, go up to Jerusalem, with the decree of Artaxerxes in their favour.—Ezra, who was one of the captives in Babylon, is here distinguished as "a ready scribe;" by which we are not to understand his skill as a writer, but as a teacher and expounder—a man learned in the Mosaic law. He was also eminently pious, for he "had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach it." The imperial decree was accompanied by a kind of letter of recommendation of Ezra, who is herein mentioned as "a scribe of the law of the God of heaven," entrusted to make collections, and to always seven chief princes as their counsellors, who possessed peculiar privileges, were his chief assistants in the government, and by whose advice all the public affairs of the empire were transacted. The names of these counsellors are given in the parallel place of the book of Esther. See Prideaux.—Bagster.

Ver. 22. Talents of silver.—Value each $1550.—Measures.—"Cora;" about seventy-five gallons each.—Baths.—A bath was about seven and a half gallons.

23 Whatsoever is <sup>a</sup> commanded <sup>b</sup> by the God of heaven, let it be diligently <sup>c</sup> done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?

24 Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God, that is in thy hand, set <sup>d</sup> magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and teach <sup>e</sup> ye them that know them not.

26 And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or to <sup>f</sup> banishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.

27 ¶ Blessed <sup>g</sup> be the Lord God of our fathers, which hath put <sup>h</sup> such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem:

28 And <sup>i</sup> hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened as <sup>j</sup> the hand of the Lord my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The companions of Ezra, who returned from Babylon. 15 He sendeth to Iddo for ministers for the temple. 21 He keepeth a fast. 24 He committeth the treasures to the custody of the priests. 31 From Ahava they come to Jerusalem. 33 The treasure is weighed in the temple. 36 The commission is delivered.

THESE are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king.

2 Of <sup>a</sup> the sons of Phinehas; Gershom: of the sons of Ithamar; Daniel of the sons of David; <sup>b</sup> Hattush.

3 Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of <sup>c</sup> Pharosh; Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males a hundred and fifty.

4 Of the sons of Pahath-moab; Elihoenai the son of Zerariah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males.

6 Of the sons also of Adin; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males.

7 And of the sons of Elam; Jeshaiiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of Shephatiah; Zebadiah

A. M. 3547.
B. C. 457.

a of the decree

b ver. 18.

c Ps. 119. 4.

d Ex. 18. 21,
De. 16. 18.

e ver. 10.
Ro. 10. 14.

f rooting out.

g 1 Ch. 29. 10.

h c. 22.

i c. 9. 9.

j ver. 6.
c. 8. 18.

a 1 Ch. 6. 4,
&c.

b 1 Ch. 3. 22.

c c. 23.

—

d or, youngest son.

e or, Zaccary, as some read.

f or, pitched

g c. 7. 7.

h 1 Ch. 12. 32.
Dr. 20. 5.
28. 2.

i I put words in their mouths.

j 2 Sa. 14. 3, 19.

k Tit. 1. 5.

l Ne. 8. 7.
9. 4, 5.

m c. 2. 43.

n Ph. 4. 3.

o 2 Ch. 30. 3.

p 1 Ch. 16. 29.
23. 4.
Is. 53. 3. 5.
Joel 2. 13.

q Ps. 5. 8.
143. 8. 10.
Pr. 3. 6.
Is. 30. 21.
22. 16.
Je. 10. 23.

r Ps. 8. 2.
Ma. 10. 13, 16.

s 1 Co. 9. 15.

the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of Joab; Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of Shelomith; the son of Josiphiah, and with him a hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of Bebai; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males.

12 And of the sons of Azgad; Johanan the <sup>d</sup> son of Hakkatan, and with him a hundred and ten males.

13 And of the last sons of Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and She-maiah, and with them threescore males.

14 Of the sons also of Bigvai; Uthai, and <sup>e</sup> Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

15 ¶ And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Ahava; and there <sup>f</sup> abode we in tents three days: and I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none <sup>g</sup> of the sons of Levi.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for She-maiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men; also for Joiarib, and for Elnathan, men of <sup>h</sup> understanding.

17 And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia, and <sup>i</sup> I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring <sup>j</sup> unto us ministers for the house of our God.

18 And by the good hand of our God upon us they brought <sup>k</sup> us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen;

19 And Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty;

20 Also of the <sup>l</sup> Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by <sup>m</sup> name.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a <sup>n</sup> fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might <sup>o</sup> afflict ourselves before our God, to <sup>p</sup> seek of him a right way for us, and for our <sup>q</sup> little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For <sup>r</sup> I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help carry the amount, with the donations of the king and his counsellors, to Jerusalem. There he was appointed to superintend the work carrying on, and to regulate the worship according to the law of the God of Israel, with the promise of exemptions from all toll and taxes. He is also empowered to appoint magistrates and judges, and to instruct them in their duty, and to punish all the refractory and disobedient. After reading the letter and decree of Artaxerxes, Ezra offers thanks to the God of Israel—1. For inclining the king's heart thus to furnish and embellish the house of the Lord; and, 2. For showing such extraordinary favours to himself. "Blessed be the Lord God of our fathers! I was strengthened as the hand of the Lord my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel, chief men to go up with me." "There is (says Dr. Clarke) a most amiable spirit of piety in these reflections. Ezra simply states the case, shows what the king had determined, and tells what he said, and then points out the grand agent in the whole business: it was the Lord God of his fathers. Thus God had put it into the king's heart to beautify the house of Jehovah, and as that house was built for the salvation of the souls of men, he gives God praise for putting it into the king's heart to repair it. He who loves God and man will rejoice in the establishment of Divine worship, because this is the readiest way to promote [the glory of God, and] the best interests of man."

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1—36. Ezra collects and examines at Ahava the people who accompanied him—Sends for Levites—All arrive safe at Jerusalem.—On Ezra's arrival at Ahava, with his colony of Jews, they pitched their tents on the banks of the river three days, and finding that there were no Levites among them, he wrote to Iddo, a chief in the Caspian mountains, who sent not only a number of Levites, but also Nethinims, who were probably at work in the silver mines there. Here the venerable leader proclaimed a fast to implore the divine favour and protection in their journey. In such cases, it was natural to have asked a military convoy; but Ezra was ashamed to do this, because he had told the king, "The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek Him; but his

Ver. 23. Why should there be wrath.—(As Artaxerxes believed he was appointed by the Almighty to do this work, he therefore wished to do it heartily; knowing that if he did not, God would be displeased, and that the kingdom would be cut off from him or his posterity.)—Bagster.

Ver. 28. I was strengthened.—[In what the king decreed he saw the hand of God; he, therefore, gave Him the praise, and took courage.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 15. To Ahava.—Ahava was a river itself, supposed to be the same that is called Adiabene; and perhaps the place where the people of Ava came, who were brought by the king of Assyria to Palestine, 2 Ki. xvii. 24.—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 17. Casiphia means, as most commentators are agreed, the Caspian mountains, where probably the Nethinims were employed in working silver mines—keceph signifies silver.

us against the enemy in the way : because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand <sup>a</sup> of our God is upon all them for good that seek <sup>a</sup> him; but his power and his wrath <sup>a</sup> is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted and besought our God for this : and he was entreated <sup>a</sup> of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And weighed unto them the <sup>a</sup> silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered :

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels a hundred talents, and of gold a hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basins of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of <sup>a</sup> fine copper, <sup>a</sup> precious as gold.

28 And I said unto them, Ye are <sup>a</sup> holy unto the Lord; the vessels <sup>a</sup> are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the Lord God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the Lord.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to <sup>b</sup> Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and <sup>c</sup> the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And we <sup>d</sup> came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the silver and the gold and the vessels <sup>e</sup> weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites; power and his wrath is against all them that forsake Him." (See note, ver. 31.) So they fasted, and sought the protection of a divine power, and the Lord "was entreated" of them: that is, hearkened to their request. Before we proceed, we may remark here, the great importance of consistency in religion. They who recommend to others to trust in God, should be particularly careful not to exhibit timidity or distrust themselves.

The treasures they carried, at a moderate computation, amounted to more than a million of dollars; and all this was entrusted to the priests, with this striking and emphatic charge: "Ye are holy unto the Lord, the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering to the Lord." Thus the consideration of the sacredness of their character and of their charge, is here united with a consideration of the pious and benevolent object they were called on to promote; all urging them to the most scrupulous care, the most exact integrity in discharging the duty in which they were engaged. Integrity always ranks among the first and highest of the moral virtues, and a suspicion of any deficiency in this respect can be made up by no other virtue. And when we connect

Ver. 27. A thousand drams—Or Persian darics. See note on chap. i. 69.—Fine copper.—[The Syriac renders, neshosho korinthayo tova, "good Corinthian brass"; so called from the brass found after the burning of Corinth by Lucius Mummius, which was, as is generally supposed, brass, copper, silver, and gold melted together. Sir J. Chardin, however, in a MS. note, cites by Harmer, mentioned a factitious metal used in the East, and highly esteemed there, which might probably be of an origin as ancient as Ezra. He says, "I have heard some Dutch gentlemen speak of a metal in the island of Sumatra, and among the Macassars, much more esteemed than gold, which royal persons alone are privileged to wear. It is a mixture, if I remember right, of gold and steel, or copper and steel." He afterwards added, "calmbac is the name of this metal, which is composed of gold and copper."—Bagster.

A. M. 3547.

B. C. 457.

e c. 7.6, 9, 28.

i Ps. 33. 19.

34. 15, 22.

Ja. 3. 25.

Ro. 8. 23.

u 2 Ch. 15. 2.

Zep. 1. 4, 6.

He. 10. 38.

v 1 Ch. 5. 20.

Ps. 66. 18.

20.

1e. 19. 22.

1e. 29. 12.

13.

x c. 7. 15, 16.

y *yellow, or, shining brass.*z desirable.

1 Le. 21. 6, 8.

22. 2, 3.

De. 33. 8.

a Nu. 4. 15.

Ro. 9. 28.

b ver. 32.

c c. 7. 28.

d Ne. 2. 11.

e ver. 26, 30.

f c. 6. 17.

g c. 7. 21.

a c. 6. 21.

Na. 9. 2.

2 Co. 6. 17.

b De. 12. 30.

31.

Ro. 2. 17.

25.

c Ex. 34. 16.

Ne. 13. 23.

d De. 14. 2.

1a. 6. 13.

e 2 Co. 6. 14.

f 2 Ki. 19. 1.

g 1a. 15. 2.

h Ps. 60. 3.

i c. 10. 3.

1a. 13. 136.

1a. 56. 2.

Eze. 9. 4.

j Ex. 29. 29.

k or, affliction.

l 1 Ki. 8. 22.

m Da. 9. 7, 8.

n Ps. 33. 4.

o or, guiltiness.

p 2 Ch. 23. 9.

Lu. 15. 21.

Re. 18. 5.

q Ps. 106. 6.

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered <sup>a</sup> burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the Lord.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions <sup>a</sup> unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river: and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Ezra mourneth for the affinity of the people with strangers. 5 He prayeth unto God with confession, of sins.

NOW when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated <sup>a</sup> themselves from the people of the lands, doing <sup>b</sup> according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have taken <sup>c</sup> of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons: so that the holy <sup>d</sup> seed have <sup>e</sup> mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing, I <sup>f</sup> rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair <sup>g</sup> of my head and of my beard, and sat down <sup>h</sup> astonished.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled <sup>i</sup> at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening <sup>j</sup> sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my <sup>k</sup> heaviness; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and <sup>l</sup> spread out my hands unto the Lord my God,

6 And said, O my God, I am <sup>m</sup> ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities are increased over our <sup>n</sup> head, and our <sup>o</sup> trespass is grown <sup>p</sup> up unto the heavens.

7 Since the days of our fathers <sup>q</sup> have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and integrity with religion, its worth and importance is exceedingly enhanced. Dishonesty in trade is criminal, in religion damning; and he that makes a trade of his religion, trades to certain and eternal loss.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—15. Ezra, on arriving at Jerusalem, informed that many of those who first returned had married heathen wives, contrary to the law.—It was one of the primary and most indispensable of the Mosaic laws, that no Israelite should marry a Pagan, and especially a Canaanite, (Deut. vii. 1—4.) lest they should thereby be drawn into idolatry; and it is reasonable to believe that this was the great snare which led the Israelites so deeply and so frequently into that crime. The men were ensnared, not only by female beauty, but probably by the accomplishments which females acquired in their idol worship; for, among other nations, as well as among the Greeks, a great part of their worship bore the form of amusement and hilarity, which was never checked, as was the worship of the Jews, by an awful sense of the divine purity: "Be ye holy; for I am the Lord your God." (Lev. xx. 7.)

Ezra was deeply affected with this information, especially when he heard that "the princes and rulers had been chief in

Ver. 31. Delivered us from the hand of the enemy.—[Ezra and his company had now entered upon a journey of several hundred miles through the desert, which they were nearly four months in completing, encumbered with families and possessions, and carrying large treasures with them, which would invite the attempts of the Arabian hordes, and others that infested that neighbourhood; yet, having declared to the king, "that the hand of God was upon all our journey," and that his power and wrath were against all them that sought him, and that his power and wrath were against all them that sought him" (ver. 22.) he determined to travel without a guard, except that of the Almighty, being ashamed to ask any other, after his former avowed confidence in Him! Having, therefore, humbled themselves before the Lord, and besought his guidance and protection, he was entreated of them. Their enemies were restrained or disabled, and they arrived unmolested at Jerusalem.]—Bagster.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two : for <sup>p</sup> we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for <sup>a</sup> this matter be turned from us.

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah <sup>r</sup> were employed about this matter : and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine <sup>s</sup> the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 ¶ And among the sons of the <sup>t</sup> priests there were found that had taken strange wives : namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren ; Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave <sup>v</sup> their hands that they would put away their wives ; and being guilty, they offered <sup>w</sup> a ram of the flock for their trespass.

20 And of the sons of Immer ; Hanani, and Zebadiah.

21 And of the sons of Harim ; Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uziah.

22 And of the sons of <sup>x</sup> Pashur ; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elasah.

23 Also of the Levites ; Jozabad, and Shimei, strange (i. e. heathen) wives," whom you have married. To this the congregation answered aloud, "As thou hast said, so must we do." They requested, however, on account of the severity of the season, and of the great importance of the work, that the necessary time might be allowed, and that the rulers and elders, some of whom were deeply implicated, would themselves come forward with their brethren of the lower classes. They did so, and the whole of the painful business was got through within three months.

What compensation was made to the wives and children thus put away, the latter (at least) perfectly innocent, we are not informed. "That which was done contrary to the law (as Bishop Patrick says) was looked upon as null, and therefore these were accounted no marriages ; and their children . . . were not to be a part of the family, but to be put away with

Ver. 17. First day of the first month.—[The cases brought before the council were either so many, or so complicated, that, though they separated themselves from other engagements, yet they were three whole months in examining into their affairs, and making the necessary preparations required by the law.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Gave their hands.—[They bound themselves in the most solemn manner to do as the rest of the delinquents had done, and make an acknowledgment to God of their iniquity, by offering each a ram for a trespass-offering.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Moreover of Israel.—[That is, of the common Israelites, as distinguished from the priests and Levites.]

A. M. 3547.
B. C. 457.

<sup>p</sup> or, less greatly offended.

<sup>t</sup> or, be turned from us till this matter be despatched.

<sup>r</sup> stood.

<sup>s</sup> De. 13. 14.
Job. 29. 16.
1 Jn. 7. 51.

<sup>t</sup> Je. 23. 11.
Mal. 2. 5, 9.

<sup>u</sup> 2 Ki. 10. 15.
1 Ch. 29. 24.
5 Ch. 30. 8.
La. 5. 6.

<sup>v</sup> Le. 5. 15.
16 ; 6. 4, 5.

<sup>w</sup> Nu. 7. 41.

<sup>x</sup> or, Mab-nadabai, according to some copies.

<sup>y</sup> Pr. 5. 20.

and Kelaiah, (the same is Kelita,) Pethahiah Judah, and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers also ; Eliashib : and of the porters ; Shalum, and Telem, and Uri.

25 Moreover of Israel : of the sons of Parosh ; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah.

26 And of the sons of Elam ; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah.

27 And of the sons of Zattu ; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza.

28 Of the sons also of Bebai ; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai.

29 And of the sons of Bani ; Meshullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth.

30 And of the sons of Pahath-moab ; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh.

31 And of the sons of Harim ; Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32 Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah.

33 Of the sons of Hashum ; Mattenai, Matathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh and Shimei.

34 Of the sons of Bani ; Maadai, Amram and Uel,

35 Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh,

36 Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib,

37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau,

38 And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei,

39 And Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah

40 <sup>z</sup> Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai,

41 Azareel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah,

42 Shalum, Amariah, and Joseph.

43 Of the sons of Nebo ; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadai, and Joel, Benaiah.

44 All these had taken strange <sup>y</sup> wives : and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

their mothers." It is reasonable to believe, however, that they were not turned adrift to starve by such a man as Ezra. It is also to be considered, that all who had renounced idolatry and become proselytes, were entitled to the same privileges as those born Jews : but as to the children, we read of none actually put away, and it is probable there were but few, and those girls only ; for the fathers had but to circumcise their boys, and they became Jewish proselytes immediately. (Exod. xii. 48, 49.) It seems, after all, that some of the people were not faithful to their engagement, for we find that long after this there were Jews that had heathen wives of the nations of Ashdod, Ammon, and Moab. (Neh. xiii. 23.)

The concluding verses of this chapter, and of the book, contain only a list of delinquents referred to, among whom it is lamentable to find many of the sons of the priests and Levites.

Ver. 44. Some had wives and children.—[This observation was probably intended to show, that only a few of them had children, and also how rigorously the law was put in execution.—According to a passage in Justin Martyr's Dialogue with Trypho, a Jew, Ezra offered a paschal lamb on this occasion, and addressed the people thus :—"And Ezra said to the people, This passover is our Saviour and our Refuge ; and if ye will be persuaded of it, and let it enter into your hearts, that we are to humble to Him in a sign, and afterwards shall believe in Him, this place shall not be destroyed for ever, saith the Lord of Hosts : but, if ye will not believe in Him, nor hearken to his preaching, ye shall have your land and your city given to the Gentiles." This was probably a marginal note added by some early Christian.]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EZRA.

[THIS book details the events of a very interesting period of the Sacred History, when, according to the decree of PROVIDENCE, the Jewish people were to be delivered from their captivity, at the expiration of seventy years, and restored to the land of their fathers. This book informs us how the Divine goodness accomplished this most gracious design, and the movers and agents He employed on the occasion. Ezra was undoubtedly the chief agent under God in effecting this arduous work ; and his zeal, piety, knowledge, and discretion, appear here in a most conspicuous point of view, and claim our utmost admiration. Descended from Soraiah, in a direct line from Aaron, he seems to have united all the requisites of a profound statesman with the functions of the sacerdotal character. He appears to have made the Sacred Scriptures, during the captivity, his peculiar study ; and, perhaps, assisted by Nehemiah and the great synagogue, he corrected the errors which had crept into the Sacred Writings, through the negligence or mistake of transcribers ; he collected all the copies of which the Sacred Scriptures then consisted, disposed them in their proper order, and settled the canon of Scripture for his time ; he occasionally added, under the superintendence of the Holy Spirit, whatever appeared necessary for the purpose of illustrating, completing, or connecting them ; he substituted the modern for the ancient names of some places, which had now become obsolete ; and transcribed the whole of the Scriptures into the Chaldean character. He is said to have lived to the age of 120 years, and, according to Josephus, was buried in Jerusalem ; but the Jews believe he died in Persia, at Zamusia. Though not styled a prophet, he wrote under the Divine Spirit ; and the canonical authority of his book has never been disputed. It is written with all the spirit and fidelity that could be displayed by a writer of contemporary times ; and those parts which chiefly consist of letters, decrees, &c., are written in Chaldean, because it seemed more suitable to the fidelity of a sacred language, especially as the people, recently returned from the captivity, were familiar, and perhaps more conversant with the Chaldean, than with the Hebrew.]—Bagster

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

THIS book resumes the history of the Jews, about twelve years after the close of the book of Ezra; and contains the latest canonical records of the nation till the days of Christ; reaching down to about a hundred and ten years after the captivity. It was evidently written by Nehemiah himself, who throughout speaks in the first person; and probably it was received among the canonical Scriptures by Ezra and his assistants or successors.—Nehemiah, a Jew, the cupbearer to Artaxerxes king of Persia, hearing of the distressed state of his countrymen, in great affliction petitions him for leave to go up to Jerusalem as governor, with a commission to rebuild the walls, and to provide for the security and the prosperity of his people. Having obtained his request, he executes his commission for twelve years with great success. After which he returns to Artaxerxes, but at length comes back to Jerusalem and employs various measures to promote the prosperity of the Jews, and the reformation of abuses.—The frequent devout ejaculations with which the narrative is interrupted, are peculiar to this pious writer; and his zeal, activity, and disinterestedness are well worthy of imitation, especially by those employed in arduous undertakings, for the good of the church or the community.

This book has many internal proofs of divine inspiration, and always has been considered by the Jews as a part of their sacred Scriptures, and indeed as a continuation of the book of Ezra: it does not, however, seem to contain any prophecies, nor is it explicitly referred to in the New Testament.—T. Scott.

CHAPTER I.

1 Nehemiah, understanding by Hanani the misery of Jerusalem, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth. 5 His prayer.

THE words of <sup>a</sup> Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the palace,

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are <sup>b</sup> in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken <sup>c</sup> down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

4 And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven,

5 ¶ And said, I beseech thee, <sup>d</sup> O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth <sup>e</sup> covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments:

6 Let <sup>f</sup> thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes <sup>g</sup> open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess <sup>h</sup> the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We <sup>i</sup> have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept <sup>j</sup> the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If <sup>k</sup> ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

A. M. 3558.
B. C. 446.

a c.10.1.

b Ps.137.1,3
Is.1.7.
3.61.
5.1.

c 2Ki.25.10.
Is.64.10,11

d Da.9.4,
&c.

e Ex.20.6.

f 1Ki.8.28,
29.
2 Ch.6.40.

g Ps.34.15.

h Ps.32.5.
1Jn.1.9.

i Ps.106.6.

j De.28.15.

k Le.26.33,
&c.
De.4.25,
&c.
28.64.

l De.30.4.

m Ps.147.2.
Is.11.12.
56.8.

n Je.12.15.
50.19,20.

o Da.9.23.
Da.9.15,
&c.

p Ps.86.6.

q Is.26.8.
He.13.18.

r c.2.1.

s A. M. 3559.
B. C. 445.

a Ezr.7.1.

b c.1.11.

c Pr.15.13.

d 1Ki.1.31.
Da.2.4.

e c.1.3.

f 2Ch.21.
20; 22.27.
32.33.

g Ps.3.6.

h Ph.4.6.

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them; though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I <sup>m</sup> gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now these <sup>n</sup> are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive <sup>o</sup> to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire <sup>p</sup> to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For <sup>q</sup> I was the king's cup-bearer.

CHAPTER II.

1 Artaxerxes understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness, sendeth him with letters and commission to Jerusalem. 9 Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies, cometh to Jerusalem. 12 He vieweth secretly the ruins of the walls. 17 He moveth the Jews to build in despite of the enemies.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of <sup>a</sup> Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up <sup>b</sup> the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow <sup>c</sup> of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, Let <sup>d</sup> the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the <sup>e</sup> city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed <sup>f</sup> to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Ju-

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—11. Nehemiah is much distressed for his countrymen at Jerusalem, and offers prayer on their behalf.—Nehemiah, though a Jew and a captive, was one of the cupbearers to the king of Persia, and resided in his palace at Shushan. This was a post of great honour, inasmuch as it admitted him daily to the king's presence; and to "see the king's face," is the highest object of ambition in an eastern court. It was also an office of trust, and one part of his duty was to taste the cup that he presented, to prevent the king from being poisoned. It was probably the known virtue and integrity of this man's character, that recommended him to this promotion. The history before us also gives us abundant proofs of his prudence, vigilance, disinterestedness, and firmness to his principles; but the crown of all his other virtues was his piety, of which this chapter furnishes the most striking evidence.—His brother Hanani, and some other Jews from Jerusalem, coming to visit Nehemiah at the palace, he makes particular inquiry into the state of his brethren who had returned from captivity, and into the condition of the city and the temple. This was probably at the time that the building had been stopped through the envy of the Samaritans; while the wall lay in ruins, and the gates thereof, which had been burned with fire by Nebuchadnezzar. When he heard this, and that his brethren were the subjects of "great affliction and reproach," he was so overwhelmed that he sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted and prayed before the God of heaven.

The substance of his prayer is given us in this chapter, and evinces at once his patriotism and his piety; his attachment to the house of God and to his native country; but above all, his zeal for true religion, and his deep regret for that want of it that had plunged his nation into such distress and ruin: and in nothing, perhaps, more demonstrates his sincerity than the earnestness with which, like Ezra, he confesses the sins of his countrymen, as a partner in their guilt as well as sufferings; "both I and my father's house have sinned." If we wish to be heard on the behalf of our fellow-sinners, we must mingle our case with theirs. Our Lord has taught us daily to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—20. Nehemiah obtains a commission to rebuild Jerusalem.—Neither the devotion nor patriotism of Nehemiah was temporary or transient. For full four months, CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Shushan.—[Shushan, or Susa, was the capital of Susiana, a province of Persia, and the winter residence of the Persian monarchs; situated about 252 miles east of Babylon, and the same distance south-south-east of Ecbatana, in latitude 32 degrees, longitude 49 degrees. The circumference of its walls was above 120 stadia. Shuster is supposed to occupy its site.]—Bagaces.

Ver. 11. I was the king's cup-bearer.—Xenophon says, the custom was for this officer to fill the king's cup with wine; but, before he presented it, he poured some into his own hand, and drank it, to ascertain that there was no poison in it.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Artaxerxes.—Not the same mentioned, Ezra iv. 7. but Artaxerxes Longimanus, who had about twelve years before given a commission to Ezra.

Ver. 2. Sore afraid.—[Probably the king spoke as if he had some suspicion that Nehemiah harboured some bad design, and that his face indicated some conceived treachery, or remorse: and, indeed, the words rendered sad, and sorrow of heart, might be rendered evil, and wickedness of heart.]—B.

Ver. 3. Let the king live, &c.—[Far from wishing ill to my master, I wish him to live for ever. Artaxerxes uses the same form of speech in reference to Artaxerxes Mnemon, one of the Persian kings. "O king Artaxerxes, may you dah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the <sup>h</sup> queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a <sup>i</sup> time.

7 Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according <sup>k</sup> to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard it, it grieved <sup>l</sup> them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So <sup>m</sup> I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God <sup>n</sup> had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night by the gate <sup>o</sup> of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung-port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were <sup>p</sup> broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the <sup>q</sup> fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the <sup>r</sup> brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and

A. M. 3559.

B. C. 445.

h wife.

i c.5.14.

13.6.

j c.3.7.

k Ezr.5.5.

ver.13.

l Ps.112.10.

Ezr.25.6.

8.

m Ezr.3.32.

n Ps.51.13.

122.6.

o 2 Ch.29.9.

p c.1.3.

q c.3.15.

r 2Sa.15.23.

Je.31.38.

40.

s Pa.2.2,9.

t c.1.3.

Ps.44.13.

79.4.12.

Je.24.13.

Ezr.5.14.

15; 22.4.

u ver.8.

v 2Sa.2.7.

Ezr.6.22.

w Pa.30.6.

x c.6.6.

y Pa.102.13.

14.

Ec.7.18.

z Ezr.4.3.

a Is.56.5.

b c.12.10.

c Jn.5.2.

d c.13.39.

e Je.31.38.

Ezr.14.10.

f at his hand.

g Ezr.2.34.

h 2Ch.33.14.

Zep.1.10.

it appears that this good man wept and prayed, till his grief and anxiety made an impression on his countenance that could not pass unobserved by his royal master, especially as such impressions were not natural to him. He says himself, "I had not been beforetime sad in the king's presence;" and, doubtless, it was very inconsistent with the etiquette of courts for him so to appear. But providence renders even this circumstance subservient to his design. The king notices the change in his countenance, and inquires the cause. He is alarmed at this, lest the king should suspect that some evil design was brooding in his bosom. He gives, however, a very prudent answer. He knew that all nations held sacred the sepulchres of their fathers, and to this feeling, therefore, he successfully appealed. The king now demanded his request; and, in a moment, between hope and fear, he raises his heart to God in ejaculatory prayer, and then prefers the bold request that he might be permitted to go to Jerusalem, and be furnished with materials to rebuild it. This petition was preferred, as appears, while the king was sitting with his favourite wife; and no objection was raised, but the difficulty of sparing him for so long a time. But his prayer had been heard in heaven, and was not to be refused on earth. A guard was appointed to attend him, with necessary recommendations to the king's governors beyond the Euphrates. No time was now lost, but Nehemiah hastened to Jerusalem, and presented his credentials, without explaining, as it seems, the exact objects he had in view. It reign for ever," when speaking of the custom of presenting them annually with an offering of earth and water, as if they had said, "May you reign for ever over these."—Bagster.

Ver. 6. The queen,—i. e. his favourite wife sitting by him. This could not be queen Esther, for it was above sixty years after her promotion. Nor does the word here used express the rank of queen.

Ver. 8. The king's forest.—A royal forest for the king's pleasure grounds.

Ver. 10. Sanballat, the Horonite.—Probably of Horonaim, a Moabite by birth, at this time governor of the Samaritans; and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, who was formerly a slave; but for some real or supposed service, had been also raised to power.

Ver. 12. My God had put in my heart.—[This pious and noble minded man attributes every thing to God. If he purposed any good, it was because God put it into his heart; if he did or received any good, it was because the good hand of his God was upon him; if he expected any good, it was because he earnestly prayed God to remember him for good.]—Bagster.

entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach.

18 Then I told them of the hand <sup>u</sup> of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened <sup>v</sup> their hands for this good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed <sup>w</sup> us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye rebel <sup>x</sup> against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he <sup>y</sup> will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye <sup>z</sup> have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in <sup>a</sup> Jerusalem.

CHAPTER III.

The names and order of them that builded the wall.

THEN <sup>a</sup> Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, and they builded the <sup>b</sup> sheep-gate; they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah they <sup>c</sup> sanctified it, unto the tower <sup>d</sup> of Hananeel.

2 And <sup>e</sup> next unto him builded the men of <sup>f</sup> Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 But the <sup>g</sup> fish-gate did the sons of Hasse-naah build, who <sup>h</sup> also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

4 And next unto them repaired Meremoth was understood, however, that he "was come to seek the welfare of the children of Israel," and this was enough to excite the envy of the Samaritans. "There cannot (says Bp. Hall) be a greater trouble to wicked hearts, than to see the spiritual Jerusalem in any likelihood of prosperity."

The eloquent Saurin has drawn from the character of Nehemiah the portrait of a true patriot. Such a one seeks the welfare of his own country without wishing evil to others, while the spurious patriot would sacrifice to the welfare of his own little spot, the happiness of all the world beside. But the prosperity of Zion is the prosperity of the world. "They shall prosper that pray for her." Psalm cxvii. 6.

Nehemiah first goes out privately by night to inspect the state of the city, and then calls together the elders, saying, "Let us build up the wall of Jerusalem," and to animate them, tells them of the encouragement he had received. The Hebrews piously attributed all their blessings and all their afflictions to the Almighty. In the latter case, the hand of the Lord was laid upon them to punish or chastise them: in the former, it was "the good hand of God upon them," to strengthen and encourage them to some good work, as in the case before us.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1.—32. Union of effort essential.—The ministers of God should always be ready to labour and venture for the good of their brethren; and those who have the pre-eminence in rank, ought to take the lead, in setting that good example which gives energy to their instructions, but especially

Ver. 13. Dung-port.—[This was the gate on the eastern side of the city, through which the filth was carried to the brook Kidron and valley of Hin non.]—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Gate of the fountain.—[The gate leading either to the fountain of Siloam, on the east of the city, or to that of Gihon, on the west.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Gate of the valley.—[The gate leading to the valley of Jehoshaphat, through which the brook Kidron flows. It was by this gate he went out; so that he went round the whole of the city, and entered by the same gate.]—Bagster.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. The sheep-gate.—[This gate is supposed to have immediately communicated with the temple, and to have been called the sheep-gate, because the sheep intended for sacrifice passed through it.]—B. Villa/pardus places them as follows: On the north, the fish-gate, the old gate, and the gate of Ephraim; on the east, the sheep-gate, and the water-gate; on the west, the valley-gate, and the fountain-gate; but the dung-gate and the horse-gate he does not mention by those names the son of Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles <sup>a</sup> put not their necks to the work <sup>i</sup> of their Lord.

6 Moreover the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And the next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne <sup>j</sup> of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of <sup>one</sup> of the apothecaries, and they <sup>k</sup> fortified Jerusalem unto the broad <sup>i</sup> wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house. And next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

11 Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the <sup>m</sup> other piece, and the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, he and his daughters.

13 The valley gate <sup>n</sup> repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung <sup>o</sup> gate.

14 But the dung gate repaired Malchijah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-hacerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the bars thereof.

15 But the gate of the fountain repaired <sup>p</sup> Shallun the son of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the Pool of Siloah <sup>q</sup> by the king's garden, and unto the stairs that go down from the city of David.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, the ruler of the half part of Beth-zur, they should teach the people, how to sanctify their secular employments, by beginning, conducting, and completing them, with prayer and thanksgiving, according to the word of God, and to his glory.—The security and prosperity of the church, in every part of the world, is the common cause of all Christians, wherever they reside; and all orders of men should assist in promoting them. No age, sex, or station of life, can free any person from this obligation: every one, in some way or other, may contribute towards it; and where "much is given, much will be required." But, alas, the rich and noble generally count it their privilege to be idle, or useless; or they cannot be, without setting an example, mischievous in

Ver. 7. The throne of the governor, &c.—The Persian governors of the country "on this side the river;" that is, supposing this book written in Jerusalem, the Persian governor of that city, who had a throne, i. e. a state apartment becoming his rank; but Nehemiah, who superseded him, built a house or palace there.

Ver. 8. Apothecaries.—Perhaps spice and perfume merchants, (ver. 32.) It seems these and the goldsmiths were a kind of incorporated companies.—Fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall.—The Hebrew certainly means to "leave," or "leave off;" but the sense given in the text seems very doubtful. The Margin says, "they left," i. e. left off repairing "unto," or "until," they came to "the broad wall." This is supposed to be that part of the wall which Joash broke down, from the gate of Ephraim to the N. W. corner; 2 Chron. xxv. 23, and where Uzziel built up again, stronger than before; xxvi. 9. "It may be that the Babylonians, having broken down the wall on both sides, and being weary of their work, left this part of the wall standing, as being more troublesome to beat down. See Assembly's Ann. If this interpretation (which is countenanced by the LXX.) be correct, this fragment of the wall might not want repairing.

Ver. 9. Ruler of the half part.—Under the Persian king, Jerusalem set us

A M. 3559.
B. C. 445.

h Je. 54, 5.
1 Ch. 23.
1 Ti. 6, 17, 18.

i Ju. 5, 23.

j c. 2, 8.

h or, le t.

i c. 12, 38.

m second measure.

n c. 2, 13.

o c. 2, 13.

p c. 2, 14.

q Jn. 9, 7.

r 2 Ki. 20, 20.
Is. 7, 3.
22, 11.

s 1 Sa. 23, 1, &c.

t 2 Ch. 25, 9.

u or, Zaccad.

v c. 12, 23.

w ver. 19.

x Je. 32, 57, 21.

y Ezr. 2, 43, &c.

z or, which dwelt in Ophel, repaired unto.

a or, the tower.

b 2 Ch. 27, 3.

c c. 3, 1, 3, 12, 37.

d 2 Ki. 11, 16 Je. 31, 40.

unto the place over against the sepulchres of David, and to the <sup>r</sup> pool that was made, and unto the house of the mighty.

17 And after him repaired the Levites, Rahum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabiah, the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of <sup>s</sup> Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of Mizpah, another piece over against the going up to the armoury at the turning <sup>t</sup> of the wall.

20 After him Baruch the son of <sup>u</sup> Zabbai earnestly repaired the other piece, from the turning <sup>v</sup> of the wall unto the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest.

21 After him repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah the son of Koz another piece, from the door of the house of Eliashib even to the end of the house of Eliashib.

22 And after him repaired the priests, the men of the <sup>w</sup> plain.

23 After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub over against their house. After him repaired Azariah the son of Maaseiah the son of Ananiah by his house.

24 After him repaired Binnui the son of Henadad another piece, from the house of Azariah unto the turning <sup>x</sup> of the wall, even unto the corner.

25 Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning <sup>y</sup> of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house, that <sup>was</sup> by the court <sup>z</sup> of the prison. After him Pedaiah the son of Parosh.

26 Moreover the <sup>y</sup> Nethinims <sup>z</sup> dwelt in <sup>a</sup> b Ophel, unto the place over against the water gate <sup>c</sup> toward the east, and the tower that lieth out.

27 After them the Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel.

28 From above the <sup>d</sup> horse gate repaired the priests, every one over against his house.

29 After them repaired Zadok the son of Immer over against his house. After him repaired also Shemaiah the son of Shechaniah, the keeper of the east gate.

30 After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zaphan, another piece. After him repaired Me-proportion to their influence: and no wonder that they disregard the proclamations of the prince, which call them to attend the service of God, when they disdain the yoke of the almighty Lord himself. May the Lord stir up the hearts of all his people, to lay aside their disputes, and to disregard their worldly interests, in comparison of "building the walls of Jerusalem," and defending the cause of evangelical truth, and vital godliness, against the assaults of avowed enemies. May those offences cease, which weaken the common cause, and expose it to reproach: and may the church of Christ thus fortified, as "a city that is at unity in itself," and adorned by the beauties of holiness, attract the attention, the admiration, and to have been divided between two governors: Shallum was the other; see ver. 12.

Ver. 14. Beth-hacerem.—Beth-hacerem was a town of Judah, situated on a mountain, between Jerusalem and Tekoa, according to Jerome; Dr. Pococke conjectures, that the Mountain of the Franks, called also the Mount of Bethulia, from a village of that name near it, west-north-west of Tekoa, is the ancient Beth-hacerem; the position of which seems to agree with the citadel of Herodium, built by Herod, on a moderate sized hill, sixty furlongs from Jerusalem.—Bagster.

Ver. 15. Siloah.—Siloah was situated under the eastern wall of Jerusalem, between that city and the brook Kedron, and is described by Chateaubriand as lying at the foot of Mount Zion. Dr. Richardson represents the pool of Siloam as occurring higher up the valley of Jehoshaphat, towards the north, than the well of Nehemiah, a little beyond the village of Siloa, and nearly opposite the tomb of Jehoshaphat and Zechariah.—Bagster.

Ver. 22. Men of the plain.—Certain of the Levites resided in the plain country about Jerusalem, among whom, probably, were both priests and singers. Ch. xii. 28.

Ver. 24. Another piece, &c.—[That which had been left by Azariah, after shullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber.

31 After him repaired Malchiah the goldsmith's son unto the place of the <sup>a</sup> Nethinims, and of the merchants, over against the gate Miphkad, and to the <sup>b</sup> going up of the corner.

32 And between the going up of the corner unto the sheep <sup>c</sup> gate repaired the goldsmiths and the merchants.

CHAPTER IV.

<sup>a</sup> While the enemies scoff, Nehemiah prayed; and continueth the work. <sup>b</sup> Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch. <sup>c</sup> He armeth the labourers, 19 and giveth military precepts.

BUT it came to pass, that when <sup>a</sup> Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great <sup>b</sup> indignation, and <sup>c</sup> mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these <sup>d</sup> feeble Jews? will they <sup>e</sup> fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even <sup>f</sup> that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

4 <sup>g</sup> Hear, O our God; for we are <sup>h</sup> despised: and turn <sup>i</sup> their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

5 And <sup>j</sup> cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind <sup>k</sup> to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem <sup>l</sup> were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth,

8 And conspired <sup>m</sup> all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to <sup>n</sup> hinder it.

9 Nevertheless we made our <sup>o</sup> prayer unto our God, and set a watch <sup>p</sup> against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

A. M. 3559.

B. C. 445.

e ver. 26.

f or, corner

chamber.

g ver. 1.

a c. 2. 10. 1.

b Ac. 5.

c He 11. 36.

d Zec. 12. 8.

e leave to themselves.

f 2 Ki. 18. 23.

g Ps. 123. 3, 4.

h despite.

i Ps. 79. 12.

j Ps. 3. 34.

k Ps. 69. 37.

l Zec. 12. 23.

m 2 Ti. 4. 14.

n 2 Ch. 28. 36.

p Ps. 110. 3.

l ascended.

m Ps. 83. 3, 5.

n make an error to it.

j Ps. 20. 10.

k Ps. 4. 4, 5.

o Ps. 50. 15.

p Ps. 50. 15.

q Lu. 21. 36.

Ac. 4. 24.

28.

r or, that from all places ye must return to us.

s from the lower parts of the place.

t De. 1. 39. 30.

Mat. 10. 28.

u De. 10. 17.

Ps. 66. 3, 5.

Na. 1. 6, 7.

v 2 Sa. 10. 12.

w Job 5. 12.

Ps. 33. 10.

Lu. 3. 57.

ss.

x 1 Co. 16. 13.

Ph. 1. 28.

y on his loins.

z Ex. 14. 14.

Ds. 1. 30.

Zec. 14. 3.

a 1 Co. 15. 10.

11 And our adversaries said, <sup>a</sup> They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, <sup>b</sup> From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

13 ¶ Therefore set I <sup>c</sup> in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their swords, their spears, and their bows,

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be <sup>d</sup> not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD, which is great <sup>e</sup> and terrible, and fight <sup>f</sup> for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to <sup>g</sup> nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a <sup>h</sup> weapon.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded <sup>i</sup> by his side, and so builded. And he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God <sup>j</sup> shall fight for us.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither <sup>k</sup> I, nor my brethren, nor my the love of beholders; silence the reproaches of calumniators, and dismay the heart, or repel the assaults, of every hostile invader! Amen.—T. Scott.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1.—23. The enemies of Judah conspire together to stop the building; but are defeated by the prudence and vigilance of Nehemiah.—The preceding chapter narrates the various parts which the different tribes and families of the people took in repairing the walls of Jerusalem, which, very properly, was the first object with the new governor, and the people proceeded rapidly, because their heart was in the work. (Ver. 6.) In proportion as they succeeded, their enemies were exasperated, and took every method to oppose and defeat the object. First, they ridiculed them; and ridicule with many is more difficult to withstand than open force. Sanballat said, "What are these feeble Jews doing? Will they fortify themselves?" Or, if we take the marginal reading, "Will they leave off of themselves?"—or, rather, "will they leave (things) to themselves," and go to their devotions?—to offer sacrifice? Or, will they work miracles, as of old time, and complete the work in a day? &c. Tobiah, the Ammonite, unites with him in the banter. "If a fox," (or a jackal,) says he, "go up, he shall even break down their stone wall." But, what say Nehemiah and the Jews? They turn to the Lord in prayer. "Hear, O our God, for we are despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head!"

But their ridicule is turned to rage, so soon as they find the work is seriously advancing; and they meditated, it is evident, some artifice, some dreadful revenge by night, and unawares. The pious Jews, however, again recur to prayer, and set a watch against their enemies, both by day and night; setting he had repaired the wall by his own house. It is probable, that some of the principal people were either obliged, or voluntarily offered, to repair those parts of the wall which were opposite, or adjacent, to their own houses. The names of those who repaired the walls are commemorated, because it was an undertaking of piety, virtue, and courage, to restore the holy city.—Bagster.

Ver. 32. Goldsmiths.—The word tesaphim, may denote smiths, or refiners, or persons that worked in metals of any kind; but it is generally understood of those who worked in gold. From the remotest period of the history of the Jews, they had artists in all the elegant and ornamental trades; and it appears that goldsmiths, apothecaries, and merchants, were formed into companies in the time of Nehemiah.—Bagster.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 6. Unto the half thereof.—[i. e. the whole circuit of the wall was completed unto half the intended height.]—Bagster.—A mind to work.—What they did, they did with all their heart.

Ver. 8. To fight against.—That is, openly to oppose; not in battle array; but to take them by surprise.—To hinder it.—Parkhurst thinks they contemplated playing them some trick in the night.

Ver. 12. Ten times.—That is, many times.—From all places, &c.—See Margin, i. e. wherever ye hide yourselves, ye must, ye shall surrender.

Ver. 16. Other half held spears.—[This is no unusual thing in Palestine, even at the present day; people sowing their seed are often attended by armed men, to prevent the Arabs from robbing them of it.—Haberseon—From the Teutonic hals, the neck, and bergen, to cover, defend, may be considered as signifying a breast-plate, though the Franco-Gallic haubergeon signifies a coat of mail: the original, shiryon, denotes a corslet.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. With one of his hands wrought.—[That is, he had his arms at hand; and was as fully prepared to fight as to work. The builders could not possibly have made any progress, if they had literally held a weapon in one of their hands; but the expression is evidently figurative, implying that every man was as much a soldier as a builder.]—Bagster.

servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, <sup>b</sup> saving that every one put them off for washing.

CHAPTER V.

<sup>1</sup> The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage. <sup>6</sup> Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers, and causeth them to make a covenant of restitution. <sup>14</sup> He forbeareth his own allowance, and keepeth hospitality.

AND there was a great <sup>a</sup> cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews.

<sup>2</sup> For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

<sup>3</sup> Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged <sup>b</sup> our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.

<sup>4</sup> There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards.

<sup>5</sup> Yet now our flesh <sup>c</sup> is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters <sup>d</sup> are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

<sup>6</sup> ¶ And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

<sup>7</sup> Then <sup>e</sup> I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact <sup>f</sup> usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them.

<sup>8</sup> And I said unto them, We after our ability have redeemed <sup>g</sup> our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

<sup>9</sup> Also I said, It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear <sup>h</sup> of our God because of the reproach <sup>i</sup> of the heathen our enemies?

<sup>10</sup> I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

<sup>11</sup> Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

<sup>12</sup> Then said they, We will restore them, and an example to Christians, in similar circumstances, to "watch and pray" against their more mighty and inveterate enemies. And not only so, but to put on the whole armour of God, that, while jervising in their Christian course, they may be prepared for every attack by which they may be assailed. As Christians, we must not only watch and pray, but fight also, if we expect to bear the palm hereafter. (Rev. vii. 9.)

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—19. The people complain of usury and oppression from their richer brethren. Nehemiah obliges them to make compensation, and sets a liberal example.—One would think it impossible that any of the children of Israel, seeing the distress of their brethren, should add to it by oppression; but such is human nature, not only among Jews, but Christians. The situation of the poor was such, that they had difficulty to provide bread for themselves and children. In a time of dearth, (described by Haggai, chap. i. 9, &c.) they were obliged to mortgage their houses and lands, not only to get food, but to pay the king's tribute. And though their children were as dear to them as were the children of the rich, they had been obliged to sell some of them into bondage, and instead of being able to redeem them, they had the prospect before them of being obliged to sell their other children, and perhaps themselves.

Ver. 23. None of us put off our clothes, saying, &c.—That is, none of us put them off for sleeping, only "a man sent them to the water" to be washed, when dirty.

CHAP. V. Ver. 11. The hundredth part, &c.—[This was probably the rate of interest which they obliged their poor debtors to pay each month, which would amount to about twelve per cent. Volney states that this is the lowest rate of interest in Syria: the usual rate is twenty; and it is sometimes as high as thirty per cent.—Bagster.]

Ver. 13. I shook my lap.—This was a significant sign, and such as was common with the ancients. "When the Roman ambassadors entered the Senate of Carthage, they had their toga gathered up in their bosom. They said, We carry here peace and war: you may have which you will. The Senate an-

A. M. 3559.
B. C. 443.

b or, every one went with his weapon for water.
Jo. 5. 11.

c Is. 57.

d Le. 25. 35.
De. 15. 7.

e Is. 58. 7.

f Ex. 21. 7.

g my heart consulted in me.
Ps. 4. 4.

h Ex. 22. 25.
Ps. 15. 1, 5.
Eze. 22. 12.

i Le. 25. 43.

h ver. 15.

i 2Sa. 12. 14.
Ro. 2. 24.
1 Pe. 2. 12.

j 2Ki. 23. 2, 3.
Eze. 10. 5.
Je. 34. 9, 10.

k Mat. 10. 14.
Ac. 13. 51.
18. 6.

l empty, or, void.

m De. 27. 15, &c.

n 2 Ki. 23. 3.

o c. 13. 6.

p 1Co. 9. 4, 15.

q Pr. 16. 6.
2Co. 11. 9.
12. 13.

r ver. 9.

s ver. 14, 15.

t Ps. 57. 21, 26.

u Ps. 40. 17.
c. 13. 22.

v Mat. 25. 40.
Ma. 9. 41.

a c. 2. 10, 19.
4. 1, 7.

b or, Gashmu, ver. 6.

c Pr. 26. 24, 25.

will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

<sup>13</sup> Also I shook <sup>k</sup> my lap, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and emptied. And <sup>m</sup> all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the Lord. And <sup>n</sup> the people did according to this promise.

<sup>14</sup> ¶ Moreover from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth <sup>o</sup> year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not <sup>p</sup> eaten the bread of the governor.

<sup>15</sup> But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but <sup>q</sup> so did not I, because of the fear <sup>r</sup> of God.

<sup>16</sup> Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall, neither bought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

<sup>17</sup> Moreover there were at my table a hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

<sup>18</sup> Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread <sup>s</sup> of the governor, because <sup>t</sup> the bondage was heavy upon this people.

<sup>19</sup> Think <sup>u</sup> upon me, my God, for good, according <sup>v</sup> to all that I have done for this people.

CHAPTER VI.

<sup>1</sup> Sanballat practiseth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah. <sup>15</sup> The work is finished to the terror of the enemies. <sup>17</sup> Secret intelligence passed between the enemies and the nobles of Judah.

NOW it came to pass, when <sup>a</sup> Sanballat, and Tobiah, and <sup>b</sup> Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates;)

<sup>2</sup> That Sanballat and Geshem <sup>c</sup> sent unto me,

The good Nehemiah, on hearing this, was very angry with "the nobles and the rulers," who were, as it appears, the chief offenders, and had been guilty of exacting usury, contrary to the law; and reproved them with so much spirit and earnestness, that he made them utterly ashamed; then bound them by oath to restore what they had unlawfully taken, and by a most expressive symbolic action, (the shaking out his lap,) imprecated poverty and ruin on all who were false to their engagements.

Farther to shame them, he reminds them, (of what they must have known,) that for the twelve years which he had been over them, he had maintained his family, and himself in the rank of governor, without burdening them or the state. Former governors, it seems, had not only received the king's allowance, but had been burdensome to the people, and even suffered their servants to oppress them; "but so did not I," (says he,) because of the fear of God! What an important and impressive maxim!

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—19. Sanballat and his confederates try, by various artifices, to injure and intimidate Nehemiah and his coadjutors.—First, they invite him to a private conference at one of the villages without the city: but he is aware that they meant to assassinate him, and, therefore, without naming sworn, Give us which you please. They then shook their toga, and said, We bring you war."

Ver. 14. The bread of the governor.—That is, he neither received any salary, nor had his table furnished by the Jews; on the contrary, he fed 150 Jews at his own table, besides strangers.

Ver. 18. Daily was one ox, &c.—[This was food sufficient for more than 200 men. Pococke says, that the Bey of Tunis had daily twelve sheep, with fish and fowls, soups, oranges, eggs, onions, boiled rice, &c. &c. His nobles dined with him; after they had done, the servants sat down; and when they had finished, the poor took what was left. Here the Bey's twelve sheep are equal to Nehemiah's one ox and six choice sheep; and probably the mode of living between the two was nearly alike. It is still the practice in the East to cal-saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of <sup>d</sup> Ono. But they <sup>e</sup> thought to do me mischief.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and <sup>f</sup> I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an open letter in his hand;

6 Wherein was written, It is <sup>g</sup> reported among the heathen, and <sup>h</sup> Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now, therefore, O <sup>i</sup> God, strengthen my hands.

10 ¶ Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night <sup>j</sup> will they come to slay thee.

11 And I said, Should <sup>k</sup> such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

13 Therefore <sup>l</sup> was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and <sup>m</sup> sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

his well-founded suspicions, declines to meet them four several times. "I am doing a great work, (says he,) and cannot come down." An answer this, that may suit a Christian, and especially a Christian minister, in many circumstances. If provoked to unprofitable controversy,—if courted by unsuitable companions,—if solicited to unhallowed pleasures,—if tempted to party zeal, either in politics or religion,—this is a most proper answer, "I am doing a great work, and cannot stoop to any thing beneath my Christian character."

Their next manœuvre was to raise a report that Nehemiah and the Jews intended to rebel, and were therefore assiduous to build the wall, that they might protect themselves against the king's army; and that this might not be kept secret, Sanballat sends his servant with an open letter. To this insinuation, however, the governor returns a flat denial: "There are no such things as thou sayest; but thou feignest them out of thine own heart." In the next instance, a false prophet is hired to persuade Nehemiah to shut himself up in the temple, as if he, being guilty, had fled for asylum to the altar. At this however the good man spurns immediately,—"Shall such a man as I flee? Shall I desert my brethren? Shall I desert the cause of my country and my God?—I will not go in." Lastly, a treasonable conspiracy was raised against him, and certain Jews, who had formed alliances with the Samaritans, calculate the expenses of the table, not by the money paid, but by the provisions consumed by the guests.—Bosster.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 5. With an open letter.—This was an insult. The Persians roll up their letters, fasten them with gum, and seal them with ink. To persons of distinction, they are generally inclosed in a purse of silk.—Harmer.

Ver. 10. Who was shut up.—Some think he was a recluse, that pretended to peculiar sanctity.

Ver. 14. Prophetess Noadiah.—Who she was, is unknown, and some think the feminine termination a mistake. Most of the versions read "prophet."

Ver. 15. The twenty-fifth of Elul.—Answering to part of our August and September. [There seems no difficulty in supposing that several thousand workmen, each of whom was working as for God, should be able to complete

A. M. 3559.
B. C. 445.
d 1 Ch. 3. 12.
e. 11. 35.

e Ps. 37. 12, 32.

f Pr. 14. 15.

g Je. 20. 10.

h or, *Ge-
hem.*
ver. 1.

i 1 Sa. 30. 6.
Ps. 71. 1.

j Job 24. 16.

k Ps. 11. 1.
112. 6, 8.
Lut. 13. 31
—25.
Ac. 20. 24.
21. 13.

l Est. 13. 17,
&c.

m Ja. 4. 17.

n e. 13. 29.
Ps. 35. 11,
12.

o Ps. 126. 2.
Ac. 5. 35,
38.

p multiplied their letters passing to Tobiah.

q or, matters.

a e. 6. 1.

b Ac. 6. 3, 5.

c Ex. 18. 21.

d broad in spaces.

e Est. 7. 27.

14 My God, think <sup>a</sup> thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

15 ¶ So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days.

16 And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for <sup>b</sup> they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah <sup>c</sup> sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah.

19 Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my <sup>d</sup> words to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Nehemiah committed the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Bananah. 5 A register of the genealogy of them which came at the first out of Babylon, 8 of the people, 39 of the priests, 43 of the Levites, 46 of the Nethinims, 57 of Solomon's servants, 63 and of the priests which could not find their pedigree. 66 The whole number of them, with their substance. 70 Their oblations.

NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the <sup>a</sup> doors, and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed,

2 That I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem: for <sup>b</sup> he was a faithful man, and feared <sup>c</sup> God above many.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was <sup>d</sup> large and great; but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded.

5 ¶ And my God put <sup>e</sup> into my heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by were bribed into the conspiracy, and threatening letters were sent to terrify him. Still, however, he adheres to his work, and will not be diverted from it. In fifty-two days the wall is completed, and the heathen, at length convinced that the work was of God, are utterly confounded and abashed. Thus was "his righteousness brought forth as the light, and his judgment as the noon-day." (Psalm xxxvii. 6.)

Nehemiah having now finished his work, and being about to return to Persia, he leaves his brother Hanani, together with Hananiah, ruler of the palace, (whom he describes as a "man that feared God above many.") in charge of the city, which was yet but thinly inhabited, and to finish the work which he had begun.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—73. The work completed by Nehemiah.—The active servants of God, and of his church, will never want employment; for the completion of one design will make way for the commencement of another.—The fear of God powerfully possessing the heart, produces proportionable fidelity and conscientiousness in a man's whole character and conduct: and it is happy for the community when men of this character have the charge of public affairs.—"Except the Lord keep the city," the walls are built, and "the watchmen wake in vain;" yet in this and all other concerns, God is to be trusted in the use of prudent and proper means, and not to be this wall in fifty-two days. Several parts of the old wall were doubtless entire; in many places the foundations still remained; and the materials of the old wall were still at hand. This work was little when compared with what Titus did at Jerusalem, who built a wall round it of 5000 paces in three days, besides thirteen towers of ten stadia in circuit: and Q. Curtius and Arrian inform us, that Alexander the Great built the walls of Alexandria, on the Tanais, nearly eight miles in compass, in the space of between twenty and thirty days.—Bosster.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 3. Until the sun be hot.—[That is, the gates were not to be opened till sun-rise, and to be shut at sun-set; which is still the custom in many cities of the East. If a traveller arrives after sun-set, he finds the gates shut, and on no consideration will they open them till morning.]—Bosster.

genealogy. And I found a register <sup>f</sup> of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

6 These <sup>a</sup> are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, whom <sup>b</sup> Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with: Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, <sup>i</sup> Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel was this;

8 The children of Parosh, two thousand a hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of Arah, six hundred fifty and two.

11 The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen.

12 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

13 The children of Zattu, eight hundred forty and five.

14 The children of Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

15 The children of * Binnui, six hundred forty and eight.

16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty and eight.

17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty and two.

18 The children of Adonikam, six hundred threescore and seven.

19 The children of Bigvai, two thousand threescore and seven.

20 The children of Adin, six hundred fifty and five.

21 The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

22 The children of Hashum, three hundred twenty and eight.

23 The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and four.

24 The children of <sup>i</sup> Hariph, a hundred and twelve.

25 The children of <sup>m</sup> Gibeon, ninety and five.

26 The men of Beth-lehem and Netophah, a hundred fourscore and eight.

27 The men of Anathoth, a hundred twenty and eight.

28 The men of <sup>a</sup> Beth-azmaveth, forty and two.

29 The men of * Kirjath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred forty and three.

30 The men of Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

31 The men of Michmas, a hundred and twenty and two.

32 The men of Beth-el and Ai, a hundred twenty and three.

tempted by the neglect of them.—Magistrates and ministers have more extensive charges than others: but every man ought to watch over his own heart, and his own house, that sin, the worst enemy, may be kept at a distance as much as possible.—Provision is made in the gospel, and in the city of our God, for immensely greater numbers than have yet been enrolled citizens: we should therefore be devising means for replenishing it with inhabitants, as well as for building its walls.—“All holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works are from God;” to him belongs the praise: when good thoughts are suggested; we should be careful not to “quench the Spirit,” by rejecting them; and we ought continually to pray

Ver. 33. Men of the other Nebo.—The word “other” is wanted in many MSS. Compare Ezra ii. 29

550

A. M. 3359.
P. C. 445.
f <sup>1</sup> Ch. 9.1,
&c.

A. M. 3463.
B. C. 536.

g Ezr. 2.1.

h 2 Ki. 24.14
..16.

i Hag. 1.1.

J or, Seraiah
Ezr. 2.2.

k or, Bani.

l or, Jora.

m or, Gib-bar.

n or, Azma-veth.

o or, Kir-jatharim

p ver. 12.

q <sup>1</sup> Ch. 24.7,
&c.

r <sup>1</sup> Ch. 9.12.

s or, Hada-
riah.
Ezr. 2.40.
or, Juda.
Ezr. 3.9.

t or, Saha.

u or, Sham-
lai.

v or, Nephusim.

w or, Bazluth.

x or, Pe-ruda.

y or, Ami.

33 The men of the other Nebo, fifty and two.

34 The children of the other <sup>p</sup> Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

35 The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty.

36 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

37 The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and one.

38 The children of Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.

39 † The priests: the children of <sup>q</sup> Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

40 The children of Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

41 The children of <sup>r</sup> Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

42 The children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

43 †† The Levites: the children of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of * Hodevah, seventy and four.

44 The singers: the children of Asaph, a hundred forty and eight.

45 The porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, a hundred thirty and eight.

46 †† The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Hashupha, the children of Tabbaoth,

47 The children of Keros, the children of * Sia, the children of Padon, 48 The children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of * Shalmi, 49 The children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, 50 The children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, 51 The children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of Phaseah, 52 The children of Besai, the children of Meunim, the children of * Nephishesim,

53 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

54 The children of * Bazlith, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, 55 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of Tamah, 56 The children of Nezhiah, the children of Hatipha.

57 †† The children of Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of * Perida,

58 The children of Jaala, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 59 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of * Amon.

60 All the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

that our God would put more and more of them into our hearts, and enable us to bring them to good effect; and that he would do the same for increasing numbers. Then we might hope that many would concur in designs, as yet scarcely thought of, for propagating the gospel and promoting the salvation of souls.—The Lord delights to honour those who willingly face danger, and endure hardship for his sake: and he knows the names of all his people, and will produce the register at last. But we be to those who turn back from him, loving this present world: and happy they who willingly come to dedicate themselves, and consecrate their substance to his service and glory!—Scott.

Ver. 51. Phaseah.—[This variation only exists in the translation; the original being uniformly Pashur.]—Bagster.

61 And these <sup>a</sup> were they which went up also from Tel-melah, Tel-haresha, Cherub, <sup>a</sup> Ad-don, and Immer: but they could not show their father's house, nor their <sup>b</sup> seed, whether they were of Israel.

62 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred forty and two.

63 ¶ And of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of <sup>c</sup> Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.

64 These sought <sup>d</sup> their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not <sup>e</sup> found: therefore were they, as <sup>f</sup> polluted, put from the priesthood.

65 And the <sup>g</sup> Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat <sup>h</sup> of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with <sup>i</sup> Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 67 Beside their man-servants <sup>j</sup> and their maid-servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and they had two hundred forty and five singing men and singing women.

68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six: their mules, two hundred forty and five:

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

70 ¶ And <sup>k</sup> some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. The <sup>l</sup> Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basins, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pounds of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and <sup>m</sup> when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The religious manner of reading and hearing the law. 9 They comfort the people. 13 The forwardness of them to hear and be instructed. 16 They keep the feast of tabernacles.

AND <sup>a</sup> all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the <sup>b</sup> water-gate; and they spake unto Ezra the <sup>c</sup> scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation <sup>d</sup> both of men and women, and all <sup>e</sup> that could hear with understanding, upon <sup>f</sup> the first day of the seventh month.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate from the <sup>g</sup> morning until mid-day, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a <sup>h</sup> pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra opened <sup>i</sup> the book in the <sup>j</sup> sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people stood <sup>k</sup> up:

6 And Ezra blessed <sup>l</sup> the LORD, the great God. And all the people answered, <sup>m</sup> Amen, Amen, with <sup>n</sup> lifting up their hands: and they <sup>o</sup> bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, <sup>p</sup> caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand <sup>q</sup> the reading.

A. M. 3468.
B. C. 536.
z Exr. 2.59.
a or, Ad-dan.
b or, pedagogue.
c 2Sa. 17.27.
19.31.39.
1 Ki. 2.7.
d Mat. 22.11.
13.
e Mat. 25.11, 12.
f Le. 4.3.
c. 13.29.
g or, governor.
c. 8.9.
h Le. 7.19.
20.
i Ex. 28.30.
j Le. 14.1, 2.
k part.
l c. 8.9.
m Exr. 3.1.
A. M. 3569.
B. C. 445.
a Exr. 3.1.
&c.
b c. 3.36.
c Exr. 7.6.
Is. 34.16.
d Au. 15.21.
e understood in hearing.
f Le. 23.34.
g light.
h tower.
i Lu. 4.16.
&c.
j eyes.
k Ju. 3.20.
1 Ki. 8.14.
l 2 Ch. 6.4.
m 1 Co. 14.16.
n Ps. 63.4.
Lu. 3.41.
1 Ti. 2.8.
o Ex. 12.27.
2 Ch. 30.18.
p De. 33.10.
2 Ch. 17.7.
9; 30.32.
Mal. 2.7.
q Lu. 24.27.
45.
Ac. 8.30.
&c.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1.—18. Ezra and his brethren read and interpret the law; after which is kept the feast of tabernacles.—In this chapter we have, as the late ingenious R. Robinson observes, “a short but beautiful description of the manner of Ezra’s first preaching. Upwards of 50,000 people assembled in a street or large square near the water-gate, and it was early in the morning of a sabbath day. A pulpit of wood, in the fashion of a small tower, was placed there on purpose for the preacher, and this turret was supported by a scaffold, or temporary gallery, where, in a wang on the right hand of the pulpit, sat six of the principal preachers, and in another on the left, seven. Thirteen other principal teachers, and many Levites, were present also on scaffolds erected for the purpose, alternately to officiate. When Ezra ascended the pulpit, he produced and opened the book of the law, and the whole congregation instantly rose up from their seats and stood. Then Ver. 66. The whole congregation.—“In this genealogy it is remarkable, that if we add to the 29,818 in Ezra, the 1765 reckoned in Nehemiah, and to the 31,099 enumerated in Nehemiah, 494, the overplus in Ezra not noticed by Nehemiah, the accounts will correspond: as thus,

Number in Ezra . . .	29,818	Number in Nehemiah . . .	31,099
Add from Nehemiah . . .	1,765	Surplus in Ezra . . .	494
	31,583		31,583

Then 10,777 supposed to be of the other tribes, will make the full number of 42,360.”—Dr. Gray.

Ver. 67. Singing men and women.—Here are forty-five more than in the other list, Ezra ii. 65; for which we cannot account.

Ver. 69. [Here Jerome adds, in the Vulgate, “Thus far do the words extend which were written in the register; what follows belongs to the history of Nehemiah.” This addition is not found in the Hebrew or any ancient version: it is also wanting in the Paris and Complutensian Polyglots; but is found in the Editio Prima of the Vulgate. What follows, however, seems to relate to a distinct oblation from that recorded in Ezra; and was probably made after the people were registered by Nehemiah, who was the Tirshatha, or governor, at this time, as Zerubbabel had been at the first return of the Jews from captivity.]—Bagster.

he offered up prayer and praise to God, the people bowing their heads, and worshipping the Lord with their faces to the ground, and at the close of the prayer, with uplifted hands, they solemnly pronounced, Amen, Amen. Then, all standing, Ezra, assisted at times by the Levites, read the law distinctly; gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading. The sermons delivered so affected the hearers, that they wept excessively, and about noon the sorrow became so exuberant and immeasurable, that it was thought necessary by the governor, the preacher, and the Levites, to restrain it. They therefore reminded the congregation, that a just grief might run into excess—that there was an incongruity between a festival and lamentation—and that on this festival there were singular causes of extraordinary joy; they were delivered from captivity, the law was restored, and they, the very poorest of them, had been made by the pains of the preachers to under-

Ver. 70. A thousand drams.—Persian Darics, (worth $5 59 each.) This was a very generous donation for a governor who received no salary, ch. v. 14, 15. Though this is not specified by Ezra, his total is much larger, and probably included sums given before the arrival of Nehemiah.

Ver. 73. Dwelt in their cities.—[It was for the purpose of ascertaining the different families, and consequently the different cities, villages, &c. which belonged to them, according to the ancient division of the land, that the public registers were examined.]—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. The water-gate.—This was on the east side of the city, and led from the temple down to the brook Kidron.

Ver. 2. From the morning.—i. e. from sun-rise, which at this time, (the middle of September, see our Calendar,) was a little before six o’clock.

Ver. 4. A pulpit.—Robinson has well described this, (see exposition,) but he seems to have made a mistake in the number of persons, since it appears that the young children were not present, only “those that could understand.”

Ver. 8. They read, &c.—Here is a just delineation of the preacher’s duty; to read the word of God distinctly, and to give the sense. But they had a more arduous task than before on preachers generally. During their captivity the Jews had in great measure lost their native language, and acquired the Chaldee dialect; the preachers, or their assistants, were obliged to translate as they read, then having a popular translation for their use, as we happily enjoy. This, however, was the origin of the Chaldee Targum.

¶ And Nehemiah, which is <sup>a</sup> the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This <sup>a</sup> day is holy unto the Lord your God; <sup>a</sup> mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard <sup>a</sup> the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat <sup>a</sup> the fat, and drink the sweet, and send <sup>a</sup> portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye sorry; for the joy <sup>a</sup> of the Lord is your strength.

11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy: neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great <sup>a</sup> mirth, because <sup>a</sup> they had understood <sup>a</sup> the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even <sup>a</sup> to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded <sup>a</sup> by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths <sup>a</sup> in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof <sup>a</sup> of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water-gate, and <sup>a</sup> in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great <sup>a</sup> gladness.

18 Also <sup>a</sup> day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was <sup>a</sup> a solemn assembly, according unto the <sup>a</sup> manner.

CHAPTER IX.

1 A solemn fast, and repentance of the people. 4 The Levites make a religious confession of God's goodness, and their wickedness.

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of this month the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, and earth <sup>a</sup> upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel separated themselves stand it. 'Go your way,' said they, 'eat the fat—drink the sweet—send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared.' Be not discouraged—religious joy is a people's strength. The wise and benevolent sentiments of these noble souls were imbibed by the whole congregation, and 50,000 troubled hearts were calmed in an instant. Home they returned to eat, to drink, to send portions, and to make mirth; they had understood the words that were declared unto him. Plato was alive at this time, teaching dull philosophy to cold academics; but what was he, and what was Xenophon, or Demosthenes, or any of the pagan orators, in comparison with these men? <sup>a</sup>

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—38. Israel observe a solemn fast, and renew their covenant with the Lord.—The Rev. Mr. Peters, a learned and judicious writer, has observed—This "chapter contains a solemn confession pronounced by the Levites for the people, on a day of fasting and humiliation, of God's great goodness to them on the one hand, and their own backslidings

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. Of this month.—Namely, Tisri, the first month of the civil year, and the 7th of the ecclesiastical. The 1st day was the feast of trumpets. The feast of tabernacles began on the 14th, and ended on the 22d. On

A. M. 3559.
B. C. 445.

r or, go-

s Le 23.24.

Nu 29.1.

t De 16.14.

Ec 3.4.

Is 61.3.

u 2Ch 34.19.

21.

Ro 7.9.

v Ca 5.1.

w Ex 9.19.

22.

Re 11.10.

x Ps 149.2.

Is 12.2,3.

35.1,4.

Joel 2.23.

Ph 3.3.

y Ps 126.1,3.

13.

a ver. 7.8.

b or, that they might instruct in.

c by the

hand of.

d Le 23.34.

De 16.13,

&c.

e De 22.8.

f 2 Ki 14.13.

c. 12.37,39.

g 2Ch 30.21.

h De 31.10.

i restraint.

j Nu 29.35.

a 1 Sa 4.12.

—

b Ex 9.2.

10.11.

c strange children.

Ps 144.11.

d c. 7.8.

e or, scarf-

fold.

f Ps 3.4.

g Ps 135.1,2.

h 1Ch 29.13.

i Ps 16.2.

106.2.

j Ps 96.10.

Is 51.16.

k c. 1.1.

Ex 20.11.

l De 10.14.

m Ps 36.6.

n Re 5.11.

13.

o Ge 12.1.

p De 17.5.

q Ex 15.6,18.

r Ps 105.8.

s Jos 23.14.

t Ex 3.7,8.

u Ex 14.10.

v Ex 7.14.

w Ex 18.11.

x Ex 13.12.

14.

Je 32.20.

y Ex 14.13.

z Ex 13.21.

22.

a Ex 20,&c.

b Isaac of truth.

<sup>b</sup> from all <sup>c</sup> strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and read <sup>d</sup> in the book of the law of the Lord their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the Lord their God.

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the <sup>e</sup> stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shelubniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried <sup>f</sup> with a loud voice unto the Lord their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, <sup>g</sup> Stand up and bless the Lord your God for ever and ever: and blessed <sup>h</sup> be thy glorious name, which is exalted above <sup>i</sup> all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; thou hast made <sup>k</sup> heaven, the heaven of <sup>i</sup> heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou <sup>m</sup> preservest them all; and the host <sup>n</sup> of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the Lord the God, who <sup>o</sup> didst choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name <sup>p</sup> of Abraham;

8 And foundest his heart faithful <sup>a</sup> before thee, and madest a covenant <sup>a</sup> with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, and hast performed <sup>a</sup> thy words; for thou art righteous:

9 And didst see <sup>a</sup> the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by <sup>a</sup> the Red sea;

10 And showedst signs <sup>a</sup> and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they dealt proudly <sup>a</sup> against them. So didst thou get thee <sup>a</sup> a name, as it is this day.

11 And <sup>a</sup> thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by <sup>a</sup> a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

13 Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them <sup>a</sup> right judgments, and <sup>b</sup> true laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

and perverseness on the other. It is, indeed, a beautiful epitome of the history of that people, raised and animated by a spirit of devotion, which appears in all that moving eloquence which was suited to the great occasion; and at the same time, with all that chasteness and correctness of thought and expression, which so eminently distinguishes the sacred writings of this sort from the wild raptures of enthusiasm. . . . In recapitulating the miracles of divine goodness that were vouchsafed to their fathers in the wilderness, such as the pillar of a cloud by day and of fire by night, to conduct them; the manna, and the water from the rock; the sacred writer adds this as none of the least memorable of God's mercies to them there: Thou gavest also thy good Spirit to instruct them."

This instruction was conveyed, partly through the ministry of the prophets, and partly by the humbler instructions of the priests and Levites, whose duty it was to teach and to explain the divine law; but that the instructions of God's good Spirit the 23d they separated from their heathen wives; and on the 24th kept a solemn fast, as is here stated.

Ver. 6. The host of heaven.—That is, the angelic host, Ge. xxxii. 2. Lu. ii. 13 15 And gavest them bread <sup>c</sup> from heaven for their hunger, and broughtest forth water <sup>d</sup> for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should go in to possess the land which thou hadst <sup>e</sup> sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened <sup>f</sup> their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And refused to obey, neither <sup>g</sup> were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed <sup>h</sup> a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art a God <sup>i</sup> ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not.

18 Yea, when <sup>j</sup> they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou in thy manifold mercies <sup>k</sup> forsookest them not in the wilderness: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy good <sup>l</sup> spirit to instruct them, and withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty <sup>m</sup> years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing; their <sup>n</sup> clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into corners: so they possessed the land of <sup>o</sup> Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them into the land, concerning which thou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children <sup>p</sup> went in and possessed the land, and <sup>q</sup> thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them <sup>r</sup> as they would.

25 And they took strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, <sup>s</sup> wells digged, vineyards, and olive-yards, and <sup>t</sup> fruit trees in abundance: so they did eat, and were filled, and became <sup>u</sup> fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless they were <sup>v</sup> disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind <sup>w</sup> their backs, and slew <sup>x</sup> thy prophets which testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore <sup>y</sup> thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies thou gavest them saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they <sup>z</sup> did evil again before thee: therefore ledest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies;

29 And testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which if a man do, he shall live in them;) and <sup>a</sup> withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 Yet many years didst thou <sup>b</sup> forbear them, and testifiedst <sup>c</sup> against them by thy spirit <sup>d</sup> in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the <sup>e</sup> trouble seem little before thee, that hath <sup>f</sup> come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time <sup>g</sup> of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit thou art just <sup>h</sup> in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we <sup>i</sup> have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened <sup>j</sup> unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify <sup>k</sup> against them.

35 For <sup>l</sup> they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat <sup>m</sup> land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are servants <sup>n</sup> this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers to eat the fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the <sup>o</sup> kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this we make <sup>p</sup> a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, <sup>q</sup> seal unto it.

CHAPTER X.

1 The names of them that sealed the covenant. 29 The points of the covenant.

NOW <sup>a</sup> those that sealed were, Nehemiah, the <sup>b</sup> Tirshatha, the son of <sup>c</sup> Hachaliah, and Zidkijah, were not merely external, and, by the medium of public teachers, we may fairly infer from the Psalmist David: "Teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God: thy Spirit is good." (Ps. cxliii. 10.) Neither the teaching of priests or prophets, or even apostles, will have any saving effect on us, unless God's good Spirit instruct the heart.

Ver. 17. In their rebellion appointed a captain.—The omission of a Hebrew letter has greatly disturbed the sense of this text. If, instead of Benarim, "in their rebellion," we read Demitiram, "in Egypt," the text will run thus; "they appointed a captain to return to their bondage in Egypt." So seven MSS. one edition, and the LXX. See Num. xiv. 4.

Ver. 25. So they did eat, and were filled, and became fat.—[They became effeminate, fell under the power of luxury; got totally corrupted in their man-

The acknowledgment of God's goodness is necessarily connected with a sense of our own unworthiness; and when we are most sensible of the former, we shall most deeply lament the latter. When we justify God we shall condemn ourselves: "Thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly."

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—39. The people enter into a solemn en- ters, sinned against all the mercies of God, and then were destroyed by his judgments.]—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Withdrew the shoulder.—See margin. An allusion, perhaps, to the "bullock unaccustomed to the yoke." Jer. xxxi. 18.

Ver. 35. In their kingdom.—The LXX., Syriac, and Arabic, with two of Kennicott's MSS. read, "thy kingdom."

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Those that sealed.—These were of four classes. 1. Nehe-

2 <sup>a</sup> Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah
3 Pashur, Amariah, Malchijah,
4 Hattush, Shebaniah, Malluch,
5 Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah,
6 Daniel, Ginnethon, Baruch,
7 Meshullam, Abijah, Mijamin,
8 Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah: these were the priests.

9 And the Levites: both Jeshua the son of Azaniah, Binnui of the sons of Henadad, Kadmiel;

10 And their brethren, Shebaniah, Hodijah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, 11 Micha, Rehob, Hashabiah, 12 Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah,

13 Hodijah, Bani, Beninu.

14 The chief of the people; <sup>a</sup> Parosh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zattu, Bani, 15 Bunni, Azgad, Bebai,

16 Adonijah, Bigvai, Adin,

17 Ater, Hizkijah, Azzur,

18 Hodijah, Hashum, Bezai,

19 Hariph, Anathoth, Nebai,

20 Magpiash, Meshullam, Hezir,

21 Meshezabeel, Zadok, Jaddua,

22 Pelatiah, Hanan, Ananiah,

23 Hoshea, Hananiah, Hashub,

24 Hallohesh, Pileah, Shobek,

25 Rehum, Hashabnah, Maaseiah,

26 And Ahijah, Hanan, Anan,

27 Malluch, Harim, Baanah.

28 ¶ And <sup>r</sup> the rest of the people, the priests, the Levites, the porters, the singers, the Nethinims, and all they that had separated <sup>s</sup> themselves from the people of the lands unto the law <sup>h</sup> of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, <sup>t</sup> every one having knowledge, and having understanding;

29 They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and entered into a curse, and into an oath, to walk <sup>k</sup> in God's law, which was given <sup>i</sup> by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and do all the commandments of the Lord our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes;

30 And that we would not give our daughters <sup>m</sup> unto the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons:

31 And if the people of the land bring ware or any victuals on the <sup>a</sup> sabbath day to sell, that we would not buy it of them on the sabbath, or on the holy day: and that we would leave the <sup>e</sup> seventh year, and the exaction <sup>p</sup> of every <sup>a</sup> debt.

agement to make no alliances with the heathen—to observe the sabbath—and to provide for the public worship.—Passing over the names that signed and sealed this covenant, we remark on the objects of reform here agreed to, which were, 1. By no means to form any matrimonial alliances with the people of the land, who were either avowed heathens, or (with few exceptions) such in heart. 2. They pledge themselves to observe the holy law of the sabbath; and it is, indeed, difficult to conceive on what ground they can pretend to be either Jews or Christians, who do not sacredly regard either the Jewish or the Christian sabbath. To abstain both from labour and from trade, and to attend on public worship on that day, is a law as old as the Creation, and has the solemn sanction of the three great dispensations of God—the Patriarchal, Mosaic, and Christian: but the Jewish law enjoined also the sabbatic year, which is called the sabbath of the land, and these Jews promise also to pay a sacred regard to that law. (See Exod. xxiii. 10, 11. Levit. xxv. 4.) 3. They also pledge themselves miah, the Tirshatha, or governor. 2. The priests. 3. The Levites. 4. The chiefs, or princes of the people.

Ver. 32. Third part of a shekel.—The law required half a shekel. Exod. xxx. 13. This abatement was made, probably, in consideration of the poverty of the common people; but it is thought that they returned afterwards to the original sum.

Ver. 34. The wood-offering.—It was the business of the Nethinims to procure the wood for the fires of the temple; but it is probable, few of them returned to their former masters after the captivity; and therefore they found it necessary to cast lots among the priests, Levites, and people, who should furnish the wood at appointed times. This bringing of the wood to the temple

A. M. 3539.

B. C. 445.

d c. 12. 1, &c.

e Eer. 2. 3,

&c. c. 7. 8, &c.

f Ez. 2. 36.

g Le. 20. 24.

Eer. 10. 11

-13.

c. 9. 2; 13. 3

h Ro. 1. 1.

i c. 8. 2.

Ps. 47. 7.

j De. 20. 13,

14.

c. 5. 12, 13.

Ps. 119.

106.

k 2Ch. 34. 31

l by the

hand of.

m Ez. 34. 16.

De. 7. 3.

Eer. 9. 12,

14.

n Le. 23. 3.

De. 5. 12.

c. 13. 15,

&c.

Is. 58. 13,

14.

o Le. 25. 4.

p De. 15. 2.

c. 5. 1. 13.

q bond.

r Le. 21. 5.

s Nu. c. 28. 29

t He. 10. 11.

u c. 13. 31.

Is. 40. 16.

v He. 10. 3. 7

w Le. 6. 12.

x Ex. 23. 19.

Nu. 18. 12.

De. 26. 2.

y Ez. 13. 2.

13. 13.

Le. 27. 26.

z Nu. 15. 19.

De. 18. 4.

a De. 26. 2.

b Nu. 18. 21.

Mal. 3. 5.

10.

c 1Ch. 9. 26.

2Ch. 31.

11. 12.

d De. 12. 6.

11.

e c. 13. 10.

12.

a Jos. 18. 10.

b ver. 18.

Nu. 14. 5.

27. 53.

32 Also we made ordinances for us, to charge ourselves yearly with the third part of a shekel for the service of the house of our God;

33 For the <sup>r</sup> shew-bread, and for the continual <sup>a</sup> meat-offering, and for the continual <sup>a</sup> burnt-offering, of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin-offerings to make an atonement for Israel and for all the work of the house of our God.

34 And we cast the lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people, for the <sup>a</sup> wood-offering, to bring it into the house of our God, after the houses of our fathers, at times appointed year by year, <sup>v</sup> to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written <sup>w</sup> in the law:

35 And to bring the first-fruits <sup>x</sup> of our ground, and the first-fruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the house of the Lord:

36 Also the first-born of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written <sup>y</sup> in the law, and the firstlings of our herds and of our flocks, to bring to the house of our God, unto the priests that minister in the house of our God:

37 And that we should bring the first-fruits of our <sup>z</sup> dough, and our offerings, and the fruit <sup>a</sup> of all manner of trees, of wine and of oil, unto the priests, to the chambers of the house of our God; and the tithes <sup>b</sup> of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage.

38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the house of our God, to the chambers, <sup>c</sup> into the treasure-house.

39 For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall bring <sup>d</sup> the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers: and <sup>e</sup> we will not forsake the house of our God.

CHAPTER XI.

1 The rulers, voluntary men, and the tenth man chosen by lot, dwell at Jerusalem. 3

A catalogue of their names. 20 The residue dwell in other cities.

AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: the rest of the people also cast <sup>a</sup> lots, to bring one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy <sup>b</sup> city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities.

to provide the necessary expenses of public worship, and a provision for the priests: for public worship must have its ministers; and while these consist of flesh and blood, they cannot subsist upon the air. And to neglect these things, whatever people may pretend, is to "forsake the house of God"—to neglect and despise his service.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1—36. Jerusalem repopled by lot.—Jerusalem at this time was not a place of trade, by which men could acquire wealth; the houses in general were not built; the adversaries of the Jews were peculiarly hostile to that city, both as the capital of the people whose returning prosperity they envied, and the place of the holy worship which they hated; so that the cities of Judah, and other situations in the country, afforded a fairer prospect of living in peace, and of growing rich. It was therefore deemed a necessary policy, to replenish Jerusalem, for the re-establishment of the Jews as a distinct nation; and for the honour of the temple, and the protection of the priests and worshippers from the invasion of at last became a great day; and was constituted into a feast, called by Josephus, the carrying of the wood.—Bagster.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. To bring one in ten.—[Jerusalem certainly had many inhabitants at this time; but not sufficient to preserve the city, which was now encompassed with a wall, the building of which was going on fast. Nehemiah, therefore, obliged one tenth of the country people to come and dwell in it, that the population might be sufficient for the defence of the city. Some volunteered their services, which was at that time considered a sacrifice to patriotism, as Jerusalem then afforded very few advantages, and was a place of considerable danger: hence "the people blessed them that willingly offered themselves."—Bagster.

2 And the people blessed all the men, that willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.

3 ¶ Now these are the chief of the province that dwelt in Jerusalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit, Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the <sup>d</sup> Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants.

4 And <sup>e</sup> at Jerusalem dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Judah; Athai-ah the son of Uzzi-ah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalaleel, of the children of <sup>f</sup> Perez;

5 And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of Col-hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of Shiloni.

6 All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men.

7 And these are the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedai-ah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah.

8 And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight.

9 And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer: and Judah the son of Senuah was second over the city.

10 Of the <sup>g</sup> priests: Jedaiah the son of Joiarib, Jachin.

11 Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was the ruler of the house of God.

12 And their brethren that did the work of the house were eight hundred twenty and two: and Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah,

13 And his brethren, chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two: and Amashai the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer,

14 And their brethren, mighty men of valour, a hundred twenty and eight: and their overseer was Zabdiel, the son of <sup>h</sup> one of the great men.

15 Also of the Levites: Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni;

16 And Shabbethai and Jozabad, of the chief

A. M. 3359.
B. C. 445.
c Ju. 5. 9.

d Ezr. 2. 43, 55.

e 1 Ch. 9. 3, &c.

f Ge. 38. 29. Pharez.

g 1 Ch. 9. 10, &c.

h or, Haggadolim.

i were over.

j 1 Ch. 26. 20.

k Ac. 6. 2, 3.

l c. 12. 8.

m 1 Ch. 16. 4. 25. 4. 5.

n Ph. 4. 6.

o ver. 1.

p at the gates.

q Ps. 84. 10.

r c. 3. 26.

s or, the tower.

t Ezr. 6. 8, 9. 7. 20, &c.

u or, to a sure ordinance.

v Ge. 38. 30. Zarah.

w 1 Ch. 18. 17.

x Jos. 14. 15.

y Ge. 26. 33. Am. 8. 14.

z Jos. 15. 8. 2 K. 1. 23. 10. Je. 32. 35.

a or, of.

b or, to.

c 1 Ch. 14. 14.

of the Levites, <sup>i</sup> and the <sup>j</sup> over-sight of the outward <sup>k</sup> business of the house of God.

17 And Mattaniah <sup>l</sup> the son of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal to begin the <sup>m</sup> thanksgiving in <sup>n</sup> prayer: and Bakkukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda the son of Shammua, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun.

18 All the Levites in the holy <sup>o</sup> city were two hundred fourscore and four.

19 Moreover the porters, Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept <sup>p</sup> the <sup>q</sup> gates, were a hundred seventy and two.

20 ¶ And the residue of Israel, of the priests, and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance.

21 But <sup>r</sup> the Nethinims dwelt in <sup>s</sup> Ophel: and Ziha and Gispah were over the Nethinims.

22 The overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem was Uzzi the son of Bani, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, the singers were over the business of the house of God.

23 For <sup>t</sup> it was the king's commandment concerning them, that <sup>u</sup> a certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day.

24 And Pethabiah the son of Meshezabeel, of the children of <sup>v</sup> Zerah the son of Judah, was at <sup>w</sup> the king's hand in all matters concerning the people.

25 And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at <sup>x</sup> Kirjath-arba, and <sup>y</sup> in the villages thereof, and at Dibon, and <sup>z</sup> in the villages thereof, and at Jekabzeel, and <sup>a</sup> in the villages thereof,

26 And at Jeshua, and at Moladah, and at Beth-phetet,

27 And at Hazur-shual, and at Beer-sheba, and <sup>b</sup> in the villages thereof,

28 And at Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof,

29 And at En-rimmon, and at Zareah, and at Jarmuth,

30 Zanoah, Adullam, and <sup>c</sup> in their villages, at Lachish, and the fields thereof, at Azekah, and <sup>d</sup> in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-sheba <sup>e</sup> unto the valley <sup>f</sup> of Hin nom.

31 The children also of Benjamin <sup>g</sup> from Geba dwelt <sup>h</sup> at Michmash, and Aija, and Beth-el, and <sup>i</sup> in their villages,

32 And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah,

33 Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim,

34 Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat,

35 Lod, and Ono, the valley <sup>j</sup> of craftsmen

36 And of the Levites were divisions in Judah, and in Benjamin.

their enemies. It was "the holy city," as chosen, separated, and sanctified of God, for his immediate presence and instituted worship; as a type of Christ and even of heaven; and as the place, where the greatest advantages of becoming holy were enjoyed: yet the Jews, in general, had not sufficient zeal or desire after spiritual improvement, to venture the consequences of removing thither. Some indeed willingly offered themselves to dwell there: whom their brethren commended, thanked, and prayed for; though few would imitate them. The rulers fixed their residence there, that the courts of justice, and the business connected with public affairs, might draw others: and, in addition to these inhabitants, one family in ten was expressly required to remove to Jerusalem; the selection of which was by lot referred to the determination of God. "They cast lots, that among ten men, it might be known whom God chose to come thither: and the lot falling by divine appointment upon such a person rather than another; no doubt, he removed the more contentedly to this city."—Bishop Patrick.

It has in all ages been justly lamented, that men prefer their own ease and emolument to the public good; that even professed Christians too commonly "seek their own, and not the things of Jesus Christ;" and that but few have such an attachment to holy places and holy things, as to renounce their secular pleasures or advantages for the sake of them. Yet surely, where opportunities of spiritual improvement most abound, and where Jesus, the Ruler of our holy city, especially resides, there we should delight to dwell; in preference to all interests and connexions, and notwithstanding persecutions, tribulations, perils, and losses. Otherwise, where is our "meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light?" and how shall we be willing to depart hence, and be "absent from the body, that we may be present with the Lord?"—T. Scott.

Ver. 3. These are the chief.—On comparing this list with that in 1 Chron. ix. 2. &c., though they appear to relate to the same period, the differences will be found too many for us to reconcile at this very distant period, nor is it to us an object of importance.

Ver. 9. Judah . . . was second.—That is, either deputy to Joel; or rather, ruler of the other half of the city.

Ver. 16. The outward business.—That is, the secular concerns; the provisions, sacrifices, &c.

Ver. 17. Principal to begin.—That is, the precentor, who led the singing, or rather chanting.

Ver. 36. Were divisions.—That is, were divided between Judah and Benjamin.

CHAPTER XII.

<sup>a</sup> The priests, 8 and the Levites, which came up with Zerubbabel. <sup>10</sup> The succession of high priests. <sup>22</sup> Certain chief Levites. <sup>27</sup> The solemnity of the dedication of the wall. <sup>44</sup> The offices of priests and Levites appointed in the temple.

NOW <sup>a</sup> these are the priests and the Levites that went up with Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: <sup>b</sup> Seraiah, Jeremiah Ezra,

2 <sup>c</sup> Amariah, <sup>d</sup> Malluch, Hattush, 3 <sup>d</sup> Shechaniah, <sup>e</sup> Rehum, <sup>f</sup> Meremoth, 4 Iddo, <sup>g</sup> Ginnetho, <sup>h</sup> Abijah, 5 <sup>i</sup> Miamin, <sup>j</sup> Maadiah, Bilgah, 6 Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah. 7 <sup>k</sup> Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests and of their brethren in the days of Jeshua.

8 Moreover the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and <sup>m</sup> Mattaniah, which was over <sup>n</sup> the thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

9 Also Bakkukiah and Unni, their brethren, were over against them in the watches.

10 ¶ And Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada, 11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

13 Of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehonathan;

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph;

15 Of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai; 16 Of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam;

17 Of Abijah, Zichri; of Miniamin; of Moadiah, Piltai;

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan;

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi;

20 Of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers: also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written <sup>o</sup> in the book of the chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment <sup>p</sup> of David the man of God, ward <sup>q</sup> over against ward.

25 Mattaniah, and Bakkukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters keeping the ward at the <sup>r</sup> thresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah <sup>s</sup> the governor, and of Ezra the priest, <sup>t</sup> the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the dedication <sup>u</sup> of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both <sup>v</sup> with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi;

29 Also from the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified <sup>w</sup> the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof <sup>x</sup> one went on the right hand upon the wall toward <sup>y</sup> the dung-gate:

32 And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah,

35 And certain of the priests' sons with <sup>z</sup> trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph:

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azrael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments <sup>a</sup> of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at the <sup>b</sup> fountain gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water-gate eastward.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—44. Priests and Levites arranged, &c.—The Lord raises up a succession of worshippers from age to age, who honour him by their "sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving;" and who derive instruction and encouragement from the examples and actions of those who have long before entered into their rest. The believer should undertake nothing which he cannot, and does not, dedicate to God, by seeking his direction and assistance in it, and his blessing upon it; by designing his glory, and by giving praise for success in all things: and whatever he possesses he should commit to the Lord's keeping and disposal, and use it according to his will. But all that we sinners do must be purified by the blood of sprinkling, and by the grace of the Holy Spirit, or it cannot be acceptable unto God: and the whole church of God, which is "the lot of his inheritance," and the object of his choice CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Ezra.—Most probably, not the author of the preceding book, but another.

Ver. 12. Jaddua.—[Jaddua is supposed to be Jaddus the high priest, who went in his pontifical robes to meet Alexander the Great, when advancing to destroy Jerusalem; who was so struck with his appearance, that he forebore all hostilities, and granted many privileges to the Jews. (Josephus). According to Eusebius, he was high priest from A. M. 3665 to 3882.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. At the thresholds.—Some, porticoes; Dr. Clarke, watch-boxes; Professor Gesenius, "the store-rooms of the gates." Perhaps the translation in the text is best.

Ver. 27. Dedication of the wall.—[Jerusalem was the holy city, and the wall was built under the immediate superintendence and blessing of Jehovah: it was, therefore, proper that it should be dedicated to that God who was there worshipped by solemn praises, prayers, and sacrifices. The dedication seems and delight, being descended from fallen Adam, must be thus purified and rendered holy unto the Lord. Those who would be instrumental in the conversion of sinners, and the sanctification of believers, must begin with themselves: and when we "acknowledge God in all our ways," he will so prosper and comfort us as often to cause us to rejoice with great joy. If our families be trained up to join in the solemn worship of God, and in attendance on his word, we may hope that they will share our joys and privileges; and the prosperity of the church gladdens the hearts of all true believers: and in all cases where the ministers of religion generally come forward in support of pious and benevolent measures, with zeal and alacrity, to the satisfaction of all concerned; they take the most effectual method not only of doing much good, but of securing the liberal and cheerful payment or contribution for to have consisted in processions of the most eminent persons around the walls, with thanksgivings to God, who had enabled them to bring the work to so happy a conclusion; and, no doubt, to all this were added a particular consecration of the city to God, and the most earnest invocation that He would take it under his guardianship, and defend it and its inhabitants against their enemies.]—Bagster.

Ver. 31. Then I brought, &c.—Perhaps this verse should be read, "Then I caused the princes of Judah to go up on the wall; and appointed two great choirs (to sing praises) and two processions, one on the right, &c."—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 37. Stairs, &c.—[Jerusalem being built on very uneven ground, some hills being taken in within the walls, there was a necessity that there should be in different places steps, by which to ascend and descend; probably, similar to what is seen in the city of Bristol.]—Bagster.

38 And the other <sup>c</sup> company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces even unto the broad wall;

39 And from above the gate of <sup>d</sup> Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish-gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate: and they stood still in the <sup>e</sup> prison-gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers <sup>f</sup> sang <sup>g</sup> loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced: so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard <sup>h</sup> even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers <sup>i</sup> for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions <sup>j</sup> of the law for the priests and Levites: <sup>k</sup> for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that <sup>l</sup> waited.

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment <sup>m</sup> of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David <sup>n</sup> and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion: <sup>o</sup> and they <sup>p</sup> sanctified holy things unto the Levites; and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Upon the reading of the law separation is made from the mixed multitude. 4 Nehemiah at his return caused the chambers to be cleansed. 10 He reformed the offices in the house of God. 15 The violation of the sabbath, 23 and the marriages with strange wives.

ON that day <sup>a</sup> they <sup>b</sup> read in the book of Moses in the <sup>c</sup> audience of the people; and therein <sup>d</sup> was found written, that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Because <sup>e</sup> they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but hired

A. M. 3488.
B. C. 536.

o ver. 31.

d 2Ki. 14. 13.

c. 3. 16.

e Je. 32. 2.

f made their voice to be heard.

g Ps. 81. 1.

h Exr. 3. 13.

i c. 13. 12, 13.

j i. e. appointed by the law.

k for the joy of Judah.

l stood.

m 1Ch. 25. 26

n 2Ch. 29. 30

o Nu. 18. 21, 26.

p i. e. set apart.

a there was read.

b De. 31. 11, 12.

c 2Ki. 23. 2.

d c. 3. 3, 8.

e eazs.

f De. 23. 3, 4.

g Mat. 25. 40

h Nu. 22. 5.

i Nu. 24. 10.

j De. 23. 5.

k Jos. 4. 9, 10.

l Mi. 6. 5.

m c. 9. 2.

n i being set over.

o 2Ch. 31. 11.

p c. 12. 44.

q the commandment of the Levites.

r Nu. 18. 21, 24.

s A. M. 3570.

t B. C. 434.

u c. 5. 14.

v n at the end of days.

w o or, I earnestly requested.

x p standing.

y q or, store-houses.

z Mat. 3. 10.

a r c. 12. 44.

b s at their hand.

c t Ac. 6. 3.

d 1Ti. 3. 10.

e u it was upon them.

f v Pa. 126. 5.

g He. 6. 10.

h w kindnesses.

i x or, observations.

f Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit <sup>g</sup> our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated <sup>h</sup> from Israel all the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, Eliashib the priest, <sup>i</sup> having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was allied unto Tobiah:

5 And he had prepared for him a great chamber, where <sup>j</sup> aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, <sup>k</sup> which was commanded <sup>l</sup> to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the offerings of the priests.

6 But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for <sup>m</sup> in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and <sup>n</sup> after certain days <sup>o</sup> obtained I leave of the king:

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And it grieved me sore: therefore I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field.

11 Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their <sup>p</sup> place.

12 Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn and the new wine and the oil unto the <sup>q</sup> treasures.

13 And I made treasurers over the <sup>r</sup> treasures, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe, and of the Levites, Pedaiah: and <sup>s</sup> next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah: for they were counted <sup>t</sup> faithful, and <sup>u</sup> their office was to distribute unto their brethren.

14 Remember <sup>v</sup> me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my <sup>w</sup> good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the <sup>x</sup> offices thereof.

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah some the supply of themselves and families. When their affections are thus lively, they will be disposed to love and rejoice in those ministers who are instrumental to their comfort; and to care for their suitable provision. They ought, however, to attend to their several duties, and not to be anxious about their interests; and then God will stir up the hearts of the people to supply them in a comfortable and creditable manner. This they may receive with songs of praise and thanksgiving, and need not fear sanctifying a portion even of their portion, to the more immediate service of God and the support of his cause.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—31. Nehemiah having gone back to his royal master, upon his return finds the Jews returned to their former sins.—It appears from ver. 6, that, at the period here referred to, Nehemiah was absent from Jerusalem, having returned to meet the king, perhaps at Babylon. 1. The public reading of the law was, however, kept up, and the passage here referred to, (Deut. xxiii. 3—6,) being read in public, it was discovered that the Ammonite and Moabite were equally to be considered as strangers, and excluded from the congregation of Israel, as were the Canaanites themselves; and that therefore all alliances with them were forbidden. Upon this it was discovered that Eliashib himself had some time before formed an alliance between one of his grandchildren and Sanballat's daughter, (see ver. 28,) which was now found unlawful, her father being a Moabite by birth: (see note on chap. ii. 10.) and also intimately allied unto Tobiah the Ammonite, equally a foreigner and an idolater. From this connexion the priest had been induced, very shamefully, to allow this man private chambers in the sacred temple. This circumstance seems to have transpired just before the return of Nehemiah, (who is supposed to have been absent from five to ten years,) and the

Ver. 33 And the other company.—[The princes and priests were divided into two companies on the wall, Ezra going before one, and Nehemiah following the other. Thus they marched in a row opposite ways, in the circuit of the wall; the Levites playing upon instruments and singing praises to God, and the people accompanying them on each side, part of them on the wall, and part, it may be supposed, by the side of it. When they met on the opposite side of the city, they marched in a body to the temple, and offered sacrifices and thank-offerings, with rejoicings.]—Bogster.

Ver. 47. And they sanctified.—The people gave them to the Levites, and the Levites to the priests

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. On that day they read.—[Not the day of dedicating the walls; but, "On that day (wherein) was read, in the book of the law, it was found written," &c.—Should not come into the congregation.—That is, not be joined to it, without becoming a proselyte.

Ver. 6. After certain days.—Heb. <sup>6</sup> At the end of days." See note on Gen. iv. 3. But this cannot here mean a week, and even a year seems far too short for such abuses to have crept in.

Ver. 14. Remember me, &c.—[If thou wert strict to mark what is done amiss, even my good deeds should be wiped out: but, Lord, remember me in thy mercy, and let my upright conduct be acceptable to Thee.] By some, Ne-treading wine-presses on the <sup>v</sup> sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which <sup>a</sup> they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath day: and I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then <sup>a</sup> I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath day?

18 Did not your fathers <sup>b</sup> thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before <sup>c</sup> the sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath day.

20 So the merchants and sellers of all kind of ware lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye <sup>d</sup> about the wall? if ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

22 And I commanded the Levites that they <sup>e</sup> should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. Remember <sup>f</sup> me, O my God, good man was exceedingly vexed and grieved at the discovery. He however lost no time in remedying the abuse: for he turned out all "the household stuff of Tobiah," and, after the chambers had been properly cleansed, restored them to their proper use, and brought back the sacred vessels.

2. Another abuse which presented itself to Nehemiah on his return, and gave him great uneasiness, was that the Levites had been neglected to be provided for; and had been therefore constrained to leave their duties in the temple, to cultivate the ground for their support. The governor immediately called together the rulers, and reproved them for their neglect, though, but just before he left them, they had solemnly promised—"We will not forsake the house of our God." (Chap. x. 39.)

3. Upon the sabbath day he was grieved to find some of the people treading their wine-presses, and others holding a market for provisions. By vigorous measures, however, he soon suppressed these enormities.

4. The most distressing evil, and by far the most difficult to remedy, was that of their mixed marriages with the heathen. Several years before this Ezra thought he had remedied this enormity; for the people had both promised and sworn to put away their strange (that is, foreign and idolatrous) wives. Many did so, but others only pretended to do it, or afterwards took them back again: for Nehemiah found Jews that married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab. And their children spoke, one half them in the language of Ashdod, and the other half in Hebrew. This so angered the good man, that it provoked him to language, and, we fear, actions, that Nehemiah has been thought to deal too much with God on the principle of merit. That he wished God to remember him for good is sufficiently evident—and who does not wish the same?—but that he expected heaven for his good deeds does not appear; for it is perfectly clear, that he expected nothing from God but through the greatness of his mercy.]—Bagster.

A. M. 3370.
B. C. 434.
y Ex. 20. 10.
z c. 10. 31.
a ver. 11.
Pr. 23. 4.
b Je. 17. 21.
23.
c Le. 23. 32.
d before.
e c. 12. 30.
f ver. 14. 31.

g or, multitude.

h made to dwell with them.

i Ezr. 9. 2.

j they discerned not to speak.

k people and people.

l ver. 11. 17.

m or, reviled.

Ps. 12. 4.

n Ezr. 10. 5.

c. 10. 23. 30.

o 1 K. 11. 1.

&c.

p 1 KJ. 3. 13.

2 Ch. 9. 22.

q 2Sa. 12. 24.

r c. 12. 10. 22.

s c. 6. 14.

t for the defiling.

u Mal. 2. 4.

10.

v c. 10. 34.

w Ps. 26. 8. 9.

concerning this also, and spare me according to the <sup>g</sup> greatness of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews that <sup>h</sup> had married wives <sup>i</sup> of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab:

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and <sup>j</sup> could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of <sup>k</sup> each people.

25 And <sup>l</sup> I contended with them, and <sup>m</sup> cursed them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their hair, and made them swear <sup>n</sup> by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.

26 Did not Solomon <sup>o</sup> king of Israel sin by these things? yet <sup>p</sup> among many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved <sup>q</sup> of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin.

27 Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?

28 And one of the sons of <sup>r</sup> Joiada, the son o Eliashib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanballat the Horonite: therefore I chased him from me.

29 Remember <sup>s</sup> them, O my God, <sup>t</sup> because they have defiled the priesthood, and the covenant <sup>u</sup> of the priesthood, and of the Levites.

30 Thus cleansed I them from all strangers, and appointed the wards <sup>v</sup> of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business;

31 And for the wood-offering, at times appointed, and for the first-fruits. Remember me, O <sup>w</sup> my God, for good.

cannot be wholly justified. He "contended with them, and cursed them:" and "certain of them," who were probably insolent, and disregarded his authority, he "smote, and plucked off their hair;" and, finally, he bound them by an oath to the God of Israel, that they should do so no more. He also reasoned with them on the evil consequences of such conduct in the case of Solomon, who, though eminently beloved of God, was led by his strange wives into apostasy and idolatry.

This book closes with a petition to the Almighty, which is again and again repeated in the course of it. "Remember me, O my God, for good!" and it is sometimes connected in a manner that has been supposed to imply rather too high an opinion of himself and his exertions, as in ver. 14. of this chapter: "Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the offices thereof." On this we may first remark, that we are no more called upon to justify all the words and actions of Nehemiah than of David. However, that, 2. He ascribed to God, not only all his good actions, but his good desires; "My God put it into my heart to gather together the nobles," &c. (chap. vii. 5.) 3. A good man, the best of men, may and ought to have, like Moses, "respect unto the recompense of the reward" set before him. (Heb. xi. 26.)

5. That Nehemiah founded not his future hopes on his own merits but on God's mercy: "Remember me, O God, concerning this also, and spare me, according to the greatness of thy mercy!" (See note, ver. 14.)

Ver. 28. One of the sons of Joiada.—[Josephus relates, that this young man was named Manasseh; and that at his request, Sanballat and the Samaritans built their temple upon mount Gerizim, in opposition to that at Jerusalem, which he officiated, in some measure, according to the Mosaic ritual.]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

OF Nehemiah, the author and hero of this book, the Jews speak as one of the greatest men of their nation. His concern for his country, manifested by such unequivocal marks, entitles him to the character of the first patriot that ever lived. Descended, according to some, of the family of Aaron, or according to others, of the tribe of Judah, and allied to the royal family of David, in the course of Divine Providence, he was a captive in Babylon; but there his excellencies were so apparent, that he was chosen by the Persian king to fill an office the most respectable, and the most confidential, in the whole court. Here he lived in ease and affluence; he lacked no good thing; and here he might have continued to live, in the same affluence, and in the same confidence; but he could enjoy neither, so long as he knew his people distressed, the sepulchres of his fathers trodden under foot, the altars of his God overthrown, and his worship either totally neglected or corrupted. He sought the peace of Jerusalem; prayed for it; and was willing to sacrifice wealth, ease, safety, and even life itself, if he might be the instrument of restoring the desolations of Israel. And God, who saw the desire of his heart, and knew the excellencies with which he had endowed him, granted his request, and gave him the high honour of restoring the desolated city of his ancestors, and the pure worship of their God. The opposition of Sanballat and the Samaritans, and the firmness and zeal with which he repelled their insults and ineffectual efforts, cannot be read without the liveliest emotions; and will afford, to the latest times, a noble and animating example of distinguished patriotism, united with the sincerest devotion to the interests of religion. The virtue and piety of this great and good man, appear with equal lustre in the numerous and important reformations he effected. He relieved the people from their hardships and oppressions, by abolishing the harsh and usurious practices of the nobles and rulers; gave up his own revenue, as governor of the province, for the benefit of the people; and, as a further mean of conciliating their affections, exhibited an example of the most princely hospitality. As the best security for good morals, and the better observance of the laws of God, he re-established the offices of public worship, and prevented the profanation of the sabbath; he furnished the returned captives with authentic registers, and enabled them, in the best manner possible, after so long and calamitous an interval, to trace the genealogies, and claim the inheritance of their respective families; and farther, he accomplished the separation of the Jewish people from the mixed multitude, with which they had been incorporated, and annulled the numerous marriages which they had made with heathens and idolaters of every description. For disinterestedness, philanthropy, patriotism, prudence, courage, zeal, humanity, and every virtue that constitutes a great mind, and proves a soul in deep communion with God, Nehemiah will ever stand conspicuous among the greatest men of the Jewish nation; and an exemplar worthy of being copied by the first patriots in every nation under heaven.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

THIS BOOK, which derives its name from the person whose history it chiefly relates, is termed in the Hebrew, "the volume of Esther," will not extend Chronology of the Old Testament, as it forms an episode, (or intermediate story,) which is generally placed before the 7th chapter of the Book of Ezra. The first question arising on this Book, relates to the identity of this AHA-SUERUS, whom Usher, and other learned men, considered to be Darius Hystaspes: but whom Prideaux has endeavoured to prove to be Artaxerxes Longimanus, who showed such peculiar favour to the Jews, under Ezra and Nehemiah. This decision rests chiefly on the authorities of Josephus, and the Septuagint translators; but the Dean's arguments are so satisfactory, that his hypothesis is now generally adopted; particularly by Drs. Hales, Clarke, and Boothroyd; Hartwell Horne, G. Townsend, and the late Scott.

The grand subject of this book is Haman's plot for the destruction of the Jews throughout the Persian empire, which at that time comprehended almost all Asia; and the counteraction of that plot, by a remarkable interference of divine providence, in the promotion of Esther and her uncle Mordecai.

The author is utterly unknown, and the Book has been attributed to Ezra, to Mordecai, and to several others. The style is certainly very different from that of the Book of Ezra; and the remarkable omission of the name of God throughout the whole, might lead to a suspicion that it was not written by a Jew, were it not that it is impossible to attribute it to a pagan. The authenticity of the history, however, is sufficiently ascertained by the early and uniform reception of this Book by the Jews, and by the institution of the feast of Purim, in commemoration of their great deliverance. This "Commemoration, and its continued observance to the present time, (remarks Horne,) is a convincing evidence of the reality of the history of Esther, and of the genuineness of the Book which bears her name."

CHAPTER I.

1 Ahasuerus maketh royal feasts. 10 Vashti, sent for, refuseth to come. 13 Ahasuerus, by the counsel of Memucan, maketh the decrees of men's sovereignty.

NOW it came to pass in the days of <sup>a</sup> Ahasuerus, (this is Ahasuerus which reigned, from India even unto Ethiopia, over <sup>b</sup> a hundred and seven and twenty provinces:)

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasuerus sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in Shushan <sup>c</sup> the palace,

3 In the third year of his reign, he made a feast <sup>d</sup> unto all his princes and his servants; the power of Persia and Media, the nobles and princes of the provinces, being before him:

4 When he showed the riches of his glorious kingdom and the honour of his excellent majesty many days, even a hundred and fourscore days.

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were <sup>e</sup> present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

6 Where were white, green, and <sup>f</sup> blue hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble: the beds <sup>g</sup> were of gold and silver, upon a pavement <sup>h</sup> of red, and blue, and white, and black, marble.

7 And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, (the vessels being diverse one from another,) and <sup>i</sup> royal wine in abundance, according to the <sup>j</sup> state of the king.

8 And the drinking was according to the law; none did <sup>k</sup> compel: for so the king had appointed to all the officers of his house, that

A. M. 3540.
B. C. 462.

a Ezr. 4.6.
Da. 3.1.

b c. 8.9.
Da. 6.1.

c Ne. 1.1.
A. M. 3542.
B. C. 462.

d Ge. 40.20.
c. 2.18.

e Ma. 6.21.
e found.

f or, violet.
c. 8.15.

g Ec. 23.41.
Am. 6.4.

h or, of porphyry,
and marble,
and alabaster,
and stone
of blue colour.

i wine of the kingdom.

j And.

k Hab. 2.15.

l 2 Sa. 13.28.

m Ec. 10.19.

n c. 7.9.

o or,
eunuchs.

p good of countenance.

1 Sa. 25.3.

q which was
by the kind of his eunuchs.

r Je. 10.7.

s 1 Ch. 12.32.

t Ec. 7.14.

u 2 Ki. 125.19.

v what to do.

they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women <sup>in</sup> the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when <sup>1</sup> the heart of the king was <sup>m</sup> merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, <sup>n</sup> Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven <sup>o</sup> chamberlains that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king, 11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown royal, to show the people and the princes her beauty: for she was <sup>p</sup> fair to look on.

12 But the queen Vashti refused to come at the king's commandment <sup>q</sup> by his chamberlains: therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the <sup>r</sup> wise men, which knew <sup>s</sup> the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the <sup>t</sup> seven princes of Persia and Media, which <sup>u</sup> saw the king's face, and which sat the first in the kingdom;)

15 <sup>v</sup> What shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but also to all

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—22. Ahasuerus makes a royal feast, and sends for Queen Vashti to attend; but she refuses, and is disgraced.—We have already stated our conviction, that this Ahasuerus was Artaxerxes Longimanus, the son and successor of the famous Xerxes. On coming to the throne, he met with a powerful opposition from the children of Artabanus, his father's uncle, and his own brother Hystaspes. Having obtained, however, an early victory over all his enemies, he became the undisputed master of the Persian empire, including that of Babylon, and other provinces, to the number of 127; and it is thought, that immediately upon this he gave this royal feast to all the princes and nobles of his empire; and afterwards to the inferior classes in succession. Every thing was conducted with a splendour and consistency suited to the dignity of the sovereign; and one thing certainly commands our admiration, and may put to shame many who are called Christians. "The drinking was according to the law (of the king); none did compel; for so the king had appointed."

CHAP. I. Ver. 4. Many days.—Dr. Fryer (who resided there) states, that an annual festival of 180 days is still held in Persia.

Ver. 6. The beds were of gold and silver.—That is, cushions covered with gold and silver cloth, or embroidery.

Ver. 8. None did compel.—Every person drank what he pleased. Among the Greeks, however, each guest was obliged to keep the round, or leave the company; hence the proverb, Drink, or begone.—Bagster.

Ver. 11. To bring Vashti.—Herodotus relates a story of seven Persians be-Vashti the queen also made a feast for the ladies, in the interior of the palace.

On the seventh day, the king having drank freely, and his "heart" being "merry with wine," he commanded his chamberlains to bring Vashti the queen before him, with the crown royal, "to show the people and the princes her beauty: for she was fair to look on." To their great amazement and confusion, she refused to come; and commentators are not well agreed, whether to attribute her refusal to her high spirit, or to her modesty and prudence. Such a command would appear to us ridiculous; and it is certainly in opposition to the general practice of the east, to exhibit their women thus in public: the custom in Persia is, however, said to have differed from that of other countries, and if so, it accounts for the king's wrath. It seems a pity, indeed, that none of his counsellors had the wisdom and courage to advise him to moderate his passion, and reflect coolly on his own conduct; but they were all probably in the same condition, "merry with wine," ing invited to a Grecian entertainment; and when they began to drink, one of them said, "It is a custom with us Persians, whenever we have a public entertainment, to introduce our concubines and young wives."

Ver. 16. Vashti the queen has done wrong.—This reasoning was inconsistent and false. Vashti had not generally disobeyed the king, therefore she could be no precedent for the general conduct of the Persian women. She disobeyed only in one particular; and this, to serve a purpose, Memucan draws into a general consequence; and the rest come into the conclusion, being the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

19 If it <sup>w</sup> please the king, let there go a royal commandment <sup>x</sup> from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it <sup>y</sup> be not altered, That Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto <sup>z</sup> another that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great,) all the wives shall give to their husbands <sup>a</sup> honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying <sup>b</sup> pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters <sup>c</sup> into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule <sup>d</sup> in his own house, and that <sup>e</sup> it should be published according to the language of every people.

CHAPTER II.

1 Out of the choice of virgins a queen is to be chosen. 5 Mordecai the nursing-father of Esther. 5 Esther is preferred by Hegai before the rest. 12 The manner of purification, and going in to the king. 15 Esther best pleasing the king is made queen. 21 Mordecai discovering a treason is recorded in the chronicles.

AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what <sup>a</sup> was decreed against her.

2 Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

3 And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, unto the <sup>b</sup> custody of <sup>c</sup> Hegai the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women; and let their things for purification be given them:

and their heated imagination conjured up the alarm of an insurrection of wives, because the queen refused to exhibit her beauty before an intoxicated court. The decree, however, goes forth, and the queen Vashti is degraded and deposed, as a lesson to all the ladies of the Medes and Persians, "that every man should bear rule in his own house!"

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—23. A selection of "fair young virgins" is made for the king, among whom is Esther, the niece of Mordecai, who is made queen.—Esther's feast.—It affords a melancholy reflection, to think how many families in humble life must be robbed, and how many poor girls must be forced to sacrifice their affections to gratify the lust of an eastern despot. True it is, that this was considered as an honour, and some might seek it: but among them were doubtless parents, whose hearts bled to part with their beloved children; and probably females who were the objects, or the subjects of a virtuous love, which must be sacrificed to please the pleasure of the monarch. Those females who happened to please their lord, were elevated to rank and distinction, and surrounded with every sensual pleasure; but the far greater part, as we know from good authority, were neglected and despised; and, either too intoxicated to be able to discern right from wrong, or too intent on reducing women to a state of vassalage, to neglect the present favourable opportunity.—Bagster.

Ver. 19. That it be not altered.—(Let it be inserted among the permanent laws, and be made a part of the constitution of the empire. The Persians seem to have affected such a degree of wisdom in the construction of their laws, that they never could be amended, and should never be repealed; and this formed the ground of the saying, "The laws of the Medes and Persians that change not.")—Bagster.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. Shushan the palace.—The whole city seems to be comprehended in the palace and its environs.

A. M. 3542.

B. C. 462.

w be good with.

x from be fore him.

y pass not

away.

c. 8. 8.

Da. 6. 8. 15

z her companion.

a Ep. 5. 33.

Col. 3. 18.

b was good in the eyes of.

c c. 8. 9.

d Ep. 5. 32.

21.

1 Ti. 2. 12.

e one should publish it according to the law-gives of his people.

A. M. 3543.

B. C. 461.

a c. 1. 19. 20.

b hand.

c or, Hegai.

ver. 3.

d Mat. 20. 16.

22. 14.

e 2 Ki. 24. 14.

15.

Je. 24. 1.

f or, Jehoiachin.

2 Ki. 24. 6.

g nourish-

ed.

Ep. 6. 4.

h fair of form, and good countenance.

i ver. 3.

j Ps. 106. 46.

k ver. 3, 12.

l her portion.

m changed.

n ver. 20.

o the peace of Esther

Ge. 37. 18.

18a. 17. 18.

A. M. 3546.

B. C. 458.

p Pr. 7. 17.

Is. 57. 9.

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen <sup>a</sup> instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

5 ¶ Now in Shushan the palace there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

6 Who had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captivity <sup>c</sup> which had been carried away with <sup>f</sup> Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

7 And he <sup>g</sup> brought up Hadassah, that is, Esther, his uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was <sup>h</sup> fair and beautiful; whom Mordecai, when her father and mother were dead, took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together <sup>i</sup> unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and she obtained kindness <sup>j</sup> of him; and he speedily gave her her things for <sup>k</sup> purification, with <sup>l</sup> such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and he <sup>m</sup> preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

10 Esther had not showed her people nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her <sup>n</sup> that she should not show it.

11 And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, to know <sup>o</sup> how Esther did, and what should become of her.

12 ¶ Now when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oil of <sup>p</sup> myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women;)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's house.

except a few, whom his majesty might happen to recollect, condemned to the solitude of a convent. Such are the miseries resulting from polygamy, and such the consequences of having the lives and property of whole nations dependent on the will of an arbitrary prince.

A new and interesting character is now brought before us: Mordecai the Jew, the uncle of Esther. She, whom he had brought up as his own child, and who was remarkable for her personal beauty, is taken among the many virgins gathered for the harem of Ahasuerus; and Providence so ordered it, that this child should be the temporal saviour of the Jews, though nothing could at this time be farther from her ideas. Mordecai also, though equally unconscious, contributes to the great object, by discovering the conspiracy of two of the king's chamberlains against his life. We know not the rank in which Mordecai moved, but he was probably rich, and by his sitting in the king's gate, a magistrate, though perhaps only over his own nation. His relation to Esther, must have given him great interest in her success and promotion, though, as he had charged her not to discover her nation (probably lest it should injure her) so was he careful to conceal his relation to her;

Ver. 7. Hadassah.—In Chaldee, "a myrtle;" but Esther, her Persian name, a star.—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 11. To know how Esther did.—[The apartments of the women are accounted so inviolable, that it is even a crime to inquire what passes within their walls. A man, says Chardin, may walk a hundred days, one after the other, by the house where the women are, and yet know no more what is done there than at the farther end of Tartary. This sufficiently explains the conduct of Mordecai.]—Bagster.

Ver. 12. Six months with oil of myrrh.—[The general use of such precious oils and fragrant perfumes even among the ancient Romans, particularly among ladies of rank and fashion, may be inferred from the words of Virgil.

CHAPTER III.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.

15 ¶ Now when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, who had taken her for his daughter, was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed. And Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus into his house royal in the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favour in his sight more than all the virgins; so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

18 Then the king made a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a release to the provinces, and gave gifts, according to the state of the king.

19 And when the virgins were gathered together the second time, then Mordecai sat in the king's gate.

20 Esther had not yet showed her kindred nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.

21 ¶ In those days, while Mordecai sat in the king's gate, two of the king's chamberlains, Bigthan and Teresh, of those which kept the door, were wroth, and sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

22 And the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Esther the queen; and Esther certified the king thereof in Mordecai's name.

23 And when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both hanged on a tree: and it was written in the book of the chronicles before the king.

and could have no intercourse with her, but through the servants of the harem, and that only perhaps by bribing them.

Upon the new queen's promotion, Ahasuerus gives another royal feast, which did him more honour, as it was accompanied with a remission of taxes, which was a release to the provinces; and certain benevolences were given to his subjects and servants, "according to the king's state," which was far more honoured by this benevolence and generosity, than by the extravagance and folly of his former festival.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1.—15. Haman promoted, who plots the ruin of Mordecai, and the destruction of his nation, because he refuses him obedience.—Haman appears to have been made prime minister, and as such, seems to have had a just demand upon the usual respect and reverence paid to men in this high

"From her head the ambrosial locks breathed divine fragrance: her robe hung waving down to the ground." In the remote age of Homer, the Greeks had already learnt the lavish use of such perfumes; for in describing Juno's dress, he represents her pouring ambrosia and other perfumes all over her body.—B.

Ver. 16. Tebeth.—Answering partly to our December, and partly to January.

Ver. 18. Release to the provinces.—[We learn from Herodotus and Athenæus, that the Persian monarchs were accustomed to give their wives distinct cities and provinces for the purpose of supplying them with different articles of dress: one was assigned for ornamenting the head and neck; another provided robes, zones, &c.; and the city of Antilla was given to a Persian queen, we read, to supply her with shoes and sandals. It is probable, therefore, that at the desire of Esther, Ahasuerus relieved those cities and provinces that had before paid it, from this expense.]—Bagster.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Haman the Agagite.—Perhaps a descendant of Agag, king of the Amalekites.

Ver. 2. King's servants.—[Dr. Shaw, speaking of the cities in the East, says, "If we quit the streets, and enter into any of the principal houses, we shall first pass through a porch, or gate-way, with benches on each side, where the master of the family receives visits, and dispatches business; few persons, not even the nearest relations, having admission any farther, except upon extraordinary occasions." These servants were probably officers who

A. M. 3547.
B. C. 457.

g Ge. 34.19.
De. 21.14.
Is. 62.4,5.

r Is. 43.1.

c Ca. 6.9.
8.10.
Ac. 7.10.

t or, Kindness.

u before him.

A. M. 3547.
B. C. 457.

v c.1.3.

w rest.

x Ne. 8.12.

y c.3.2.

z Ep. 6.1.3.

a or, Bigthan.

b threshold.

c c. 6.1.2.

A. M. 3551.
B. C. 453.

a Nu. 24.7.
Sa. 15.35.

b Ge. 41.43.

c Ps. 15.4.

d ver. 2.

e ver. 2.
e. 5.9.

f Ge. 4.5.6.
De. 3.19.

g Ps. 83.4.
Re. 12.17.

h c. 9.24.

i Ezr. 4.13.
Ac. 16.30.

j meet, or, equal.

k to destroy them.

l weigh.

m Ge. 41.42.
c. 8.2,3.

n or, oppressor.

c. 7.6.

1 Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeketh revenge upon all the Jews. 7 He casteth lots. 8 He obtaineth by calumny a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus promote Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman: for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In the first month, that is, the month Nisan, in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed: and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasures.

10 And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' enemy.

office. The Jews, indeed, pretend that he set up a statue of himself, and claimed divine honours; but of this we have no proof. It should rather seem that Mordecai acted from national pride; Haman was an Amalekite of the race of Agag, and under a divine anathema. (Exod. xvii. 8—16. 1 Sam. xv. 2, 3.) He refused, therefore, as an Israelite, to reverence any of this accursed race. Haman, doubtless, knew this; and hence we must consider their mutual hatred as the effect of national animosity.

Haman's plea against the Jews was, that it was "not for the king's profit to suffer them."—"Worldly hearts," says Bishop Hall, "are not led by good or evil, but by profit or loss; neither have they grace to know, that nothing is profitable but what is honest, nothing so desperately incommodious as here waited the king's call; and it is likely that Mordecai was one of them.]—Bagster.

Ver. 6. He thought scorn.—That is, he scorned; he sought a great revenge.

Ver. 7. They cast Pur.—This appears to be the Hebrew corruption of the Persian Par, which signifies any thing that happens fortuitously. They used a species of divination to find the lucky month to destroy the Jews. The LXX. add, "The lot fell on the 14th day of the month Adar."—Dr. Clarke.

Ver. 9. I will pay 10,000 talents of silver.—[Here Haman is obliged to acknowledge that there would be a loss to the revenue, which he was willing to make up out of his own property. Ten thousand talents of silver, counted by the Babylonish talent, amount to about ten millions of dollars, but, reckoned by the Jewish talent, they amount to double that sum. In those days, silver and gold were more plentiful than at present; and we have many instances of individuals possessing almost incredible riches.—Herodotus relates, that when Xerxes went into Greece, Pythius the Lydian had 2000 talents of silver, and 4,000,000 of gold darics, which unitedly amount to nearly thirty millions of dollars. Phuarch tells us, that after Crassus had dedicated the tenth of all he had to Hercules, he entertained the Roman people at 10,000 tables, and distributed to every citizen as much corn as was sufficient for three months; and after all these expenses, he had 7,100 Roman talents left, which amount to more than five millions of dollars.]—Bagster.

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then <sup>o</sup> were the king's scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; <sup>a</sup> in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.

13 And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink; but <sup>r</sup> the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The great mourning of Mordecai and the Jews. 4 Esther, understanding it, sendeth to Mordecai, who sheweth the cause, and adviseth her to undertake the suit. 10 She exclaiming herself, is threatened by Mordecai. 15 She appointing a fast, undertaketh the suit.

WHEN Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent <sup>a</sup> his clothes, and put on sackcloth with <sup>b</sup> ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and a bitter <sup>c</sup> cry;

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning <sup>d</sup> among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and <sup>e</sup> many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her <sup>f</sup> chamber-wickedness; they must needs offend by rule, that measure all things by profit, and measure profit by their imagination. How easy is it to suggest strange untruths, when there is nobody to give an answer? False Haman, how is it not for the king's profit to suffer the Jews? if thou construe this profit for honour, the king's honour is in the multitude of his subjects; and what people more numerous than they? if for gain, the king's profit is in the largeness of his tributes; and what people are more deep in their payments? if for service, what people are more officious? How can it stand with the king's profit to bereave himself of subjects, his subjects of their lives, his exchequer of their tributes, his state of their defence? (But he is a weak politician that knows not to gild over the worst project with a pretence of public utility. No name under heaven hath made so many fools, so many villains, as this of profit. Lastly, as Ahasuerus reaps nothing but disprofit by the lives of the Jews, so he shall reap no small profit by their deaths. 'I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the king's treasury for this execution.' If revenge were not very sweet to the malicious man, he could not be content to purchase it at so high a rate.")

But where, it may be asked, could Haman raise this sum? Perhaps from the property of Mordecai and the Jews whom he sought to destroy, which he, probably, knew would cover more than the sum he offered, or from his own resources. (See note, ver. 9.)

One thing in this chapter demands our attention. Haman cast lots (or purim) according to the heathen custom, to find a lucky day for the execution of his vengeance; and He, who

Ver. 13. By posts.—Cyrus is said to have established posts at certain distances throughout his empire.

Ver. 15. Shushan was perplexed.—The people were shocked at the cruelty, and alarmed, as many of the Persians might be connected with them by trade, and by intermarriages.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Loud and bitter cry.—[Mordecai gave every demonstration of the most poignant grief. Nor did he hide this from the city; and the Greek says that he uttered these words aloud: "A people is going to be destroyed who have done no evil."—Bagster.]

Ver. 3. Great mourning.—It cannot reasonably be doubted, that the mournings, fastings, and weepings of the Jews, were attended by constant

A. M. 3551.
B. C. 453.
o c. 8.9, &c.

p or, secretaries.

q 1KI. 21. 8.

r Pr. 29. 2.

s 2Sa. 1. 11.
Job 1. 20.

b Jos. 7. 6.
Eze. 30. 30.
Job 3. 6.

c Ge. 27. 34.

d Is. 22. 4. 5.
37. 1. 3.

e sackcloth and ashes were laid under many, Is. 58. 5.
Da. 9. 3.

f eunuchs.

g Ps. 77. 2.

h set before.

i c. 3. 9.

j c. 3. 14, 15.

k No. 2. 1.
Pr. 21. 4.

l c. 5. 1.

m Da. 2. 9.

n c. 5. 2; 8. 4.

o Pr. 21. 11, 12.

p Nu. 23. 23.
Is. 54. 17.

q respiration.
Job 9. 18.

lains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: but <sup>g</sup> he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had <sup>h</sup> appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate.

7 And Mordecai told him of all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of <sup>i</sup> the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them.

8 Also he gave him the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to show it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication <sup>k</sup> unto him, and to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner <sup>l</sup> court, who is not called, there is one <sup>m</sup> law of his to put him to death, except such to whom the king shall hold out <sup>n</sup> the golden sceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think not <sup>o</sup> with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For <sup>p</sup> if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there <sup>q</sup> enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall disposeth the lot of the heathen, as well as the Jew and Christian, so ordered, that the lot fell in the month Adar, which was eleven months from this period, and so allowed time for all the circumstances to intervene whereby the deliverance of the Jews was effected. Thus the superstitions as well as the vices of mankind are made subservient to His design, who "worketh all things after the council of his own will."

It may seem incredible that a king—that any king, should thus assign over the lives and properties of a whole nation to gratify the revenge of a favourite minister; but we have too many similar instances on record, in the history of the world, to doubt on this account. Haman, having found the king's weak side, most likely by means of flattery, which is the sweetest food of arbitrary princes, lost no time in rendering his object secure, by sealing it with the king's seal; and then sent off expresses to all the provinces of his kingdom, which, considering their extent, required no little time to reach them all. This accomplished, lest any pang of remorse should afflict the royal bosom, the king and Haman sat down to drink.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1–17. The effects of this decree, and Mordecai's plan to counteract it, in which the queen acquiesces.—In the close of the preceding chapter we find, that while the king and his favourite were drinking down all reflection, "the city of Shushan was perplexed" immediately as they heard of it. Many of the people had, perhaps, formed alliances with the Jews, and others connexions in trade or friendship. Mordecai himself was probably much respected, as were others of his prayers and supplications; though all mention of them, and of the glorious God whom they worshipped, seems to have been studiously avoided.]—B.

Ver. 5. Whom he had appointed to attend upon her.—These eunuchs were both servants and spies, and often the worst enemies of their ladies; but Hatach seems to have been both kind and faithful.

Ver. 11. Shall come unto the king.—(Herodotus informs us, that ever since the reign of Deioceus, king of Media, for the security of the king's person, it was enacted, that no one should be admitted into his presence; but that if any one had business with him, he should transact it through the medium of his ministers.)—Bagster.—The golden sceptre.—That the Persian monarchs used a golden sceptre, we learn from Xenophon. "It is not, (said Cyrus to be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast <sup>a</sup>ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I <sup>c</sup>perish, I perish.

17 So Mordecai <sup>a</sup>went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAPTER V.

<sup>1</sup> Esther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden sceptre, and inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet. <sup>6</sup> She, being encouraged by the king in her suit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. <sup>9</sup> Haman, proud of his advancement, repineeth at the contempt of Mordecai. <sup>14</sup> By the counsel of Zeresh he buildeth for him a pair of gallows.

NOW it came to pass on the third <sup>a</sup>day, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court <sup>b</sup>of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

2 And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that she obtained favour <sup>c</sup>in his sight: and the king held out <sup>d</sup>to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it <sup>e</sup>shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

countrymen; and this decree, for a general massacre, must fill the city and the country with horror and consternation. Much more were the Jews terrified and confounded, and Mordecai himself was the first to excite alarm. There was a law, it seems, that mourning must not enter into the gate of the palace: well were it for them, could kings and courts effectively decree, that sickness and death should not enter there! Mordecai, however, though a man of rank and wealth, "put on sackcloth and ashes, and cried, with a loud and bitter cry," before the king's gate. The alarm thus excited, by means of her maids and chamberlains, reached the queen's apartments, and Esther was herself deeply affected. The communications between her and her uncle are related in this chapter; also the method which, with some degree of hesitation, she agreed to take, as the only means to save her life and that of her whole nation.

Her last expression, "If I perish, I perish," though very appropriate in her case, has often been far less properly used in reference to applications for divine mercy. We have no king Ahasuerus to deal with: there are no peradventures in the gospel. The sceptre of grace is always extended, and though many a penitent sinner may have faintled, (as is reported of Esther,) never did one perish at his footstool.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—14. Esther appears twice before the king, and invites him and Haman to her banquet. Haman prepares a gibbet for Mordecai.—It was the third day before Esther could summon courage to approach the king, and then all she his son Cambyses,) the golden sceptre that saves the kingdom; faithful friends are the truest and safest sceptre of the empire."

Ver. 14. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom, for such a time as this?—This is the only expression in the whole book which has the most distant reference to the doctrine of divine providence; and this says no more than a heathen might have said in reference to fate. It seems as if the writer had written with the express desire of excluding the divine being from his book.

CHAP. V. Ver. 6. Banquet of wine.—[Olearius, describing an entertainment at the Persian court, says, "The floor of the hall was covered with cotton cloth, which was covered with all sorts of fruit and sweetmeats in basins of gold. With them was served up excellent Shiraz wine. After an hour's time, the sweetmeats were removed, to make way for the more substantial part of the entertainment, such as rice, boiled and roast mutton, &c. When the company had been at table an hour and a half, warm water was brought, in a ewer of gold, for washing; and grace being said, they began to retire without speaking a word, according to the custom of the country."]—Bagster.

A. M. 3551.
B. C. 453.
r found.
s Jo. 3:4, 9.
t Ge. 43:14.
u passed.
a c. 4:16.
b c. 4:11.
6.4.
c Ne. 1:11.
2.4, &c.
Pr. 21:1.
d c. 8:4.
e ver. 6.
Ma. 6:23.

f c. 7:2.
9:12.
g ver. 3.
h do.
i c. 3:5.
Da. 3:16.
19.
Mat. 2:16.
j 2Sa. 13:22.
k caused to come.
l c. 9:12, 13.
m c. 3:1.
n 1 Ki. 21:4.
Job 15:30.
o tree.
p c. 7:9.
q c. 6:4.
r Ps. 37:14.
52.

6 ¶ And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, What <sup>a</sup>is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even <sup>b</sup>to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is;

8 If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and to <sup>c</sup>perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to-morrow as the king hath said.

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day joyful and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that <sup>d</sup>he stood not up, nor moved for him, he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless Haman <sup>e</sup>refrained himself: and when he came home, he sent and <sup>f</sup>called for his friends, and Zeresh his wife.

11 And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his <sup>g</sup>children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how <sup>h</sup>he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and to-morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet <sup>i</sup>all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 ¶ Then said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, Let a <sup>j</sup>gallows <sup>k</sup>be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow speak <sup>l</sup>thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman; and he caused the gallows to be <sup>m</sup>made.

dare do, was to invite the king and Haman to her banquet; and, when they came, she had not courage to name her object, but only asked them to come again. Haman, however, was greatly delighted with the honour done him, and the respect paid him, little thinking of the queen's real design; as he neither knew that she was related to Mordecai, nor of the same nation. Haman goes home and boasts to his friends of his riches and his honours; but is by the way again mortified by the unbending Mordecai, "who stood not up, nor moved, for him;" a clear proof, as we conceive, that it was not the nature or degree of submission to which Mordecai objected; but the degradation of a Jew submitting to an Amalekite—a son of Israel to a descendant of the accursed Agag. As to the wife of Haman, she is so elevated with her husband's supposed good fortune, that she advises him to have a gallows erected fifty cubits (i. e. about thirty yards) high, and on the next day to move the king to hang Mordecai thereon; and not to wait the slow approach of the general massacre of his nation. He is delighted with the project, and determines to apply to the king on the following morning to have it executed: but little did Haman think of the secret counteraction now going on.

Truly, "God works in a mysterious way." Sometimes the fate of a mighty empire may be shaken and overturned in a dream, as we read in the book of Daniel; at others, the want of sleep may produce the salvation of a nation, as we see in this book of Esther.

Ver. 8. Let the king and Haman come.—[Esther probably wished another interview, that she might ingratiate herself more fully into the king's favour, and thus secure the success of her design. But Providence disposed of things thus, to give time for the important event mentioned in the following chapter.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Haman told them.—The original implies, (according to Professor Gesenius,) "to announce with commendation." (Ps. xix. 2; lxxviii. 4.) He boasted, gloried.

Ver. 12. Haman said.—[Plutarch, in his life of Artaxerxes, informs us, that not but the king's mother, and his real wife, were permitted to sit at his table; and therefore he mentions it as a condescension in that prince, that he sometimes invited his brothers. Haman, therefore, had some reason to be proud of this favour.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Availeth me nothing.—[Pride will ever render its possessor unhappy. Haman, though possessed of immense riches, glory, and honour, and the prime favourite of his king, is wretched, because he cannot have the homage of that man whom his heart even despised! O, how distressing are the inquietudes of pride and vanity!]—Bagster.

CHAPTER VI.

Ahasuerus, reading in the chronicles of the good service done by Mordecai, taketh care for his reward. 4 Haman, coming to see that Mordecai might be hanged, on-awakes giveth counsel that he might do him honour. 12 Complaining of his misfor-tune, his friends tell him of his final destiny.

ON that night <sup>a</sup> could not the king sleep, and he commanded to bring the book <sup>b</sup> of re-cords of the chronicles; and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of <sup>c</sup> Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the <sup>d</sup> door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dig-nity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is <sup>e</sup> nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, Who <sup>f</sup> is in the court? Now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had pre-pared for him.

5 ¶ And the king's servants said unto him Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man <sup>g</sup> whom the king delighteth to honour? Now <sup>h</sup> Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to my-self?

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man <sup>i</sup> whom the king delighteth to honour,

8 Let <sup>j</sup> the royal apparel be brought; which the king <sup>k</sup> useth to wear, and the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown royal which is set upon his head:

9 And let this apparel and horse be deliv-ered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man <sup>l</sup> withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and <sup>m</sup> bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and <sup>n</sup> proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: <sup>o</sup> let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

A. M. 3551.
B. C. 453.

a the king's sleep fled away.

b c.2.23.

c or, Big-thana.

d threshold.

e Ec.9.15.

f in whose honour the king delighteth.

g Pr.18.12.

h in whose honour the king delighteth.

i them bring the king's apparel.

j wherewith the king clotheth himself.

k cause him to ride.

l Ge.41.43.
1Ki.1.33,
34.

m suffer not to fall.

n 2 Ch.26.20

o 2 Sa.15.30.
Je.14.3,4.

p Job 15.24.

q Pr.23.18.
1Ios.14.9.

r c.5.8.

a drink.

b c.3.9;4.7.

c that they should destroy, and kill, and cause to perish.

d whose heart hath filled him.

e the man adversary.

f Pr.16.14.

g or, at the presence of.

11 Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

12 ¶ And Mordecai came again to the king's gate. But Haman <sup>a</sup> hasted to his house mourn-ing, and having his head <sup>b</sup> covered.

13 And Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends every <sup>c</sup> thing that had befallen him. Then said his wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, If <sup>d</sup> Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall <sup>e</sup> before him.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that <sup>f</sup> Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Esther, entreating the king and Haman, maketh suit for her own life and her people's. 5 She accuseth Haman. 7 The king in his anger, understanding of the gal-lows which Haman had made for Mordecai, causeth him to be hanged thereon.

SO the king and Haman came to <sup>a</sup> banquet with Esther the queen.

2 And the king said again unto Esther on the second day at the banquet of wine, What <sup>b</sup> is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what <sup>c</sup> is thy request? and it shall be performed, <sup>d</sup> even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my re-quest:

4 For <sup>e</sup> we are sold, I and my people, <sup>f</sup> to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. But if we had been sold for bondmen and bondwomen, I had held my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.

5 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who is he, and where is he, <sup>g</sup> that durst presume in his heart to do so?

6 And Esther said, <sup>h</sup> The adversary and enemy <sup>i</sup> is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was afraid <sup>j</sup> <sup>k</sup> before the king and the queen.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—14. Ahasuerus, not being able to sleep, has the chronicles of his kingdom read, which mention the services of Mordecai: Haman, coming in the morning, is made the instrument of rewarding him.—On a certain night, king Ahasuerus could not sleep. Henry here pertinently re-marks: "His sleep fled away, (so the word is:) the more carefully he pursued it, the farther it went. Sometimes we cannot sleep because we fain would. Even after a banquet of wine he could not sleep, when Providence had a design to serve in keeping him awake. We read of no bodily indisposi-tion he was under, that might break his sleep; but God, whose gift sleep is, withheld it from him. Those that are never so much resolved to cast away care, cannot always do it; they find it in their pillows when they neither expect nor welcome it. He that commanded one hundred and twenty-seven pro-vinces, could not command one hour's sleep."

The king's wakefulness is not only the saving Mordecai's life, but the means of his being rewarded. Haman comes to court early in the morning to request that Mordecai may be hanged; but before he can open his mouth to make the request, the king puts a question, which he very naturally, from the king's recent partialities, supposes can refer to no other than himself: "What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour?" Under the impression just named, Haman advises the highest honours he could think of: but what a thunderclap must have been the king's reply: "Make haste, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew."—"Where the word of a king is, there is power;" and death is the instant penalty of disobedience. Away therefore he goes, and, with trembling voice and limbs, hurries through the dreadful task of honouring the man whom he meant to hang. He then hastens home to bewail his fate; but, before he has time to do this, the king's chamberlains come to hurry him to the banquet, for which he was ill prepared, and which he must have attended with a heavy heart.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—10. The queen now acc<sup>s</sup> Haman of plotting against her life, and the king, astonished and enraged, orders his immediate execution.—Instead of the welcome of the day before, Haman is received with an accusation that must affect his life. He is no less surprised than on the pre-ceding day. He knew not till now that the queen was a Jewess, or related to Mordecai, and could not be prepared to asserts, (upon Rabbinical authority, we presume) that it was usual to have "the crown royal" placed upon the head of a horse, led in state before the king, which he thinks was now done before Mordecai.

Ver. 11. Through the streets.—Pitts gives a similar account of the mode of honouring a person, who turns a Mohammedan, at Algiers: "The apostate is to get on a stately steed, with a rich saddle, and fine trappings: he is also richly habited, and has a turban on his head, but nothing of this is to be called his own; only there are given him about two or three yards of broad cloth, which is laid before him on the saddle. The horse, with him on his back, is led all round the city, which he is several hours in doing. The apostate is at-tended with drums and other music, and twenty or thirty sergeants. They march in order on each side of the horse, with naked swords in their hands. The crier goes before, with a loud voice giving thanks to God for the proselyte that is made."—Bagster.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 5. Where is he that durst presume?—i. e. puffed him up with pride and rage.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. The book of records.—[As chronicles were composed among the Persians, a more instructive and interesting work could not be brought before the king; because they were all written in verse, and were generally the work of the most eminent poets of the empire. They are written in this way to the present time; and the famous epic poem of Ferdowsy, the Homage of Persia, is nothing else than a collection of chronicles, brought down from the creation to the reign of Mohammed Chезны, in the beginning of the tenth century. Even our rough English ancestors had their poetic chronicles, and, among many, the chronicle of Robert of Gloucester is proof in point.]—B. Ver. 8. Which the king useth to wear.—This was a special favour. See note on 1 Sam. xviii. 4, and compare Gen. xli. 42.—The horse, &c.—[Herodotus relates, that the kings of Persia had horses peculiar to themselves, which were brought from Armenia, and were remarkable for their beauty; and, if the same law prevailed in Persia as in Judea, no man, under the penalty of death, might ride on the king's horse, any more than sit on his throne, wear his crown, or hold his sceptre.]—Bagster.—And the crown royal—Dr. Gill

7 ¶ And the king arising from the banquet of wine in his wrath went into the palace garden : and Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen : for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace-garden into the place of the banquet of wine ; and Haman was fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also <sup>h</sup> before me in the house ? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they <sup>i</sup> covered Haman's face.

9 And <sup>i</sup> Harbonah, one of the chamberlains, said before the king, Behold also, the <sup>k</sup> gallows <sup>l</sup> fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, Hang him thereon.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared <sup>m</sup> for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Mordecai is advanced. 3 Esther maketh suit to reverse Haman's letters. 7 Ahasuerus granteth to the Jews to defend themselves. 15 Mordecai's honour, and the Jews' joy.

ON that day did the king Ahasuerus give the house of Haman the Jews' enemy unto <sup>a</sup> Esther the queen. And Mordecai came before the king ; for Esther had told what he was <sup>b</sup> unto her.

2 And the king took off his <sup>c</sup> ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And <sup>d</sup> Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman.

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and fell down at his feet, and <sup>e</sup> besought him with tears to put away the mischief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

4 Then the king held out <sup>f</sup> the golden sceptre toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse the <sup>g</sup> letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, <sup>h</sup> which he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces :

6 For how <sup>i</sup> can I <sup>j</sup> endure to see the evil that meet the charge. The king, in his turn, is no less astonished. It is true, he had signed a decree against the Jews ; but it was probably in his cups, and he thought no more about it. And how must it now confound him, when he finds that his favourite queen was of that nation, and that he had signed a decree to take away her life, and that of the man who had preserved his own. His folly, the enormity of Haman's crime, and the deep criminality of his plot, must rush upon him in the same moment, and it is no wonder that he withdrew into the palace garden. Haman sees the danger of his situation, and immediately falls upon his knees before the Jewish queen, to supplicate forgiveness. The king, however, suddenly returns ; and his mind being filled with remorse and rage, it is no wonder that he misinterprets the attitude of Haman, and makes a signal (as is probable) for his being taken away to execution.

Tyrants may have suppliants, but they have no friends. None of the chamberlains, we may readily believe, refused to bow to Haman, but they loved him none the more. No sooner is the favourite disgraced than they turn against him, and point to the gallows which he had raised for Mordecai in the court of his own house. "Hang him thereon," is the instant reply of the enraged monarch. No sooner was the sentence given shall come unto my people ? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred ?

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen and to Mordecai the Jew, behold, I <sup>k</sup> have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring : for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may <sup>l</sup> no man reverse.

9 Then <sup>m</sup> were the king's scribes called at that time in the third month, that is, the month Sivan, on the three and twentieth day thereof ; and it was written according to all that Mordecai commanded unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from <sup>n</sup> India unto Ethiopia, a hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

10 And he wrote <sup>o</sup> in the king Ahasuerus's name, and sealed it with the king's ring, and sent letters by posts on horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries :

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city to gather themselves together, and to stand for their life, to <sup>p</sup> destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, and to take the spoil of them for a prey, 12 Upon one day in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth <sup>q</sup> day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was <sup>r</sup> published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of <sup>s</sup> blue than executed, and never has its justice been called in question. The inventor of the brazen bull was the first to suffer death by it. The inventor of the guillotine in Paris was among the first who suffered by it.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—17. The king promotes Mordecai into Haman's place, and authorizes the Jews to stand in their own defence.—It is the law of God only, and that only so far as it is moral, that admits of no repeal. It was too common a practice, however, with heathen princes, to assume the prerogatives of Deity, as was here the case, which, instead of raising the monarch's character, involved him in great embarrassment. The decree cannot be rescinded, nor must it be executed. The only possible way for the king to extricate himself from this dilemma, is to issue another law to oppose the execution of the former. To such miserable shifts do men reduce themselves by encroaching on the divine authority. Mordecai is appointed in the place of Haman, and the king's ring (which contained his seal of office) is placed on his hand. His house also, and his property, are transferred to him ; and to complete the revolution, royal couriers are dispatched into every quarter to authorize the Jews to defend themselves and destroy their enemies.

Ver. 7. The king arose.—According to Tavernier, (in his Persian travels,) the sudden rising of the king in anger, was the same as if he had pronounced the sentence of death.

Ver. 8. They covered Haman's face.—The majesty of the king of Persia did not allow malefactors to look at them ; as soon as Haman was so considered, his face was covered. (When a criminal was condemned by a Roman judge, he was delivered to the sergeant with these words : "Go, sergeant, cover his head, and hang him on the accursed tree." We find from Pococke, that this custom still prevails in the East ; for, speaking of the artifice by which an Egyptian bey was assassinated, he says, "A man being brought before him like a malefactor just taken, with his hands behind him, as if tied, and a napkin put over his head, as malefactors commonly have, when he came into his presence, suddenly shot him dead.")—Bagster.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 5. The Jews.—ALL the Jews." So a great number of MSS., the Syriac and Chaldee.—De Rossi.

Ver. 9. The month Sivan answers to part of our June, and part of July.—India.—[India or Hindostan is a large country of the south of Asia, extending from north to south about 2400 miles, and from east to west, 1800, between 8° and 35° N. lat. and 68° and 92° E. long., being bounded on the west by the Indus, east by the Birman empire and Thibet, north by the Indian Caucasus, and south by the Indian ocean. It is probable, however, that all the country east of the Indus was anciently called India.]—Bagster.

and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple: and the city of Shushan rejoiced and was glad.

16 The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day. And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman. 12 Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and Haman's sons to be hanged. 20 The two days of Purim are made festival.

NOW in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them;)

2 The Jews gathered themselves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for the fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, helped the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai waxed greater and greater.

5 Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did what they would unto those that hated them.

6 And in Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,

8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,

9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha,

10 The ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew they; but on the spoil laid they not their hand.

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace was brought before the king.

12 ¶ And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee:

A. M. 3551.

F. C. 453.

1 Ps. 18. 28.

30. 3. 11.

37. 11.

Pr. 11. 10.

Is. 30. 29.

u c. 9. 19, 22.

v Ex. 15. 16.

De. 2. 25.

11. 25.

c. 9. 2.

A. M. 3552.

B. C. 452.

a c. 8. 12.

b c. 8. 13.

c c. 8. 11.

ver. 16.

d Ps. 71. 13.

24.

e Ge. 35. 5.

c. 8. 17.

f those which did the bur-ness that belonged to the king.

g Ps. 18. 43.

h 2 Sa. 3. 1.

1 Ch. 11. 9.

Pr. 4. 18.

i according to their will.

j c. 5. 11.

Job 18. 19.

27. 13. 15.

Ps. 21. 10.

k c. 8. 11.

l came.

m let men

hang.

n De. 21. 23.

2 Sa. 21. 6.

9.

Ga. 3. 13.

o ver. 2. 13.

p ver. 10.

q in it.

r De. 16. 11.

14.

c. 8. 17.

s ver. 22.

Ne. 8. 10.

12.

t Ps. 30. 11.

u c. 3. 6, 7.

v crush.

w she.

x c. 8. 3, 11.

or what is thy request farther? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also according unto this day's decree, and let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together, and stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand, but they laid not their hands on the prey,

17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day of the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwall'd towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai wrote these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To establish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,

22 As the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, that is, the lot, to consume them, and to destroy them;

25 But when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters that his wicked

CHAP. IX., Ver. 1-32. The Jews retaliate severely on their enemies, and the feast of Purim is appointed in memorial of the event.—The advancement of Mordecai of course gave pre-dominance to the Jewish interest, notwithstanding all the hatred that Haman had stirred up against them. The rulers of the provinces and their deputies now helped the Jews, and great

Ver. 15. Crown of gold.—[Mordecai was now made the chief minister, or vizier, instead of Haman; and was accordingly invested with the royal apparel, in conformity to the custom of the East. So we are informed, in the History of the revolt of Ali Bey, that on the election of a new sultan, the chief of the country, in Egypt, the Pasha who approves of him invests him with a robe of valuable fur. Perhaps the crown was one of the insignia of the office of vizier.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Jews had light.—[That is, prosperity and hope. The dark cloud which had so long hung over them was dispelled: and again the sunshine of prosperity beamed upon them.]—Bagster.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 13. Let Haman's ten sons be hanged.—[Esther had probably been informed by Mordecai, that there were still many enemies of the Jews who sought their destruction, who had escaped the preceding day; and, therefore, begged that the second day might be added to the former permission; and that the sons of Haman, who had already been slain, might be suspended was the slaughter of their enemies, for no less than 75,000 of them were slain; though it is to be hoped the Jews confined themselves to their commission, and acted only on the defensive. It is especially mentioned to their honour, that "they laid not their hand upon the prey;" which showed sufficiently that their object was, by no means, plunder. Still it is evi-on gibbets, as a terror to those who sought the destruction of the Jews.]—Eag-ster. It was the custom of the Jews to hang criminals after they had been put to death. Josh. x. 26.

Ver. 19. Sending portions.—[The eastern princes and people not only invite their friends to feasts, but it is their custom to send a portion of the banquet to those that cannot well attend, especially their relations, and those in a state of mourning. Thus, when the Grand Emir found that it incommoded M. D'Arvieux to eat with him, he desired him to take his own time for eating, and sent him from his kitchen what he liked best.]—Bagster.

Ver. 20. Mordecai wrote these things.—[That is, as the words imply, the history contained in this book; and not merely the letters afterwards mentioned, as some understand it.]—Bagster.

Ver. 24. Pur.—[Pur, seems to be derived either from the Persian bahr, and bar, a part, portion, lot, or, pari, any thing which happens fortuitously, or fortunately; whence the annual festival in commemoration of the wonderful device, which he devised against the Jews, should return <sup>y</sup> upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore they called these days Purim after the name of <sup>a</sup> Pur. Therefore for all the words of this <sup>a</sup> letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined <sup>b</sup> themselves unto them, so as it should not <sup>c</sup> fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year;

28 And that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not <sup>d</sup> fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them <sup>e</sup> perish from their seed.

29 Then Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with all <sup>f</sup> authority, to confirm this second <sup>g</sup> letter of Purim.

30 And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to

A. M. 3552.
B. C. 432.
y Pa. 7.16.
z that is,
lot
a ver. 20.
b c. 8.17.
Is. 56. 3. 6.
Zec. 2. 11.
c pass.
d pass.
e be ended.
f strength.
g c. 8.10.
ver. 20.

h their souls.
i c. 4. 3. 16.
a Lu. 2. 1.
b Ge. 10. 5.
Ps. 72. 10.
Is. 24. 15. c made him
great.
Da. 4. 3.
d c. 41. 40.
Da. 5. 16.
29.
e Ro. 14. 13.
f Ne. 2. 10.
Ps. 122. 6.
9.
Ro. 10. 1.

the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth,

31 To confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed for <sup>b</sup> themselves and for their seed, the matters of the fastings and <sup>i</sup> their cry.

32 And the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.

CHAPTER X.

1 Ahasuerus's greatness. 3 Mordecai's advancement.

AND the king Ahasuerus laid a tribute <sup>a</sup> upon the land, and upon <sup>b</sup> the isles of the sea.

2 And all the acts of his power and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, whereunto the king <sup>c</sup> advanced him, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?

3 For Mordecai the Jew was next <sup>d</sup> unto king Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted <sup>e</sup> of the multitude of his brethren, seeking <sup>f</sup> the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed.

dent that there was a spirit of revenge indulged, which cannot be recommended to Christians; and we are sorry to see a specimen of it in the queen herself, who not only demanded the life of Haman's sons, but seems to have been gratified in their being hung up to public view, even after they were dead.

The feast of Purim was now solemnly appointed, and though it was not a divine command, nor divine festival, perhaps, has been so regularly and universally observed among them to the present day.

The following, according to David Levi and others, is the manner in which the feast is now observed:—

"During this festival, the Book of Esther is solemnly read in the Synagogue; and whenever the name of Haman occurs, the whole congregation clap their hands, stamp their feet, and vociferate. 'Let his name and memory be blotted out.'—'The name of the wicked shall rot.' It is also customary for the children, who have little wooden hammers, to knock against the wall, as a memorial that they should endeavour to destroy the whole seed of Amalek.

"Their prayers for the deliverance of their nation, are accompanied with curses on Haman and his wife, and blessings on Mordecai and Esther. This is a time of peculiar gaiety. Alms are given to the poor; relations and friends send presents to each other; all furnish their tables with every luxury they can command; and they indulge themselves largely in their deliverance of the Jews from their enemies was called Purim, or in Arabic and Persian, Fuhr, or Lots; which has been observed by them, in all places of their dispersion, from that day to the present time, without any interruption.—B.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1 The isles of the sea.—Probably of the Ægean sea.
Ver. 2 The book of the Chronicles.—The Persians have ever been remarkable for keeping exact chronicles of all public events. Their Tarekhs, which are compositions of this kind, are still very numerous, and indeed very important.—Dr. Clarke.—Media.—Media, which comprehended the modern Azerbijan, and part of Irak, was a celebrated country of Asia, bounded on cups, in memory of Esther's banquet of wine, at which she succeeded in defeating the designs of Haman."

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—3. The book closes with an appeal to the Persian records, and a short character of Mordecai.—Of the former we know nothing, except that they are lost: but the latter calls for a few brief observations. We have already seen that Mordecai was raised to the station from which Haman fell, namely, that of Prime Minister. This made him rank, as Joseph did with Pharaoh, the second person in the kingdom. We have no reason to call in question his probity and justice, and the text describes him as a Jewish patriot, "seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed." We are disappointed, however, in coming to the end of a narrative, which so remarkably displays the interference of Providence in the behalf of the Jewish nation, without a syllable of acknowledgment either from Esther or from Mordecai, who had been both rescued from an untimely death thereby. We read much, indeed, of their fasting in their trouble, and of their feasting afterwards; but not a word of either prayer or thanksgiving. This leads us to suspect that neither Mordecai nor Esther were personally devout, however morally virtuous and patriotic. This circumstance, and this only, seems sufficient to account for the remarkable and evidently intentional omission of, not only the peculiar name Jehovah, but of all the names of Deity, and of any reference to Divine Providence throughout the whole book.

the north by the Caspian sea and Armenia, west by Assyria, south by Susiana and Persia, and east by Hyrcania and Parthia, extending from 33° to 37° N. lat. and 45° to 53° E. long.—Persia.—Persia Proper, now Fars, was but a small province, being bounded on the north by Media, west by Susiana, south by the Persian gulf, and east by Caramania, extending from about 27° to 33° N. lat. and 50° to 55° E. long. But the Persian empire in its ancient state extended from the Hellespont to the Indus, above 2800 miles, and from Pontus to the shores of Arabia, above 2000 miles; comprehending a multitude of various nations.—Bogster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

In the Apocrypha attached to most of our quarto Bibles, there are ten verses in addition to this chapter, and six whole chapters beside, forming what is there called "The rest of the Book of Esther;" but as these chapters are not found in the Hebrew, and we have no reason to believe they ever were, we consider them of no authority; yet their object seems to be to remedy the defect here mentioned, lest the Gentiles, who are never backward to introduce their gods, should reproach them on that account. The very first line, therefore, of these additions is, "Then Mordecai said, God hath done these things." But what follows of the dreams of Mordecai, the prayer of Esther, &c. deserves no credit, but is utterly foreign to the style of the book to which they are attached. It is also no less remarkable, that the Septuagint translators, in their version of this book, insert several passages, apparently with the same design of removing the opprobrium above-mentioned; as for instance, in ch. ii. after ver. 20, they add, "For so Mordecai had charged her, (namely, Esther) to fear God, and keep his commandments." So in ch. iv. 8, they make Mordecai exhort her to "pray unto the Lord," as well as plead with the king. But of neither of these exhortations is there one word in the original; nor are they supported by any other of the ancient versions.

This circumstance, however, by no means operates against any of the facts here recorded, or the authenticity of the book, which, in all probability, was written by Mordecai himself, and under his direction. Had it been written by Ezra, the facts would have been the same; but undoubtedly we should have had frequent references to the divine providence, and exhortations both to prayer and praise.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

[THIS Book derives its title from the venerable patriarch Job, whose prosperity, afflictions, and restoration, are here recorded, with his exemplary and unequalled patience under all his calamities. There can be no doubt that Job was a real, and not a fictitious character, and that the narrative of this Book is an historical fact; for the prophet Ezekiel mentions Job, Noah, and Daniel, as three persons of eminent piety; and the apostle James illustrates the advantage of patience by the example of Job, as he had before done the doctrine of faith and works by the examples of Abraham and Rahab. Add to this, that we have the strongest internal evidence, from the Book itself, of the reality of the person and history of Job: for it expressly specifies the names of persons, places, facts, and other circumstances, usually related in true histories. Thus we have the name, country, piety, wealth, &c. of Job described; the names, number, and acts of his children are mentioned; the conduct of his wife recorded as a fact; his friends, their names, countries, and discourses, are minutely delineated; and can we rationally imagine that these were not realities? The real existence of Job is also proved by the concurrent testimony of all eastern tradition: he is mentioned by the author of the Book of Tobit, who lived during the Assyrian captivity; he is also repeatedly mentioned by Mohammed as a real character; and the whole of his history, with many fabulous additions, was known among the Syrians, Chaldeans, and Arabians; among the latter of whom he is distinguished by the name of Job, and is necessary for the historical truth of the Book of Job, that its language should be a direct transcript of that actually employed by the different characters introduced.

red; and we may safely allow, that, as the discourses of Job and his friends are recorded in poetical language, their sentiments and arguments are alone transmitted to us, and not the precise words used in conversation. Nothing certain can be determined respecting the age in which Job lived; though the long life which he attained; the general air of antiquity which pervades the manners recorded in the poem; the great remains of patriarchal religion; the worship of the sun and moon being the only idolatry mentioned; there being no express allusion to the Mosaic law, or the wonderful works of God to Israel; and several peculiarities in the language, style, and composition of the work; all concur to render it highly probable that he lived in the patriarchal times, or, at least, previous to the Exodus of Israel from Egypt. Respecting the author of this Book, the sentiments of the learned are much divided: Elihu, Job, Moses, Solomon, Isaiah, Ezekiel, and Ezra, have all been contended for. The evidence, however, respecting the age of Job, proves that it could not be any of the latter persons; and it is highly probable, as Schultens, Peters, Bishops Louth and Tomline, Dr. Hales, and others suppose, that it was the production of Job himself, or some other contemporary; and that it might have been originally written in Arabic, as some imagine, and afterwards translated into Hebrew by Moses. The first two chapters, and the latter part of the last chapter, are written in prose, and form an introduction and conclusion to the poetical part, which is a poem of the highest order; dealing in subjects the most grand and sublime; using imagery the most chaste and appropriate, described in language the most happy and energetic; conveying instruction, both in divine and human things, the most useful and ennobling; abounding in precepts the most pure and exalted, enforced by arguments the most strong and conclusive, and illustrated by examples the most natural and striking. — Bagster.

With respect to analysis, we shall take that of Dr. Good, who divides the poem into six parts, thus: 1. The opening, (or exordium,) comprising the two first chapters of the book, which briefly state the misfortunes of Job, the chief subject (or hero) of the poem; the source, or cause of them, and the names of his three friends, who came to converse with, and console him. 2. From the commencement of the third to the end of the fourth chapter, contains the first series of Dialogues between Job and his three friends, Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar. 3. The second debate, from the beginning of the fifth chapter to the close of the twenty-first. 4. The last series of controversy between Job and his friends, extending from the beginning of the twenty-second to the close of the thirty-first chapter. 5. The summing up of the debate by Elihu, who is now first introduced. 6. The judgment pronounced by Jehovah himself from the whirlwind; Job's submission, and final restoration to prosperity, while his three friends are directed to present sacrifices by the hands of Job, as their priest and intercessor.

CHAPTER I.

<sup>a</sup> The holiness, riches, and religious care of Job for his children. <sup>6</sup> Satan, appearing before God, by calumny, obtained leave to tempt Job. <sup>13</sup> Understanding of the loss of his goods and children, in his mourning he blessed God.

THERE was a man in the land of <sup>a</sup> Uz, whose name was <sup>b</sup> Job; and that man was perfect and upright, and one that <sup>c</sup> feared God, and eschewed evil.

2 And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

3 His <sup>d</sup> substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a very great <sup>e</sup> household; so that this man was the greatest of all the <sup>f</sup> men of the east.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and sent and called for their three sisters to eat and to drink with them.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt-offerings according to the

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1520.

a 1 Ch. 1. 17, 42.

b La. 4. 21.

c Eccl. 14. 14.

d Pr. 16. 6.

e or, husbandry.

f sons.

g La. 24. 15, 16.

h all the days.

i c. 21. & c.

j 1 Ki. 22. 19.

k the adversary.

l 1 Ch. 21. 1.

m Eccl. 3. 1.

n Re. 12. 9, 10.

o in the midst of them.

p Mat. 12.
43.

q Ps. 5. 8.

r set thy heart on.

s Ps. 34. 7.

t or, cattle.

number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed <sup>6</sup> God in their hearts. Thus did Job <sup>h</sup> continually.

6 ¶ Now there was a day <sup>i</sup> when the sons of God came <sup>j</sup> to present themselves before the Lord, and <sup>k</sup> Satan came also <sup>l</sup> among them.

7 And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord, and said, From going <sup>m</sup> to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

8 And the Lord said unto Satan, Hast thou <sup>n</sup> considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil?

9 Then Satan answered the Lord, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought?

10 Hast not thou made a hedge <sup>o</sup> about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his <sup>p</sup> substance is increased in the land.

11 But put forth thy hand now, and touch

CHAP. I. Ver. 1—22. The character of Job, and the history of his trials.—“Job’s character is that of “a perfect and upright man;” but his history sufficiently shows that this is not meant of an absolute perfection, “for there is no man that sinneth not,” but of that sterling integrity, which distinguishes “one that feareth God and escheweth,” that is, fleeth or carefully avoideth “evil.” Job was also rich, and his substance consisted in his family and his cattle, as was the case with all the patriarchs; and the multitude of the latter clearly indicate him to have been an Arab prince, of the first rank in the country—the prince or chief magistrate of Uz.

This man had a family of children grown up, and living in harmony, as appears by their holding feasts in turns at each of their houses on their own respective birth-days. Job, who in no instance appears to have been present, conscious that too often excess or levity mingle in the enjoyments, even of domestic circles, sent for and sanctified his sons, by offering sacrifices on their behalf (at which they were, doubtless, enjoined to attend) on the morning following their convivial meetings. “It may be (said he) that my sons may have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts.” Some think that this expression only means that they might have omitted to implore the divine blessing; others, that they might have fallen into idolatry, and “blessed the gods” of the heathen. This book, however, furnishes no allusions to any species of idolatry, but that of the heavenly bodies; and the offering of a solemn propitiatory sacrifice seems to imply something more than a mere omission of the forms of devotion. Piety, we know, is not hereditary; and profaneness could not be more incredible in the sons of Job than in those of Aaron and Eli, especially considering the character of Job’s wife. Job’s sons also appear to have been disposed to conviviality, and men in their cups are too apt to forget God, or to blaspheme him, the crime (as we conceive) here intended; and a crime, we lament to say, not unfrequent even among professing Christians, who but too often dishonour their profession by associating with infidel and profane persons in their festivals.

A new scene now opens upon us, and we have a view into the spiritual world, which is thus beautifully introduced by Dr.

Boothroyd: “To represent the majesty and glory of the Supreme Governor of the world, and the manner in which He administers its affairs, the Holy Scriptures borrow images from what obtains among men. Hence Jehovah is spoken of as sitting on his throne, attended by the different orders of servants, to whom are allotted various offices in the administration of his providential empire. In this manner Isaiah beheld him in the temple, ch. vi.; and in this manner Micaiah describes him to Ahab. (1 Kings xxii. 19—22.) In the same manner, the author of Job represents God as a king, before whom his ministers attend at stated times, to give in an account of their various services. Among those called the sons of God, (holy angels,) we find one of another character, called Satan, or the adversary, to whom the Supreme Governor addresses himself, and who accuses Job as serving God only for the temporal good with which he was blessed. God permits him to deprive Job of his property and children [in order to try him.] The whole representation is designed to teach us that good and evil angels are equally subject to the divine control, and that the kindness of the one, or malice of the other, can only effect what God appoints or permits.”

Caution, as Dr. Boothroyd remarks, is certainly necessary in explaining passages of this nature, not to be too minute; but there are some circumstances in the supposed conversation between the Creator and the arch-enemy of mankind, too interesting to be passed over in silence. God, we may be sure, never asks questions for information: but often to induce confession, and make the culprit convict himself. This question, “Whence comest thou?” elicits the true character of the tempter, who is described by St. Peter as “a roaring lion, who walketh about seeking whom he may devour.” Thus Satan himself—I come “from going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it:” a strong argument, as the apostle intimates, for men to be at all times sober and vigilant, that they fall not into his power. But “hast thou considered my servant Job?” says the Almighty: “Hast thou fixed thy mind, thy heart upon him? Has not a man so remarkable for integrity and piety attracted thy peculiar attention?” “Yes;” as if the enemy had said, but “thou hast set an hedge about him, CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Land of Uz.—[Some suppose “the land of Uz” took its name from Uz, the grandson of Seir the Horite, and that it was a part of Idumæa; but others, with Bochart and Michaelis, think it was El Gouta, or the valley of Damascus, of which city Uz, the grandson of Shem is said to have been the founder.] — Bagster.

Ver. 3. Household.—His family, including all his servants, employed in agriculture.—The men of the East.—East is a relative term, and may be differently applied; but here, Bishop Louth has ascertained it to intend, that part of Arabia Petrea between Egypt and the Euphrates; and Idumæa was that part of the country at the south west corner of the Dead sea.

"all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thy hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were ploughing, and the asses feeding beside them:

15 And the Sabaeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

16 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

17 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

18 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

19 And, behold, there came a great wind from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

20 Then Job arose, and rent his mantle, and about all that he hath," and "I cannot get at him." Truly blessed is it to be under the divine protection, even Satan himself being witness. But as for Job, "Doth he fear God for nought?" saith the adversary. "Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased; but put forth thy hand now and touch all that he hath, and see if he will not curse thee to thy face." Satan has deeply studied human nature; and though he might be mistaken in this instance, it is indeed true that many profess religion on principles of self-interest, and renounce it, when they find their religion and their interest clash.

But Job was not of this character, and to prove this, and set his character in the strongest light, permission is given to try him by poverty and distress. No sooner is this given, than Satan, ever upon the alert in evil, collects the Sabian and Chaldean banditti to plunder him of his property. "The prince of the power of the air" is even suffered to ride the whirlwind, and to wield the thunderbolt, that destroys his family and consumes his flock; and it is now, we apprehend, that Job is most advantageously presented to us as an example of patience—the most eminent in the Old Testament history. Aaron, it is true, lost two of his sons, and held his peace: Eli heard with submission the decree against his family: but Job appears to have felt more keenly; and yet, in the moment of his agony, not only submitted, but gratefully adored. "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return

Ver. 11. And he will curse thee.—The learned Seldon says, "It is most certain that the verb barak, signifies to exorcise, or curse, as well as to bless; and this, as I think, (he adds,) not by antiphrasis, as some will have it; but almost from the very idiom of the sacred language, it may signify either way, according to the connexion in which it is used, as among the Latins sacrare and impiccare. For, as the first signifies at some times, to devote any one, by curses, to destruction, and at others, to consecrate any thing to God; and as we call for either good or evil upon others, so barak denotes what a man wishes, or calls for with an ardent mind, whether it be salvation or perdition. And when applied to the Deity, it either signifies addressing him by praises and thanksgivings, (which is more common,) or with revilings and reproaches: and the difference is to be collected from the nature of the case, and from the context." Parkehurst, however, denies this, and insists that the word uniformly means, to bless; and he is followed by Drs. God, Clarke, Boothroyd, and many others. Here, therefore, they render the words interrogatively, "Will he then, indeed, bless thee to thy face?" But this is surely very tame for the prince of apostate spirits! The Heb. particle (am) is frequently used in oaths and protestations; and we should rather render it, supplying the necessary verb, "See if he curse thee not to thy face!" i. e. I protest he will. Compare Num. xv. 23, and note; Psalm xcv. 11.

Ver. 15. Sabaeans.—These Sabaeans were probably those who were the descendants of Abraham, by Keturah, and who inhabited Arabia Deserta, east of the land of Uz: though some think they were the descendants of Sheba, son of Cush, and inhabited Arabia Felix.—Bagster.

Ver. 16. The fire of God.—This is literal; and does not mean, as in the margin, "a great fire," but fire from heaven; i. e. the lightning.

Ver. 18. A great wind from God.—This is literal; the wilderness, or rather, "assert." Brace describes a whirlwind which took him and two of his ser-

A. M. 2491.

B. C. 1330.

q c. 19. 21.

r if he curse thee not.

s Is. 32. 1.

t hand. Gen. 16. 6.

u Ec. 9. 12.

v or, a great fire.

w rushed.

x from aside.

y Ge. 37. 23.

z or, robe.

a 1 Pe. 5. 6.

b 1 Ti. 6. 7.

c La. 3. 38.

d Ps. 89. 38.

e c. 2. 10.

f or, attributed folly to God.

a c. 1. 6, &amp;c.

b c. 27. 5, 6.

c. 26. 1.

d Mat. 6. 25.

e or, only.

and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped,

21 And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD.

22 In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly.

CHAPTER II.

1 Satan appearing again before God, obtaineth farther leave to tempt Job. 7 He smiteth him with sore biles. 9 Job reproveh his wife, moving him to curse God. 11 His three friends console with him in silence.

AGAIN there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.

5 But put forth thy hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thy hand; but save his life.

7 ¶ So went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with sore biles from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord! In all this Job sinned not."

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—13. Satan failed in his first attempt, obtains leave to increase Job's afflictions, for the farther trial of his faith.—The sons of God, as the holy angels are called here, and in chap. xxxviii. 7, again assemble in the divine presence; and Satan, doubtless in the disguise of an angel of light, (2 Cor. xi. 14.) presents himself again among them: and to a repetition of the same questions, the Almighty adds, concerning Job, "and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movest me against him, to destroy him without cause." On this, we may remark: 1. That Job sustained all his losses, not only of his property but children, without murmuring or repining: "In all this he sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." 2. That though Satan may tempt without sufficient cause, God has a wise and important reason for permitting him. "The trial of our faith being much more precious than (that) of gold which perisheth." (1 Peter i. 7.) Thus Job, when he came forth out of the furnace of affliction, was humbled, and thereby prepared to bear the redoubled felicity of his latter days, and afterwards the higher enjoyments of another world.

Satan now pleads that it wanted only the addition of personal feeling to render Job an apostate, and discover his hypocrisy. To prove the falsehood of this charge, and to advance the character of Job to all posterity, the enemy is permitted to add this farther trial; and, with judgment equal vants off their feet, and threw them; also lifted a camel, which happened to be in the centre of its vortex, and broke its ribs. It also demolished one half of a small hut, as if it had been cut through with a knife, and dispersed the materials all over the plain, leaving the other half standing."

Ver. 21. Naked came I, &c.—Here may be a double reference; but that the earth was the mother of us all, seems a favourite idea among the poets of all nations. The earth was called by the Chaldeans Demeter, and by the Greeks Demeter, or mother-goddess.

CHAP. II. Ver. 3. To destroy him without cause.—It is here expressly asserted, that there was no cause for suspecting Job's integrity, or for treating him as a hypocrite, as Satan had insinuated.

Ver. 4. Skin for skin.—This very ancient proverb is diversely explained. The two following are the most probable interpretations. 1. "Skin after skin," says Parkehurst, who thinks it may refer to the renovation of skin on the human body, importing that a man may bear even to have his skin, as it were, stripped off again and again, provided only that his life be safe. In support of this, Scultetus says, the kindred verb in Arabic, which means to flay, or strip off the skin," is also applied to stripping a person of his property, or for the loss of skin; and supposing the skins of animals to be a staple article of trade, then skin for skin, or all the skins which a man possesses, will he give for his own skin; that is, to save his life, or soul.

Ver. 7. Sore biles.—"Ulcerous sores." Boothroyd: "A burning ulcer." Good. [Shechin ra, supposed to be the Judham, or black leprosy, of the Arabs, termed Elephantiasis by the Greeks, from its rendering the skin, like that of the elephant, scabrous, dark-coloured, and furrowed all over with tubercles. This loathsome, and most afflictive disease is accompanied with most intolerable itching.]—Bagster.

8 And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and he sat down among the ashes.

9 ¶ Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

11 ¶ Now when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come to mourn with him and to comfort him.

12 And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not, they lifted up their voice, and wept; and they rent every one his mantle, and sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So they sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights, and none spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great.

CHAPTER III.

1 Job curseth the day and services of his birth. 13 The ease of death. 20 He complaineth of life, because of his anguish.

AFTER this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his day.

2 And Job spake, and said,

3 Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man child conceived.

to his malignity, Satan selects the elephantiasis, or black leprosy of the Arabs, as the most loathsome and distressing of all diseases.

It is difficult to ascertain the exact import of the ancient proverb here quoted, "Skin for skin;" what we judge most probable is subjoined in the notes: the general meaning, however, is, that there is nothing so near and dear, but a man will part with it to save his life, or his soul. He will give the fruit of his body for the sin of his soul." (Micah vi. 7.)

But Job still "retained his integrity." Satan, therefore, found it necessary to employ an accomplice, and that accomplice he found in the patriarch's wife; and he suggested to her the temptation most exactly suited to his wishes. He had predicted that, as his sufferings became more intense, Job would curse his Maker to his face; and this, (strange to think!) is the very thing that she advises, "Dost thou still retain thy integrity?" As if she had said, "Wilt thou still serve that God who thus tormenteth thee? Curse him, and then die; for die thou evidently must!" Or perhaps the temptation was still more desperate, and pointed to suicide—"Why wilt thou thus continue to suffer, when thy sufferings might so easily be terminated by thine own hand? 'Curse him' for his cruelty, and fly from it." Were this woman an idolater, as is not improbable, this is easily accounted for; for the heathen often cursed their gods, and had, in general, no expectations of an hereafter. Job's reply seems to countenance this, by ranking her with foolish, that is, with wicked women; and from this time it is likely that she deserted him, as we infer from his complaint, chap. xix. 17, and perhaps never lived to see his happy restoration. Job's reply to this temptation is no less admirable than his conduct in the former instance: "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and not receive evil?" "In all this did not Job sin with his lips." On this passage we shall ground only one remark, but it is an important one.

Ver. 8. A potsherd.—A piece of broken earthenware. Such fragments were generally cast upon the dust heap, without doors, where Job was now sitting in distress.

Ver. 9. Curse God, and die.—Parkhurst renders this, "Dost thou yet retain thine integrity, blessing God, and dying?" and he is followed by most modern translators; but we greatly hesitate to follow him. Surely there is no time more appropriate for blessing God, than that of death! But in the lips of such characters as Satan and Job's wife, cursing seems more appropriate, than blessing.

Ver. 11. Job's three friends.—The LXX. thus designate them: 1. Eliphaz, king of the Temanites, (an Edomite, Gen. xxvi. 10, 11.) 2. Bildad, chief of the Shuchites, (or Shuhites.) And 3. Zophar, king of the Minaites, or Naamathites. They were probably the chief of these tribes, but by no means independent sovereigns.

CHAP. III. Ver. 2. Job spake.—The term does not always imply a previous question, (as we find in our Lord's discourses,) but merely a reference to some previous circumstance. Job perceived the thoughts of his friends in their silence, and broke out into the following passionate exclamations.

Ver. 3. Let the day perish.—[That is, as we say, "Let it be blotted out of the Calendar." It was an ancient custom to mark certain days as fortunate or unfortunate, because on them some fortunate or calamitous event had occurred. Mournful dirges were rehearsed with loud lamentations, on the unfortunate ones; on which they never indulged themselves in any mirth or pleasure.]

A. M. 2484
B. C. 1320.
f Mat. 11. 21.

g Ja. 5. 10, 11
h Ps. 39. 1.

i Ge. 36. 11.
Je. 49. 7.

j Ge. 25. 2.

k Ro. 12. 15.

l Na. 9. 1.

La. 2. 10.

m Ezr. 9. 3. 5

n Ge. 50. 10.

a answered

b c. 10. 13,
&c.
Je. 20. 14.

c or, chal-
lange.

d or, let them terrify it, as those who have a bitter day
Am. 8. 10.

e or, rejoice
among.

f Je. 9. 17. 20

g or, a Leviathan.

h eyelids of the morning.

i Is. 66. 12.

j c. 15. 28.

k Ps. 53. 8.

4 Let that day be darkness; let not God regard it from above, neither let the light shine upon it.

5 Let darkness and the shadow of death stain it; let a cloud dwell upon it; let the blackness of the day terrify it.

6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it; let it not be joined unto the days of the year, let it not come into the number of the months.

7 Lo, let that night be solitary, let no joyful voice come therein.

8 Let them curse it that curse the day, who are ready to raise up their mourning.

9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark; let it look for light, but have none; neither let it see the dawning of the day:

10 Because it shut not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor hid sorrow from mine eyes.

11 Why died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly?

12 Why did the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck?

13 For now should I have lain still and been quiet, I should have slept: then had I been at rest

14 With kings and counsellors of the earth, which build desolate places for themselves;

15 Or with princes that had gold, who filled their houses with silver:

16 Or as a hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never saw light.

From whatever quarter our troubles may arise, we should regard them as coming from God, since they cannot come without his permission, and are never permitted, but for some valuable end. "All things work together for good to them that love God." (Rom. viii. 28.)

The news of Job's melancholy reverse of circumstances soon spread in the surrounding country, and three of his former friends, whom the Septuagint translators denominate kings, (meaning in the patriarchal sense,) though all inferior to Job, who was "the greatest man in all the east," came, as by common consent, to visit and to "comfort him." His disorder had so altered him, that, at first, they did not know him; and when they did they wept over him, and sprinkled dust upon their heads, and sat down with him in silence in the open air, or probably spread a tent near him. But they saw his grief was so passionate and overwhelming, that they sat his first seven days (which shows that they divided their time into weeks) without addressing him. It does not follow, however, that they conversed not among themselves. On the contrary, it is likely they now formed their judgment on his case, and arranged the plan and order of the subsequent conversations.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1.—26. Job, in an agony of distress, breaks out into a passionate expression of his grief and misery, and wishes for death as a deliverance.—An elegant writer remarks, that "the inhabitants of the East, in general, are a solitary kind of people; they speak but seldom, and not long without emotion. . . . They are poetical and full of metaphor. Speaking with them is a matter of some moment, as we may gather from their usual introductions; for before they begin to deliver their thoughts, they give notice that they will open their mouth . . . unloose their tongue . . . utter their voice, and pronounce with their lips. These preambles bear a great resemblance to the old forms of introduction of Homer, Hesiod, and Orpheus, in which they are sometimes followed by Virgil.

—Bagster.—The night in which it was said.—Both members of this verse certainly refer to his birth, and the latter most accurately to the announcement of it to his father; "the night in which it was announced (namely, to his father) a man child is brought forth;" (so Good) or, more strictly, has been borne."

Ver. 4. Let not God regard it.—"Unclose." Good; who says the verb, both in Hebrew and Arabic, is "to open, or unclose." The idea of not opening, or unloosing, the morning, is beautifully poetical.

Ver. 5. Stain it.—Boothroyd. "Claim it," as belonging rather to midnight than the day.—Let a cloud dwell on it.—More literally, as well as poetical, "Let the storm pitch on it," as a traveller pitcheth his tent. Possibly it may allude to that intense darkness that sometimes indicated the divine presence. See Psalm xviii. 11.—Let the blackness of the day terrify it.—"But what is the blackness of the day?" says Dr. Good. We may reply, the tempest just referred to, which is far more awful than the natural darkness of the night.

Ver. 8. Let them curse it (the night) that curse the day.—[That is, probably, "Let them curse my birth-day who hate day light, such as thieves, murderers, &c., and let them curse it who, like me, being weary of life, are so desperate as to provoke the leviathan."—Bagster.

Ver. 14. Which built, &c.—[Who erect splendid mausoleums, funeral monuments, &c., to keep their names from perishing, while their bodies are turned to corruption.]—Bagster.

17 There the wicked cease from troubling ; and there the weary be at rest.

18 There the prisoners rest together ; they hear not the voice of the oppressor.

19 The small and great are there ; and the servant is free from his master.

20 Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life unto the bitter in soul ;

21 Which <sup>m</sup> long <sup>n</sup> for death, but it cometh not ; and dig for it more than for hid treasures ;

22 Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad, when they can find the grave ?

23 Why is light given to a man whose way is hid, and whom God hath <sup>o</sup> hedged in ?

24 For my sighing cometh <sup>p</sup> before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like the waters.

25 For <sup>q</sup> the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me.

26 I was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet ; yet trouble came.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Eliphaz reproveth Job for want of religion. 7 He teacheth God's judgments to be not for the righteous, but for the wicked. 12 His fearful vision, to humble the excellency of creatures before God.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 If we assay <sup>a</sup> to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved ? but who can <sup>b</sup> withhold himself from speaking ?

3 Behold, thou hast instructed many, and thou hast strengthened <sup>c</sup> the weak hands.

4 Thy words have upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the <sup>d</sup> feeble knees.

I may subjoin, (adds this author,) that they are the very expressions adopted by the sacred writers." (Blackwall's Life of Homer.) Thus is Job's speech introduced: "He opened his mouth, and cursed his day."

Here commences, according to the analysis we have adopted, the second part of this book, "which comprises the first colloquy, or series of argument. Job, completely overwhelmed, and believing himself abandoned by his Creator, gives a loose to all the wildness of despondency; and, in an address of exquisite force and feeling, laments that he ever beheld the light, and calls earnestly for death, as the only refuge of the miserable. This burst of agony is filled with the boldest images and imprecations, and might, perhaps, be thought, in some parts of it, too daring, but that it appears to have been regarded as a masterpiece by the best poets of Judea, and is imitated in its boldest flights by king David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel." (Dr. Good, see Jer. xx. 14-18; Lam. iii. 1-20, &c.) But how shall we justify such language as this of Job? Happily we are not called upon to do this. It is no more said (as twice before) that "Job did not sin with his lips." This was the language, not of his judgment, but of his feelings, and was, doubtless, sinful in the sight of God. It is not, however, for us to criticise it, who never felt his trials: let the man who has been visited with the gout, the stone, or the leprosy—let him, who, at the same time, has been bereaved of every earthly comfort, and reduced from affluence to penury—let him who, under such circumstances, never murmured nor repined—let him cast the first stone.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1-21. Eliphaz reproves Job's impatience, and questions his integrity.—He begins by intimating that he could no longer refrain from speaking, though he was well

Ver. 19. Small and great.—[The grave is the common receptacle of all; where all sorts and conditions of men are equally blended, and ultimately reduced to one common dust. All men begin and end life alike; "Pale death, with equal pace, knocks at the palaces of kings, and at the cottages of the poor."—Bagster.]

Ver. 23. Whose way is hid.—That is, who is surrounded with troubles, from which he can see no possible way of escape.

Ver. 25. For the things, &c.—From the moment of his reverse of circumstances, he dreaded their accumulation and increase.

Ver. 26. I was not in safety.—Heath renders it, "I have no more ease" &c. We should prefer the following, "I have had no more ease, nor rest, nor quiet; but trouble (only) hath come." So Scott, (the poet.)

"Still trembling, suffering, I'm allowed to know
No ease from terror, nor one pause from woe."

CHAP. IV. Ver. 6. Is not this thy fear, &c. This verse is generally read in the interrogative, but would, we conceive, be much clearer in the indicative. Eliphaz, referring to Job's former professions and confidence in God, says, "This is not thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightness of thy ways;" i. e. this is no proof of that fear of God, &c. which thou didst recommend to others.

Ver. 12. A thing was secretly brought.—A title (a murmur or whisper) thereof. "A hollow, sepulchral murmur."—Good.

Ver. 13. In thoughts from the visions, &c.—The word rendered thoughts, implies "tumultuous thoughts; mental agitations."—Good.

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1520.

1 wearied in strength.

m wait.

n Re. 9.6.

o c. 19.8.
La. 3.7.

p my meat.

q I feared a fear, and it came upon me.

a a word.

b refrain from words.

c Is. 35.3.

d bowing, He. 12.12.

e Ga. 6.7,8.

f i. e. his anger. c. 15.30. La. 1.4.

g Ps. 58.6.

h by stealth.

i met me.

j the multitude of.

k or, I heard a still voice.

l or, nor in his angels, in whom he put light.

m 2 Pe. 2.4.

5 But now it is come upon thee, and thou faintest; it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightness of thy ways?

7 Remember, I pray thee, who ever perished, being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen, they <sup>a</sup> that plough iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.

9 By the blast of God they perish, and by <sup>f</sup> the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and the teeth <sup>g</sup> of the young lions, are broken.

11 The old lion perisheth for lack of prey, and the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

12 Now a thing was <sup>b</sup> secretly brought to me, and mine ear received a little thereof.

13 In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men, 14 Fear <sup>c</sup> came upon me, and trembling, which made <sup>d</sup> all my bones to shake.

15 Then a spirit passed before my face; the hair of my flesh stood up:

16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image <sup>e</sup> was before mine eyes, <sup>k</sup> there was silence, and I heard a voice, saying,

17 Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker?

18 Behold, he put no trust in his servants; <sup>l</sup> and his angels <sup>m</sup> he charged with folly:

19 How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation <sup>n</sup> is in the dust, <sup>o</sup> which are crushed before the moth?

aware that the remarks he was about to offer would be far from palatable. First, he remonstrates with him on his inconsistency; he that had been accustomed to animate and encourage others, himself faints in the day of trial. He then admonishes him not to be too confident in his own integrity, and broadly intimates, that as God was not wont to punish the innocent, it became him to inquire whether these extraordinary afflictions were not intended to correct him for sins, secret and unrepented of. And here is introduced, unquestionably, one of the finest passages that was ever penned, whether we consider the doctrine, or its poetic imagery, which is so singularly beautiful, that we are induced to give it in its poetic form.

- 12 Now to me was an oracle delivered privily,
And mine ear caught a whisper thereof;
- 13 Amid (my) agitation from visions of the night,
When deep sleep falleth upon men;
- 14 Fear and horror alarmed me,
And the multitude of my bones trembled.
- 15 Then a spirit passed before my face,
And the hair of my flesh became erect.
- 16 It stood still; but I could not distinguish its form:
A figure (stood) before mine eyes;
- There was silence, and I heard a voice:—
- 17 "Shall a mortal man be righteous before God?
Shall a man be pure before his maker?"
- 18 Behold, he placeth no reliance on his servants,
And to his angels he ascribeth no praise.
- 19 How much less (to) those who dwell in houses of clay,
Which have their foundation in the dust.
They are crushed before the moth;
From morn till even are they beaten down;
They are ever perishing unnoticed;
- 21 Their (gay) fluttering is soon over with them
They die—and are without wisdom."

The concluding verses, which so beautifully describe the

Ver. 14. Fear came upon me.—Or rather, "called to me," as the partridge (which has its name from this root) calls to alarm her young, when in danger.

Ver. 15. Then a spirit.—Ambiguities necessarily arise from the same word (both in Hebrew and Greek) signifying spirit and mind. In this place, Scott (the poet) thinks a strong, rushing wind intended, to prepare for the vision, (see chap. xxx. 15.) but we prefer the popular version.

Ver. 16. An image.—"A spectre," says Dr. Good; but this is not a Scriptural word; we therefore prefer Dr. Boothroyd's rendering, "a figure."

Ver. 17. More just . . . more pure.—This is neither correct nor elegant: there can be no supposition of man being purer than his Maker. The Hebrew (Mem) usually and primarily signifies from; but this is an idiomatical expression, and both Genesis and Parkehurst consider it, in some cases, equivalent to (lipene) "before," or in the sight of God. So it is frequently rendered by our translators, and twice, particularly in Num. xxii. 22. "guiltless before the Lord, and before Israel;" i. e. "he shall have an acquittal (mem) from the Lord, and (mem) from Israel." Good, Boothroyd, and many others, therefore here render it before.

Ver. 18. His angels he charged with folly.—This is too weak a term, when applied to the fallen angels, and too strong to apply to those unfallen. The margin says, ("in whom") he put light; but the word commonly, and most strictly, signifies praise; which, therefore, we have preferred.

Ver. 19. How much less in them.—The in is supplementary: "If God neither confideth in, nor bestoweth thanks on his most exalted servants, how much less doth he thus regard poor mortal man!"—(Which are crushed.—There is no relative in the original; it should therefore be rendered, as by Good 20 They are "destroyed from morning to evening: they perish for ever without any regarding it.

21 Doth "not their excellency which is in them go away? they "die, even without wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

The harm of inconsideration. 3 The end of the wicked is misery. 6 God is to be regarded in affliction. 17 The happy end of God's correction.

CALL now, if there be any that will answer thee; and to which of the saints wilt thou "turn?

2 For wrath killeth the foolish man, and "envy slayeth the silly one.

3 I "have seen the foolish taking root: but suddenly I cursed his habitation.

4 His children are far from safety, and they are crushed in the gate, neither is there any to deliver them.

5 Whose harvest the hungry eateth up, and taketh it even out of the thorns, and the robber swalloweth up their substance.

6 Although "affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground;

7 Yet "man is born unto "trouble, as the "sparks fly upward.

8 I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause:

9 Which doeth great things and "unsearchable; marvellous things "without number:

10 Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the "fields:

11 To set up on high those that be low; that those which mourn may be exalted to safety.

12 He "disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their "enterprise.

vanity of man in every circle of life, are thus finely expressed in the poetical version of Scott:

"Crush'd like a moth, these beings of a day,
With unregarded waste are swept away:
Their honours perish, and themselves descend,
Fools to the grave, and thoughtless of their end."

The above translation is not offered as original, nor is it copied from any one author, but formed by comparing several, as may be seen in the notes. The beauty of the passage has tempted us to be thus particular; and we shall offer two or three farther remarks. 1. It details one of those visions with which mankind were frequently favoured, before divine revelation was fixed by written records; and the description is eminently sublime. An aerial undefined form passes before Eliphaz; then it stops—a pause ensues, and in a hollow sepulchral tone, delivers the following oracle. 2. Whether the vision be considered as divine or not, the doctrine of the spectre, (if it may be so called,) is equally sublime and just: no creature can boast absolute purity or perfection in the sight of God. Creatures are, in their very nature, mutable; the Infinite Being, therefore, confides not in their services, nor admits in the highest of them a claim of merit. (See Luke xvii. 9, 10.) 3. However elevated man may consider himself above the lower creation, creatures are all on a level before the Creator. As a thousand years are in his sight but as a day; so a man, or an angel, are in his sight but as an insect or a worm. 4. That this world is no more the scene of perfect knowledge than of complete happiness. We are ever seeking both, but attain very little of either. We die in ignorance, though in different degrees.

CHAP. V. VER. 1—27. The speech of Eliphaz continued.—Eliphaz proceeds in the same animated style, to reprove Job, (and in some respects justly,) for his hasty censures of the and others, "They are crushed before the moth," or moth-worm, as some read it.—"Before" must here mean "sooner," or with more ease.

Ver. 20. They are destroyed—Rather, "cut," or "beaten down" like moths and butterflies. Parkhurst applies this to the moth-worm, and refers to Isa. li. 8. But in that text, not only our common version, but Bp. Leath also applies this word (ash, or Os) to the moth itself, and the following word, (sas), to the worm, or grub.

Ver. 21. Doth not their excellency, &c.—This verse is very obscure and difficult. Dr. Good thus elegantly renders it, alluding to the papilio;

"Their fluttering round is over with them;
They die—a nothing in wisdom."

The word rendered by Good "their fluttering round," is used in reference to the flight of pigeons, and to the ploughing of oxen: to a circle of jewels, or of rank and succession, &c.

CHAP. V. VER. 4. Crushed in the gate.—That is, punished. The gate of a city was always the seat of magistracy: this insinuates that his children had been culprits.

Ver. 5. Whose harvest the hungry eateth.—This seems an allusion to the half-starved Arabs of the desert, as described by Volney, who live by violence and plunder.

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1530.

n beaten in pieces.

o Ps. 146. 3, 4

p Is. 2. 22.

a or, look.

b or, indignation.

c Ps. 37. 35

d or, iniquity.

e 1 Co. 10. 13.

f or, labour.

g sons of the burning coal fly up to fly.

h there is no search.

i till there be no number.

j out places.

k Ne. 4. 15.

l or, any thing.

m 1 Co. 3. 19.

n or, run into.

Is. 59. 10.

Am. 8. 9.

o Ps. 107. 41.

p Is. 12. 5.

q De. 32. 39.

r Ps. 91. 3.

s Ps. 37. 19.

t hands.

u or, when the tongue scourgeth.

v Ps. 31. 20.

w Is. 11. 9.

x or, that peace is thy tabernacle.

y or, err.

z or, much.

a Pr. 9. 11.

13 He "taketh the wise in their own craftiness: and the counsel of the froward is carried headlong.

14 They "meet with darkness in the day-time, and grope in the noon-day as in the night.

15 But "he saveth the poor from the sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty.

16 So the poor hath hope, and iniquity stoppeth her mouth.

17 Behold, happy "is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:

18 For "he maketh sore, and bindeth up: he woundeth, and his hands make whole.

19 He "shall deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee.

20 In famine "he shall redeem thee from death: and in war from the "power of the sword.

21 Thou shalt be hid "from the scourge of the "tongue: neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh.

22 At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh: neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts of the earth.

23 For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field: and the beasts "of the field shall be at peace with thee.

24 And thou shalt know "that thy tabernacle shall be in peace: and thou shalt visit thy habitation, and shalt not "sin.

25 Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be "great, and thine offspring as the grass of the earth.

26 Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full "age, divine providence, and intemperate language. He delivers some excellent observations on the various uses of affliction, and the duty of absolute submission to the Almighty. How far Eliphaz understood the doctrine of spiritual agency we cannot say; but the opening of this chapter seems to us to have an allusion to that spiritual session so finely described in the introductory part of this book, when the sons of God met together before the eternal throne. Surveying, as it were, "the shining ranks on high," Eliphaz challenges Job to appeal to them on his behalf. "Call now, if there be any that will answer thee; and to which of these holy ones wilt thou turn?" He directs him to look up to the celestial court, and see if there be any of the "sanctities around the throne," who dare to use language like that employed by him. The man who attempts to justify himself puts angels to the blush, who never look upward, but they cover their faces with their wings.

Having given this challenge, Eliphaz returns to his former argument, that suffering is the consequence of sin, and that all men reap according to what they sow.

A passage is here introduced, which, though in gentle terms, seems to have a particular reference to Job's case. Eliphaz had seen "a foolish man," by which he evidently means a hypocrite, taking root like a mighty tree, and his children, like branches, spreading far around him: and he suddenly "cursed his habitation;" but why so? He suspected his character and forecast his downfall; intimating that he was not surprised at Job's misfortunes, nor those of his children, as arising out of his own folly: possibly he had been too indulgent, and they had abused that indulgence. From hence, therefore, he uncharitably censured Job's integrity, and concluded that he had brought these troubles on himself. How far Eliphaz and Job's other friends erred, as to the character of God, we shall see in the close of the controversy: in the

Ver. 6. Although affliction.—Marg. "Iniquity." The Hebrew word certainly signifies both, but the former gives the best sense, and answers best to trouble in the parallelism.

Ver. 7. As the sparks fly upward.—See margin. The Hebrew may also be rendered, "As the sons of the bird (the eagle) are made to fly upwards." So the Syriac, Arabic, and Greek versions: Jerome, Reiske, and Dr. Good. Either way the meaning is, that affliction is as natural and inevitable to fallen man, as ascent is to the sparks of fire, or to the eagle.

Ver. 13. He taketh.—Good, "He entangleth;" taketh them in a net, as Psalm ix. 15.

Ver. 19. Touch thee.—The word often means, to strike with violence, to plague; and is so used, Gen. xii. 17. 2 Kings xv. 5, &c.

Ver. 23. The stones of the field.—That is, nothing shall injure thee. Compare Psalm xci., where many of the same images are used in this chapter.

Ver. 24. And shalt not sin.—The original term, "is a metaphor from skilful slingers, who never miss the mark." Judges xx. 16. So to sin, is to miss the mark of duty. But what is here meant? Does it mean, They shall return home, and not miss their way in the desert? or rather, that when they return home, none of the family shall be found missing? See 1 Sam. xxv. 7, 15.

like as a shock of corn<sup>b</sup> cometh in in his season.
27 Lo this, we have searched<sup>c</sup> it, so it is;
hear it, and know thou it for<sup>d</sup> thy good.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Job sheweth that his complaints are not censures. 8 He wisheth for death, wherein he is assu of comfort. 14 He reproveth his friends of unkindness.

BUT Job answered and said,
2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed,
and my calamity<sup>a</sup> laid in the balances together!

3 For now it would be heavier than the sand<sup>b</sup> of the sea: therefore<sup>c</sup> my words are swallowed up.

4 For the arrows of the Almighty<sup>a</sup> are within me,
the poison whereof drinketh up my spirit:
the terrors<sup>d</sup> of God do set themselves in array against me.

5 Doth the wild ass bray<sup>e</sup> when he hath grass?
or loweth the ox over his fodder?

6 Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt?
or is there any taste in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are as my sorrowful meat.

8 O that I might have my request; and that God would grant me<sup>f</sup> the thing that I long for!

9 Even that<sup>g</sup> it would please God to destroy me;
that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then should I yet have comfort; yea, I would harden myself in sorrow:
let him not spare; for<sup>h</sup> I have not concealed the words of the Holy<sup>i</sup> One.

11 What is my strength, that I should hope?

mean time, we cannot but generally admire his sentiments on the duty of submission under affliction, and the necessity of man's "humbling himself under the mighty hand of God." That trouble is unavoidable in the present life, and that the ways of God are wonderful and unsearchable are obvious truths, and finely illustrated. Dr. Good quotes from an Arabian writer, the following beautiful lines as very similar:

"Be patient, then; submit to present ill:
Time is the sire of wonders: let thy soul Unwavering trust th' eternal Spirit still;
Countless his gifts, his power beyond control."

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1-30. Job's reply to Eliphaz.—Job appears much hurt at the speech of Eliphaz, as deficient in sympathy and tenderness. He complains especially, that the bitter imprecations which he had uttered in a fit of despair little short of insanity, should be thus made the matter of so serious a charge. He begs that his calamities might be duly weighed, as an apology for the intemperance of his language. As to his three friends, abounding with the blessings of life, they might well argue coolly upon afflictions, to which they were wholly strangers, while his body was tortured with pain, and his mind was agitated with a variety of distressing feelings. "Doth the wild ass, (says he,) bray when at grass? or loweth the ox over his fodder?" intimating that they might well be at ease

Ver. 27. We have searched.—Scott (the poet) thinks, that what Eliphaz delivered was the result of the deliberation of Job's friends, before they addressed him. See chap. iii. 13.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 3. My words are swallowed up.—The critics have been puzzled to explain this, but those who have witnessed persons speaking in a violent passion, may perhaps have seen the best illustration of the image, in the labour with which they speak: their words appear as if they had been swallowed, and rising in their throat to choke them; indeed some persons have been choked with passion. This is perhaps more just than the sense suggested in the margin, for persons in a passion seldom want words, though they may want utterance. See Psalm lxxv. 4.

Ver. 4. Arrows of the Almighty.—[The following passage from the Toozooly Teemoor affords a fine illustration of this passage: "It was once demanded of the fourth khaliph, (Ali) if the canopy of heaven were a bow, and the earth the cord thereof; if calamities were the arrows; if mankind were the mark for these arrows; and if the Almighty God, the tremendous and glorious, were the unerring Archer,—to whom would the sons of Adam flee for protection? The khaliph answered, The sons of men must flee unto the Lord!"—Bagster.—The poison whereof.—It is well known that in most barbarous nations—the early Greeks, as well as the Moors and Indians—poisoned arrows were commonly used in war: and to these is the allusion.

Ver. 6. Be eaten without salt.—Salt is one of the necessities of life; (see note on Ezra iv. 14.) and this is especially the case with persons who live on vegetables. Park (the traveller) says, "the long use of vegetable food creates so painful a longing for salt, that no words can sufficiently describe it."

Ver. 8. The thing that I longed for.—i. e. hasten my "expected end."

Ver. 9. Let loose his hand.—Meaning, stretch it out, and strike the fatal blow at once.

Ver. 10. Yet have comfort.—That is, in death; see chap. iii. 17. &c.—I would harden myself.—That is, fortify my mind to bear the worst. But God and others render it, "exult; leap up." So Scott (the poet)—"Exulting hope shall spend my latest breath." I have not concealed.—Or rather, "resisted," or "would not resist."—The word, or command of the Holy One.—That is, the Most Holy. So Good, on the authority of Schultens and St. Jerom.

Ver. 11. What mine end.—The sense seems to be, What better end could I hope, even if my life should be prolonged?

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1520.

b ascendeth
c Pr. 2.3.5.

d thyself.
Pr. 3.12.

e lifted up.
b Pr. 27.3.

c i. e. I want words to express my grief.
Ps. 71.4.

d Ps. 38.15, 16.

e at grass.

f my expectation.

g 1 Ki. 19.4.
Jo. 4.3,8.

h Ps. 40.9.
Ac. 20.20, 27.

i Is. 57.15.

j brazen.

k melteth.

l He. 12.3.

m Ps. 38.11.

n ascend off

o in the heat thereof.

p extinguished.

q Ge. 23.15.

r or, ye are weary of it, or, them.

s not.

t Ec. 12.11.

and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh<sup>i</sup> of brass?

13 Is not my help in me? and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 To him that<sup>k</sup> is afflicted<sup>j</sup> pity should be showed from his friend; but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.

15 My brethren<sup>m</sup> have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks they pass away;

16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

17 What time they wax warm, they<sup>n</sup> vanish: when it is hot, they are<sup>p</sup> consumed out of their place.

18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

19 The troops of Tema<sup>q</sup> looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them.

20 They were confounded because they had hoped; they came thither, and were ashamed.

21 For now<sup>r</sup> ye are<sup>s</sup> nothing; ye see my casting down, and are afraid.

22 Did I say, Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 Teach me, and I will hold my tongue: and cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How forcible<sup>t</sup> are right words! but what doth your arguing reprove?

when surrounded with every comfort, while to him every thing was as unsavoury as the white of an egg.

"The things my soul refuseth to touch, (says he,) Are as sickly food."

Persons accustomed to much affliction will explain this better than the Lexicons. All their food is tasteless and unsavoury; the very sight of it turns them sick.

In the sequel of his discourse, Job, says Scott, (the poet,) "apologizes, laments, despises, wishes vehemently for death, protests his innocence, despairs, upbraids, and soothes. He apologizes again, and laments again. Then, turning to God, he pleads with him, complains loudly of him, expostulates with him, and makes supplication to him."

Nothing but decided derangement could wholly excuse such language; and no being but him who formed his mind, and suffered it to be thus exercised, could possibly draw the line between his guilt and the necessary effects of his misfortunes, or "weigh them together in the balances of the sanctuary." It is by him only who can penetrate motives, that actions can be duly weighed. (1 Sam. ii. 3.)

Job, however, retaliates on his friends with no less severity than they had shown to him. He compares them to the mountain torrents, from various quarters, uniting into a flood; but no sooner does the summer heat come on than they evaporate.

Ver. 12. Strength of stones.—[So Cicero, "For man is not chiseled out of the rock, nor hewn out of the oak: he has a body, and he has a soul; the one actuated by intellect, the other by the senses."—Bagster.]

Ver. 13. Is not my help in me?—This is very obscure. Most modern critics here drop the interrogative:

"Verily, there is no help for me in myself, And wisdom (reason) is driven from me."

See Good, Scott, &c.

Ver. 14. To him that is afflicted (Heb. "melteth," i. e. with grief)—(he) pity from his friend; but he forsaketh.—This is difficult to construe, but it is generally applied to the false friend who has no pity. Gesenius, however, gives to the pau (which means almost any thing) in this place the sense of otherwise; "otherwise (he the friend) forsaketh." &c. But may it not be understood of the distressed man himself, thus? "Lest he forsake (or, otherwise he may forsake) the fear of the Lord;" intimating, that the want of kindness from his friends (as in the following verses) had driven him to despair and impiety.

Ver. 15. As a brook.—Rather, "as a torrent." So Loath; this being the term applied to these temporary streams from the mountain.—A stream of brooks.—Rather, "a flood of torrents;" i. e. several torrents, uniting into a flood.

Ver. 16. Which are blackish (i. e. turbid) by reason of the ice.—The waters are rendered turbid, by the dissolving of the ice on the tops of the mountains.

Ver. 17. Vanish.—As soon as they flow they are dried up," says Loath. They run off so rapidly, that the inhabitants can scarcely fill their culinary vessels.

Ver. 18. Turned aside.—The course of these streams is often changed.—They go to nothing.—Heb. "ascend to nothing;" i. e. the water is lost in evaporation, on the power of which, see note on Gen. viii. 3. to which we may add, that the evaporation from water is reckoned at six times that from land.

Ver. 19. The troops of Tema. &c.—The caravans which travel with merchandise to Egypt, flattered with the sight of water at a distance, were disappointed when they arrived, and found it gone.

Ver. 21. Now ye are nothing.—i. e. your professed friendship is come to nothing, like the passing stream.

Ver. 25. Right words.—Rather, "words of uprightness."—But what doth your arguing.—Literally, "What doth your reproving reprove?" Dr. Good. Or, "What reproof is there in a reproof from you?" Dr. Stock.

26 Do ye imagine to reprove words, and the speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind?

27 Yea, ye <sup>u</sup> overwhelm the fatherless, and ye <sup>v</sup> dig a pit for your friend.

28 Now therefore be content, look upon me; for it is <sup>w</sup> evident unto you if I lie.

29 Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, my righteousness is in <sup>x</sup> it.

30 Is there iniquity in my tongue? cannot my <sup>y</sup> taste discern perverse things?

CHAPTER VII.

1 Job excuseth his desire of death. 12 He complaineth of his own restlessness, 17 and God's watchfulness.

IS there not <sup>a</sup> an appointed <sup>b</sup> time to man upon earth? are not his days also like the days of a hireling?

2 As a servant <sup>c</sup> earnestly desireth the shadow, and as a hireling looketh for the reward of his work:

3 So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights <sup>d</sup> are appointed to me.

4 When <sup>e</sup> I lie down, I say, When shall I arise, and the <sup>f</sup> night be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become loathsome.

6 My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

7 O remember that my life is wind: mine <sup>g</sup> eye shall <sup>h</sup> no more <sup>i</sup> see good.

8 The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: thine eyes are upon me, and <sup>j</sup> I am not.

A. M. 2184.

B. C. 1520.

u cause to fall upon,

v before your face.

w i.e. this matter.

x palate.

a or, warfare.

b c. 14.5, 14.

c gapeh

after.

d Ps. 6.6.

e De. 28. 67.

f evening be measured.

g Ge. 42. 36.

h not return.

i to see, i. e.

to enjoy.

j i. e. I can live no longer.

k Ps. 49. 12,

14.

l bones.

m c. 10. 1, 30.

n Ps. 8.4.

o Ps. 90. 4.

p Ps. 36. 6.

q La. 3. 12.

r Mt. 7. 13,

19.

s 1 Jn. 1. 9.

t Ps. 103. 15.

9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away: so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.

10 He <sup>k</sup> shall return no more to his house neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am I a sea, or a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions:

15 So that my soul chooseth strangling, and death rather than my life.

16 I <sup>m</sup> loathe it; I will not live alway: let me alone; for my days are vanity.

17 What <sup>n</sup> is man, that thou shouldest magnify him? and that thou shouldest set thy heart upon him?

18 And that thou shouldest visit him every morning, and try him every moment?

19 How long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone till I swallow down my spittle?

20 I have <sup>o</sup> sinned; what shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver <sup>p</sup> of men? why hast thou set me as a mark <sup>q</sup> against thee, so that I am a burden to myself?

21 And why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and take away <sup>r</sup> mine iniquity? for now shall I sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I <sup>s</sup> shall not be.

rate, and disappoint the thirsty traveller: so these, his former friends, had agreed to meet from different districts, in order to comfort him; but, instead of pouring consolation into his distressed heart, their friendship had all evaporated in controversy, and he derived from them no consolation. He reproaches them also with deserting him; charges them with attempting to ensnare him, and, with criticising language, which proceeded from the extremity of his despair, and not from reason or his heart. He denies any former obligations to their assistance, and begs only a patient hearing in his own defence, that he may establish his integrity.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1—21. Job concludes his reply.—This chapter also opens with some admirable sentiments on the nature and trials of human life, which he describes as an appointed warfare in which all men are engaged; and a work in which every man has his set labour, and looks for his reward and rest in death: like a slave following, with open mouth and anxious looks, the course of the sun till it sets in the horizon: "So am I made, (says Job,) to possess months of vanity;" and not only so, but, instead of rest, at evening, "wearisome nights also are appointed to me." Job next describes the loathsome situation of his body—"clothed (or covered) with worms and dust." This expression, strong as it is, can hardly be thought too forcible for a wretched leper sitting upon a rubbish heap, where all the soil is dust, and without any opportunity of bathing. Maundrell, the celebrated traveller in the Holy Land, saw at Sichem ten lepers, whose distemper, he says, was "so noisome, that it might well pass for the utmost corruption of the human body on this side the grave." Job then changes the figure, and instead of complaining of the tediousness of his days and nights, complains of their brevity and rapidity: he compares them to the weaver's shuttle and the passing wind. The former seems to be a favourite image in the East, for thus opens the history of Timur, (commonly called Tamerlane,) "Praise be to God, who hath woven the web of human affairs in the loom of his will and of his wisdom." Human life is also commonly compared to a breath, to air, or to a vapour; the latter, in particular, by St. James: "What is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away:" the very image that is taken up by this man of affliction—"as the cloud that vanisheth away."

Several expressions in this chapter have been urged to prove that Job had no expectation of a future state; but though he does not here (as he does hereafter) evince the triumphant faith of a Christian, or even a pious Jew; yet he by no means settles into the gloom of infidelity. As to the expressions, "I am not," ver. 8, and "I shall not be," in the last verse of this chapter, we are certain that they cannot imply an anticipation of non-existence, because the same are used of the patriarch Enoch, of whom Moses says, (Gen. v. 24.) "He was not, for God took him," where nothing further can be meant, than his removal from earth to heaven. So it is explained by the apostle to the Hebrews, (chap. xi. 5.) "By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death." On this chapter, Scott (the commentator) judiciously remarks—"In the middle of this discourse with his friends, Job seems to have lifted up his thoughts to God, and mingled some actings of faith and hope with his fretfulness and despondency. He desired the Lord to remember how fleeting this life was at best; and either to abate his anguish, or release him from it, as he had no hope of seeing any more comfort here. A single look from God would end his days: and as the clouds vanish, and others are formed in their places, so men die, and never return to occupy their former stations, but others succeed them from age to age." This does not, by any means, imply the denial of a

Ver. 26. Do ye imagine (mean) to reprove words?

"Do you mean to reprove (or criticize) words?"

The words of one in despair, which are like the whistling of the wind?"

So De Dieu, Dathe, Rosenmüller, &c.

"Do you mean to reprove words which are like wind—

The words of one who is in despair?"

We commonly say, that words of persons in certain circumstances, are no more to be regarded than the whistling of the wind; and this is the idea above suggested.

Ver. 27. The fatherless.—Literally, "the bereaved."—"In its primary sense (says Goad) it denotes destitute, isolated, bereft."

—Dig a pit.—Heb. "Make a pitfall," as was done to entrap wild beasts.

Ver. 28. Be content.—"Be pleased" (Scott)—to look upon me, "now in your presence." So we should render it: "Do I look like an impostor, or deceiver?"

Ver. 29. Return again, &c.—"Return until I show you my righteousness in it." i. e. as the margin explains it, "in this matter."

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. An appointed time.—Heath says it is a military term, referring to the term of dismission from actual duty.

Ver. 2. As a servant (or slave) desireth.—Heb. "gapeh after."—The shadow.—That is, the evening.—And as a hireling looketh for his reward.

—These words need not have been in Italics, for the same word used for work, is also sometimes used for wages, or reward. Ps. cix. 20. Prov. x. 16. So in the Hebrew, the same word is often used for sin and sin-offering.

Ver. 6. A weaver's shuttle.—He compares his life to a web: the work is God's, who "determines the measure of every man's life."—"They are spent without hope."—"They are consumed without thread (or through want of thread)" see Prov. xiv. 28.

Ver. 8. Thine eyes are upon me.—Compare Psalm civ. 32.—"I am not."—So ver. 21. "We find the same expression used by Homer's heroes of the dead, and yet no one questions their belief of a future state."

Ver. 12. Am I a sea, or a whale?—Michaelis, with many others, understands this of the Nile and the crocodile, as in Isa. xxvii. 1. Ezek. xxxii. 2. It is well known that the Egyptians watched, very carefully, both the rising of the Nile, and the approach of a crocodile.

Ver. 15. Rather than my life.—i. e. the skeleton to which he was now worn by disease.

Ver. 17. Set thy heart upon.—That is, considered, scrutinized, and], as it were, studied—man. See Job i. 8; ii. 3.

Ver. 19. Till I can swallow down my spittle.—[This is a proverbial expression among the Arabs to the present day, signifying the same as "Let me draw my breath." Schultens gives an instance from the Concessus of Hart-ri, of a quick return made to a person who used the proverb. "Suffer me," said the person importuned, "to swallow down my spittle?"—"You may if you please, swallow down Tigris and Euphrates," said his friend.]—Bugster.

Ver. 20. What shall—Rather.—"What can." Boothroyd.—Preserver—Or. "Observer." The word has both meanings, and is applied to "watchers."

(Jer. iv. 16.) and is here so rendered by Dr. Stock.

CHAPTER VIII.

Biddad sheweth God's justice in dealing with men according to their works. 8 He allegeth antiquity to prove the certain destruction of the hypocrite. 20 He applieth God's just dealing to Job.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?

3 Doth <sup>a</sup> God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert justice?

4 If thy children have sinned against him, and he have cast them away <sup>b</sup> for their transgression;

5 If <sup>c</sup> thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

6 If thou wert pure and upright; surely now he would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.

7 Though thy beginning was small, yet thy latter end should greatly increase.

8 For inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers:

9 (For we <sup>d</sup> are but of yesterday, and know <sup>e</sup> nothing, because our days upon earth are a <sup>f</sup> shadow:)

10 Shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart?

11 Can the rush grow up without mire? can the flag grow without water?

12 Whilst <sup>g</sup> it is yet in his greenness, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb.

13 So are the paths of all that forget God; and the hypocrite's hope <sup>h</sup> shall perish:

14 Whose hope shall be cut off, and whose trust shall be a spider's <sup>i</sup> web.

15 He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand: he shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure.

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1520.

a De. 32.4.

2 Ch. 19.7.

c. 34.12,17

Ps. 59.14.

Da. 9.14.

Ro. 3.5,6.

b in the hand of their.

c e. 11.13.

22.23, &amp;c.

d Ps. 39.5.

e not.

f 1 Ch. 29.15.

g Ps. 129.6.

Mat. 13.20.

h e. 11.20.

27.8.

Pr. 10.23.

i house.

Is. 59.5,6.

j Mat. 7.26.

k Ps. 37.36.

l Mat. 3.9.

m Ps. 94.11.

n take the ungodly

by the hand.

o shouting for joy.

p Ps. 132.18.

q not be.

a Ps. 143.2.

Ro. 3.20.

b or before.

c Jude 24.25.

d He. 12.26.

e Jos. 10.13.

f Ps. 104.2,3.

Is. 40.22.

g Mat. 14.25.

h heights.

i Am. 5.8.

j Aish, Cecil, and Cimah.

16 He is green before the sun, and his branch shooteth forth in his garden.

17 His roots are wrapped about the heap, and seeth the place of stones.

18 If he destroy him from his place, then it shall deny him, saying, I <sup>k</sup> have not seen thee.

19 Behold, this is the joy of his way, and out of the earth shall others <sup>l</sup> grow.

20 Behold, God <sup>m</sup> will not cast away a perfect man, neither will he <sup>n</sup> help the evil-doers:

21 Till he fill thy mouth with laughing; and thy lips with <sup>o</sup> rejoicing.

22 They that hate thee shall be clothed with <sup>p</sup> shame; and the dwelling place of the wicked shall <sup>q</sup> come to nought.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Job, acknowledging God's justice, sheweth there is no contending with him. 22 Man's innocence is not to be condemned by afflictions.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth: but <sup>a</sup> how should man be just <sup>b</sup> with God?

3 If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him one of a thousand.

4 He <sup>c</sup> is wise in heart, and mighty in strength: who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which removeth the mountains, and they know not: which overturneth them in his anger.

6 Which <sup>d</sup> shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble.

7 Which commandeth the <sup>e</sup> sun, and it riseth not; and sealeth up the stars.

8 Which alone spreadeth out the <sup>f</sup> heavens, and treadeth <sup>g</sup> upon the <sup>h</sup> waves of the sea.

9 Which <sup>i</sup> maketh <sup>j</sup> Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the south.

10 Which doeth great things past finding out; yea, and wonders without number.

11 Lo, he goeth by me, and I see him not. he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

future state; but it merely describes the condition of mankind respecting this present life.

On the close of this chapter, we may observe, that though Job justified himself from the charges of hypocrisy brought against him by his friends, he freely confesses himself a sinner in the sight of God. "I have sinned, O thou preserver," or rather, "observer" of men! thou searcher of hearts! "What shall—what can I do, to propitiate thee? or to induce thee to pardon my transgression," and restore me to thy favour?

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1–22. Bildad, the Shuhite, addresses Job.—Stung by Job's reproaches, but unmoved by his distresses, another of Job's friends takes up the accusation against him, and compares his preceding speech to a tempest of strong words without reason. Bildad argues, as his predecessors had done, on the principle of the divine equity, that 'oh and his family must have been heinous sinners, from the afflictions with which they had been overwhelmed; and yet, after all, he admits that, if Job would frankly confess his crimes, there was still hope of mercy with the Most High. He then supports his opinions, by quoting some proverbial sayings of the ancients to the same effect. By the ancients here, must evidently be intended the Antediluvian patriarchs, when human life was in many instances extended nearly to a thousand years, but was now probably reduced to one fourth of that period. To these venerable ancestors they evidently looked, as prodigies of wisdom and prudence; compared with whom, they were "but of yesterday, and knew nothing." Thus the later patriarchs quoted the more early; prophets quoted patriarchs; Jesus and his apostles quoted the prophets, and we have the advantage of quoting all of them.

The next observation which presents itself is, the highly figurative style of the first sages, who, as we have already hinted, clothed all their wisdom in allegories, and poetic aphorisms.—1. As the rushes that grow on the borders of the Nile, green as they may appear at first, soon wither and perish, if deprived of the slime by which they are nourished, so neither can men long flourish, however prosperous they may seem, without the blessing of the Almighty; and what reason have the ungodly to expect his blessing? Or, 2. He may be like a tree planted in a garden, fair and verdant, and whose stem may be well-rooted in the earth; yet if he be removed into another situation, he shall perish; the soil in which he first grew shall disown him, and others grow up to supply his place. It is argued, "God will not cast away a perfect," and upright man; neither will he take the part "of evil doers." But the Almighty had now manifestly taken part against Job; he could not therefore, it is insinuated, be that perfect and upright man which he had been considered.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1–35. Job's answer to Bildad.—"I know it is so of a truth," says Job; that God doth what is right, and can do no wrong; for "How can" mortal and sinful "man be just before God?"—referring, perhaps, to the vision of Eliphaz, in the 4th chapter. "If God contend with man, he cannot answer him for one of a thousand" of his actions: nor is it wise or prudent to think of contending with him:

"Him, wisest, strongest, of the wise and strong."

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 2. How long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?—So Scott (the poet.)

How far will rage this tempest of thy tongue?"

Ver. 4. For their transgression.—Whether justly or not, it is evident that the insinuation is here thrown out, that Job's sons, as well as himself, had brought judgments on themselves by their transgressions.

Ver. 11. The rush . . . the flag.—Alluding to the papyrus, which formerly grew in the meadows of the Nile, but which, when the Nile did not rise sufficiently high, perished sooner than other plants.

Ver. 13. The hypocrite's hope.—It is very doubtful whether this word be ever used for a hypocrite; it generally signifies profligate, or profligate. See chap. xxiv. 30. Ps. xxv. 16. Jer. xxiii. 15.

Ver. 14. A spider's web.—The spider's web is his house; and never was house builded with more skill or accuracy. See Prov. xxx. 28.

Ver. 15. Lean upon his house.—Weak as the spider's. "It is impossible to conceive any figure that can more justly describe the utter vanity of the hopes and prosperity of the wicked."—Dr. Good.

Ver. 17. About the heap.—Spring, or well. So Cant. iv. 12.—Seeth the place ("house") of stones.—The vine, which is the plant here supposed to be alluded to, flourishes best in a stony or sandy soil; but near a well, or spring. Gen. xlix. 22.

Ver. 18. If he destroy him.—This is obscure and difficult. Dr. Beethroyd's seems here the most intelligible and correct version;

"When it is destroyed from its place,

This will disown it, 'I have not seen thee.'"

That is, as Scott (the poet) expresses it,

"The parent soil denies the inglorious birth."

Ver. 19. This is the joy of his way.—We suppose this to be the continuation of the personification: as if the place on which he grew should not only disown him, but ridicule him. "Behold, this is the end of his glorying! and out of the earth shall others spring up like him."

CHAP. IX. Ver. 7. The sun . . . riseth not.—A heavy and tremendous gloom, and a violent agitation of the sea, often accompanies these awful catastrophes.

Ver. 9. Arcturus, &c.—Heb. Aish Cecil, and Cimah. The meaning of these and the following words is much controverted. Aish, rendered Arcturus, is supposed to mean the North Pole, with its surrounding luminaries; Cecil, or Orion, the stars that arise in winter; Cimah, or Pleiades, those which arise in the spring.

12 Behold, he taketh away, who can <sup>k</sup> hinder him? who <sup>l</sup> will say unto him, What doest thou.

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, the <sup>m</sup> proud helpers do stoop under him.

14 How much less shall I answer him, and choose out my words to reason with him?

15 Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but <sup>n</sup> "I would make supplication to my judge.

16 If I had called, and he had answered me; yet would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.

17 For he breaketh me with a tempest, and multiplieth my wounds without cause.

18 He will not suffer me to take my breath, but filleth me with bitterness.

19 If I speak of strength, lo, he is strong: and if of judgment, who shall set me a time to plead?

20 If I justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: If I say, I am perfect, it shall also prove me perverse.

21 Though I were perfect, yet would I not know my soul: I would despise my life.

22 This is one thing, therefore I said it, He <sup>o</sup> destroyeth the perfect and the wicked.

23 If the scourge slay suddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.

24 The earth is given into the hand of the wicked: he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; if not, where, and who is he?

25 Now my days are swifter than a post: they flee away, they see no good.

26 They are passed away as the <sup>p</sup> swift ships: as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

27 If I say, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and comfort myself:

28 I am afraid of all my sorrows, I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.

29 If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain?

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1520.

k turn him away? c. 11. 10.

l Da. 4. 35.

m helpers of pride, strength.

n c. 34. 31.

o Ecce 21. 3.

p ships of desire, or, ships of Eloth.

q Je. 2. 22.

r make me to be abhorred.

s one that should argue.

t or, umpire.

u Ps. 105. 23.

v Ps. 39. 10.

w I am not so rich myself.

x or, cut off while I live.

y Ps. 143. 2.

z Ro. 8. 1.

a La. 5. 16, 17.

b labour.

c 1 Sa. 16. 7.

d Jn. 2. 24, 25.

e Ps. 10. 15.

f h it is upon thy knowledge.

g 1 Jn. 21. 17.

h I took pains about me.

i Je. 18. 6.

j Ro. 9. 21.

30 If <sup>a</sup> I wash myself with snow water; and make my hands never so clean;

31 Yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall <sup>r</sup> abhor me.

32 For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment.

33 Neither is there <sup>a</sup> any daysman betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both.

34 Let <sup>v</sup> him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him; but <sup>w</sup> it is not so with me.

CHAPTER X.

1 Job, taking liberty of complaint, expostulateth with God about his afflictions. 18 He complaineth of life, and craveth a little ease before death.

MY soul is <sup>a</sup> weary of my life; I will leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, Do not <sup>b</sup> condemn me; show me <sup>c</sup> wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it good unto thee that thou shouldest oppress, that thou shouldest despise the <sup>d</sup> work of thy hands, and shine upon the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or <sup>e</sup> seest thou as man seeth?

5 Are thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,

6 That <sup>f</sup> thou inquierest after my iniquity, and searchest <sup>g</sup> after my sin?

7 Thou <sup>h</sup> knowest that I am not wicked; and there is none that can deliver out of thy hand.

8 Thy hands have made me and fashioned me together round about; yet thou dost destroy me.

9 Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast made me as the <sup>k</sup> clay; and wilt thou bring me into dust again?

10 Hast thou not poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese?

As an illustration of the divine power, he now describes the appearance and effects which attend an earthquake; when "He shaketh the earth out of its place; the pillars thereof tremble, and the mountains are removed: when the sun and stars are sealed up in the gloom of darkness, and the sea is lifted mountains high." He adverts also to the display of the divine power in the heavenly bodies above us, and speaks of the works of God as inscrutable, and his wonders as innumerable; and yet himself passes unseen by—"seen only in his works." Such is the majesty of God. "Though I were righteous, yet would I not answer: I would make supplication to my judge. Though perfect, I would not seem to know it," but rather submit, and throw myself on the mercy of my God. This one thing, however, I have said, and still maintain, "He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked." This is the same doctrine afterwards maintained by Solomon, that in the present life "All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked." (Eccles. viii. 2.) This is so far from being the language of infidelity, that it is the grand moral argument for a future judgment. Such we conceive to be the import of a following verse, (24) "The earth is given into the hands of the wicked:" but their reign is only temporary. "He (God) covereth the faces of the judges thereof;" and sends them to the bar of another world. To cover one's own face, is the expression of grief, or shame; but to have the face covered, (as Haman's was, Esther vii. 8.) is the signal for execution. And if God himself did not this, "Who and where is he that could?"

Job then goes on to lament the shortness of his time, and the little prospect of a restoration to peace and comfort. Though not "a wicked man," in their sense of the term, which would imply that he were a hypocrite; yet he confesses that it would be in vain to attempt to justify himself before God, though he was far from acknowledging the charges which his friends had brought against him.

Ver. 25. He will laugh.—Perhaps "It will laugh" at all the consequences, even the trial of the innocent. So Schultens and Scott (the poet.)

Ver. 25. Swifter than a post.—Than a courier." Bp. Lowth. Camels (who compose the eastern caravans) travel little more than two miles an hour, but dromedaries will outrun the swiftest horses; and there are foot messengers who will go 150 miles in 24 hours.—Harmer.

Ver. 26. As the swift ships.—See Margm. Chardin thinks this refers to the boats on the Tigris and Euphrates, which are carried with a rapid current; but some refer it to the same animals (the dromedaries) which the Arabs call "ships of the desert." The deserts are their seas.—Orient. Lit. No. 686. Dr.

Job, as Dr. Chalmers remarks, in his reasonings throughout this chapter, "is evidently oppressed by a feeling of want, without the full understanding of an adequate or appropriate remedy." He talks of washing in "snow-water," as a purifier then greatly esteemed; but this could neither purify the heart, nor the conscience. "Thou wouldest plunge me in the ditch;" that is, a glance of thy scrutinizing eye would instantly discover my mind to be full of impurity, and my consciousness of the filthiness of my moral garments, would make me abhorrent in my own eyes. Viewing, then, the distance between himself and his Maker, no less in purity than in greatness, he is tempted to despair of being brought near to God: "For he is not a man as I am, that I should answer him, that we should come together in judgment." He goes on to lament that he had no mediator to take his part; no umpire; no middle person, to lay his hand on both parties, and procure a reconciliation.

Happily we have such a Mediator, an advocate, one that "can speak well," and argue the cause for us; and though he cannot plead our righteousness, he can plead his own on our behalf, which is infinitely better. Job himself recollected this Redeemer, and rejoiced in him.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—22. Job proceeds with his argument and complaint.—It is impossible to understand Job's strain of arguing, without we bear in mind his extreme agony of body and mind, which was evidently such as to confuse his thoughts, and deprive him of self-possession; and consequently often to involve him in inconsistency. Sometimes he shrinks into nothing, as it were, in the presence of his Maker, and confesses himself a sinner; at others, he remonstrates with him on his conduct, as in the chapter before us; and from the wisdom displayed in his formation, as being fashioned by the hands of the great Potter, he argues that he should have been treated with more care and tenderness. "Is it good (says he) that thou shouldest despise the work (the labour) of thine own God renders the phrase, "with spread (or swelled out) sails." See Isa. xviii. 2.

Ver. 30. Snow water.—The softest water for washing, and kept by the ancients to whiten and purify their skin.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. My soul is weary of ("loathes") my life: I will leave my complaint upon myself.—That is, I will indulge my grief, and not seek comfort.

Ver. 10. Hast thou not poured, &c.—"Can the modern discoveries in anatomy qualify a poet to give a more just account of the principles of an embryo, and of the several stages of its growth, to a perfect fetus?" Scott (the poet

11 Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and hast fenced me with bones and sinews.

12 Thou hast granted me life and favour, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

13 And these things hast thou hid in thy heart: I know that this is with thee.

14 If I sin, then thou markest me, and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity.

15 If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head. I am full of confusion; therefore see thou mine affliction;

16 For it increaseth. Thou huntest me as a fierce lion: and again thou showest thyself marvellous upon me.

17 Thou renewest thy witnesses against me, and increasest thine indignation upon me; changes and war are against me.

18 Wherefore then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? Oh that I had given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me!

19 I should have been as though I had not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

20 Are not my days few? cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little,

21 Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death;

22 A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Zophar reproveth Job for justifying himself. 6 God's wisdom is unsearchable. 13 The assured blessing of repentance.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Should not the multitude of words be answered?

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1520.

1 Ps. 139. 13.

m. hedged.

n. Is. 6. 5.

o. Lam. 3. 10.

Ho. 13. 7, 8.

p. that is, plagues.

q. c. 3. 11.

r. Ps. 39. 5, 13.

s. Ps. 88. 12.

t. Ps. 23. 4.

a. Pr. 10. 19.

b. of lips.

c. of devices.

d. c. 6. 30.

10. 7.

e. Ex. 9. 13.

f. Is. 40. 22.

Ro. 11. 33.

g. the heights of heaven.

h. Re. 3. 7.

i. or, make a change.

j. turn him away.

k. Ps. 10. 14.

l. empty.

m. 1 Sa. 7. 3.

n. Ps. 101. 3.

o. arise above the noon-day.

p. Pr. 1. 13.

Is. 58. 8, 10.

answered? and should a man full of talk be justified?

3 Should thy lies make men hold their peace? and when thou mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed?

4 For thou hast said, My doctrine is pure, and I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But oh that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

6 And that he would show thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is! Know therefore that God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth.

7 Canst thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

8 It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know?

9 The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

10 If he cut off, and shut up, or gather together, then who can hinder him?

11 For he knoweth vain men: he seeth wickedness also; will he not then consider it?

12 For a vain man would be wise, though man be born like a wild ass's colt.

13 If thou prepare thy heart, and stretch out thy hands toward him;

14 If iniquity be in thy hand, put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.

15 For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear:

16 Because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away:

17 And thine age shall be clearer than the noon-day; thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.

hands?" He should have remembered, however, that creation is a work of no difficulty with the Almighty; and that the formation of a worm or of a world is the same thing to him who "speaks and it is done: who commands, and it is established." (Psal. xxxiii. 9.) He can this day, if he please, tread down a whole race of creatures, and to-morrow call forth a new generation from their dust; and that with infinitely greater ease than the potter moulds his clay, first into one form, and then into another. But when Job intimates that he had been thus curiously formed, and carefully preserved, only to be a monument of wretchedness and woe; a mark, at which to shoot the arrows of affliction: a wild beast, to be hunted and destroyed; then he charges God foolishly, through ignorance of his designs; and indeed we are all liable to fall into the same error, when we attempt to penetrate the secret counsels of the Almighty.

But God is as well the moral Governor of the world as its Creator; and "he seeth not" partially and imperfectly, "as man seeth." His eye marks, and his memory records, every deviation from the most perfect rectitude; and Job therefore, deeply sensible of this, exclaims, "Do not condemn me;" confessing that there was ground for condemnation, and pleading for mercy at the hands of God.

Dr. Watts has, upon these words, some very judicious observations, from which we shall, in a few words, endeavour to extract the essence. 1. That God is the most suitable being for a good man in trouble to apply to; and therefore Job resolves to "trust in him, even though he slay" him. (Chap. xiii. 15.) 2. In all his justifications of his own character, still he confesses himself a sinner in the sight of God. In the very moment that he says, "Thou knowest that I am not wicked," he says also, "Do not condemn me;" implying, as he elsewhere expresses it, "I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee?" (See chap. vii. 20.) Dr. Watts here remarks, "The saints in Scripture are not called wicked: that is a word which belongs only to those who are far off from God;" as if he should say, "Though a sinner before thee, I am 'innocent from the accusations of villany and hypocrisy' which my mistaken friends have brought against me."

Ver. 13. These things hast thou hid, &c.—That is, these troubles have been kept for me in thy secret counsels, to make me a spectacle of wretchedness and woe.—With thee—means, in the secret counsels of God, chap. xxiii. 14.

Ver. 16. Thou showest thyself marvellous.—Makest me a butt to shoot at, in order to display thy superior power and skill.

Ver. 17. Thou renewest thy witnesses (or testimonies) against me.—Every trial of his patience he considered as a fresh witness brought against him.—Changes and war.—Rather, "Conflict."

Ver. 22. Without any order.—That is, a perfect chaos. See Gen. i. 2.—Where the light is as darkness.—Where the noontide is as utter extinction." Dr. Good, [Where death projects his shadow, intercepting every light of every kind of life: without any order, having no arrangement, no distinction of inhabitants; the poor and the rich are there, the king and the beggar, their bodies in equal corruption and disgrace:—where the light is as darkness, a palpable obscure space and place, with only such a light or capability of distinction as renders "darkest visible."—Baxter.]

CHAP. XI. Ver. 3. Should thy lies.—Marg. "devices."—Loveth, "prevailing."

thee?" (See chap. vii. 20.) Dr. Watts here remarks, "The saints in Scripture are not called wicked: that is a word which belongs only to those who are far off from God;" as if he should say, "Though a sinner before thee, I am 'innocent from the accusations of villany and hypocrisy' which my mistaken friends have brought against me."

Job adds, "Show me wherefore thou contendest with me." On this the same amiable divine remarks,—1. That he looked not to second causes—to Satan, or to the Sabians, &c. but to God himself; not to creatures, but to the Creator. 2. Faith believes that God afflicts not without reason: "Show me wherefore," &c.—"There is a need be in all the sorrows which God brings upon his people," and many and important are the lessons which may be learned therefrom. 3. A good man under affliction is anxious to know wherefore it is that God afflicts him, or contends with him; and that to the end that he may profit by his afflictions.

This chapter ends as it had begun, in the language of bitterness and despair: Job lies down in darkness—the darkness of the shadow of death; where, as Scott (the poet) beautifully translates his concluding words—

"Where the light
Is one eternal noon of dismal night."

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1–20. The speech of Zophar.—The three friends of Job, though they all turn against him, and become his accusers, differ considerably in their style and character. Eliphaz is mild and insinuating; Bildad, grave and satirical; Zophar, violent and severe. By a short speech, he winds up the arguments of his companions against Job. He condemns him as a wicked man, and consequently, as he professed religion, a decided hypocrite. He advances, however, some sublime sentiments on the greatness of God, and on the vanity and insignificance of man. "Vain (empty) man would be

Ver. 6. That they are double to that which is.—Boothroyd: "For they far exceed the most profound knowledge." Literally: "They are as the doublings of knowledge," i. e. involved and mysterious.

Ver. 8. Deeper than hell.—Hob. Shoel—the invisible, the infernal world.

Ver. 10. Who can hinder him?—Dr. Boothroyd renders this very difficult verse thus:

"If he seize, and bind one in chains,
And bring to judgment; who then can reply to him?"

Ver. 11, 12. Vain man.—The Hebrew word in the former verse means false, in which sense it is applied to idols: the word, in the latter verse, means empty, hollow, and is applied to persons puffed up with self-importance. Scott (the poet) renders the verse:

"That the proud may be made wise,
And the colt of the wild ass become a man."

Literally, "be born a man;" and so Boothroyd.

Ver. 16. As waters that pass away.—As waters passed away, Boothroyd. That is, the memory of thy afflictions will be wholly effaced, as the winter torrents are evaporated in summer.—Scott (the poet.)

18 And thou shalt be secure, because there is hope; yea, thou shalt dig about thee, and thou shalt take thy rest in safety.

19 Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid; yea, many shall <sup>a</sup> make suit unto thee.

20 But the eyes <sup>r</sup> of the wicked shall fail, and <sup>s</sup> they shall not escape, and their <sup>t</sup> hope shall be as <sup>u</sup> the giving up of the ghost.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Job maintaineth himself against his friends that reprove him. 7 He acknowledgeth the general doctrine of God's omnipotence.

AND Job answered and said, 2 No doubt but ye are the people; and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But I have <sup>a</sup> understanding as well as you; <sup>b</sup> I am not inferior to you: yea, <sup>c</sup> who knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him: the just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is ready to slip with his feet is as a lamp despised in the thought of him that is at ease.

6 The tabernacles of robbers <sup>d</sup> prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee: and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the Lord hath wrought this?

10 In whose hand is the <sup>e</sup> soul of every living thing, and the breath of all <sup>f</sup> mankind.

11 Doth not the ear try words? and the <sup>g</sup> mouth taste his meat?

12 With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

A. M. 3484
B. C. 1:30.

q entreat thy face.
Ps. 45.12.

r De. 23. 65.

s fight shall perish from them.

t Pr. 11. 7.

u or, a puff of breath.

a a heart.

b fall not longer than you.

c with whom are not such as these?

d Ps. 73. 12, &c. Job. 12. 1, &c.

e or, life.

f flesh of man.

g palate.

h c. 32. 7.

i i. e. God.

j Pr. 8. 14.

k upon.

l Ere 14. 9.

m Is. 19. 13.

n Is. 45. 1.

o Is. 31. 3.

p lip of the faithful.

q De. 2. 21, 22.

r or, loatheth the girde of the strong.

s 1 Co. 4. 5.

t c. 34. 22.

u Ps. 107. 33.

v loatheth.

w Ps. 4. 16, 33.

x De. 28. 29.

y wander.

a c. 23. 3.

b 31. 35.

c Is. 1. 13.

d Mi. 6. 2, &c.

13 With <sup>h</sup> him is wisdom and strength. he hath counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again: he shutteth <sup>i</sup> up a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up: also he sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With him is strength and wisdom: the deceived <sup>j</sup> and the deceiver are his.

17 He leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges <sup>k</sup> fools.

18 He looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He <sup>l</sup> leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

20 He removeth <sup>m</sup> away the <sup>n</sup> speech of the trusty, and taketh away the understanding of the aged.

21 He <sup>o</sup> poureth contempt upon princes, and <sup>p</sup> weakeneth the strength of the mighty.

22 He discovereth <sup>q</sup> deep things out of darkness, and bringeth out to light the shadow <sup>r</sup> of death.

23 He increaseth <sup>s</sup> the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and <sup>t</sup> straiteneth them again.

24 He taketh away the heart <sup>u</sup> of the chief of the people of the earth, and causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.

25 They grope <sup>v</sup> in the dark without light, and he maketh them to <sup>w</sup> stagger like a drunken man.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Job reproves his friends of partiality. 14 He professeth his confidence in God: 20 and entreateth to know his own sins, and God's purpose in afflicting him.

LO, mine eye hath seen all this, mine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What ye know, the same do I know also: I am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely I would speak to the <sup>a</sup> Almighty, and I desire to reason <sup>b</sup> with God.

wise; though he be born as (ignorant and perverse) as the colt of the wild ass." Applying this to Job, Zophar exhorts him to repentance, from a consideration of the dangers of hypocrisy, and the advantages of repentance. Arguments, these, doubtless good and just, but in this case misapplied, because they proceed on the false premises that Job was a wicked man, and suffering the judgments of the Almighty for his crimes; whereas these heavy afflictions, instead of judgments on his hypocrisy, were the trials of his faith. "Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful;" i. e. full of pity, and of tender mercy. James v. 11.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1—25. Job again defends himself against his opposers.—He commences with a severe sarcasm, admired and quoted in all ages: "Doubtless ye are the people"—the only persons of intelligence!—"and wisdom shall die with you. But (adds he) I have a heart as well as you: I fall not lower (in the scale of intellect) than you." Your remarks are common-place; your arguments are no better than ridicule and banter. Alas! I who once shone with so much splendour in my prosperity, am now despised as an expiring lamp, or taper.

As to the doctrine of providence, that temporal blessings are not appropriated to the righteous, is evident from the prosperity of the wicked. Even the tents of banditti are enriched from the spoil of good men; and providence succeeds their villainous designs, though he will bring them into judgment for them. The beasts of the field and birds of the air are also subjects of the divine providence; his "mercies are over all his works," and "in his hand is the soul of every living creature."

Job then adverts to their affectation of superior wisdom, and Ver. 19. Thou shalt dig.—That is, dig a foundation for thy habitation. Professor Michaelis understands this of his sepulchre: "Thou shalt dig (thy sepulchre) and calmly lie down." Lath's Lect. Gregory's note.

Ver. 20. Their hope.—Not "shall be as," but "their hope is," the giving up the ghost—the last breath, which launches the soul into eternity.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 3. I have understanding, &c.—I fall not lower than you; (i. e. either in sense or knowledge;) yea, with whom are not such (things) as these?

Ver. 4. Of his neighbour.—Rather, "of his friend." The next clause is supposed to be a reproach cast on Job analogous to that cast upon our Lord—"He calleth upon God, let him answer him;" but we are rather disposed to ender it, "He (that) calleth upon God, he (God) will answer him;" implying that if Job was a good man, his prayer would be answered by deliverance; and from his receiving no deliverance, it was inferred that he was a hypocrite.

their reference to the sayings of the ancients; but if they were wise, how wise must He be who is eternal? If they were powerful, how powerful must He be who is almighty? "The deceiver and the deceived" are equally in his power: "He poureth contempt on princes, and looseth the girde of the strong." The concluding verse, which wants illustration, is thus beautifully rendered in Scott's poetical version

"In a vast wild their dismal way they feel,
Perplex'd, distress'd, from doubt to doubt they reel;
Bewilder'd by an energy divine,
Like men who stagger with the fumes of wine."

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1—28. Job reproves his friends, and pleads with the Almighty.—Having refuted, in the preceding chapter, the erroneous doctrine of his friends respecting divine providence, he here reproves them for their unfair treatment; and appeals to the bar of the Almighty, determined to plead his own cause before Him. He charges them with collecting a string of false principles against him, assuming their truth, and condemning him upon them. Thus were they physicians of no value, who neither understood his case, nor what remedy to apply. He charges them with "speaking wickedly and deceitfully for God," because while they pretended to justify God, they did it on false and erroneous principles. He charges them, therefore, to be silent, and let him alone, while he maintains his own cause before God, in whom, notwithstanding all he suffered, he was still resolved to trust:—"Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

"There are several passages (says Peters) that express this good man's hope in God for a future happy state; not in this world, (which is the strange notion of some interpreters; for nothing could be more unlikely. Job himself, all along, considers his condition as quite hopeless in this respect, as appears plainly from his so often wishing for death: and this some-

Ver. 5. He that is ready to slip, &c.—This difficult verse is thus rendered by Scott (the poet,) and Dr. Boothroyd.

"Contempt is prepared for calamity,
In the thoughts of him who is at ease,
For those who slip with their feet."

We are much inclined, however, to the old translation, and think it might be rendered, "As a lamp stripped (of flame,) and just expiring, so is a man sliding into poverty;" i. e. all his former splendour is forgotten and despised. So Bp. Hall.

Ver. 18. He looseth the bond.—That is, he destroys their royal authority, and instead of a royal belt, binds them with a common girdle. See Scott.

Ver. 24. Wilderness.—Hethoth, "in chaos," i. e. in a state of utter confusion: it is the same word which is employed in Gen. i. 2. to describe the chaotic state of the earth at the creation. —Register

4 But ye are forgers of lies, ye are all physicians of no value.

5 O that ye would altogether hold your peace! and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will ye speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him?

8 Will ye accept his person? will ye contend for God?

9 Is it good that he should search you out? or as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock me?

10 He will surely reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall not his excellency make you afraid? and his dread fall upon you?

12 Your remembrances are like unto ashes, your bodies to bodies of clay.

13 Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may speak, and let come on me what will.

14 Wherefore do I take my flesh in my teeth, and put my life in my hand?

15 Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him: but I will maintain mine own ways before him.

16 He also shall be my salvation: for a hypocrite shall not come before him.

17 Hear diligently my speech, and my declaration with your ears,

18 Behold now, I have ordered my cause: I know that I shall be justified.

19 Who is he that will plead with me? for now, if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.

20 Only do not two things unto me: then will I not hide myself from thee.

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1530.

c. e. 162.

d. Pr. 17.28.
Am. 5.13.

e. c. 32.21, 22.

f. 2 Co. 4.2.

g. Ga. 6.7.

h. Ps. 82.1, 2.

i. Je. 5.22.
10.7, 10.

j. Be silent from me.

k. Ps. 23.4.
Pr. 14.32.

l. prove, or, argue.

m. Ps. 27.1.

n. Is. 33.14.

o. Is. 50.8.
Ro. 3.33, 34.

p. Ps. 39.10.

q. c. 33.3.

r. c. 34.32.
Jn. 16.8, 9.

s. Ps. 102.2.

t. La. 2.5.

u. Is. 42.3.

v. Ps. 25.7.

w. c. 33.11.

x. observe.

y. roots.

a. short of.

b. Ec. 2.23.

c. Ps. 90.5, 10.

d. Ps. 144.3.

e. Ps. 143.2.

f. will give.

g. Ps. 51.2, 10.
Jn. 3.6.

h. ver. 14.
He. 9.27.

i. cease.

21 Withdraw thy hand far from me: and let not thy dread make me afraid.

22 Then call thou, and I will answer: or let me speak, and answer thou me.

23 How many are mine iniquities and sins? make me to know my transgression and my sin.

24 Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy?

25 Wilt thou break a leaf driven to and fro? and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?

26 For thou writest bitter things against me, and makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.

27 Thou puttest my feet also in the stocks, and lookest narrowly unto all my paths; thou settest a print upon the heels of my feet.

28 And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, as a garment that is moth eaten.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Job entreatheth God for favour, by the shortness of life, and certainty of death. 7 Though life once lost be irrecoverable, yet he waiteth for his change. 16 By sin the creature is subject to corruption.

MAN that is born of a woman is a few days, and full of trouble.

2 He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

3 And dost thou open thine eyes upon such a one, and bringest me into judgment with thee?

4 Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.

5 Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass;

6 Turn from him, that he may rest, till he shall accomplish, as a hireling, his day.

times with an earnestness which nothing can account for or excuse, but his strong hopes of immortality." To us, however, it appears that Job's passionate desire of death was the language rather of despair than of faith or hope: afterwards, indeed, he becomes more calm and rational, and in many places looks to another state, and a future judgment; but we doubt if he had any reference to an intermediate or separate state of either happiness or misery. All the truths of religion were gradually revealed, and the doctrine of a future state more especially. During the early ages, it was involved in much obscurity; nor were life and immortality fully brought to light but in the gospel: it was only as that was gradually developed, that men began to form any proper idea of a future state. Commentators have perhaps too eagerly anticipated these discoveries.

Job, in the early part of his troubles, appears to have been equally tortured in mind as in body; and while he resolutely maintained his integrity and uprightness, still confessed himself a sinner; still professed a strong confidence in God:—"Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him;" while, at the same time, he is at a loss to reconcile the divine character with the treatment he received from providence. In the latter part of this chapter, he pathetically laments his situation, and entreats a suspension of his afflictions: "Withdraw thine hand from me, and let not thy terror make me afraid." He is sensible of his sin, and pleads for mercy; but complains that he was treated as a captive enemy, or a culprit slave. Thus the two last verses are beautifully paraphrased in the poetical version of Scott.

"With bonds and stripes, and durance hard, by thee
The punishment of slaves is laid on me:
To rottenness and worms a living prey,
Like a moth-eaten vest, I waste away."

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1-22. Job reflects on the mortality of man: with some further allusions to a future state.—The two first verses of this chapter are perhaps as generally known as CHAP. XIII. Ver. 4. Forgers of lies.—"For indeed ye are collectors of falsehoods." Those who string together false premises, and then reason from them.

Ver. 12. Your remembrances.—"Your memorable sayings," (Scott) such as they had quoted from the ancients.—Like ashes—i. e. decayed—their fire and spirit extinct in their application of them.—Your bodies—"swelling heaps" (of words) like heaps of dirt or rubbish; alluding, as Heath and others think, to their highly figurative language.

Ver. 14. Wherefore, &c.—These proverbial forms of expression are evidently synonymous, and imply Job's determination to run all hazards.

Ver. 15. Trust in him.—Our translators follow the Keri, or marginal reading of the Hebrew, as do also the ancient versions and best modern critics.

Ver. 26. Thou makest me to possess.—"Possess by inheritance," says Dr. Good, or "entail upon me"—the sins of my youth. Thus the Psalmist, Asaph prays, "O remember not against us former iniquities!" Psalm lxxix. 8.

almost any in the Bible, from their forming part of the Burial Service of the Episcopal Church: and we never so truly feel their force and beauty, as while standing over the grave of a beloved relative, or an esteemed friend. The fairest specimens of human nature are but as a fading flower, and the longest life but as a fleeting shadow. Death is the consequence of sin, and the contemplation of it therefore led Job, very properly, to consider the natural depravity under which he came into the world, and the arduous warfare in which he was engaged, to obtain a victory over it. He then compares man to a tree, which, if cut down, will sprout again, though its branches should be lopped, and its stock decay: but man shows no sign of revival, while the present state of things endureth. The world must be remodelled, and nature be renewed, before man can be restored to life or happiness; but even of this he entertains a distant hope. Man lieth down and sleepeth in the grave; nor shall he awake till the last trump shall sound—till the Judge appear, and these lower skies shall flee before him. "O (says he) that thou wouldest hide me in the grave!"—appoint (or mark for) me a set time, and remember me. (Then) thou shalt call and I shall answer thee: thou shalt have a desire to (Heb. 'thou shalt yearn toward') the work of thine own hands." Of these last words it seems impossible to give any rational interpretation, without including in them a hope, though distant, of "another and a better world;" and, indeed, what sense can we attach to the idea of awaking from the grave, if death were (as modern infidels would persuade us) an eternal sleep?

From this passage we may also derive a powerful argument against the base and cowardly crime of suicide, to which Job seems at first to have been tempted; but at which he now recoils, notwithstanding all his present sufferings. He considers himself as a soldier, stationed by providence to defend an important post, and he blushes, or rather shudders, at the thought of deserting it without permission: he will not quit his station till relieved by death, and then, in the hope of being

Ver. 27. Thou lookest narrowly unto all my paths.—Just as a man would watch the motions of a captive, or runaway slave: Thou settest a mark upon the heels of my feet. It was, and still is, in slave countries, common to mark slaves on some part of their bodies: in Job's time and country, perhaps, this was done on the heels or bottoms of the feet. Heath remarks that these expressions evidently refer to the methods of punishing slaves.

Ver. 28. And he.—The third person used for the first; a thing not unusual among poets. Scott.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 3. Dost thou open thine eyes?—Scott (the poet) says, "This expression denotes in Zech. xii. 4, to look angrily: 'we rather conceive it means to look with attention, 'to fix the eyes,' like a judge, on a prisoner at his bar."

Ver. 4. Who can bring?—Who can produce innocence or purity from one born in sin? a descendant of fallen Adam? So Eben Ezra explains it.—"Who can bring one that is pure from a man defiled with sins?"

7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground ;
9 Yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and is wasteth away : yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he ?

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up :

12 So man lieth down, and riseth not : till the heavens <sup>k</sup> be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep.

13 O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me !

14 If a man die, shall he live again ? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change <sup>m</sup> come.

15 Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee : thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands.

16 For <sup>a</sup> now thou numberest my steps : dost thou not watch over my sin ?

17 My transgression is sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely the mountain falling <sup>o</sup> cometh to nought, and the rock is removed out of his place.

19 The waters wear the stones : thou <sup>p</sup> wastest away the things which grow out of the dust of the earth ; and thou destroyest the hope of man.

20 Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth : thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away.

21 His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not ; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn.

called to one nobler and better. The direct meaning of the latter verses is indeed something doubtful. The general idea is, that "all things change; man, frail and feeble as he is, cannot expect exemption from the common fate of the universe; but all mortal hopes must terminate in the grave. The last verse, if we mistake not, is highly poetical, and full of beauty; it represents the breath, the soul, as hovering over and bewailing the fate of the body while decaying in the tomb." Here ends, as is generally reckoned, the second part of this admirable book, and with it the first series of debate between Job and his friends.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1—35. Eliphaz begins a new series of arguments against Job.—The afflicted patriarch is accused both of false reasoning and the want of personal religion; with arrogance towards his brethren, and impiety towards God. The figurative language intimates, that Job had a storm within his own bosom—that east wind, so fatal in the Mediterranean, which in the New Testament is called Euroclydon, (Acts xxvii. 14.) and now commonly a Levanter. This internal storm is represented as venting itself in pompous words,

Ver. 9. Through the scent of water it will bud.—A passage remarkably similar to this is quoted by Sir William Jones, from the Yajur Veda. It begins, "Since the tree, when felled, springs again still fresher from the root, from what root springs mortal man, when felled by the hand of death?"

Ver. 10. But man dieth.—(A tree when cut down may shoot forth new branches in the place where it before grew; but when man dieth and his body is reduced to dust, then where is he? So in a beautiful verse in the poet Khosroo: "I passed by the burial place, and wept sorely to think how many of my friends were in the mansions of the dead. And in an agony of grief I cried out, Where are they? And Echo gave answer, and said, Where are they?"—Bagster.

Ver. 11. The sea.—So the Hebrews call all large lakes, as those of Genosareth, Sodom, &c.

Ver. 13. Hide me in the grave.—Heb. Shoel, which is alike used for the repository of dead bodies, and the departed souls.—Appoint me a set time.—Miss Smith renders it, "Set a mark on me;" but it seems rather to mean, "Set a boundary to my troubles."

Ver. 14. Appointed time.—Warfare," see ch. vii. 1.—Till my change come.—The LXX. render it, "Till I am made anew." Michaelis thinks Job might here have some reference to a resurrection, which our Lord calls "a regeneration." Matt. xix. 28. Compare Acts iii. 21. [Chaitaphathi, "my change," or renovation: it is used to denote the springing again of grass after it had been withered, (Ps. xc. 5, 6.) which is itself a very expressive emblem of the resurrection.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. Sealed up in a bag.—It is common in the East, and not uncommon

A. M. 2444.
B. C. 1520.

J is weakened,
ed, or, cut off.

k Ps. 102. 26.
Is. 51. 6.
2 Ps. 3. 10,
11.
Re. 20. 11.

l 1 Th. 4. 14.
15.

m 1 Co. 15.
51. 54.

n Pr. 5. 21.

o sadeth.

p over-
flowest.

a know- ledge of wind.

b 1 Ti. 6. 4, 5.

c maketh
wind.

d or, speech.

e teacheth.

f Lu. 19. 22.

g Ps. 90. 2.
Pr. 8. 25.

h Ro. 11. 24.
1 Co. 2. 11.

i c. 13. 2.

j c. 32. 6. 9.

k Mal. 3. 13.

l Ps. 13. 3.
Pr. 20. 9.
Ec. 3. 2.

m 1 Jn. 1. 8, 10.

n c. 25. 5.

o Ps. 53. 3.

p c. 20. 12.
Pr. 19. 28.

q De. 32. 8.

r Joel 3. 17.

s Ec. 9. 3.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Eliphaz reproveh Job of impiety in justifying himself. 17 He proveth by tradition the unquietness of wicked men.

THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

2 Should a wise man utter a vain knowledge, and fill his belly with the east wind ?

3 Should he reason with unprofitable talk ? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good ?

4 Yea, thou <sup>c</sup> castest off fear, and restrainest <sup>d</sup> prayer before God.

5 For thy mouth <sup>e</sup> uttereth thine iniquity, and thou chooseth the tongue of the crafty.

6 Thine <sup>f</sup> own mouth condemneth thee, and not I : yea, thine own lips testify against thee.

7 Art thou the first man that was born ? or wast thou made before <sup>g</sup> the hills ?

8 Hast <sup>h</sup> thou heard the secret of God ? and dost thou restrain wisdom to thyself ?

9 What <sup>i</sup> knowest thou, that we know not ? what understandest thou, which is not in us ?

10 With us are both the gray-headed <sup>j</sup> and very aged men, much elder than thy father.

11 Are the consolations of God small with thee ? is there any secret thing with thee ?

12 Why doth thy heart carry thee away ? and what do thy eyes wink at, 13 That thou turnest thy spirit against <sup>k</sup> God, and lettest such words go out of thy mouth ?

14 What <sup>l</sup> is man, that he should be clean ? and he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous ?

15 Behold, he putteth no trust in his saints ; yea, the heavens <sup>m</sup> are not clean in his sight.

16 How much more abominable and filthy <sup>n</sup> is man, which drinketh <sup>o</sup> iniquity like water ?

17 I will show thee, hear me ; and that which I have seen I will declare ;

18 Which wise men have told from their fathers, and have not hid it :

19 Unto whom <sup>p</sup> alone the earth was given, and no stranger <sup>q</sup> passed among them.

20 The wicked man travaileth <sup>r</sup> with pain all with little meaning, but of evil and dangerous tendency. Thus it is that orators and set disputants always make a mighty stir of eloquence when they are in want of argument. Job's speeches, however, are not wholly to be justified, nor was the censure of Eliphaz entirely without foundation. The first ventings of his despair and grief were, indeed, violent as a Levanter; but he had since spoken with more reason and calmness. Eliphaz should have taken advantage of this opportunity to soften his grief still more. Though Job, in his extremity, had used some bitter expressions, he had latterly spoken with more reverence of the Divine Majesty; and instead of restraining his speech and prayer before God, he had earnestly pleaded with him, and declared his confidence in him under every extremity: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Job also frequently glances at the doctrine of a future state, of which his antagonists seem to have no knowledge. They confine themselves to the rewards of the present world, either to the individual or his family.

Eliphaz now adverts to his favourite topic of human weakness and depravity, and repeats what he formerly related as a with us, to tell up large sums of money into bags or purses, and seal them : So Job considered his offences as having been told up, sealed, and preserved, to appear against him. See Harmer.

Ver. 22. His flesh upon him shall have pain.—Rather, "waste," or rot from off his bones.—And his soul within him shall mourn : this is, doubtless, inapplicable to the state of a dead man. Dr. Good reads, "His soul shall become a waste from him;" which is equally unintelligible. Dr. Boothroyd better, "His inward frame shall waste away." Scott is far more elegant and poetical, if not too bold. He represents the man's breath as mourning over him. See Exposition.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 2. Vain knowledge—i. e. knowledge which puffeth up, 1 Cor. viii. 1.—And fill his belly.—That is, himself—with the east wind, the most insalubrious wind that blows. So Scott :

"Big with the poison of an eastern wind."

Ver. 8. Hast thou heard.—Rather, "Hast thou heard in the secret council?" i. e. hast thou been admitted into the council chamber of the Most High, and heard his secrets ? See chap. i. 6, &c.

Ver. 11. Are the consolations of God small?—Meaning the prospects of returning prosperity which they held out.

Ver. 16. How much more.—[Rather, "How much less, (aph kee), abominable and filthy man," who, under the influence of sinful propensities, commits sin as greedily as a thirsty man or camel drinks down water.]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. Unto whom the earth was given.—That is, unto Noah and his sons.

his days, and the number * of years is hidden to the oppressor.

21 A * dreadful sound is * in his ears: in prosperity * the destroyer shall come upon him.

22 He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness, and he is waited for of the sword.

23 He wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble and anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle.

25 For he * stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against * the Almighty.

26 He runneth upon him, even on his neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers:

27 Because * he covereth his face with his fatness, and maketh collups of fat on his flanks.

28 And he dwelleth in desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps.

29 He shall not be rich, neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.

30 He shall not depart out of darkness; the flame shall dry up his branches, and by the breath of his mouth shall he go away.

31 Let not him that is deceived * trust in vanity: for vanity shall be his recompense.

32 It shall be * accomplished * before his time, and his branch shall not be green.

33 He shall shake off his unripe grape as the vine, and shall cast off his flower as the olive.

34 For the congregation of * hypocrites shall be desolate, and fire shall consume the tabernacles of * bribery.

35 They * conceive mischief, and bring forth * vanity, and their belly prepareth deceit.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Job reproveh his friends of unmercifulness. 7 He sheweth the *fulness of his case.

17 He maintaineth his innocency.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 I have heard many such things * miserable * comforters are ye all.

3 Shall * vain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest?

4 I also could speak as ye do: if your soul sacred oracle, relative to the divine purity and perfection, (chap. iv. 18.) but with some variety of expression, (ver. 15.)

"Behold, he putteth no trust in his holy ones; Yea, the heavens are not pure in his sight."

(Compare chap. iv. 18.)

That is, such is the infinite perfection of the Divine Being, that no creature is pure, compared with him:

"How much less abominable and filthy man, Who drinketh up iniquity like water."—Scott.

The second part of this chapter (ver. 20 to 30) is thought by many learned men to be a quotation from some ancient Arabian poem; but, as Dr. Boothroyd observes, no such conclusion can be drawn from his introduction. The most that can be inferred is, that what he advanced was derived from ancient aphorisms, which he had learned in early life.

The doctrine of Eliphaz is, that virtue brings with it its own reward, in the peace and prosperity which attend it; and that vice brings its own punishment, in the fears and anxieties which it excites; as well as that it entails on itself the judgments of the Almighty.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1—22. Job again replies to Eliphaz.—

Ver. 22. And he is waited.—"But [he believeth] that he is watched for of the sword:" he lives in fear of assassination.

Ver. 26. On his neck.—Boothroyd, "with his neck," i. e. head foremost, as we say.

Ver. 27. Maketh collups, &c.—Dr. Good, "Heapeth up fat on his loins."

Ver. 30. By the breath of his mouth, &c.—This is obscure. Dr. Good reads, "As the breath," &c. Perhaps it would do less violence to the text, to read, "With the breath," &c. i. e. his life passes with his breath. But some understand it of the breath of God's mouth. So Boothroyd, following the Chaldee.

Ver. 32. It shall be accomplished.—The comparison seems to be to blighted fruit that drops from the tree, as in the next verse.

Ver. 34. Hypocrites.—Heath and Scott, "profligates;" Boothroyd, "impious."

Ver. 35. Their belly prepareth deceit.—"Their womb," says Dr. Good. Compare Psalm vii. 14, 16. We say, "hatching falsehood."

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 6. What am I eased.—i. e. from what part of my trouble am I relieved?

Ver. 8. Filled me with wrinkles.—[Some render, "thou hast fettered me,"

A. M. 2434.
B. C. 1320.

s Ps. 90. 12.

t A sound of fears.

u Le. 26. 36.

v 1 Th. 5. 3.

w Is. 27. 4.

x Ec. 9. 4.

y Ps. 73. 1, &c.

z Is. 59. 4.

a or, cut off.

b Ps. 55. 23.

c Ec. 27. 8.

d Am. 5. 11.

e Ho. 10. 13.

f or, intemperance.

g or, profligate.

h Ec. 13. 4.

i words of wisdom.

j Ec. 15. 2.

k Ps. 22. 7.

l Ps. 27. 9.

m goeth from me?

n Ep. 5. 27.

o Ec. 10. 16, 17.

p Ec. 13. 21.

q Le. 3. 30.

r Ps. 35. 15.

s Ec. 1. 15, 17.

t shut me up.

u Ec. 7. 20.

v Ps. 42. 7.

w Ec. 30. 19.

x Ps. 44. 17, 21.

y Ps. 63. 18, 19.

z in the high places.

a Ec. 1. 3.

b I am my scorner.

c Ro. 9. 20.

d or, friend.

e years of number.

f Ec. 12. 5.

were in my soul's stead, I could heap up words against you, and shake * my head at you.

5 But I would strengthen you with my * mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage your grief.

6 Though I speak, my grief is not assuaged. and though I forbear, what * am I eased?

7 But now he hath made me weary: thou hast made desolate all my company.

8 And thou hast filled me with * wrinkles, which is a witness against me: and my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He teareth * me in his wrath, who hateth me: he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; mine enemy * sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They have gaped upon me with their mouth; they have * smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully; they have * gathered themselves together against me.

11 God * hath * delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder: he hath also taken me by my neck, and shaken me to pieces, and set me * up for his mark.

13 His archers compass me round about, he cleaveth my reins asunder, and doth not spare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He breaketh me with breach upon * breach, he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and defiled my horn in the * dust.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and on my eyelids is the shadow of death;

17 Not * for any injustice in my hands: also my prayer * is pure.

18 O earth, cover not thou my blood, and let my cry have no place.

19 Also now, behold, my witness is in heaven, and my record is * on high.

20 My friends * scorn me: but mine eye poureth out tears unto God.

21 O * that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his * neighbour!

22 When * a few years are come, then I shall go * the way whence I shall not return.

The preceding speech was certainly calculated to keep up the interest of the poem, and to produce from Job an animated reply. He retaliates upon him what he had said about "words of wind," or windy arguments, and calls them "miserable comforters," because by their tiresome and unfeeling speeches they added rather to his misery than relieved it. Were he in their case, he also could heap up words against them, and also "shake his head" at them, as they probably had done at him. But he would not copy their example; on the contrary, he would animate and strengthen them, and endeavour to assuage their grief. In this chapter, it is not, in every case, easy to ascertain when Job speaks of his unkind friends, or of his God. In the former case, he had too much reason certainly for complaint; in the latter none, even upon his own principles: for, notwithstanding all he could suffer upon earth, yet, admitting a future state of retribution, there was still room to expect an abundant recompense for all his sufferings: and considering himself a sinner, as he constantly admits, "Wherefore doth a living man complain? a man for the punishment of his sins?"

Job still, however, protests his innocence, in respect of the as kamat, signifies in Arabic; but as it signifies in Syriac to be wrinkled, the common version seems, from the connexion, to be more correct; and if Job's disease were the elephantiasis, these words would apply most forcibly to the wrinkled state of the skin in that disorder.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Sharpeneth his eyes upon me.—"Darteth his eyes upon me."—Boothroyd.

Ver. 11. God hath delivered me.—"Delivered me over bound." Ep. Louth.

Ver. 15. Defiled my horn.—(The horn was an emblem of power, (see note on 2 Ch. xviii. 10.); and defiling the horn in the dust must therefore signify the disgrace or destruction of power, authority, and eminence.)—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Cover not thou my blood.—That is, the blood is accused with shedding.

Ver. 19. My record.—That is, "He who is privy to all my actions," says Heath—is on high; i. e. God himself is my witness. Phil. i. 8.

Ver. 22. A few years.—"Years of number;" i. e. years easily numbered, because few: but Scott (the poet) renders this verse,

"For my few years are come to an end,

And I go whence I shall not return."

CHAPTER XVII.

Job appeals from men to God. 6 The unmerciful dealing of men with the afflicted may astonish, but not discourage the righteous. 11 His hope is not in life, but in death.

MY <sup>a</sup>breath is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves <sup>b</sup> are ready for me.

2 Are there not mockers with me? and doth not mine eye <sup>c</sup> continue in their provocation?

3 Lay down now, put me in a surety with thee; who <sup>d</sup> is he that will strike hands with me?

4 For thou hast hid their heart from understanding: therefore shalt thou not exalt <sup>e</sup> them.

5 He that speaketh flattery <sup>f</sup> to his friends, even the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also a by-word of the people; and <sup>g</sup> aforetime I was as a tabret.

7 Mine eye also is dim by reason of sorrow, and all my <sup>h</sup> members are as a shadow.

8 Upright <sup>i</sup> men shall be astonished at this, and the innocent shall stir up himself against the hypocrite.

9 The righteous <sup>j</sup> also shall hold on his way, and he that hath <sup>k</sup> clean hands shall <sup>l</sup> be stronger and stronger.

10 But as for you all, do ye return, and come now: for I cannot find <sup>m</sup> one wise man among you.

11 My days are past, my purposes <sup>n</sup> are broken off, <sup>o</sup> even <sup>p</sup> the thoughts of my heart.

12 They change the night into day: the light <sup>q</sup> is <sup>r</sup> short because of darkness.

13 If I wait, the grave <sup>s</sup> is my house: I have made my bed in the darkness.

14 I have <sup>t</sup> said to corruption, Thou art my father: to the worm, <sup>u</sup> Thou art my mother, and my sister.

A. M. 2181.
B. C. 1320.

a or, spirit
is spent.

b Ps. 39. 3, 4.

c lodge.

d Pr. 6. 1.

e Ps. 12. 3.

f or, before
them.

g or,
thoughts.

h Ps. 34. 7.

i, II.
Pr. 14. 18.

j Ps. 24. 4.

k add strength.

l Ps. 19. 9.

m possessions.

n near.

o cried, or,
called.

p Jo. 2. 6.

q Ps. 3. 17.

r c. 13. 14.

s his soul.

t Pr. 24. 20.

u or, lamp.

v Pr. 1. 30.

w Pr. 5. 22.

x hidden.

y Ps. 20. 3, 4.

z scatter.

aa bars.

ab Pr. 10. 28.

15 And where <sup>c</sup> is now my hope? as for my hope, who shall see it?

16 They shall go down to the bars <sup>d</sup> of the pit, when <sup>e</sup> our rest <sup>f</sup> together is in the dust.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Bildad reproves Job of presumption and impatience. 5 The calamities of the wicked.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How long will it be ere ye make an end of words? mark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 Wherefore are we counted as beasts, and reputed vile in your sight?

4 He <sup>a</sup> teareth <sup>b</sup> himself in his anger: shall the earth be forsaken for thee? and shall the rock be removed out of his place?

5 Yea, the light of the wicked shall <sup>c</sup> be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his <sup>d</sup> candle shall be put out with him.

7 The steps of his strength shall be straitened, and his own <sup>e</sup> counsel shall cast him down.

8 For he is cast into a net <sup>f</sup> by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare.

9 The gin shall take <sup>g</sup> him by the heel, and the robber shall prevail against him.

10 The snare <sup>h</sup> is <sup>i</sup> laid for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way.

11 Terrors <sup>j</sup> shall make him afraid on every side, and shall <sup>k</sup> drive him to his feet.

12 His strength shall be hunger-bitten, and destruction shall be ready at his side.

13 It shall devour the <sup>l</sup> strength of his skin: even the first-born of death shall devour his strength.

14 His confidence <sup>m</sup> shall be rooted out of his charges of violence, injustice, and hypocrisy, which had been brought against him; and imprecates upon himself the punishment of all the blood which he had shed, meaning thereby pointedly to deny that he had shed any; which Scott, in his poetical version, thus beautifully expresses:—

"O Earth! the blood accusing me reveal;
Its piercing voice in no recess conceal."

The chapter concludes with an appeal to Heaven for his innocences of the crimes imputed to him, and with an earnest wish that he had an advocate on high, as well as a witness, that his character might be redeemed from obloquy, before he went that way from which he should return no more during the present state of things.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1—16. Job continues to bewail his fate, and seeks his refuge in death.—"An attentive reader will observe," says Scott, (the poet,) "that the style in the first ten verses of this chapter," (and he might have included the last five of the preceding,) "expresseth great discomposure. There are frequent and sudden changes of the person. The transitions are abrupt, without the joining particles: and the sentiments follow one another in a hurry, with little or no connexion, just as the tumultuous and shifting emotions of his mind suggested them." He then falls into a melancholy calmness, and resigns himself to death and the grave.

The first verse of this chapter seems to belong to the preceding, as it expresses the nearness of his end, whether we refer it to his breath being corrupted by disease, or his spirit worn out with suffering. He then adverts to his "miserable comforters," and challenges them not to mock him, but to throw down a pledge to meet him on his trial before the great Judge of all. He then turns suddenly to God, and says, "Thou hast hid their heart from understanding." And so he proceeds, addressing God and them alternately. The concluding verses are peculiarly pathetic—

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. My breath is corrupt.—Those who refer it to the breath, (as Parkhurst), render it "straitened, confined," and inform us, that in Job's disorder, death was usually caused by suffocation. If we refer to the animal spirits, it may be rendered exhausted, or spent, as above. Either way, "corrupt" does not seem the happiest word.—The graves are ready for me.—By the term graves is here meant, the cells, or niches, of the sepulchral chambers. Ezek. xxxii. 22, 23.

Ver. 2. Doth not mine eye continue.—Parkhurst, "rest" in (or on) their provocation.—That is, these men, who mock and provoke me, are they not continually before my eyes?

Ver. 5. Eyes . . . shall fail.—Perhaps the meaning may be, "He that flattereth his friends, with a view to secure their interest, the eyes of his child shall fail, with looking for such returns." See Deut. xxviii. 32.

Ver. 6. Aforetime I was a tabret.—The margin reads better; "Before them (the people) I was a tabret." His friends had made him an object of contempt, who formerly caused joy and pleasure by his presence.

Ver. 11. The thoughts of my heart.—Marg. "Possessions;" i. e. the thoughts that had taken possession of his heart.

Ver. 12. They change the night into day.—By keeping me awake when I sought to sleep; and yet the light is short; Heb. "near to darkness;" because of the darkness and gloominess of his mind.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 2. How long will ye make an end of words?—"Put (or etc.) ensnaring (captious) words!" Schultens, Scott, &c.—Marg.—"Speak "To corruption I cried, Thou (art) my father!

And to the worm—My mother! and my sister!
And where is now my hope?
Even my hope, who shall see it?
They shall go down to the bars of Shoel,
When (we) rest together in the dust."

In this text we have preserved the original term Shoel, for the purpose of remarking that we consider it to mean the grave or sepulchre, when spoken in reference to the body, (chap. vii. 9; xxi. 13, &c.) and when used in reference to the mind, the invisible world, or world of souls. (Gen. xxxvii. 35; Prov. ix. 18; Isa. xiv. 9, &c.) And the bars of Shoel, or the sepulchre, may possibly refer to the niches in the sides of the sepulchre, where the bodies were deposited.

The hope here spoken of, "Where is now my hope?" is explained by the best Commentators, not in reference to his hope in the Redeemer, (chap. xxi. 25,) but that temporal hope with which others attempted to delude him.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—21. Bildad reproves Job, and describes the calamities of the wicked.—It should appear from Job's own language, as well as from Bildad's, that his mind was extremely agitated; and it is the manner of the Asiatics to express themselves with great energy. This may be observed of all the speakers in this narrative, and therefore need not be wondered at in Job himself, who felt what they only described. From these calamities it was the object of Bildad, who describes them in the most pointed and impressive language, to prove Job to be a wicked man. The evils here enumerated are indeed sufficiently appalling, without recurring to "groups of furies," as some have done, or any other imaginary beings. He is represented as exposed to "the snares of the fowler" equally with wild beasts and birds of prey; rooted out of all his possessions, without any memorial to preserve his name; and his body eaten up with disease, and about to be consigned to the silent tomb, without any of the plainly," Schultens and Heath; "discreetly," Good. The LXX. render it "Hold, that we also may speak."

Ver. 4. He teareth himself.—Bishop Loveth renders it in the imperative, "Let him tear himself!"—Shall the earth be forsaken for thee?—Henley (one of Bishop Loveth's annotators) remarks, "When the Orientals would reprove the pride or arrogance of any person, it is common for them to desire him to call to mind, how contemptible he and every mortal is, in these or similar apothegms:

"What, though Mahomet were dead?

The universe shall not fall for his sake,

The world does not subsist for one man alone."—Loveth.

Ver. 6. His candle shall be put out.—This refers to a suspended lamp. Ver. 8. Cast into a net by his own feet.—That is, his feet become entangled. These verses refer to the ancient methods of ensnaring wild animals.

Ver. 9. The robber.—In modern terms, perhaps, "the poacher;" the man who had laid the snares.

Ver. 13. The strength . . . his strength.—Meaning, the strong parts of his body, "bones" or rather, perhaps, "muscles."—The first-born of death.—If diseases be considered as the offspring of Death, the elephantiasis may well be considered his "first-born;" but as sickness precedes death, we rather incline to the idea of Reiske and Good, that the worm of putrefaction may be intended. See chap. xxiv. 20.

tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors.

15 It shall dwell in his tabernacle, because it is none of his: brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation.

16 His roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off.

17 His remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

18 He shall be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world.

19 He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

20 They that come after him shall be astonished at his day, as they that went before were affrighted.

21 Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Job, complaining of his friends' cruelty, sheweth there is misery enough in him to feel their cruelty. 21, 23 He craveth pity. 23 He believeth the resurrection.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 How long will ye vex my soul, and break me in pieces with words?

3 These ten times have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye make yourselves strange to me.

4 And be it indeed that I have erred, mine error remaineth with myself.

5 If indeed ye will magnify yourselves against me, and plead against me my reproach:

6 Know now that God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with his net.

7 Behold, I cry out of wrong, but I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is no judgment.

8 He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass, and he hath set darkness in my paths.

9 He hath stripped me of my glory, and taken the crown from my head.

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1320.

1 Is. 5. 21.

m Ps. 34. 18.

n They shall drive him.

o Is. 14. 22.

p Ps. 37. 13.

q or, lived with him.

r laid hold on horror.

s 2 Th. 1. 3.

a Ge. 31. 7.

b or, hardened yourselves against me.

c Ps. 33. 16.

d or, violence.

e 1 a. 2. 5, 6.

f Ps. 39. 11.

g my belly.

h or, the wicked.

i The men of my secret.

j Ps. 102. 5.

k Ps. 69. 26.

l who will give.

10 He hath destroyed me on every side, and I am gone: and my hope hath he removed like a tree.

11 He hath also kindled his wrath against me, and he counteth me unto him as one of his enemies.

12 His troops come together, and raise up their way against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle.

13 He hath put my brethren far from me, and mine acquaintance are verily estranged from me.

14 My kinsfolk have failed, and my familiar friends have forgotten me.

15 They that dwell in my house, and my maids, count me for a stranger: I am an alien in their sight.

16 I called my servant, and he gave me no answer; I entreated him with my mouth.

17 My breath is strange to my wife, though I entreated for the children's sake of my own body.

18 Yea, young children despised me; I arose, and they spake against me.

19 All my inward friends abhorred me: and they whom I loved are turned against me.

20 My bone cleaveth to my skin and to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.

21 Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me.

22 Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfied with my flesh?

23 Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book!

24 That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!

25 For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

honours usually attendant on the great and good. All this was no doubt meant to apply to Job, as proofs of his hypocrisy; but with how little justice will be seen in the sequel.

It seems very extraordinary that these eastern philosophers make no reference to a future state, and not less so, that Job himself alludes to it so seldom, and so transiently. Yet we shall see clearly, by the next chapter, that this was the great support of his mind under his accumulated misfortunes, though he saw but the faint risings of the dawn of immortality, now fully brought to light by the gospel; and "Blessed are our eyes," if they are enlightened to behold it.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1—29. Job charges his friends with cruelty—Implores pity from all around him, and triumphs in the doctrine of the resurrection.—The early part of this chapter complains of an attempt on the part of his friends (so called) to overwhelm him with eloquent and severe speeches, for which there was too much ground. But when he addresses the same language to the Almighty himself, and accuses Him of violence and wrong, nothing can excuse or palliate his crime, but the multitude and extremity of his afflictions; which none but He who inflicted, and he who bore them, duly could appreciate. Some new circumstances, however, are here brought forward, which must have been peculiarly distressing. His kindred and acquaintance had all forsaken him. His servants and those strangers who had been taken into his house for protection, now reckoned him an alien; and even their children treated him with contempt. One circumstance was peculiarly painful.

"My breath is strange (or offensive) to my wife; Tho' I entreated (her) for the children's sake of my own body."

We have already hinted the probability, if not certainty, that Job's wife deserted him in his affliction; and this it appears she did, though he entreated her for the sake of his children: but what children? 1. Was it on account of his deceased children, the early pledges of their wedded love? or, 2. Was it on account of other children he might have had by his concubines or slaves, and who were in fact become orphans by his situation? Alas! she had no love to him, or pity for them! She was "one of the foolish women of the age, who tempted him to curse God and die."

We now come to a passage which has afforded more work for critics and commentators, than any other in this very difficult poem; and our attention to it is excited by a very solemn introduction. Grotius, Le Clerc, Warburton, and other learned men, not conceiving that an Arabian patriarch could know any thing of a resurrection from the dead, have endeavoured to apply this famous passage to a restoration to temporal prosperity. Even Kennicott, who saw the absurdity of this, yet remarks, that to eat the flesh of another, is an Arabian phrase for calumniating him: the sense will then be, Have ye not sufficiently reproached me already?

Ver. 23. O that my words—the words he was about to utter—were printed in a book—Rather, "imprinted;" for certainly here is no allusion to the art of printing. In chap. xiii. 27, it is applied to marking the heels (or feet) of slaves. (Rather, "Oh that they were described, (Heb. yuchakoo), in a book, with an iron stile and lead! We graven on a rock for ever!" Pany observes, "At first men wrote on palm leaves, and afterwards on the bark or rind of other trees. In process of time, public monuments were written on rolls of lead, and those of a private nature on linen books, or tables covered with wax.")—Bagster.

Ver. 24. With an iron pen, and lead.—That is, in lead, and in the rock. The Yau must be here rendered, in, unless we suppose it substituted, by mistake, for Beith.—In the rock.—Dr. Pococke found hieroglyphics cut in the rock, in the sepulchres of the kings of Thebes. Inscriptions are also found in some of the Pyramids, and on the mountains in the desert of Sinai.

Ver. 25. My Redeemer.—My Goel, Kinsman—Redeemer. On the law of redemption among the Israelites, and their Hebrew ancestors, see Ruth, ch. iv. and notes.—Liveth.—Or is "the living one." So Scott (the poet) and Dr. J. P. Smith.—At the latter day.—Or, "at the last." Peters, But Scott, and Dr. Smith, above mentioned, take this word acheron, "the last," for one of the titles of the Redeemer, as in Isa. xlv. 6. Rev. i. 11.—He shall stand.—Or "arise," to judgment. See chap. xxxi. 14. Psalm vii. 6.

Ver. 15. It (or he, i. e. Death, the king of terrors) shall dwell, &c.—Brimstone shall be scattered on his habitation.—Some suppose this to allude to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. xix. 24. Psalm xi. 6. But the word here used for habitation may include the whole residence—his home. The expression may therefore imply, its utter abandonment to ruin and barrenness. See Deut. xxix. 23.

Ver. 17. He shall have no name in the street.—That is, no street shall be called after his name. Psalm xlix. 11.

Ver. 19. Neither son nor nephew (or grandson) in his dwelling.—Schultens says, the word means, "a refuge for strangers."

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 2. Break me in pieces.—The idea is evidently to "crush," to overwhelm, as it were, with a mountain of words.

Ver. 3. Make yourselves strange.—This may imply both obstinacy and want of feeling.

Ver. 15. They that dwell in my house.—Strangers, taken under his protection.

Ver. 19. Young children.—Not infants, evidently; but the half-grown children of his tenants, or slaves.

Ver. 20. I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.—This is very difficult to translate; but the sense seems to be, that his gums were grievously disordered; a natural effect of the elephantiasis. See Dr. Good.

Ver. 22. Why do ye persecute me as God?—He considers it as peculiarly cruel to persecute him with his bitter speeches, while thus afflicted by the hand of God.—And are not satisfied with my flesh?—The learned Schultens

26 " And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see " God :
27 Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not " another ; " though " my reins be consumed " within me.

28 But ye should say, Why persecute we him, " seeing the root of the matter is found in me ?

29 Be ye afraid of the sword : for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, that " ye may know there is a judgment.

CHAPTER XX.

Zophar snoweth the state and portion of the wicked.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer, and for this " I make haste.

3 I have heard the check of my reproach, and the spirit of my understanding causeth me to answer.

4 Knowest thou not this of old, since man was placed upon earth,

5 That the triumphing of the wicked is " short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a " moment ?

6 Though " his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the " clouds ;

7 Yet he shall perish for ever like " his own dung : they which have seen him shall say, Where is he ?

8 He shall fly away as a " dream, and shall not be found : yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night.

9 The eye also which saw him shall see him no more ; neither shall his place any more behold him.

10 " His children shall seek to please the poor, and his hands shall restore their " goods.

11 His bones are full of the sin " of his youth, which shall lie down with him in the dust.

12 Though wickedness be sweet " in his mouth, though he hide it under his tongue ;

13 Though he spare it, and forsake it not ; but keep it still " within his mouth :

A. M. 2181.
B. C. 1320.

m or, After I shall come, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God.

n 1 Co. 15. 53.
o 1 Jn 3. 2
p a stranger.

q or, my reins within me are consumed with earnest desire for that day.

r in my bosom.

s or, and what root of matter is found in me.

t Ps. 53. 10, 11.

u my haste is in me.

v from near d Mat. 7. 21.

w cloud.

x Ki. 14. 10.

y Ps. 73. 20.

z or, The poor shall oppress his children.

i ver. 18.

j c. 13. 26.

k c. 15. 16.

l in the midst of his palace.

m No. 3. 13.

n or, streaming brooks.

o the substance of his exchange.

p crushed.

q know.

r or, be none left for his meat.

s Ec. 5. 13, 14.

t or, troublesome.

u Ps. 73. 30.

v Ps. 73. 31.

w Ps. 51. 3.

x Mat. 3. 12.

14 Yet his meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of asps within him.

15 He hath swallowed down riches, and he shall vomit them up again : God shall cast them out of his belly.

16 He shall suck the poison " of asps : the viper's tongue shall slay him.

17 He shall not see the rivers, the " floods the brooks of honey and butter.

18 That which he laboured for shall he restore, and shall not swallow it down : according to " his substance shall the restitution be, and he shall not rejoice therein.

19 Because he hath " oppressed and hath forsaken the poor ; because he hath violently taken away a house which he builded not ;

20 Surely he shall not " feel quietness in his belly, he shall not save of that which he desired.

21 There shall " none of his meat " be left ; therefore shall no man look for his goods.

22 In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits : every hand of the " wicked shall come upon him.

23 When he is about to fill his belly, God shall cast the fury of his wrath upon him, and shall rain it upon him while " he is eating.

24 He shall flee from the iron weapon, and the bow of steel shall strike him through.

25 It is drawn, and cometh out of the body ; yea, the glittering sword cometh out of his gall : terrors " are upon him.

26 All darkness shall be hid in his secret places : a fire " not blown shall consume him ; it shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle.

27 The heaven shall reveal his iniquity ; and the earth shall rise up against him.

28 The increase of his house shall depart, and his goods shall flow away in the day of his wrath.

29 This is the portion of a wicked man from restrains it to the miraculous appearance of Jehovah in the whirlwind for the vindication of his character, though certainly he discovered no more expectancy of this, than of recovering his prosperity ; but persevered in the uniform language of despair, as to these things, even to the last. Dr. Priestley himself says, " Christians in general, from the earliest times, maintain that Job [in this passage] declares his faith in a happy resurrection at the last day ; and this I have no doubt is the right construction. . . . His wishing so often for death, as the end of all his troubles, shows that he had no expectation of any temporal deliverance."

Having premised these remarks, we shall now, as another specimen of the Hebrew poetry, present the reader with Dr. Pye Smith's translation of this celebrated passage :—

23 " O that, even now, were my words recorded !
O that they were written in a memorial !
24 With an iron point and lead !
That they were engraven, for perpetuity, on a rock !

Ver. 26. And though after, &c.—See margin. The first part of this translation seems now abandoned ; but the latter is preferable to the text : the preposition (mem) certainly means, not in, but from, or out of. Dr. Smith's translation is given in our Exposition.

Ver. 27. My reins be consumed, &c.—See margin. " As the heart is figuratively used to signify the temper and disposition, so the reins, to signify the close thought and reflection of the mind." Dr. Taylor. See Psalm xvi. 7. This verse is, however, very differently interpreted. Peters explains it, " I feel my very vitals fail me, and am hastening towards death and judgment." Dr. Pye Smith (probably guided by the LXX. and Vulgate) renders it, " The thoughts of my bosom are accomplished."

Dr. Boothroyd to the same effect, but in the future tense.
Ver. 28. Seeing the root, &c.—That is, seeing he had truth on his side. Or, (as in the margin) " What root of matter," what ground of complaint, " is found in me ?"

Ver. 29. Be ye afraid of the sword.—That is, beware lest you bring upon your punishment.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 2. Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer.—That is, enable me to answer.—And for this I make haste—i. e. he was eager to reply.

Ver. 3. The check of my reproach.—That is, the reply which Job had given to his reproaches.—The spirit of my understanding.—Meaning, his intelligent mind.

Ver. 7. Like his own dung.—That is, covered over, and put out of sight. See Dent. xxiii. 13.

Ver. 9. The eye which saw him.—" Which glanced at him." Heath, Parkhurst.

Ver. 10. His children shall seek to please the poor.—See margin ; i. e. they shall retaliate, and force him to make restitution.

25 I surely do know my Redeemer, the Living One :

And He, the Last, will arise over the dust.

26 And, after the disease has cut down my skin,

Even from my flesh I shall see God :

27 Whom I shall see on my behalf ;

And mine eyes shall behold him, and not estranged."

In opposition to this evangelical interpretation of Job's language, it has been asked—1. Whence came Job by the doctrine of a resurrection and future judgment ? We reply, of this Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied, " Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints," &c. (Jude, ver. 14, 15.) 2. Why did not Job refer to it in other instances ? We answer, he did, and refer to chap. xiv. 13—15 ; xxi. 30, &c. 3. But then, why did not Job derive comfort from this most exhilarating doctrine ? We ask, Does every good man always enjoy the consolations connected with the truth which he believes ? Certainly not.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—29. Zophar, in reply, describes the misery

Ver. 11. His bones are full of the sin of his youth.—This affords an obvious sense. (See Psalm xc. 8.) But Scott (the poet) omits the words in Italian, " of the sin," and reads, " full of his youth. It shall lie down with him," &c., meaning, he shall be cut off in his youth.

Ver. 14. Yet his meat.—The word " yet" which is supplied, were better omitted, and the verb repeated, thus :—

" His meat in his bowels is turned—It is turned into the gall of asps within him."

The gall of asps.—Heb. " bitterness ;" the same as " poison," verse 16. That is, " the poison of asps," which was anciently supposed to consist in their gall. So Pliny says expressly, that in the gall the poison of serpents consists.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. The brooks of honey and butter.—Or rather, " butter milk." See Isa. vii. 15.

Ver. 18. According to his substance.—See margin. At this early period, all trade was in the way of barter, or exchange ; the profit of this was its riches, or substance.

Ver. 21. There shall none of his meat be left.—See margin ; i. e. he shall enjoy nothing but himself.

Ver. 22. Every hand of the wicked.—But should be " trouble ;" " every hand of trouble," or " trouble on every hand."

Ver. 24. Bow of steel. The Heb. nehushah, is certainly brass. See Gen. iv. 22. 2 Kings xviii. 4.

Ver. 25. It is drawn.—The arrow, or the sword, and he is immediately seized with the horrors of death.

Ver. 26. All darkness shall be (rather is) hid in his secret places.—That is, all is darkness around him wherever he goes.—A fire not blown.—That is, by human agency, shall consume him. The judgment is inflicted by the invisible hand of God.

God, and the heritage * appointed unto him by God.

CHAPTER XXI.

Job sheweth that even in the judgment of man he hath reason to be grieved. 7 Sometimes the wicked do so prosper, as they despise God. 16 Sometimes their destruction is manifest. 22 The happy and unhappy are alike in death. 27 The judgment of the wicked is i. another world.

BUT Job answered and said,
2 Hear diligently my speech, and let this be your consolations.

3 Suffer me that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, mock on.

4 As for me, is my complaint to man? and if it were so, why should not my spirit be * troubled?

5 Mark me, and be astonished, and lay your hand upon your mouth.

6 Even when I remember I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power?

8 Their seed is established in their sight with them, and their offspring before their eyes.

9 Their houses are * safe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them.

10 Their bull gendereth, and faileth not; their cow calveth, and casteth not her calf.

11 They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance.

12 They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ.

13 They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave.

14 Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?

16 Lo, their good is not in their hand: the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

17 How oft is the candle of the wicked put

A.M. 2194.

B.C. 1520.

x of his decees from a shortened

b look unto

c c.40.4.

d Je.12.1,2

e peace from.

f or, mirth.

g c.22.17.

h Ex.5.2.

i Mal.3.14.

j Ps.1.1.

k or, lamp.

l stealth away.

m i.e. the punishment of his iniquity.

n Ex.20.5. Eze.16.14.

o Ro.11.34.

p pery perfection, or, in the strength of his perfection.

q or, milk-pails.

r tent of the tabernacles.

s veraths.

t grasses.

u watch in the heap.

v He.9.27.

w c.16.2.

x transgression.

y

z

a

b

c d e

f g

h i

j

k

l

m n

o

p

q

r

s t

u

v

w

x

y

z

a

b

c d e

f g

h i

j

k

l

m n

o

p

q

r

s t

u

v

w

x

y

z

of the wicked in the present life.—However we may censure the conduct of Zophar, as of the other of Job's friends, "There is (says Scott, the poet) great poetical merit in this speech. It is a torrent of Oriental eloquence, rushing on with the vehemence of a fiery temper, inflamed by resentment and mistaken zeal."

Some commentators connect this chapter with the preceding, by supposing the "Therefore" to have reference to Job's doctrine of a future judgment; but to us it appears that he purposely avoids that doctrine, and still argues upon the principle of an equal providence in the present life. "True!" as if the orator had said, "the wicked do sometimes prosper; but their triumph is but short; even while they are eating, (ver. 23.) before they have any time for enjoyment, the judgments of God are poured down upon them;" and this is intended to set aside the necessity of a future judgment.

The miseries of a wicked man in the present life, as they sometimes, though not uniformly, take place, are strongly and beautifully depicted by Zophar in this chapter, which comprises every thing that experience or imagination could suggest, to show that such receive their punishment in the present world, either in their own persons, or in their families, or, by anticipation, in their posterity; and this is urged in order to supersede the necessity of future punishment, and thus set aside the argument of Job in favour of a future judgment.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1—34. Job, in reply, again insists upon the prosperity of the wicked, as an argument for a future state.—He introduces the subject by bespeaking their attention, CHAP. XXI. Ver. 2. Let this be your consolation.—(That is, probably, "Let this [i. e. your hearkening diligently to my speech] be the consolations which ye afford me." Some render, "Let this be your retractions: tanchum yechuam, from nacham, to comfort, and also to repent.)—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Is my complaint to man?—He means, his appeal was to God: but if it had been to them, still there was reason for his being angry.—Why should not my spirit be troubled?—See margin: i. e. Why should I not be angry? Heath, Scott. People in anger are apt to speak short.

Ver. 13. In wealth.—Heb. "in good" i. e. in earthly good.
Ver. 17. How oft is the candle.—i. e. the lamp of life. Scott thinks this word "how oft," should be prefixed to several of the following sentences, as our translators have done to one of them: How oft doth God distribute? &c. So Dr. Good.

Ver. 19. God layeth up his iniquity.—See margin. But it has been asked, Whence could Job derive this doctrine, if he lived before Moses? We answer, in the conduct of Providence towards Ham, the father of Canaan; Gen. ix. 24—29, and Exposition; but the doctrine must always be taken with this exception, that children who renounce and forsake the sins of their fathers, are never punished for them.—He shall know it.—It may be said, "How can he out? and how oft cometh their destruction upon them? God distributeth sorrows in his anger.

18 They are as stubble before the wind, and as chaff that the storm carrieth away.

19 God layeth up his iniquity for his *child*ren: he rewardeth him, and he shall know it.

20 His eyes shall see his destruction, and he shall drink of the wrath of the Almighty.

21 For what pleasure hath he in his house after him, when the number of his months is cut off in the midst?

22 Shall any teach God knowledge? seeing he judgeth those that are high.

23 One dieth in his full strength, being wholly at ease and quiet.

24 His breasts are full of milk, and his bones are moistened with marrow.

25 And another dieth in the bitterness of his soul, and never eateth with pleasure.

26 They shall lie down alike in the dust, and the worms shall cover them.

27 Behold, I know your thoughts, and the devices which ye wrongfully imagine against me.

28 For ye say, Where is the house of the prince? and where are the dwelling places of the wicked?

29 Have ye not asked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, 30 That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.

31 Who shall declare his way to his face? and who shall repay him what he hath done?

32 Yet shall he be brought to the grave, and shall remain in the tomb.

33 The clouds of the valley shall be sweet unto him, and every man shall draw after him, there are innumerable before him.

34 How then comfort ye me in vain, seeing in your answers there remaineth  falsehood?

and directing them to mark, or rather look at him, in whom they might see a confutation of their doctrine: he, a man who feared God, and was thus afflicted, while the wicked grew old and great and prosperous; and he advises them to draw their consolation from the same source as he did—a future state. Then, from ver. 7 to 13, he describes the prosperity of the wicked in their domestic peace, the increase of their families and their cattle, which were the riches of those times, and the mirth of their young people; but then he admits that these things lead to impiety, and even Atheism, and sometimes end in sudden death, by which means their families are often involved in great calamity. But the manner of their end is not uniformly the same. One is cut off in a moment in full health, another by a languishing disease, (ver. 25.) They all, however, lie down in the dust together, and shall there remain till they are brought forth to judgment. "I believe, (says Peters,) that it will appear from the context, [that] by 'the day of destruction and the day of wrath,' can be meant no other than the future day of judgment; which, to the wicked and ungodly, is every where represented in Scripture as a day of wrath, a day of destruction and perdition." (2 Thess. i. 9; 2 Peter iii. 7; Jude 14, 15.)

The chapter concludes with the language of remonstrance: "How then comfort ye me in vain," or, in vain attempt to comfort me, seeing in your answers, "there remaineth transgression?" that is, there is still a remainder of error, of moral error of a dangerous tendency, in confining rewards and punishments to the present life only: whereas, though God often see his own destruction, or the destruction of his children?" We reply, By being forewarned of them by divine threatenings, as was the case with Saul, and others. He shall know it, by seeing its approach; thus he may "drink of the wrath of the Almighty," even before it is poured out.

Ver. 12. What pleasure hath he in his house (his family, which are to survive him) when he knoweth that the number of his (rather its) months is cut off?—That is, when he knoweth that his house shall shortly be destroyed?

Ver. 24. His breasts. The original word is Arabic, occurs only here, and is variously rendered. Our current translation, though doubtful, gives a good meaning, and corresponds with the context.

Ver. 28. The dwelling places.—See margin. The expression alludes to the tent of the clief of an encampment.

Ver. 32. Shall remain in the tomb.—See margin; i. e. of the sepulchral grots.—But how can the dead watch? It must be taken passively. Parkhurst says, "they shall watch over his tomb, to keep it clean," &c.; this agrees with the verse following.

Ver. 33. The clouds.—Dr. Good, "sods;" a more poetic word. [A valley, with springs of water to keep the turf perpetually green, was accounted a happy sepulture among the Arabians.]—Bagster.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Eliphaz sheweth that man's goodness profiteth not God. 5 He accuseth Job of divers sins. 21 He exhorted him to repentance, with promises of mercy.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can a man be profitable <sup>a</sup> unto God, <sup>b</sup> as he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?

3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is not thy wickedness great? and thine iniquities infinite?

6 For thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and stripped the <sup>c</sup> naked of their clothing.

7 Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withholden bread from the hungry.

8 But as for <sup>d</sup> the mighty man, he had the earth; and the <sup>e</sup> honourable man dwelt in it.

9 Thou hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless have been broken.

10 Therefore snares <sup>f</sup> are round about thee, and sudden fear troubleth thee;

11 Or darkness, that thou canst not see; and abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the <sup>g</sup> height of the stars, how high they are!

13 And thou sayest, <sup>h</sup> How <sup>i</sup> doth God know? can he judge through the dark cloud?

14 Thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

15 Hast thou marked the old way which wicked men have trodden?

16 Which were cut down out of time, <sup>j</sup> whose foundation was overflown with a flood:

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1520.

a Ps 16.2.
b or, if he may be profitable, doth his goodness depend thereon.

c clothes of the naked man of arm.

d eminent or, accepted for countenance.

e c. 18.8, 10. Pa. 11.6.

f head, b or, what.

g Ps. 10.11. 73.11.

h or, a flood poured upon their foundation.

i Ge. 7.10, &c. 2 Ps. 2.5.

k c. 21.14. l or, to.

m ac. 14.15. n or, estate.

o or, their excellency. p i. e. God.

q Ps. 7.5. Phil. 4.7.

r Ps. 119.11. s Ho. 14.12. t 2 Ti. 2.13.

u or, on the dust. v or, gold.

w winner of strength. x Ps. 66.17.

y Mat. 21.22. z him that hath love eyes.

a Ps. 5.5. b or, the innocent shall deliver the island.

c Ps. 18.26. d Ps. 77.2.9.

17 Which <sup>k</sup> said unto God, Depart from us: and what can the Almighty do for them?

18 Yet <sup>m</sup> he filled their houses with good things: but the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

19 The righteous see it, and are glad: and the innocent laugh them to scorn.

20 Whereas our <sup>n</sup> substance is not cut down, but <sup>o</sup> the remnant of them the fire consumeth.

21 Acquaint now thyself with <sup>p</sup> him, and be at <sup>q</sup> peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.

22 Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up <sup>r</sup> his words in thy heart.

23 If thou return <sup>s</sup> to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away <sup>t</sup> iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

24 Then shalt thou lay up gold <sup>u</sup> as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brook.

25 Yea, the Almighty shall be thy <sup>v</sup> defence, and thou shalt have <sup>w</sup> plenty of silver.

26 For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God.

27 Thou <sup>x</sup> shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

28 Thou shalt also decree <sup>y</sup> a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways.

29 When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save <sup>z</sup> the humble <sup>a</sup> person.

30 <sup>b</sup> He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thy hands.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Job longeth to appear before God, 6 in confidence of his mercy. 8 God, who is invisible, observeth our ways. 11 Job's innocency. 13 God's decree is immutable.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 Even to-day <sup>a</sup> is my complaint bitter.

punishes sinners and rewards the just in this life, yet this is far from being universally the case; and hence the necessity of a future resurrection and a final judgment.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1.—30. Eliphaz renews his attack on Job.—This chapter commences the fourth part of this extraordinary poem, and the third series of dialogue, in which, as in the preceding, Eliphaz takes the lead, and, with increased bitterness, now openly charges Job, as Bishop Louth remarks, "with injustice, rapine, and oppression; inveighs against him as an impious pretender to virtue and religion, and with a kind of sarcastic benevolence, exhorts him to penitence."

He commences, certainly, with a great and important question—"Can a man be profitable unto God? Is it any pleasure to the Almighty that thou art righteous?" That is, is it possible, by any thing man can do, to make any addition to the greatness or happiness of the Deity? Assuredly not; nor had Job pretended any thing of the kind. He proceeds to ask, "Will he reprove or plead with thee from fear?" On the contrary, he inquires, "Is not thy wickedness great? Are not thine iniquities infinite or innumerable?" And then, without waiting for an answer, he proceeds at once to charges of violence and injustice. He accuses him of taking the garments of the poor in pledge—with withholding bread from the hungry, and neglecting the fatherless and the widow—crimes of great enormity at all times, but especially in the early state of society; and which indicated, in the opinion of Eliphaz, that, with all Job's pretensions to religion, he was far gone in Atheism and infidelity. He therefore admonishes him to acquaint himself with God, and be at peace with him, as the only way to ensure a return of temporal prosperity and happiness.

To support this argument, Eliphaz alludes to the inhabitants of the old world, who were sunk into Atheism and infidelity, and "their foundation" therefore, that is, the earth on which they lived, was overwhelmed with a general flood, in which they were all drowned. In a following verse, there is supposed also to be an allusion to the final conflagration; but that is both obscure and doubtful.

The remaining part of the chapter, though proceeding on the mistaken ground of Job's being a hypocrite, is in itself very beautiful. The man who makes the Almighty himself his chief, his only treasure, must be rich indeed. Of this passage, as it is attended with some obscurity, we beg leave to propose the following literal translation.

"Then thou shalt set thy precious treasure against dust; (The treasure) of Ophir against the stones of the brook; Yea, the Almighty (himself) shall be thy treasure. And thou shalt have (in him) a MIGHT of silver."

This passage, as we conceive, alludes to the most ancient species of trade, that of bartering; in which one article was set against another of supposed equal value—gold against dust, and silver against pebbles: thus intimating that, on the return of his prosperity, the precious metals would be with him as plentiful as dust and pebbles. (See 2 Chron. i. 15.) Or rather, that as compared with God, his chief treasure, they would be alike of no value.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 1.—17. Job's pathetic appeal to God in reply to Eliphaz.—Job, exasperated and indignant at the charges brought against him by Eliphaz, now makes a solemn and animated appeal to God, before whom he expresses an earnest desire to appear and plead his cause, under a conviction that the mercy as well as justice of the Deity would be engaged on his behalf. "Would he plead against me with his great strength? Overbearing and overwhelming me like you, my pretended friends?" "No; but he would put strength in me," animate, encourage, and assist me, to plead my cause before him. (Compare chap. xvi. 4, 5.)

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 2. As he that is wise, &c.—See margin. But the textual reading is generally preferred.

Ver. 5. Thine iniquities infinite.—Literally, "without end." Dr. Good, "without bounds."

Ver. 6. Stripped the naked.—See margin; i. e. the outer garment, to take it in pledge; a thing which, in after times, was strongly forbidden to the Jews, Deut. xxiv. 12, 13, 17.

Ver. 16. Cut down out of time.—That is, immaturity.—Whose foundation was overflown with a flood.—See margin. This is understood as referring to Noah's flood.

Ver. 20. Whereas our substance is not cut down.—This is a very perplexing verse, and we can find no translation more intelligible than our own, which yet is not intelligible. Scott (the poet) who applies the first line to the old world, translates the second:

"But the remnant of them, the fire shall consume;"

meaning, that at the end of the world, the then remainder of the wicked shall be consumed by fire, instead of water.

Ver. 24. Thou shalt lay up gold.—The word (bazar) here rendered gold, and in the next verse "defence," means, properly, "precious treasure;" and, according to Gesenius, includes both the precious metals.

Ver. 25. Plenty of silver.—See margin. An idiom that reminds us of the provincial phrases, a might, or power of any thing; to which it seems equivalent.—The word here, and frequently in this book, rendered the ALMIGHTY, is, by some Hebrew scholars, supposed to refer rather to the goodness of God than his power; (see note on Gen. xvii. 1.) but by others it is derived from an Arabic root, signifying power.

Ver. 28. Thou shalt decree.—This implies his being restored to magistracy authority.

Ver. 30. He shall deliver the island of the innocent.—See margin. It is doubtful, however, whether the word so rendered ever means an island. In Arabic, it means a habitation; and this gives an easy and good sense.

CHAPTER XXIV.

my stroke is heavier than my groaning.
 3 Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!
 4 I would order my cause before him, and fill my mouth with arguments.
 5 I would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.
 6 Will he plead against me with his great power? No; but he would put strength in me.
 7 There the righteous might dispute with him; so should I be delivered for ever from my judge.
 8 Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him:
 9 On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him:
 10 But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.
 11 My foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined.
 12 Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food.
 13 But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth.
 14 For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me: and many such things are with him.
 15 Therefore am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.
 16 For God maketh my heart soft, and the Almighty troubleth me:
 17 Because I was not cut off before the darkness, neither hath he covered the darkness from my face.

A. M. 2134.
 B. C. 1530.
 b hand.
 c Is. 26. 8.
 Je. 14. 7.
 d Is. 43. 35.
 e Is. 57. 16.
 f Is. 43. 35.
 g 1 Pe. 1. 7.
 h Ps. 19. 9, 10.
 i hid, or, laid up.
 j or, appointed portion.
 k Je. 15. 16.
 l 1 Th. 3. 3.
 m Ps. 119. 120.
 a or, them.
 b De. 24. 6, 17.
 c mingled corn, or, dredge.
 d the wicked gather the vintage.
 e La. 4. 5.
 f Ps. 103. 11.

1 Wickedness goeth often unpunished. 17 There is a secret judgment for the wicked.
WHY, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days?
 2 Some remove the landmarks, they violently take away flocks, and feed thereof.
 3 They drive away the ass of the fatherless, they take the widow's ox for a pledge.
 4 They turn the needy out of the way: the poor of the earth hide themselves together.
 5 Behold, as wild asses in the desert, go they forth to their work; rising betimes for a prey: the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.
 6 They reap every one his corn in the field: and they gather the vintage of the wicked.
 7 They cause the naked to lodge without clothing, that they have no covering in the cold.
 8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains, and embrace the rock for want of a shelter.
 9 They pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor.
 10 They cause him to go naked without clothing, and they take away the sheaf from the hungry;
 11 Which make oil within their walls, and tread their wine-presses, and suffer thirst.
 12 Men groan from out of the city, and the soul of the wounded crieth out: yet God layeth not folly to them.
 13 They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.
 14 The murderer rising with the light killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.
 15 The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for

He then goes forth, as it were, to seek for him; before and behind—on the left hand and on the right; that is, toward all the cardinal points—but he is visible only in his works.

"In vain I seek him on the western shore,
 In vain his footsteps in the north explore,
 Or in the south: He, working in his might,
 Wrapt in impervious shades, eludes my sight."—Scott.

Job comforts himself, however, with the consideration, that though he cannot find God, God is at no loss to find him: "He knoweth (says he) the way that I take;" and when he hath tried me, I shall come forth "as gold from the furnace." He then reposes on the sovereign power and wisdom of the Almighty, who is as unchangeable in his purposes as in his nature; who doeth whatsoever pleaseth him; and, "as concerns myself, (says the afflicted man,) he performeth the thing appointed for me, and many such things," many such scenes of pain and affliction "are with him. Therefore am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him." The fear of God, however, is awe and reverence, but not despair. "There is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared." (Psalm cxxx. 4.)

"God orders all: what he appoints is best:
 Who knows and feels it, is and must be blest."

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1—25. Job returns to his former argument on the prosperity of the wicked.—"The Book of Job (says Robinson, an ingenious writer) was written to free us from the folly of imagining that the present life is a state of rewards and punishments; and to inform us, that it is a state of trial and exercise, to prepare us for a future life. The precise in-

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 2. My stroke.—Heb. "My hand." The LXX., Syriac, and Arabic, render it "His hand;" but our translation means the same.

Ver. 12. I have esteemed.—"Hid," or "laid up;" i. e. as great treasure.—My necessary food.—"My appointed portion."

Ver. 16. Maketh my heart soft.—Or, "faint;" i. e. fearful, trembling. So Levit. xxvi. 38. Deut. xx. 3.

Ver. 17. Because I was not cut off, &c.—Why was I not removed from earth before this heavy affliction came upon me?

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. See his days.—The original term here used, means more than merely to see; namely, to notice particularly, to mark. So Psalm xl. 4. "His eyes behold," notice, observe. "and his eyelids try the children of men." To mark the days of the Almighty, must refer to his days of retribution, the days wherein he holds his court (as it were) for judgment. See chap. i. 6; ii. 1.

Ver. 2. Take away flocks and feed.—May mean, either that they take the flocks with the pasture, which might be done by removing the landmarks, and pretending that they were their own; or else, that they took the flocks to feed on them.

Ver. 4. They turn the needy out of the way.—That is, make them turn tention of Job, in this chapter, is to convince us that the wicked often prosper, and the righteous suffer here; but that there is nothing in all this inconsistent with the perfections of God: on the contrary, he bringeth good out of evil, and works virtue in the righteous by the vices of the wicked. Do the wicked "remove the landmark?" The act will provoke the equity of a good man to replace it. Do they rob the widow of her ox, and the fatherless of his ass? The oppressions of the poor sufferers will excite feelings of sympathy, and flowings of generosity. "Why," says Job, "seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days?"

This opening may, perhaps, be rendered clearer by a short paraphrase. "Why, seeing times are not hidden," that is, seeing none of the events or circumstances of time, or of the present state, "are hidden from the Almighty," wherefore do not they that know him mark his days of visitation and retribution, and in particular the day of death, when the powerful and the wealthy, as well as the needy and the poor, shall be assigned to the tomb, to await the judgment of that day, "for which all other days were made."

Job now enumerates a long list of crimes and injuries which, in his age and country, were not unfrequent. But the latter part of this chapter is considered, by the critics, as very obscure and difficult. Of some of the verses, therefore, we shall offer a new translation, and give the authorities in our notes. Speaking of the oppressor and the profligate, described in the preceding verses, Job says, (ver. 18.)

"He floateth as a light thing upon the face of the waters:
 Their portion upon the land is accursed."

aside to make way for them; and even fly to hide themselves in caves and holes of the rocks, to save their lives.

Ver. 6. They reap.—See margin. That is, the poor, every one his master's or oppressor's "field;" i. e. they labour for others only. Verses 5 and 6 should, perhaps, be considered as a parenthesis.

Ver. 7. They (that turn the needy out of the way) cause the naked to lodge without clothing.—Without their hyke, or blanket, which they take in pledge. See chap. xxi. 6. [Or, "Naked they lodge without clothing; and without a covering in the cold." One of the characteristics of the wandering Arabs, who are ill-fed, ill-clothed, and often miserably off for tents.]—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Make oil within their walls.—That is, the walls which enclose their olive-yards. Or, as others read it, "They labour between their walls at noon-day." The general meaning is, that though the poor prepare food for the rich, they enjoy neither corn, nor wine, nor oil, themselves.

Ver. 12. God layeth not folly to them.—Dr. Good renders it, "God regardeth not the supplication;" i. e. he does not interfere as their judge, to punish them. The word rendered folly, means also prayer, or supplication.

Ver. 13. They are of those that rebel against the light.—By preferring night to day, "because their deeds are evil." John iii. 19.

the twilight, saying, No eye shall see me: and <sup>a</sup>disguiseth <sup>b</sup>his face.

16 In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the daytime: they <sup>c</sup>know not the light.

17 For the morning <sup>d</sup>is to them even as the shadow of death: if <sup>e</sup>one know <sup>f</sup>them, <sup>g</sup>they are in the terrors of the shadow of death.

18 He <sup>h</sup>is swift as the waters; their portion is cursed in the earth: he <sup>i</sup>beholdeth not the way of the vineyards.

19 Drought and heat <sup>j</sup>consume the snow waters: so doth the grave those which have sinned.

20 The womb shall forget him; the worm shall feed sweetly on him; he shall be no more remembered; and wickedness shall be broken as a tree.

21 He evil entreateth the barren that beareth not; and doeth not good to the widow.

22 He draweth also the mighty with his power: he riseth up, <sup>k</sup>and no man is sure of life.

23 Though it be given him to be in safety, whereon he resteth; yet his <sup>l</sup>eyes are upon their ways.

24 They are exalted for a little <sup>m</sup>while, but are <sup>n</sup>gone and brought low; they are <sup>o</sup>taken out of the way as all other, and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.

A. M. 2434.

B. C. 1520.

g Pr 7.8,9.

h seetheth his face in secret.

i Jn.3.20.

j Ps.73.18, 19.

k violently take.

l Pr.10.7. Is.26.14.

m or, he trusteth not his own life.

n Pr.5.21. 23.

o Ps.37.35, 36.

p not.

q closed up.

a Da.4.3,4. Jude.25.

b Mat.5.45.

c c.4.17, &amp;c. Is.14. &amp;c. Ps.143.2, &amp;c. Ro.5.1,21.

d Zec.13.1. 1 Co.6.11. 1 Jn.1.5. Re.1.5.

e Is.40.14.

f Ec.12.7.

g or, with.

25 And if it be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

CHAPTER XXV.

Bildad sheweth that man cannot be justified before God

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 Dominion <sup>a</sup>and fear <sup>b</sup>are with him, he maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is there any number of his armies? and upon whom <sup>c</sup>doth not his light arise?

4 How then can man be justified <sup>d</sup>with God? or how can he be clean <sup>e</sup>that is born of a woman?

5 Behold even to the moon, and it shineth not; yea, the stars are not pure in his sight.

6 How much less man, that is a worm? and the son of man, which is a worm.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Job, reproving the uncharitable spirit of Bildad, 5 acknowledgeth the power of God to be infinite and unsearchable.

BUT Job answered and said, 2 How <sup>a</sup>hast thou helped him that is without power? how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast thou counselled him that hath no wisdom? and how hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is?

4 To whom hast thou uttered words? and whose spirit <sup>b</sup>came from thee?

5 Dead things are formed from under the waters, <sup>c</sup>and the inhabitants thereof.

The character of such men seems here peculiarly referred to. It is light as the straw, or the bubble that floats upon the waves;—detested as the produce of soil laid under an anathema;—therefore “he seeth not the way of the vineyards;” that is, he liveth not to enjoy the general festivity. But,

“As drought and heat consume the snow waters,
So doth the grave (those which) thus have sinned.”

These men, he observes, are “exalted (only) for a little while, and they are gone; and brought low, even to the grave;” they are taken out of the way, as all other men, whether rich or poor, “and are cut off (by death) as the tops of the ears of corn” (by the reapers); and so are they sent to their reward. Thus is this imagery explained by our Lord himself, in one of his parables: “The harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels.” Matt. xiii. 39.

This chapter closes with a fresh challenge to Job’s opponents, to contradict, or to refute him.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1—6. Bildad’s last reply to Job.—“This short reply of Bildad (says Scott, the poet,) represents, in a very lofty strain, the terrible majesty, supreme dominion, and infinite perfection of the Deity. Thence he infers the insufferable arrogance of a creature, so frail and impure as man, in justifying himself to God, and impeaching the rectitude of his government. He insinuates that Job had thus done; and probably intended to impress the standers-by with a persuasion, that the sole point in dispute between Job and his opponents was,—who was in the wrong; he or God?”

“This speech is no sort of answer to the facts adduced in the foregoing chapter. They were, indeed, undeniable; and, on the principles of his antagonists, not solvable. I therefore incline to think, that the poet put Bildad on making this last feeble effort, merely to give occasion to the triumph of Job in the subsequent chapter.”

So far Scott, and we agree in the general tenor of his remarks, without pledging ourselves to the truth of every observation. Most certainly the language and ideas are sublime and beautiful; but from its extreme brevity, it seems more like the exordium, than the whole of an oration. Taking it, however,

Ver. 15. Disguiseth his face.—See margin. [Or, “putteth a covering on his face;” probably the hood of the burmose, or cloak, which the Arabs sometimes throw over their other garments.]—Bagster.

Ver. 16. Dig through houses.—The houses of the East being generally built of clay, or soft bricks, are easily undermined.

Ver. 18. He is swift.—“As a light thing.” Scott, Good, Boothroyd.—Their portion.—There is a remarkable abruptness in the change of person in these verses, which appears harsh to us; but is not uncommon in the poetic books of Scripture.

Ver. 21. He evil entreateth.—“He devoureth.” Scott, Boothroyd. The sense is, he injureth some, and doeth good to none.

Ver. 22. He riseth up, and no man is sure of life.—Thus translated, the passage may apply to the assassin, ver. 14, and thus agrees best with the preceding clause: see the margin; i. e. he is himself in continual fear: which may well apply to the same character.

Ver. 23. Though it be given him to be in safety, &c.—Taking the words as in the text, the sense is, that notwithstanding any assurances of safety, his eyes are continually upon the watch.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 5. Behold (rather, “look”) even to the moon, and it shineth not.—“It abideth not,” says Dr. Good. Perhaps the poetical idea is, that when the sun appears, the moon withdraws behind the curtains of her ent, and becomes invisible.—The stars are not pure.—The twinkling of the stars is supposed to be caused by the casual intervention of fleeting vapours, or other bodies; but the purity here meant is moral as it stands, we cannot too much admire either the language or the sentiments.

Dominion and fear are with him; but what can we understand by God “making peace in his high places?”—“in the heights of heaven,” as the Chaldee paraphrase explains it. Scott (above named) explains it of preserving peace; keeping all the heavenly worlds in perfect harmony and order. Perhaps here may be another allusion to the heavenly court, of which we read in the commencement of the poem, when the sons of God met together, and Satan, the angel of discord, appeared among them; but it was only as the accuser of mankind. There is no more war in heaven. When the Author of peace ordaineth “quietness,” “who then can give trouble?” (Chap. xxiv. 29.)

But the chief sentiment here expressed, is the same as had been twice before expressed by Eliphaz, (chap. iv. 17.—xv. 14.) though somewhat differently:

“How can man be justified with God?”

Or, how can he be clean that is born of woman?”

The Deity is then compared to an uncreated sun, whose light irradiates all the hosts of heaven; before whom the moon appears abashed, and withdraws her light, and the stars twinkle with impurity. The whole passage is thus beautifully expressed in English verse by Scott, “——— Shall a thing of dust Assume the lofty attribute of just!

Before his blaze the moon abash’d retires;
Before his blaze fade all the starry fires:
Yet shall pollution’s worm his beam endure!
The child of woman in his sight be pure?”

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 1—14. Job’s concluding speech, in reply to his friends.—“In reply to Bildad, Job demonstrates himself to be no less expert at wielding the weapons of satire and ridicule, than those of reason and argument; and, reverting to a more serious tone, he displays the infinite power and wisdom of God, more copiously and more poetically than the former speaker.” (Bishop Lovth.) And “whereas Bildad had spoken only of God’s kingdom in heaven, Job adds the counterpart, Ver. 6. How much less, &c.—[The original is degradingly expressive: “How much less, enosh, miserable man, who is a worm; and the son of Adam, who is, toleah, a maggot.”]—Bagster. Dr. Good renders it, How much less man, a worm.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 2. How hast thou helped, &c.—[Bildad had produced no argument to refute Job’s doctrine; and therefore Job ironically admires the assistance which Bildad had given to his friends in their extremity, and the instruction he had afforded him in his perplexity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 3. How hast thou plentifully declared, &c.—Rather, “How hast thou abundantly exhibited sound wisdom.” So the word here used is rendered in Prov. ii. 7, iii. 21.

Ver. 4. And whose spirit came from thee.—Rather, “What inspiration cometh from thee.” So far, it may be easily perceived, the language is ironical. Job now proceeds to enter on the deep matter of his own oration.

Ver. 5. Dead things, &c.—This verse is very unhappily translated. Boothroyd’s appears to us the best version of it:

The mighty dead, and those who dwell with them,
Are in anguish beneath the waters.”

By these mighty dead (Rephaim) are generally understood, the giants of the old world, of which we read Gen. vi. 4. But the same term is applied to the mighty dead of later ages, Isa. xiv. 9. Ezek. xxxii. 21—23. These are represented as confined in Sheol, Gehenna, or Tartarus, to the punishment of the great dav. Compare 2 Peter ii. 4, 5. Jude, ver. 6, 7. Rev. xx 1, 2, 3.

6 Hell <sup>a</sup> is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering.
7 He stretcheth out <sup>e</sup> the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.
8 He bindeth up <sup>f</sup> the waters in his thick clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them.
9 He holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud <sup>g</sup> upon it.
10 He hath compassed the waters with <sup>h</sup> bounds, until the <sup>i</sup> day and night come to an end.
11 The pillars of heaven <sup>j</sup> tremble and are astonished at his reproof.
12 He <sup>k</sup> divideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through <sup>l</sup> the <sup>m</sup> proud.
13 By his spirit <sup>n</sup> he <sup>o</sup> hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent.
14 Lo, these <sup>p</sup> are parts <sup>q</sup> of his ways: but how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Job protesteth his sincerity. 8 The hypocrite is without hope. 11 The blessings of the wicked are turned into curses.

MOREOVER Job <sup>a</sup> continued his parable, and said,
2 As God liveth, <sup>b</sup> who hath taken away my judgment; and the Almighty, <sup>c</sup> who hath <sup>d</sup> vexed my soul;
3 All the while my breath <sup>e</sup> is in me, and the <sup>f</sup> spirit of God <sup>g</sup> is in my nostrils;
4 My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit.
5 God forbid that I should justify you: till I die I will not remove mine <sup>h</sup> integrity from me.
6 My righteousness I hold fast, and will not

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1520.
d Ps. 139. 8.
11.
Pr. 15. 11.
He. 4. 13.
e Ps. 104. 2.
f Ge. 1. 6, 7.
Pr. 30. 4.
g Ps. 97. 2.
h Pr. 8. 29.
i end of light with darkness.
j He. 12. 26.
k Ex. 14. 21.
Is. 51. 15.
l pride.
m Da. 4. 37.
n Ps. 33. 6, 7.
o 1 Co. 13. 9, 12.
p added to take up.
q made my soul stronger.
Ru. 1. 20.
o i. e. the breath which God gave him.
Ge. 2. 7.
d c. 2, 3, 9.
e Ac. 24. 16.
1 Th. 3. 1.
19. 21.
f From my days.
g Mat. 16. 26.
h Pr. 1. 23.
i Mat. 13. 21.
j or, being in.
k De. 28. 41.
2 Ki. 10. 7, 8.
Ho. 9. 13.
l Ps. 78. 64.
m Ec. 2. 26.
n Lu. 16. 22, 23.

let it go: my heart <sup>a</sup> shall not reproach me <sup>b</sup> so long as I live.
7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous.
8 For <sup>c</sup> what <sup>d</sup> is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?
9 Will God hear <sup>e</sup> his cry when trouble cometh upon him?
10 Will he delight himself in the Almighty? will he always <sup>f</sup> call upon God?
11 I will teach you <sup>g</sup> by the hand of God: <sup>h</sup> that which <sup>i</sup> is with the Almighty will I not conceal.
12 Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it; why then are ye thus altogether vain?
13 This <sup>j</sup> is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of oppressors, <sup>k</sup> which they shall receive of the Almighty.
14 If <sup>l</sup> his children be multiplied, <sup>m</sup> it <sup>n</sup> is for the sword: and his offspring shall not be satisfied with bread.
15 Those that remain of him shall be buried in death: and his widows shall not <sup>o</sup> weep.
16 Though he heap up silver as the dust, and prepare raiment as the clay;
17 He may prepare <sup>p</sup> it, but <sup>q</sup> the just shall put it on, and the innocent shall divide the silver.
18 He buildeth his house as a moth, and as a booth <sup>r</sup> that the keeper maketh.
19 The rich <sup>s</sup> man shall lie down, but he shall not be gathered: he openeth his eyes, and he <sup>t</sup> is not.
20 Terrors take hold on him as waters, a tempest stealeth him away in the night.
21 The east wind carrieth him away, and he his kingdom in Hades, (or Sheol) the world of death. Thence he ascends to the (visible) creation; the origin and foundation of the divine dominion; and finishes with a display of some illustrious operations of providence for the benefit of our system. His design in all this was, not to make ostentation of his own superior eloquence. He aimed to remove the ill impressions made by the speeches of his opponents. He shows them that he firmly believed in the all-wise and almighty Maker and Governor of the world; and had too great and venerating ideas of his adorable perfections to be capable of being an Atheist, as Eliphaz had cruelly painted him, (chap. xii. 12—20.) or of entering into a contest with" his Creator. (Scott, the poet.)

This chapter, though in several parts obscure, is full of the sublime and beautiful. It ransacks (as it were) the universe, for images to portray the majesty of the Great Supreme. It descends to the lowest hell, and stirs up the mighty dead—the giants of the olden time—the heroes and "men of renown" before the deluge, who filled the earth with violence, and were swept down by the mighty tempest into the vast abyss: but there they are not concealed. Hell is naked and uncovered to the eye of the Omniscient. His knowledge is "deeper than hell," what can we know of it? It is likewise "high as heaven," (chap. xi. 8.) and the poet leads us there also, to contemplate his works. He stretches out the northern hemisphere, and hangs at its extremity that brilliant lamp of heaven, the polar star, with its attendant luminaries. "The waters above the earth he bindeth up safely in the clouds, and to those below he setteth bounds," which, agreeable to his promise, (Gen. ix. 15.) shall not be passed till the time that day and night shall be interchanged no more. But he hides the splendour of his throne with clouds, and "the pillars of heaven tremble at his reproof." Anon, "the wind" disperseth the storm, and the heavens are gilded by his sun-beams.

Many commentators have explained this garnishing the heavens, of their first creation; but the context has led Scott, and other modern expositors, to explain the passage of the return of sunshine after rain, when its beams garnish or beautify the heavens.—"But lo! these are but the outlines of his ways." They convey "a word—a whisper" of his glory; but its full display, "the thunder of his power," O, who can comprehend or understand?

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1—23. Job proceeds in his defence, and again solemnly protests his innocence.—"The third of the friends making no reply, and the others remaining silent, (says Bishop Louth,) Job at length opens the true sentiments of his heart concerning the fate of the wicked; he allows that their prosperity is unstable, and that they and their descendants

Ver. 6. Hell is naked.—Heb. Sheol; the place of punishment just alluded to, 'the bottomless pit,' supposed by the ancients to lie under the great abyss of waters, in the centre of the earth.

Ver. 7. He (God) stretcheth out the north (i. e. the northern hemisphere; or rather, the stars of the North Pole) over the empty place.—Probably meaning, the unknown northern sea.—And hangeth the earth upon nothing.—That is, in the vast expanse of ether. So Milton:

"And earth, self-balanced, on her centre hung."

Ver. 9. He holdeth back the face of his throne.—That is, he withdraweth from human eyes the splendour of his presence, by covering it with his clouds.

Ver. 10. Until the day and night come to an end.—See margin; i. e. until there shall be no more alternate succession of day and night.

Ver. 11. The pillars of heaven tremble.—What are these? Either the atmosphere, which is poetically supposed to support the celestial spheres, and which is violently agitated by tempests; or the mountains, which appear to vulgar eyes to support the heavens. See Psalm xviii. 7.

Ver. 12. Smitteth through the proud.—That is, the proud waves. See Isa. li. 15.

Ver. 13. By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens.—Scott (the poet) renders it, "By his wind the heavens become serene." The word Ruach is often rendered wind, as in chap. xxxvii. 21, &c. So Luther.—His hand hath formed the crooked serpent.—This line is variously rendered. For "formed," Scott (the poet) reads "slayeth," on the supposition that a tempest destroys the monsters of the sea; for it is the sea-serpent which is supposed to be here the celestial sign draco, which includes the stars between the great and little bear, (Ursa, major and minor), near the North Pole. [Probably the immense constellation, called by Milton, "Opbiachus huge, that fires the arctic sky;" as it is not likely that this sublime writer should in an instant descend from "garnishing the heavens" to the formation of a reptile.]—Bagster. Dr. Boothroyd, after Schulzens, Dathe, &c. renders the expression very literally; "He pierceth the shooting serpent." From this passage, says Dr. Boothroyd, the rising of these stars must have been attended with tempestuous weather; and hence to pierce the serpent, denotes to remove, or still, a tempest.

Ver. 14. Lo, these are parts (literally, "extremities") of God, "outlines") of his ways: but how little a portion (Good, "whisper") is heard of him.—See chap. iv. 12, where it is applied to the voice of a spectre. The original term, literally "a word whispered," is very beautiful and expressive.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1. Job continued his parable.—That is, oration.

Ver. 3. Spirit of God.—This is properly explained in the margin.

Ver. 7. Let mine enemy be as the wicked.—That is, let him be as prosperous as any wicked man can be.

Ver. 11. I will teach you by the hand.—See Margin; or rather, perhaps as we might say, "by the aid," or help of God. Hand, figuratively means power.

Ver. 12. Altogether vain.—"Why do ye thus babble babbings?"—Dr. Good.

Ver. 15. Those that remain of him.—Rather, "his remains shall be entombed in death;" i. e. silently, and without pomp. "No sepulchre, no funeral dirge."—Dr. Good.

Ver. 16. Raiment as the clay.—That is, in great abundance. As the Asiatics scarcely ever change their fashions, they frequently hoard up a great quantity of garments. [D'Herbelot tells us, that Bokkten, an illustrious poet of Cufah, in the ninth century, had so many presents made him, that at his death he was found possessed of one hundred suits of clothes, two hundred shirts, and five hundred turbans.]—Bagster.

Ver. 18. As a moth—as a booth.—That is, "feeble in its structure and materials, and short in its duration."—Good. The kind of booth here alluded to, is one formed of boughs, for the watchmen of the garden or vineyard.

Ver. 19. He shall not be gathered.—Hebrew, "shall not add to do it;" i. e. "shall not do so again."—Boothroyd. He is supposed to be carried off with a hurricane in the night.

departeth: and as a storm hurleth him out of his place.

22 For God shall cast upon him, and not spare: he would fain flee out of his hand.

23 Men shall clap their hands at him, and shall hiss him out of his place.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

There is a knowledge of natural things. 12 But wisdom is an excellent gift of God.

SURELY there is a vein for the silver, and a place for gold where they fine it.

2 Iron is taken out of the earth, and brass is molten out of the stone.

3 He setteth an end to darkness, and searcheth out all perfection: the stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.

4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot: they are dried up, they are gone away from men.

5 As for the earth, out of it cometh bread: and under it is turned up as it were fire.

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires: and it hath dust of gold.

7 There is a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen:

8 The lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion passed by it.

shall at last experience, on a sudden, that God is the avenger of iniquity. In all this, however, he contends that the divine counsels do not admit of human investigation; but that the chief wisdom of man consists in the fear of God."

On the early part of this chapter, Scott (the poet) has also the following remark: "Job had all along maintained, in opposition to the others, (his three friends,) that this world is not the scene of a regular distribution of good and evil; that virtue is often oppressed, and vice triumphant; and that the major part of wicked men go unpunished here; even grow hoary in affluence and ease, and at length die in peace. But now, having reduced his opponents to silence, he frankly owns, there are some examples of such sort of divine vengeance on bad men in the present life, as they had asserted. Lest, however, this acknowledgment should be construed a giving up the cause to his antagonists, and subscribing to their condemnation of him; he prefaceth his concession with a solemn declaration of his innocence; of his resolution to defend it to his latest breath; and of his abhorrence of (the) wicked character which they had endeavoured to fix upon him."

The term hypocrite, so often used by our translators, does not exactly correspond with the original word, which the Lexicons all agree means a profane and ungodly person: but this will make no alteration in the argument. For, a profane or ungodly person, who professes to be religious, (as Job certainly did,) must of necessity be a hypocrite; and it is no uncommon thing for hypocrites, who are publicly religious, to be in private irreligious and profane. Job, on the contrary, was in his private character certainly religious, and feared God; yet he cannot be justified, in many of his public speeches, from using expressions respecting God, at least, bordering upon profaneness; and libellous (if we may use such a term) toward his Maker. Of this we have an instance in the present chapter, in which he accuses the Almighty, not only of having vexed him bitterly, but also of having "taken away his judgment;" which implies either the denial, or at least the delay of justice, in refusing to clear up his character by the removal of his afflictions.

To return, however, to the hypocrite or wicked man here adverted to, the patriarch asks, "What is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained (much wealth,) when God

Ver. 22. God shall cast.—Scott (the poet) and Dr. Stock consider the name of God as here improperly supplied, and refer the whole passage to the tempest: "It shall cast upon him his fury; in fleeing he would flee." So the Hebrew.

Ver. 23. Men shall clap.—If the word God be improperly supplied, so also men: and the critics just named, apply the whole of the description to the storm of east wind, the levanter, which may poetically be said, to clap and hiss, as we apply to our winds the terms hoar and whistle.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. A vein for silver.—"A mine," so Good, &c. And a place for gold, (where) they fine it—"which (men) refine," says the same learned critic. Scott (the poet) thinks the refining should be referred to both metals.

Ver. 2. Brass is molten out of the stone—i. e. the ore. The modern brass is an artificial metal, but the brass of the early ages was doubtless native copper, the oldest mine of which known was in the Isle of Cyprus, as mentioned by Pliny.

Ver. 3. He setteth an end, &c.—This verse is very obscure and difficult. The passage evidently relates to mining, in which man is the agent: the best modern translators, therefore, (following the suggestion of Cocceius) supply the word man at the beginning of this verse:—"Man putteth an end to darkness;" or, as we should render it, "pasheth to the extreme end (or extremity) of darkness."

Ver. 4. The flood breaketh out.—This is often literally the case, (see ver. 11.) but it seems not to be the import of this clause. Here are no "waters" in the text, and the word seems improperly supplied. Cocceius and Schulzers render it: "He breaketh up the valley near the bottom of the mountains;" that is, in order to penetrate the mine.—"They are forgotten of

A. M. 2884.

B. C. 1320.

o Ps. 53. 9.

p in fleeing

he would flee.

a or, mine.

b or, dust.

c or, gold

ore.

d c. 11. 6.

e or, fint.

f Hab. 3. 9.

g c. 26. 8.

h weeping.

i 1 Co. 4. 5.

j Ec. 7. 24.

k Pr. 3. 13.

l 15.

m fine shall not be given for it.

n Pr. 3. 11.

o or, vessels

p or, Ramoth.

p ver. 12.

Ja. 1. 5. 17.

9 He putteth forth his hand upon the rock: he overturneth the mountains by the roots.

10 He cutteth out rivers among the rocks and his eye seeth every precious thing.

11 He bindeth the floods from overflowing; and the thing that is hid bringeth he forth to light.

12 But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?

13 Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living.

14 The depth saith, It is not in me: and the sea saith, It is not with me.

15 It cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.

16 It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx, or the sapphire.

17 The gold and the crystal cannot equal it: and the exchange of it shall not be for jewels of fine gold.

18 No mention shall be made of coral, or of pearls: for the price of wisdom is above rubies.

19 The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it, neither shall it be valued with pure gold.

20 Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding?

taketh away his soul?" Now this evidently implies, that when God taketh away the soul of a just or good man, that "there is hope in his death." That death, also, does not end the existence of a bad man, is equally clear from the verse following: "Will God hear his cry?" that is, after he hath taken away his soul. (See Prov. i. 24–31.)—It is added, "Will (or can) he delight himself in the Almighty? Will he always call upon God?" That is, as we understand the expression, Will his religion follow him into another world? Or will he there attempt to play the hypocrite? Alas! that religion is of little worth, that will not follow us beyond the grave. (See Rev. xiv. 13.)

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1–28. Man is diligent in seeking wisdom, but it is God's prerogative to bestow it.—The great inquiry of this chapter is, "Whence cometh wisdom and knowledge?" Man digs deep into the bowels of the earth, and draws thence the most precious metals and costly jewels; but these are not wisdom, nor will they purchase it. In the pursuit of them, however, men discover extraordinary skill, intrepidity, and perseverance. They invade the dominions of darkness, and of the shadow of death. They penetrate where the vulture's eye cannot see, and where the fierce lion dare not enter. They penetrate even to the land of darkness, and the shadow of death. They inquire of "the great teacher, Death" and seek instruction from the grave:

"Death and Destruction call—Learn somewhat here;

The voice of wisdom vibrates in our ear:

Herself accessible to God alone,

To him her birth-place and her ways are known."—Scott.

To God himself, and to him alone, who is the source of all true wisdom, are all its secret paths known. He who weigheth the winds and measureth the waters—He who prepareth the rain, and directeth the lightning—He alone is able, and hath pointed out true wisdom: "To man he saith, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." From this we may derive these important maxims: 1. That the true use of wisdom lies in its practical application. Gold and jewels are only valuable as by means of bartering they may procure for us the necessities and comforts of human life, and the means of doing good. 2. That, as St. James says, "If any man lack wisdom," either temporal, for his guidance the foot,"—i. e. they descend not by their feet, but in baskets.—They are dried up.—Rather, "They sink down; they wander far from men," i. e. from human society.

Ver. 5. The earth, &c.—That is, the surface of it, "produced bread;"—But under it is turned up as it were fire.—That is, deep below this surface are found subterraneous fires.

Ver. 7. Vulture's eye.—Ayah, rendered the kite in Le. xi. 24. and vulture in Deut. xiv. 13. is supposed by Bochart to be the bird called by the Arabians juju, from its note; and which the ancients named ascalon, i. e. the merin—a bird celebrated for its sharp-sightedness.—Bagster.

Ver. 9. He putteth forth (or "thrusteth") his hand upon (or "into") the flinty rock. He overturneth (or "upturneth") the mountains.—(So Good.) This relates to the work of mining, as doth also the following.

Ver. 10. He cutteth out rivers.—(Or "channels.")—Dr. Good.

Ver. 11. He bindeth the floods from overflowing—i. e. restrains the water from "oozing" through the rocks. But, sometimes, instead of excluding they direct powerful streams through a mine, to clear away the rubbish.—Scott.

Ver. 16. It cannot be valued.—The original word strictly signifies, to be stored on the ground, as the ancient merchants laid their commodities to be bartered for.—See ch. x. 18. xxii. 24.

Ver. 17. Crystal.—(Hebrew zechoochith, in Syriac zagooseetho, and in Arabic zagas, from zaoach, (Heb.) to be pure, transparent, probably denotes glass; so the LXX. and Vulgate.)—Bagster.

Ver. 18. Coral.—[Probably so called from raam, to be elevated, from its cora ways growing from the tops of rocky caverns, with its head downmost. Cor is a hard, cretaceous, marine production, resembling in figure the stem of a 21 Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living, and kept close from the fowls of the air.

22 Destruction and death say, We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.
23 God understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof.
24 For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven;
25 To make the weight for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure.
26 When he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder:
27 Then did he see it, and declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out.
28 And unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Job bemoaneth himself of his former prosperity and honour.

MOREOVER Job continued his parable, and said,
2 Oh that I were as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me;
3 When his candle shined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkness;
4 As I was in the days of my youth, when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle;
5 When the Almighty was yet with me, when my children were about me;
6 When I washed my steps with butter, and the rock poured me out rivers of oil;
7 When I went out to the gate through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street!
8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves: and the aged arose, and stood up.
9 The princes refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth.
10 The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.
11 When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me:

A. M. 2454.
B. C. 1550.
q or, hence.
r Pr. 2.6.
s Pr. 15.3.
t Ps. 135.7.
u or, number.
v De. 4.6.
Ps. 111.10.
Pr. 1.7.
9.10.
Ec. 12.13.
w Ja. 3.17.
a added to take up.
b or, lamp.
c Ps. 23.4.
d Ps. 25.14.
e De. 32.24.
f with me.
g The voice of the nobles was hid.
h Lu. 4.22.
11.37.
i Ps. 72.12.
Pr. 21.13.
24.11,12.
j Is. 61.10.
Ep. 6.14.
k Nu. 10.31.
l Pr. 29.7.
m jaw teeth or, grinders.
n cast.
o Ps. 30.6.
p opened.
q new.
r Ge. 49.24.
s changed.
a of fewer days.

12 Because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.
13 The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me: and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.
14 I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and a diadem.
15 I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame.
16 I was a father to the poor: and the cause which I knew not I searched out.
17 And I brake the jaws of the wicked, and plucked the spoil out of his teeth.
18 Then I said, I shall die in my nest, and I shall multiply my days as the sand.
19 My root was spread out by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch.
20 My glory was fresh in me, and my bow was renewed in my hand.
21 Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel.
22 After my words they spake not again; and my speech dropped upon them.
23 And they waited for me as for the rain; and they opened their mouth wide as for the latter rain.
24 If I laughed on them they believed it not; and the light of my countenance they cast not down.
25 I chose out their way, and sat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army, as one that comforteth the mourners.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Job's honour is turned into extreme contempt. 15 His prosperity into calamity.

BUT now they that are younger than I have me in derision, whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock.
2 Yea, whereto might the strength of thy hands profit me, in whom old age was perished?

through the present life, or spiritual, for his direction to another, "let him ask (it) of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." (James i. v.)

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1—25. Job bemoaneth himself in the recollection of his former prosperity.—Job looks back on the days of his prosperity, when the secret counsel of God, or the divine influences of his Holy Spirit, were as the suspended lamp which illumined his tent, or his house; and as the portable elevated fires which by night guided him in his journeyings. Thus, at home or abroad, by night or by day, he was under the divine direction, and the smiles of providence. At home, he was surrounded with his children and domestics; and when he passed through the city to the gate, where he was in the habit of administering justice; when he prepared his seat in the street, or open air, as was probably the custom, as an indication that he was about to administer justice, the young men hid themselves, abashed at his presence, or perhaps trembling at his expected reproofs. The aged rose and stood before him, and princes and nobles waited silently his decree.

plant divided into branches. It is of different colours, black, white, and red; though the latter is emphatically so called, as being most valuable, and usually made into ornaments. —Bargster.

Ver. 22. Destruction and death say.—That is, death and a future state will teach us much, but God only is omniscient, as in the next verse.
Ver. 25. Weight for weight.—(God has given an atmosphere to the earth, which, possessing a certain degree of gravity perfectly suited to the necessities of all animals, vegetables, and fluids, should be the cause in his hands of preserving animal and vegetable life; for by it the blood circulates in the veins of animals, and the juices in the tubes of vegetables. Without this atmospheric pressure there could be no respiration; and the elasticity of the particles of air in animal and vegetable bodies, would rupture the vessels in which they are contained, and destroy both kinds of life.) —Bargster.
CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1—31. Job continued his parable.—This word masnah, (i. e. parable,) says Bishop Lath, "I take to be the word properly expressive of the poetic style."

Ver. 3. When his candle.—An allusion, (says Scott, the poet,) to the lamps which hung from the ceiling of the banqueting rooms of the wealthy Arabs. —When by his light I walked through darkness.—This, the same writer takes to be an allusion to lights (or fires) carried on poles before the caravans, in their night travels through the deserts.
Ver. 4. In the days of my youth.—Hebrew, "Of my autumn." The original (Horpi) is literally "the stripping season," the fall of the leaf, which applies properly to his early life, because originally the year began about the time of vintage, the great time of festivity and rejoicing. —When the secret of God was upon my tabernacle, (or tent.)—This seems an allusion to the lamp in the preceding verse. Is it not most probable that, if Job had lived subsequent to the passage through the wilderness, the allusion would have been to the pillar of cloud and fire which guided them?

Ver. 8. I washed my steps with butter.—That is, with "butter-milk," intimating a great number of kine, (he had five hundred yoke of cattle, ch. i. 3.) and great plenty of milk. —The rock poured me out rivers of oil.—The best olives grow upon the rocky mountains," says Scott, (the poet.)
Ver. 16. The cause which I knew not.—It might with equal critical exactness be rendered: "The cause of him whom I knew not;" thus declaring the patriarch's impartiality and activity in the administration of justice.
Ver. 17. I brake the jaws.—The oppressor is here compared to a voracious savage beast.
Ver. 18. I shall die in my nest.—Comparing himself to the eagle, the king of birds.

"Their guide in council, and in war their chief;
In want their father, and their hope in grief."

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1—31. Job complains of his melancholy reverse of circumstances. This chapter affords a striking contrast to the preceding. It is an affecting picture of his present situation, as full of contempt and misery, which he now endured, and which is set in opposition to his former happiness and honour. It begins, according to Scott, (the poet,) with "a strong and spirited description of those villanous Arabs who,

to the passage through the wilderness, the allusion would have been to the pillar of cloud and fire which guided them?

Ver. 8. I washed my steps with butter.—That is, with "butter-milk," intimating a great number of kine, (he had five hundred yoke of cattle, ch. i. 3.) and great plenty of milk. —The rock poured me out rivers of oil.—The best olives grow upon the rocky mountains," says Scott, (the poet.)

Ver. 16. The cause which I knew not.—It might with equal critical exactness be rendered: "The cause of him whom I knew not;" thus declaring the patriarch's impartiality and activity in the administration of justice.

Ver. 17. I brake the jaws.—The oppressor is here compared to a voracious savage beast.

Ver. 18. I shall die in my nest.—Comparing himself to the eagle, the king of birds.

Ver. 19, 20. My root was spread.—Schultens and Scott continue this still in the future, as the Hebrew equally admits. —I shall spread; my glory shall be fresh, (or new,) &c. So also Dr. Good.

Ver. 20. My bow was renewed.—Or, "continued fresh." The ancient Arabs used to travel with their bow and quiver.—Good.

Ver. 24. If I laughed on them, they believed it not.—That is, they had no suspicion that I intended ridicule or scorn.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 2. Yea, whereto, &c.—This verse is very perplexing; we propose the following version:

"Moreover, of what (use) was the strength of their hands to me, whose mature age failed."

The word (calach) is in chap. v. 26. rendered "full age!"—and the verb (abad) commonly means "failed" or "corrupted;" the sense appears to be, that their strength failed prematurely through corruption of manners—through early vice

3 For want and famine they were <sup>b</sup>solitary; fleeing into the wilderness <sup>c</sup>in former time desolate and waste.

4 Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper roots for their meat.

5 They were driven forth from among men, (they cried after them as after a thief);

6 To dwell in the clefts of the valleys, in <sup>d</sup>caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were children of fools, yea, children <sup>e</sup>of <sup>f</sup>base men: they were viler than the earth.

9 And now <sup>g</sup>am I their song, yea, I am their <sup>h</sup>byword.

10 They abhor me, they flee far from me, and <sup>i</sup>spare not to spit <sup>j</sup>in my face.

11 Because he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also let loose the bridle before me.

12 Upon my right hand rise the youth; they push away my feet, and they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path, they set forward my calamity, they have no helper.

14 They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue <sup>k</sup>my soul as the wind: and my welfare passeth away as a cloud.

16 And now my soul is poured out upon <sup>l</sup>me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

17 My bones are pierced in me in the night season: and my sinews take no rest.

18 By the great force of my disease is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.

A. M. 2434.
B. C. 1520.

b or, dark
as the night.

c yesterday.

d holes.

e Ps. 49.10.
13.

f men of no name.

g Ps. 69.12.
La. 3.14,
63.

h c. 17.6.

i withhold not spittle
from.

j Is. 59.6.
Mat. 26.67
27.30.

k principal
one.

l Ps. 42.4.

m c. 9.31.

n turned to
be.

o the strength of thy hand.

p or, wisdom.

q Ge. 3.19.

r heap.

s hard of
day.

t Je. 8.15.

u or, ostriches.

v La. 4.8.
5.10.

a Mat. 5.28.

b Pr. 6.25.

19 He hath cast <sup>m</sup>me into the mire, and I am <sup>n</sup>become like dust and ashes.

20 I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me: I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

21 Thou art <sup>a</sup>become cruel to me: with <sup>b</sup>thy strong hand thou opposeth thyself against me.

22 Thou liftest me up to the wind; thou causest me to ride upon it, and dissolvest my <sup>c</sup>substance.

23 For I know that thou wilt bring me to death, and to the house <sup>d</sup>appointed for all living.

24 Howbeit he will not stretch out his hand to the <sup>e</sup>grave, though they cry in his destruction.

25 Did not I weep for him that was <sup>f</sup>in trouble? was not my soul grieved for the poor?

26 When <sup>g</sup>I looked for good, then evil came unto me: and when I waited for light, there came darkness.

27 My bowels boiled, and rested not: the days of affliction prevented me.

28 I went mourning without the sun: I stood up, and I cried in the congregation.

29 I am a brother to dragons, and a companion to <sup>h</sup>owls.

30 My skin <sup>i</sup>is black upon me, and my bones are burned with heat.

31 My harp also is <sup>j</sup>turned to mourning, and my organ into the voice of them that weep.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Job maketh a solemn protestation of his integrity in several duties.

I MADE a covenant with mine <sup>a</sup>eyes; why then should I think <sup>b</sup>upon a maid?

2 For what portion of God is there from above? and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high?

3 Is not destruction to the wicked? and a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?

when Job was in his prosperity, had felt the severity of his justice; and fled into the lurking-places of the desert. Upon the loss of his authority, these miscreants came out of their dens to revenge themselves by the most scurrilous abuse." The latter assertion is a mere assumption; but the patriarch's language warrants us to believe, that he had received from them some marks of contempt and ridicule, in his present situation very aggravating.

It should seem, however, that Job's heart was not free from pride, and that his sufferings were much increased, from the want of that humility and meekness that actuated another illustrious sufferer, in himself far more elevated, far more grievously insulted—but who, "when he was reviled, reviled not again, and when he suffered, threatened not." (1 Pet. ii. 2, 3.) Ah! if he had thus enumerated his sorrows—if he had amplified and profligacy. See Scott, who renders the second line, "In whom old age is profligate."

Ver. 3. Solitary.—See Margin. We prefer the text.—In former time.—In the English idiom, "the other day."

Ver. 4. Who cut up mallows by (or among) the bushes.—The particular species of herbage here mentioned is doubtful; but Harmer quotes authority to show that the very poor in the East boil mallow leaves for food.—Juniper.—Hebrew rothen, in Arabic ratim, and in Spanish retama, most probably signifies the genista or broom, which is very abundant in the deserts of Arabia.—Bagster.

Ver. 7. They brayed.—This compares them to the wild asses braying for hunger. See chap. vi. 5. (Hebrew, charul, probably denotes some kind of bray or bramble; so the Vulgate renders it by spina or sentis. Celsinus and Scheuchzer are inclined to think it the palustris, a shrub, growing sometimes to a considerable height in desert places. "One of the inconveniences of the vegetable thickets of Egypt is," says Denon, "that it is difficult to remain in them, as nine tenths of the trees and plants are armed with inexorable thorns, which suffer only an unequal enjoyment of the shadow which is so constantly desirable.")—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Children of fools.—Not idiots, but men of impious and abandoned characters. See Psalm xiv. i. xix. 10, &c.

Ver. 9. I their song.—The most ancient method of libelling seems to have been in songs and proverbs. See chap. xvii. 6. Psal. lxxix. 12. But the original word here used means strictly a stringed instrument, or a psalm sung to one. See titles to psal. iv. and vi.; also Lam. iii. 14, 63. The LXX. here render it "their harp." Compare ch. xvii. 6.

Ver. 10. And spare not to spit in my face.—"Withhold not spittle from my face" or "in my presence." See note on Num. xii. 14.

Ver. 11. He hath loosed my cord.—Either this refers to the girdle, and then means strength and authority, as in chap. xii. 18. Or to his bow-string, and then means he has disarmed me.—They have let loose the bridle before me.—That is, they have thrown off all restraint; they are not curbed by my presence.

Ver. 12. Upon my right hand rise the youth.—Good, "the younglings," but Schultens says, that the word in Arabic signifies "a bastard." Upon my right hand may mean to slander or accuse. Compare Ps. cix. 6.—The ways of their destruction.—Or, "destructive ways."

Ver. 13. They mar my path.—This sentence, taken in connexion with the preceding, means, "They impede my way, and raise up impediments to my progress.—They forward.—Rather, "They rejoice," or triumph, &c. So fied his griefs as Job did.—But he had not "an evil heart of unbelief;" Satan came to tempt, but found "nothing in him," on which he could fasten his temptations. (See John xiv. 30.)

Job, among his other troubles, was deprived, as we may say, of house and home; he looked, therefore, with the more composure to the tomb, which he justly describes as the general home of man, "the house appointed for all living." The heathen used to regard it as their "eternal home;" but not so Job; he considered it as a resting-place, where he should have to wait, but not for ever: "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; for thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine own hands." (Chap. xiv. 15.) "I know that my Redeemer liveth; . . . and in my flesh shall I see God." (Chap. xix. 25, 26.)

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1—40. Job makes a solemn protestation

Heath, Scott, Good, &c.—They have no helper.—Rather, "There is no helper against them." Scott and Boothroyd.

Ver. 14. They came upon me.—As an inundation. See 2 Sam. v. 20.

Ver. 15. They pursue my soul.—My lordship, my dignity. See ch. xx. xxiv. 18. Their object was to degrade as well as distress him.

Ver. 16. Upon me.—Rather "in me," as in Ps. xlii. 4. In the English idiom we should say, "My soul is dissolved in me."

Ver. 17. Pierced.—That is, pained as if by piercing.

Ver. 18. My garment changed.—That is, in appearance, it became loathsome and adhered to his skin like the collar of his tunic.

Ver. 19. Cast me into the mire.—Made me filthy with disease, or with conscious guilt. See ch. ix. 31.

Ver. 20. I stand up.—As if to show the misery of his situation.

Ver. 21. Thou art become cruel.—Heb. "Turned to be cruel." In this he charged God foolishly.

Ver. 22. Thou liftest me.—The allusion is here to a whirlwind which will raise a person or an animal into the air, and then casting him down, perhaps dash him to pieces. See note on ch. i. 19.

Ver. 24. His hand to the grave.—"Heap;" i. e. of stones, which often marked a grave. 2 Sam. xviii. 17.—Though they cry.—This line is very difficult. Dr. Good seems to give the best sense, "Sately, in its ruins there is freedom."

Ver. 25. Him that was in trouble.—Hebrew, "That was hard of day;" or "whose day (whose lot) was hard."

Ver. 27. My bowels boiled.—That is, were agitated and inflamed.

Ver. 29. To dragons.—He was brother to these, because he mourned and wailed. See Micah i. 8.—Owls.—(Or, ostriches. Hebrew, benoth yomnah, in Arabic bintu naumatin, not owls, but ostriches, so called from their doleful and hideous noises. "I have often," says Dr. Shute, "heard them groan as if they were in the greatest agonies.")—Bagster.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 1. A covenant with mine eyes—Why then, &c.—The latter clause is rendered by many, both ancient and modern commentators, in the indicative, "That I will not gaze upon," &c. See Matt. v. 28.

Ver. 2, 3. For what portion, &c.—The supplementary words in italic are wrong placed. Dr. Boothroyd places them thus:

"For what (is) the portion of God from above?

Or the inheritance of the Almighty from on high?

(Is it) not destruction to the wicked?

And utter ruin to the workers." &c.

4 Doth <sup>e</sup> not he see my ways, and count all my steps?

5 If <sup>d</sup> I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hastened to deceit;

6 Let <sup>e</sup> me be weighed in an even balance, that God may know mine integrity.

7 If my step hath turned out of the way, and my heart <sup>f</sup> walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath cleaved to my hands;

8 Then let me sow, and let another eat; yea, let my offspring be rooted out.

9 If my heart have been deceived by a woman, or if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door;

10 Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her.

11 For this is a heinous crime; yea, it is <sup>g</sup> an iniquity to be punished by the judges.

12 For it is a fire that consumeth to <sup>h</sup> destruction, and would root out all mine increase.

13 If I did despise the cause of my man-servant or of my maid-servant, when they contended with me;

14 What then shall I do when God riseth up? and when he visiteth, what shall I answer him?

15 Did <sup>i</sup> not he that made me in the womb make him? and did not one fashion us in the womb?

16 If I have withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused the eyes of the widow to fail;

17 Or have eaten my morsel myself alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof;

18 (For from my youth he was brought up with me, as with a father, and I have guided <sup>j</sup> her from my mother's womb;)

19 If I have seen any perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering;

20 If <sup>k</sup> his loins have not blessed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep;

of his innocence.—Nothing, certainly, but the cruel accusation of his friends can justify Job in the strain of self-justification which he here adopts, as one "righteous in his own eyes." Though we can have no doubt of his integrity, yet, remembering that he was a sinner, as himself confesses, (chap. vii. 20.) we cannot read with entire satisfaction the history from his own lips, much less the imprecations with which he accompanied his narrative.

The first verse, though uttered with much seriousness, has been often quoted in ridicule by the profane. "I made a covenant with mine eyes," which, indeed, every good man will do, who considers to how many temptations these eyes of ours are inlets. In the latter clause of the verse, however, the word for look is very emphatic, and signifies (see note) to contemplate, gaze, &c. in a manner with us considered indecent and improper, but much more so in Job's age and country.

The allusions to Sabaism, or the worship of the heavenly bodies, in the latter part of the chapter, (ver. 26, &c.) is both curious and instructive. This, we have no doubt, was the most ancient species of idolatry, and kissing the hand that pointed to the heavenly bodies, one of the most ancient forms of wor-

Ver. 8. Let my offspring.—Supposing his own children all slain, this will equally apply to his grandchildren, or other branches of his family.

Ver. 9. If my heart was deceived (rather "allured," Schultens) by a woman.—That is, another man's wife. Scot, (the poet.)—Woman, the same word as the preceding; let her grind unto (for) another; i. e. become the slave;—And let others bow down upon her;—i. e. oppress her, &c.

Ver. 11. For this (viz. adultery) is a heinous crime, &c.

Ver. 13. Despise the cause, &c.—[In ancient times slaves had no action at law against their owners; but Job admitted them to all civil rights, and permitted them to complain even against himself.]—Baxter.

Ver. 18. I have guided her.—The margin explains this of "the widow;" but we should explain this verse of the male and female orphans.

Ver. 21. If I saw my help in the gate.—That is, when he considered the power and influence which he had in the court of judicature.

Ver. 22. From the bone.—LXX. from the elbow.

Ver. 23. Could not endure.—That is, to do injustice.

Ver. 27. (If) my mouth hath kissed my hand.—Lucian says, that the Greeks, even in his time, worshipped the sun by kissing their hand." The Romans, also, as Dr. Good remarks, expressed their idolatry in the like manner. So when Cæcilius observed the statue of Serapis, "according to the custom of the superstitious vulgar, he moved his hand to his mouth, and kissed it with his lips."

Ver. 28. An iniquity to be punished by the judge.—More correctly, "by my judge."—Peters, Scott, Boothroyd, &c.

Ver. 31. If the men of my tabernacle (or tent) said not, Oh that we had of

A. M. 2994.
B. C. 1520.

c Jn. 1. 45.
Je. 32. 19.

d Ps. 44. 20.
21.

e him weigh me in balances of justice.

f Eze. 14. 3.
7.

g Le. 20. 10.

h Mal. 3. 5.
He. 13. 4.

i Pr. 22. 2.

j or, did he not fashion us in one womb.

k i. e. the widow.

l De. 24. 13.

m or, the charnel bone.

n Ps. 119. 120.

o Ps. 76. 7.

p 1 Th. 6. 17.

q found.

r light.

s bright.

t my hand kissed my mouth.

u De. 17. 2. 7.

v palate.

w Ec. 5. 6.

x Is. 53. 7.
He. 13. 2.

y or, woe.

z or, after the manner of men.

a Ge. 3. 12.

b Ex. 33. 2.

c or, my sign is that the Almighty will answer me.

21 If I have lifted up my hand against the fatherless, when I saw my help in the gate:

22 Then let mine arm fall from my shoulder-blade, and mine arm be broken from <sup>m</sup> the bone.

23 For <sup>a</sup> destruction from God was a terror to me, and by reason of his highness <sup>b</sup> I could not endure.

24 If <sup>p</sup> I have made gold my hope, or have said to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence;

25 If I rejoiced because my wealth was great, and because my hand had <sup>q</sup> gotten much;

26 If I beheld the <sup>r</sup> sun when it shined, or the moon walking <sup>s</sup> in brightness;

27 And my heart hath been secretly enticed, or <sup>t</sup> my mouth hath kissed my hand:

28 This also <sup>u</sup> were an iniquity to be punished by the judge: for I should have denied the God that is above.

29 If I rejoiced at the destruction of him that hated me, or lifted up myself when evil found him:

30 Neither have I suffered my <sup>v</sup> mouth to <sup>w</sup> sin by wishing a curse to his soul.

31 If the men of my tabernacle said not, Oh that we had of his flesh! we cannot be satisfied.

32 The stranger <sup>x</sup> did not lodge in the street: but I opened my doors to the <sup>y</sup> traveller.

33 If I covered my transgressions <sup>z</sup> as <sup>a</sup> a Adam, by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom:

34 Did I fear <sup>b</sup> a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrify me, that I kept silence, and went not out of the door?

35 Oh that one would hear me! behold, <sup>c</sup> my desire is, that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine adversary had written a book.

36 Surely I would take it upon my shoulder, and bind it as a crown to me.

37 I would declare unto him the number of my steps; as a prince would I go near unto him.

shipping them. Afterwards, when image worship was introduced, they "kissed the calves," &c. (Hosea xiii. 2.) This worship, however, though apparently slight, and such as no mortal eye, perhaps, might witness, still, had he been guilty of it, would have been a denial of the true God, and an iniquity to be punished by the great Judge of all, who searches hearts. He then speaks of his charity to the poor, and hospitality to strangers; a virtue of the first rank among the Arabs, and on which he seems greatly to have prided himself. Job was not only willing to entertain strangers, but anxious so to do: he not only opened his doors to receive all who came, however numerous, but he went out of doors, to seek and invite them in, regardless of the reproach of his neighbours on that account.

What is said about the sin of Adam, is not so clear. "But what did Adam? He concealed his sin, or rather attempted to conceal it, by hiding himself: then he threw the fault upon his wife, and blamed his Maker for giving him such a partner: "The woman that thou gavest me," &c. (Gen. iii. 12.) Such, indeed, is the manner of men in general. But what connexion has this subject with hospitality? We have heard of treachery under the form of hospitality; but Job protests his innocence his flesh! &c.—This is very obscure and incorrect. Dr. Boothroyd, following the authority of Schultens, Scott, Good, &c. renders it, more faithfully to the sense than words,

"Do to the men of my tabernacle say—Who longed for his flesh, (i. e. meat,) and was not satisfied?" See 1 Sam. ii. 13—15.

This and the following verse refer to Job's hospitality, in receiving and entertaining strangers.

Ver. 33. If I covered my sin as Adam.—So Peters, Scott, Good, &c. But the margin reads, "after the manner of men;" and so many of the commentators.

Ver. 34. Did I fear a great multitude, (i. e. o' visitors,) or did the contempt (rather reproach) of families terrify me? &c.—We conceive the whole of this refers to his hospitality; and that it is all explained by the following passage, quoted by Schultens from the "Arabian Anthology." "How often, when echo gave me notice of a stranger's approach, have I stirred my fire, that it might give a clear blaze. I flew to him as to a prey, through fear that my neighbour should get possession of him before me."

Ver. 35. Oh that one would hear me!—Or, "grant me a hearing;" namely, God himself.—Behold, my desire.—Margin, "sign," but rather, "signature;" namely, as a pledge of his readiness to stand the trial.—(O that) the Almighty would answer me!—But may not the word mean to examine, by way of interrogation? or perhaps to pronounce sentence? See Ge. xli. 16.—And (O that) mine adversary (i. e. the man, my accuser;) so the Hebrew had written a book—a libel, which in the civil law means a declaration, or accusation against the defendant.

38 If my land cry against me, or that the furrows likewise thereof <sup>d</sup> complain;

39 If I have eaten the <sup>e</sup> fruits thereof without money, or have <sup>f</sup> caused the owners thereof to lose their <sup>g</sup> life:

40 Let thistles grow instead of wheat, and <sup>h</sup> cockle instead of barley. The words of Job are ended.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Elihu is angry with Job and his three friends. 6 Because wisdom cometh not from age, he excuseth the boldness of his youth. 11 He reproveth them for not satisfying of Job. 16 His zeal to speak.

SO these three men ceased <sup>a</sup> to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.

2 Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified <sup>b</sup> himself rather than God.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

4 Now Elihu had <sup>c</sup> waited till Job had spoken, because they were <sup>d</sup> elder than he.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, I am <sup>e</sup> young, and ye are very <sup>f</sup> old; wherefore I was afraid, and <sup>g</sup> durst not show you mine opinion.

7 I said, Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

8 But there is a spirit <sup>h</sup> in man: and the inspiration <sup>i</sup> of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

9 Great <sup>j</sup> men are not always wise: neither do the aged understand judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Hearken to me; I also will show mine opinion.

11 Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your <sup>k</sup> reasons, whilst ye searched out what to say.

12 Yea, I attended unto you, and, behold, in this respect; he never wronged the stranger, nor betrayed the traveller that came beneath his roof.

With these protests, Job's defence closes. What follows (ver. 35—37) is the peroration, or conclusion; in which he again passionately wishes that he might be brought to trial; and that the Almighty would hear his cause; that the man his adversary, (so the original,) had written out his accusation in a book (or libel) and so confident is he of an honourable acquittal, that he would exhibit it on his shoulder, as a trophy, or bind it on his head, as a diadem; and instead of shrinking from the contest, come forward to meet it with the courage of a prince.

"As Job was about to conclude," says Scott, (the commentator,) "another particular seems to have occurred to him. He had never seized upon lands (or their fruits) by putting the owner to death as a criminal, and confiscating his estate," &c.; a thing by no means uncommon in arbitrary countries. See 1 Kings xxi.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 1—22. Elihu takes up the controversy, and reproveth Job's friends.—This chapter begins the fifth part of this sacred poem, in which a new character appears of peculiar interest; and brings before us a fact of which we were hardly before apprized; namely, that beside the preceding disputants, there were also hearers, of whom one now comes forward to take up the debate, though, as he confesses, considerably younger than either of the disputants. After an

Ver. 40. Cockle.—Margin, "Noisome weeds." (Hebrew, bashah, from batash to stink, rendered rotid grapes in Isa. v. 2, 4, is supposed by Hasselquist to be the solanum incanum, or hoary nightshade, which is common in Egypt, Palestine, and the East; but Celastrus and Michaëlis contend, that it denotes a poisonous plant growing spontaneously and luxuriantly on sunny hills among vineyards.)—Bagster, N. B. Some think these last verses have been accidentally misplaced, and should follow ver. 25.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 1. Because he was righteous in his own eyes.—This is well explained in the verse following, "Because he justified himself rather than God."

Ver. 2. Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu.—That is, his anger was excited, but not intemperately.—Elihu the son of Barachel, &c.—Buz was the second son of Nahor, the brother of Abraham, and a city of this name, probably derived from the same family, is mentioned Jer. xxv. 23, in conjunction with Dedan, which we know to have been in Idumea.—Dr. Good.

Ver. 8. The inspiration of the Almighty.—To the wisdom derived from age and experience, Elihu opposes a superior wisdom, derived from divine assistance.

Ver. 9. Neither do the aged.—The word "always," should be supplied here, from the former member of the verse.

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1520.

d weep.

e strength.

f or, the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or,

breathe

out.

g 1Ki.21.13.

h or,

noisome

weeds.

a from answering.

b his soul.

c expected

Job in words.

d elder for days.

e few of days.

f c.15.10.

g feared.

h Pr.30.37.

i Pr.2.6.

Da.2.21.

j Mat.11.25.

l Co.1.27.

k understandings

l words.

m Je.9.23.

n or, ordered.

o removed speeches

from themselves.

p words.

q of my belly.

r is not opened.

s breathe.

t Ga.1.10.

u Pa.12.2,3.

a palate.

b Pr.8.6,9.

c Ti.2.7,8.

d mouth.

e c.9.32,33.

f cut.

there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words:

13 Lest ye should say, We <sup>m</sup> have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man.

14 Now he hath not <sup>n</sup> directed his words against me: neither will I answer him with your speeches.

15 They were amazed, they answered no more: they <sup>o</sup> left off speaking.

16 When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still, and answered no more;)

17 I said, I will answer also my part, I also will show mine opinion.

18 For I am full of <sup>p</sup> matter, the spirit <sup>q</sup> within me constraineth me.

19 Behold, my belly is as wine which <sup>r</sup> hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles.

20 I will speak, that I may <sup>s</sup> be refreshed: I will open my lips and answer.

21 Let me not, I pray you, accept any man's person, neither let me give flattering titles unto man.

22 For <sup>t</sup> I know not to give flattering titles; in so doing my Maker <sup>u</sup> would soon take me away.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Elihu offereth himself instead of God, with sincerity and meekness, to reason with Job. 8 He excuseth God from giving man an account of his ways, by his greatness. 14 God calleth man to repentance by visions, 19 by afflictions, 23 and by his ministry. 31 He inciteth Job to attention.

WHEREFORE, Job, I pray thee, hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my <sup>v</sup> mouth.

3 My words <sup>w</sup> shall be of the uprightness of my heart: and my lips shall utter knowledge <sup>x</sup> clearly.

4 The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, set thy words in order before me, stand up.

6 Behold, I am according to thy <sup>y</sup> wish in <sup>z</sup> God's stead: I also am <sup>a</sup> formed out of the clay.

apology for this circumstance, he censures both parties: Job, because he justified himself before God; and his pretended friends, because though they could not answer Job, nor prove him guilty of any of the crimes they had insinuated against him, they still considered him as guilty without offering any proof.

Elihu had evidently listened to the whole of the debate; but his comparative youth, as we have just remarked, prevented his interference, till he could in fact refrain no longer, and then, as he expresses it in the true eastern style, he was as a skin bottle with new wine, ready to burst, and is obliged to speak that he may be relieved.

"The lenity and moderation of Elihu," as Bishop Lowth observes, "serves as a beautiful contrast to the intemperance and asperity of the other three. He is pious, mild, and equitable; equally free from adulation and severity; and endued with singular wisdom, which he attributes entirely to the inspiration of God: and his modesty, moderation, and wisdom, are the more entitled to commendation when we consider his unripe youth. As the characters of his detractors were in all respects calculated to inflame the mind of Job, that of his arbitrator is admirably adapted to sooth and compose it; to this point the whole drift of the argument tends, and on this the very purport of it seems to depend."

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 1—33. Elihu reasons with Job himself on his presumption in finding fault with God.—Job had repeatedly wished for some one to be his advocate and me-

Ver. 11. Your reasons.—Instead of tesmochotheychem, nine MSS. read, teschonotheychem, "your arguments;" but the sense is nearly the same.—Whilst ye searched.—"Whilst ye were searching for words;" a fine irony which they must have felt.—Bagster.

Ver. 12. I attended unto you.—Weadeychem, is rendered "and your testimonies" by the Syriac, Arabic, and LXX, and one of De Rossi's MSS. is so pointed as to require this reading.—Bagster.

Ver. 13. God thrusteth.—"God must bring him down."—Boothroyd.

Ver. 14. With your speeches.—That is, "with speeches such as yours."

Ver. 16. When I had waited.—Scott (the poet) reads both this verse and the preceding in the present tense, as addressed to the auditory; "I wait, and they speak not." "They are at a stand: they answer no more."

Ver. 17. "I said."—These words are improperly supplied.

Ver. 19. My belly.—Or, "inner part;" translated "within me" in the preceding verse. The Arabians use this word (beten) for the mind, as we do the breast. So Solomon, Prov. xxii. 18.—Like new bottles.—"As skin bottles of new wine;" the last word being properly supplied from the preceding sentence.

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 4. The Spirit of God.—This seems to have an evident reference to the creation of Adam. See Gen. ii. 7.

7 Behold, my <sup>a</sup> terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee.

8 Surely thou hast spoken in my <sup>b</sup> hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy <sup>c</sup> words, saying,

9 I am clean without transgression, I am innocent; neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold, he findeth occasions against me, he <sup>d</sup> counteth me for his enemy, 11 He <sup>e</sup> putteth my feet in the stocks, he marketh <sup>f</sup> all my paths.

12 Behold, in this thou art not just: I will answer thee, that God is greater than man.

13 Why dost thou strive <sup>g</sup> against him? for he <sup>h</sup> giveth not account <sup>i</sup> of any of his matters.

14 For God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not.

15 In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;

16 Then he <sup>j</sup> openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction, 17 That he may withdraw <sup>k</sup> a man from his <sup>l</sup> purpose, and hide pride <sup>m</sup> from man.

18 He keepeth back his soul from the pit, and his life from <sup>n</sup> perishing by the sword.

19 He <sup>o</sup> is chastened also with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:

20 So that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul <sup>p</sup> dainty meat.

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1520.
g c.9.34.
h ears.
i c.10.7.
16.17.
23.11.12.
27.5.6.
29.14.
j c.19.11.
k c.13.27.
l Da.4.35.
m Is.45.9.
n answereth
not.
o Ps.62.11.
p revealeth,
or, uncovereth.
q c.17.11.
r work.
s Is.29.9.
t passing by
u Ps.107.17.
v meat of
desire.
w or, an
atonement.
x childhood.
y or, He shall look upon men
and say,
I have sinned.
z 1 Jn.1.9.
a or, He hath delivered
my soul,
&c. and
my life.
b twice and thrice.
c Ps.40.1,2.
Is.38.17.
d Ps.56.13.
Ez.26.13.

21 His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and his bones that were not seen stick out.

22 Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the destroyers.

23 If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one among a thousand, to show unto man his uprightness:

24 Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit: I have found <sup>w</sup> a ransom.

25 His flesh shall be fresher than <sup>x</sup> a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth:

26 He shall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him: and he shall see his face with joy: for he will render unto man his righteousness.

27 <sup>y</sup> He looketh upon men, and if any <sup>z</sup> say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not;

28 <sup>a</sup> He will deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall see the light.

29 Lo, all these things worketh God <sup>b</sup> oftentimes with man, 30 To bring back his soul from the <sup>c</sup> pit, to be enlightened with the light <sup>d</sup> of the living.

31 Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I will speak.

32 If thou hast any thing to say, answer me: speak, for I desire to justify thee.

33 If not, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I shall teach thee wisdom.

24. Then will God be gracious to him, and say, Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have provided an atonement.<sup>1</sup> diator, or days-man, to lay his hand on both parties, (chap. ix. 32, &c.; xvi. 3, &c.) and now, (says Elihu,) "Behold, I am according to thy wish in God's stead: I am also formed out of the clay." He then reminds him of the very improper language he had used, both in justifying himself and reflecting upon his Maker. In repeating these words in a poem, it is the sense, and not the exact words, that are expected to be quoted. We can hardly look for perfect consistency from a man in Job's situation; but, in justifying himself against the charges of his friends, he certainly goes very far toward denying that he was a sinner, and so his friends seem to have understood him as well as Elihu; yet from other passages it should seem that he meant only to deny his guilt in the crimes particularly alleged against him. (Comp. chap. vii. 20. with chap. ix. 30. x. 7, &c.)

Job, however, had said, "Behold, he findeth occasions against me: He counteth me for his enemy." (See chap. xiii. 24—27.) "Behold in this (saith Elihu) thou art not just: I will answer thee, that God is greater than man."—"This is one of those modes of speaking," says Scott, (the poet), "which imply much more than is expressed. As if he had said, 'you talk to God as if he were an equal: but methinks he is somewhat superior to us.'" Elihu adds, "Why dost thou strive against him?"—Why question the justice or propriety of his conduct? "He giveth not account of any of his matters:" he answereth not interrogatories. Yet God has secret ways of impressing the human mind. Sometimes in a vision of the night, he admonishes men of danger, and withdraws them from it; or instructs them in the most important truths, as had been stated by Eliphaz, nearly in the beginning of the debate. (Chap. iv. 12, &c.) At other times he visits men upon the bed of affliction; teaches them to pray to him and confess their sins, and then accepts an atonement—forgives their sins, and restores their health.

A passage here occurs of much interest, as it is (and we think justly) referred to the doctrine of atonement by sacrifice, with which it is evident Job was acquainted, from the burnt-offerings which he offered for his children. (Chap. i. 5.) We shall give a metrical translation of the two principal verses from Dr. Boothroyd, with a few remarks.

Ver. 23. "If there be sent to him a messenger,
An interpreter, one among a thousand,
To show to man what is his duty;

Ver. 17. Purpose.—Or doings; from trusting to his own good works.
Ver. 18. From perishing by the sword.—The participle is more literally rendered in the margin, "the passing by;" and the noun following, (shalach) according to Pococke, means any military weapon, and is by Dr. Good rendered arrow; so that we may read, "from the passing by of the arrow." See Ps. xci. 5.
Ver. 23. An interpreter.—The word (Melits) seems to mean, one that interposes to remove difficulties, and produce a good understanding: as, 1. An interpreter, Gen. xlii. 23. 2. An ambassador, 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. Both these senses will apply to a prophet, or minister of religion; (an orator, says the poet, "One among a thousand."—That is, an eminently qualified person. "One among the thousand," says Dr. Good, supposing the expression to denote an order of the celestial hierarchy; but we know of no such order.—His uprightness.—Bishop Patrick, Scott, the commentator, and the Assembly's Annotators, give both senses, as in the exposition; but Poole, Scott, the poet, and Dr. Boothroyd, prefer the latter.

The word rendered messenger (literally angel) is, under the Old Testament, applied to prophets, (Mal. i. 7; iii. 1.) and under the New, to ministers or pastors. (Rev. i. 20.) The sense therefore appears to be, that when persons are visited with sickness, or any deep personal affliction, and God in his providence sends a prophet, or any man divinely taught, as Elihu represents himself to be, (chap. xxxii. 8, &c.) to instruct him in the will of God, then it is the duty of such "to show unto man his uprightness." But this pronoun his, may, we conceive, be referred either to God or man: if the former, it means to justify the character of God, in visiting man with such afflictions, and so to "vindicate the ways of God to man;" or, if the pronoun be referred to man, then it means to point out his path of duty, to repent and humble himself before God. "Then he (God) is gracious," and issues his command, "Deliver him . . . I have found a ransom,"—or (as Dr. Boothroyd renders it,) "provided an atonement."

Recovery from sickness is here represented as the consequence of divine reconciliation: so it was in the case of Job; and though not generally the case, we know that peace of mind often contributes greatly to the restoration of health.

The penitent is here represented, first, as praying to God for pardon and recovery, and as then meeting God with joy and thanksgiving in the assemblies of his saints, for doubtless from the earliest ages saints did thus assemble. (See Gen. iv. 26.) But in the verse following, there is some doubt as to the person speaking: "He looketh upon men," &c. Our translators, referring it to God, have inserted the words if any; but doubting the propriety of this, have also, in the margin, given a very different turn to the expression; and, taking the words to be those of the sick man himself, they read, "He shall look upon men and say, I have sinned," &c. Also in the following verse, "He hath delivered my soul from the pit, and my life shall see the light." This is language certainly becoming a penitent, and consistent with the following remark of Elihu: "Lo, all these things worketh God oftentimes with man!"—This address to Job concludes with calling upon him to reply, if he had any thing to object to this statement; and as he did not reply, we may fairly infer that it was admitted.

Ver. 25. Fresher than a child.—Or, "than childhood." This has particular reference to the case of Job. See 2 Ki. v. 14.
Ver. 27. He looketh.—Margin, "He shall look;" i. e. in the assembly around him, and confess before them. But as the same word (look) elsewhere means "sing metricaly;" i. e. to chant, as in the public worship, this may refer to the manner of his confession before the congregation. So Schultens, Scott, Good, &c.—I profited me not.—Good, "He hath not requited (it) unto me;" admirably paraphrases, "He hath not dealt with me after my desert." See Ps. cxii. 10.
Ver. 28. His soul . . . His life.—(Following the Keri, many MSS., and versions.) "My soul . . . My life." The variation in the original is only part of a Hebrew letter, vav for vau.
Ver. 32. To justify thee.—That thou shouldst be justified." LXX. Vulgate, &c.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Elihu accuseth Job for charging God with injustice. 10 God omnipotent cannot be unjust. 31 Man must humble himself unto God. 34 Elihu reproveth Job.

FURTHERMORE Elihu answered and said,

2 Hear my words, O ye wise men; and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge.

3 For the ear trieth words, as the <sup>a</sup> mouth tasteth meat.

4 Let us choose to us judgment: let us know among ourselves what is good.

5 For Job hath <sup>b</sup> said, I am righteous: and God hath taken away my judgment.

6 Should I lie against my right? my <sup>c</sup> wound is incurable without transgression.

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh up scorning like water?

8 Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men.

9 For he hath said, It profiteth a man <sup>d</sup> nothing that he should delight himself with God.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of <sup>e</sup> understanding: far be it from God, that he should do wickedness; and from the <sup>f</sup> Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.

11 For the work <sup>g</sup> of a man shall he render unto him, and cause every man to find according to his ways.

12 Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

13 Who hath given him a charge over the earth? or who hath disposed <sup>h</sup> the whole world?

14 If he set his heart upon <sup>i</sup> man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath;

15 All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust.

16 If now thou hast understanding, hear this: hearken to the voice of my words.

17 Shall I even he that hateth right <sup>j</sup> govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is most just?

18 Is it fit to say to a <sup>k</sup> king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

19 How much less to him <sup>l</sup> that accepteth <sup>m</sup> not the persons of princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor? for they all are the work of his hands.

20 In a moment shall they die, and the people shall be troubled at midnight, and pass away: and <sup>n</sup> the mighty shall be taken away without hand.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 1—37. Job being silent, Elihu now addresses himself to his three friends.—Still, however, his discourse relates to Job, though by addressing himself to them, he indulges in greater freedom of censure. He first reproves him for allowing himself to speak of God in the language of infidels and scorners; for attributing wickedness to his Maker, and contending that there was no profit in the service of the Most High. (See chap. ix. 17—22; xxi. 15.) But in this, we must make some allowance for the colouring of oriental eloquence, in the language of Elihu, as well as in that of Job. The principle, however, of attributing moral evil to God, could scarcely be censured in too strong and pointed language. Yet certainly Job did not so mean, however his language, while smarting under the arrows of the Almighty, might imply it.

That God cannot do wrong, he now argues from several convincing topics. 1. He is the supreme, and not a subordinate or delegated governor, (ver. 13.) and is therefore under no temptation from obligation or accountability. 2. He is bene-

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 6. My wound.—Properly “an arrow-wound.” See ch. vi. 4.—“Without transgression.”—Perhaps, rather, “exaggeration.” To transgress, is to go beyond bounds.

Ver. 14. If he set his heart upon man.—“Upon him,” or “it.” Miss Smith renders this elegantly and justly,

“If he set his heart upon it,
He can recall his spirit and his breath.”

Ver. 17. Shall even he that hateth right govern.—That is, “Can he be an enemy to justice himself, who binds us so fast to the practice of it?” Bishop Patrick.

Ver. 24. He shall break (rather “breaketh”) and set—rather, seteth.” Scott (the poet).—“Without number.”—“Without searching out;” i. e. unsearchable—unknown. Here may be an allusion to some of the calamities that fell on Job’s family; probably the whirlwind that overthrew the house while they were feasting, was in the night.

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1520.

a palate.

b c. 27.2.

c arrow.

c. 6.4.

d c. 9.22, 23.

e heart.

f Re. 22.12.

g all of it.

h him.

i 2 Sa. 23.3.

j blind.

k Ex. 22.23.

l He. 12.23.

m 1 Pe. 1.17.

n they shall take away the mighty.

o 2 Ch. 16.9.

p Ps. 139.2, 3.

q Am. 9.2, 3.

Re. 4.13.

r Re. 6.15, 16.

s Is. 42.3.

t Co. 10.13.

t go.

u searching

out.

v crushed.

w place of beholders

x 1 Ti. 5.24.

y from after.

z Pr. 1.29, 30.

a Ex. 22.27.

b Ro. 8.31.

34.

c Ps. 143.7.

d 1 Ki. 12.23.

e Da. 9.7, 14.

f Ps. 32.8.

g Ep. 4.22.

h from with thee?

i heart.

j c. 38.2.

k or, My father

let Job

be tried.

a c. 9.17, 34.

16.12, 17.

27.2, 6.

b c. 31.2, &c.

21 For his eyes <sup>a</sup> are upon the ways of man, and he seeth <sup>b</sup> all his goings.

22 There is no <sup>c</sup> darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide <sup>d</sup> themselves.

23 For he will not lay upon man more than <sup>e</sup> right; that he should <sup>f</sup> enter into judgment with God.

24 He shall break in pieces mighty men without <sup>g</sup> number, and set others in their stead.

25 Therefore he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night, so that they are <sup>h</sup> destroyed.

26 He striketh them as wicked men in the open <sup>i</sup> sight <sup>j</sup> of others;

27 Because they turned back <sup>k</sup> from him, and <sup>l</sup> would not consider any of his ways:

28 So that they cause the cry of the poor to come unto him, and he <sup>m</sup> heareth the cry of the afflicted.

29 When he giveth <sup>n</sup> quietness, who then can make trouble? and when he hideth <sup>o</sup> his face, who then can behold him? whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only:

30 That the hypocrite reign not, lest the people <sup>p</sup> be ensnared.

31 Surely it is meet to be said unto God, I <sup>q</sup> have borne chastisement, I will not offend any more:

32 That which I see not teach <sup>r</sup> thou me: if I have done iniquity, I <sup>s</sup> will do no more.

33 Should it be <sup>t</sup> according to thy mind? he will recompense it, whether thou refuse, or whether thou choose; and not I: therefore speak what thou knowest.

34 Let men of <sup>u</sup> understanding tell me, and let a wise man hearken unto me.

35 Job hath spoken without <sup>v</sup> knowledge, and his words were without wisdom.

36 My <sup>w</sup> desire is that Job may be tried unto the end because of his answers for wicked men.

37 For he addeth rebellion unto his sin, he clappeth his hands among us, and multiplieth his words against God.

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 Comparison is not to be made with God, because our good or evil cannot extend unto him. 9 Many cry in their afflictions, but are not heard for want of faith.

ELIHU spake moreover, and said,

2 Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou

<sup>a</sup> saidst, My righteousness is more than God’s?

3 For thou saidst, What <sup>b</sup> advantage will it volent: (ver. 14—16.) He could, if he please, at once recal his Almighty Spirit, and destroy all the creatures which he hath made. 3. He is a just and impartial Being: (ver. 17—20.) And as he seeth all men and all their actions, none can escape his notice, or evade his justice. But, 4. Even if it were so, and though there may be circumstances utterly inexplicable to us, is it becoming to charge wickedness upon kings? Much less is it allowable for such creatures as we are, to impute either error or wickedness to the universal Sovereign. It becomes us, therefore, in our affliction, rather to suspect ourselves than to call in question the divine equity or goodness: Surely it is meet to be said unto God, “I have borne (chastisement,) I will no (more) offend,” or, if we adopt the more modern translation,—“I have lifted up (my prayer); let me not perish.”

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 1—16. Elihu pursues his argument against Job, and charges him with self-righteousness.—Job had certainly given way too much to infidel temptations, and had in effect said with the profane, (chap. xxi. 15.) “What is

Ver. 31. I have borne—I will not offend.—Heath renders this, I lift up (my hands) Scott, “My prayer.” Heath adds, “Let me not be destroyed;” Boethroyd, “Punish.”

Ver. 33. Should it be according to thy mind.—See margin. (“Should it be) from with thee?” This is still more perplexed. The original is very obscure and variously translated. The common version is probably faithful to the sense, that God will do as pleaseth him, whether we approve or censure.

Ver. 36. My desire is.—See margin. But this seems foreign to the context. [But it may be rendered, “My wish is, that Job may be tried,” as it is in the Chaldee.]—Begerer. Tried unto the end (i. e. fully tried) because of his answer for.—Many MSS. read, like wicked men or infidels. The difference is the original is very slight.

Ver. 37. He clappeth his hands among us, (i. e. he triumphs in his supposed victory) and multiplieth his words against God—That was his rebellion.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 2. My righteousness is more than God’s.—This is inferential reasoning from such passages as ch. xiii. 18. xix. 6, 7. xxvii. 2, &c.

be unto thee? and, What profit shall I have,
if I be cleansed from my sin?

4 I will answer thee, and thy companions with thee.

5 Look unto the heavens, and see; and behold the clouds which are higher than thou.

6 If thou sinnest, what dost thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what dost thou unto him?

7 If thou be righteous, what givest thou him? or what receiveth he of thy hand?

8 Thy wickedness may hurt a man as thou art; and thy righteousness may profit the son of man.

9 By reason of the multitude of oppressions they make the oppressed to cry: they cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty.

10 But none saith, Where is God my maker, who giveth songs in the night;

11 Who teacheth us more than the beasts of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls
of heaven?

12 There they cry, but none giveth answer, because of the pride of evil men.

13 Surely God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

14 Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him, yet judgment is before him; therefore trust thou in him.

15 But now, because it is not so, he hath visited in his anger; yet he knoweth it not in great extremity:

16 Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain; he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Elihu sheweth how God is just in his ways. 16 How Job's sins hinder God's blessings. 24 God's works are to be magnified.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said,
2 Suffer me a little, and I will show thee that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.

3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For truly my words shall not be false: he the Almighty, that we should serve him? or what profit shall we have if we pray unto him?"—Or, in his own words, "What profit shall I have—more than from my sin?"—Elihu directs him to look above, and consider the distance between himself and God; and inquire, on the other hand, what advantage the Almighty could derive from his services; or what injury he could do him by disobedience.

Elihu then adverts to one reason why the Almighty does not more frequently interfere to rescue the oppressed and distressed: namely, that though they cry under oppression, they do not cry unto God for deliverance. They inquire not after God their Maker, who alone is able to give "songs in the night" of solitude or affliction; who has given them that principle of reason denied to the brute creation, who yet are more sensible of the favours they receive: for "the ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib." A censure which in great measure falleth on Job himself, who "opened his mouth in vain," because he did not humble himself, and call upon him who alone was able to relieve him.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 1—33. Elihu resumes his defence of the character and providence of God.—The laws of ancient eloquence and disputation were certainly very different from those of modern times. Elihu, though at first he apologised for his youth, feels no hesitation in announcing his competency for the conflict in which he was engaged; but, on the

Ver. 3. "If I be cleansed."—These supplementary words are injudiciously supplied. The margin is literal.

Ver. 5. Clouds.—[Shechakim, the æthers, or conflicting air; the strong agitation of which produces both light and heat: so Vulgate, æthera.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. They make the oppressed to cry.—Or, "the oppressed are made to cry." Scott (the poet.)

Ver. 12. None giveth answer.—Rather, "He (God) answereth not;" and why? because of their pride—the pride of evil men. That is, the oppressed as well as the oppressors being wicked, God interfereth not.

Ver. 14. Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him.—Perhaps Elihu alludes to Job's language, chap. ix. 11.

Ver. 15. But now, &c.—This is another obscure passage, and such are not to be wondered at in a poem between three and four thousand years old; the wonder is, that it can be at all deciphered. Dr. Boothroyd's translation of this verse, which we prefer, is as follows:—

"But now, because he hath not visited in his anger,

Nor noticed great arrogance—

Therefore," &c.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 3. Knowledge from afar.—The original may refer as

A M. 2484.

B. C. 1320.

c or, by it more than by my sin.

d return to these words.

e Je. 7. 19.

f Ps. 16. 2.

g Is. 1. 15.

h Ps. 77. 5.

i. e. God.

j. i. e. Job.

k Ho. 11. 8, 9.

a there are yet words for God.

l Je. 32. 19.

c heart.

d or, afflicted.

e He. 13. 5.

f Ps. 107. 10.

g pass
away.

h Ro. 2. 5.

i their soul
die.

j Ps. 55. 23.

k or, Sodomites.

De. 23. 17.

l or, afflicted.

m Ps. 31. 8.

n the rest of thy table.

o Ps. 23. 5.

p or, should uphold thee.

q turn thee
aside.

r Pr. 11. 4.

that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any; <sup>b</sup> he is mighty in strength and <sup>c</sup> wisdom.

6 He preserveth not the life of the wicked:
but giveth right to the <sup>d</sup> poor.

7 He <sup>e</sup> withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but with kings are they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them for ever,
and they are exalted.

8 And if <sup>f</sup> they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction;

9 Then he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded.

10 He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.

11 If they obey and serve him, they shall spend their days in prosperity, and their years in pleasures.

12 But if they obey not, they shall <sup>g</sup> perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge.

13 But the hypocrites in heart <sup>h</sup> heap up wrath: they cry not when he bindeth them.

14 They die in youth, and their life is among the <sup>k</sup> unclean.

15 He delivereth the <sup>i</sup> poor in his affliction, and openeth their ears in oppression.

16 Even so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad <sup>m</sup> place where there is no straitness; and <sup>n</sup> that which should be set on thy table <sup>o</sup> should be full of fatness.

17 But thou hast fulfilled the judgment of the wicked: judgment and justice <sup>p</sup> take hold on thee.

18 Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroke: then a great ransom cannot <sup>q</sup> deliver thee.

19 Will he esteem thy <sup>r</sup> riches? no, not gold, nor all the forces of strength.

20 Desire not the night, when people are cut off in their place.

21 Take heed, regard not iniquity: for this hast thou chosen rather than affliction.

contrary, speaks confidently, not only of the extent, but of the truth and perfection of his knowledge, (ver. 4.) in which, we suppose, he may refer to that "inspiration of the Almighty by which he spake." (Chap. xxxii. 8.) All, however, is directed to the honour of his Maker. He begins with magnifying the Almighty's power and wisdom, and then shows how those perfections are exerted on the behalf of the righteous—however poor, afflicted, or distressed. He supporteth not kings in their oppression, but renders justice to the poor and the afflicted. He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous, but sometimes raiseth them to seats of honour and of power, and that permanently. On the other hand, if the righteous fall into captivity or distress, he makes even their afflictions useful to them, in the way of discipline and reform. This he applies to the case of Job, and tells him, that he had been thus afflicted, and had he suitably humbled himself under the mighty hand of God, he would have been removed from his present strait into a broad place; that is, restored to prosperity and comfort. But since he had "fulfilled," or rather, he was "filled with the judgment," contention, or strivings of the wicked, he is warned lest he should be made a partaker of the like judgments.

Elihu now adverts to the power and majesty of God, as the sovereign and lawgiver of the world, clothed with the majesty of the storm, issuing his decrees in the voice of thunder, and the voice of the trumpet.

well to time as place. Isa. xxxvii. 26. Perhaps he means to ground his doctrine upon authorities of high antiquity. Scott (the poet) thinks he means to refer back only to his preceding discourse.

Ver. 13. They cry not when he bindeth them.—That is, in their affliction they call not upon God. See chap. xxxv. 10.

Ver. 14. Their life is among the unclean.—Margin, "Sodomites." As Barrak signifies both to bless and to curse; (see note on chap. i. 11.) so Kadeesh, is both to consecrate and desecrate; and as a name is used both for saints and Sodomites. See Deut. xxiii. 17; the purest and the vilest of human beings, and in the latter sense is here to be understood; the general meaning is, that the lives of such were cut short by debauchery.

Ver. 17. Thou hast fulfilled.—Scott (the poet.) "Thou art full of the judgment (or striving) of the wicked." Compare chap. xxiv. 36, and note.— Judgment and justice take hold on thee; namely, on that account.—See margin. Boothroyd, "Shall be upheld."

Ver. 19. Will he esteem?—That is, will justice, or his executioner, death, be bribed by gold?

Ver. 20. Desire not the night.—The time of assassinations, and perhaps of criminal executions.

22 Behold, God *exalteth by his power: who teacheth *like him?

23 Who hath enjoined him his way? or who can say thou hast wrought iniquity?

24 Remember that thou magnify * his work, which men behold.

25 Every man may see it; man may behold it afar off.

26 Behold, God is great, and we know him not, neither * can the number of his years be searched out.

27 For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain * according to the vapour thereof:

28 Which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly.

29 Also can any understand the spreadings of the clouds, or the noise of his tabernacle?

30 Behold, he spreadeth * his light upon it, and covereth the * bottom of the sea.

31 For by them * judgeth he the people; he * giveth meat in abundance.

32 With clouds he covereth the light; and commandeth it not to shine by the cloud that cometh betwixt.

33 The noise * thereof sheweth concerning it, the cattle also concerning * the vapour.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

1 God is to be feared because of his great works. 15 His wisdom is unsearchable in them.

AT this also my heart * trembleth, and is moved out of his place.

2 Hear * attentively the noise of his voice, and the sound that goeth out of his mouth.

3 He directeth it under the whole heaven, and his * lightning unto the * ends of the earth.

4 After it a voice * roareth: he thundereth * with the voice of his excellency; and he will not stay them when his voice is heard.

5 God thundereth marvellously with his voice; great things doeth he, * which we cannot comprehend.

der, and dispensing blessings in his showers. Thus he judgeth the people, refreshing his inheritance with rain, but directing his thunderbolts against his enemies.

"Behold, he spreadeth his lightning upon it," (i. e. his tabernacle)
"And covereth (therewith) the bottom of the sea;
With clouds he covereth the light,
And controlleth it by (the cloud) that interposeeth.
He announceth over him (man) his voice,
(And over) cattle, and over whatsoever lieth up."

This seems to be part of a grand description of the Deity's sensible approach, manifested by thunder; first heard at a distance, then rolling awfully nearer and nearer. This speech of Elihu, continued in the next chapter, is well calculated to prepare the mind for the introduction of JEHOVAH himself,

Ver. 22. Who teacheth like him?—That is, with such authority. Scott (the poet) renders it, "Who is a lanoviver like him?"

Ver. 24. Which men behold.—Or celebrate.—See note on chap. xxxii. 27.

Ver. 27. He maketh small, &c.—This relates to the process of evaporation by which the rain is formed and distributed on the earth.

Ver. 29. The noise of his tabernacle.—That is, the thunder of the clouds. See Psalm xviii. 11, &c.

Ver. 30. Spreadeth his light (i. e. lightning) upon it;—Rather, "around him." Heath, Scott, &c.

Ver. 31. By them judgeth.—That is, by fruitful showers and desolating storms—he administers his judgments.

Ver. 32. 33. With clouds, &c.—[Perhaps these difficult verses should be rendered, "He covereth the concave with lightning; and chargeth it what it shall strike." Its noise declareth concerning him; a magazine of wrath against iniquity."—Baxter. These verses have much puzzled the translators, and some have rendered them in a way totally dissimilar. The version given in our position (which is partly communicated by a learned friend) adheres much closer to the popular translation, and to the original text, as it has been generally understood; and we are unwilling to depart unnecessarily from either.

CHAP. XXXVII. Ver. 1. Is moved.—"Is ready to bound out of its place."—Bishop Louth.

Ver. 2. Hear attentively the noise of, &c.—"Tremble at his voice."—Louth, &c.

Ver. 3. He directeth it.—"Its flash (or blaze) is beneath," &c. Scott and Louth.—Ends,—i. e. the extremities of the horizon.

Ver. 4. He will not stay them, &c.—"He deceiveth them not when his voice is heard;" Bishop Louth. "They cannot be searched (traced) out;" Scott, Boothroyd.

Ver. 5. He saith to the snow.—Snow and thunder are so seldom associated, that the poet may be here thought guilty of an anachronism. Homer, however, in his Iliad, mentions a thunder storm in snowy weather. Barnes (in his note) mentions having witnessed the same in London; and the editor of this work can bear his own testimony to a like fact.—Likewise, &c.—Heb. "And to the showers of rain, and to the showers of rain of his strength;" i. e. heavy showers. This last expression refers to the latter or winter rain, in the end of September, or in the beginning of October.

A. M. 2484.
B. C. 1520.
s Da. 4. 25. 32
t Ps. 94. 12.
u Ps. 111. 2.
v Ps. 102. 24.
w Ps. 147. 8, 9.
x Lu. 17. 24.
y roots.
z De. 8. 2, 15.
a Ps. 136. 25.
b Ac. 14. 17.
c 1 Ki. 18. 41, 45.
d that which goeth up.
e Da. 10. 7, 8.
f Mat. 28. 2.
g Ec. 3. 11.
h Ro. 11. 33.
i Ps. 109. 27.
j Ps. 104. 42.
k chamber.
l scattering winds.
m Ps. 147. 17, 18.
n the cloud of his light.
o Ps. 143. 8.
p a rod.
q Isa. 12. 18.
r Ezr. 10. 9.
s 1 Ki. 18. 45.
t Joel 2. 23.
u Is. 40. 22.
v Gold.
w 1 Ki. 6. 15.
x Ps. 62. 11.
y 66. 3.

h and to the shower of rain, and to the showers of rain of his strength.
i Ps. 109. 27.
j Ps. 104. 42.
k chamber.
l scattering winds.
m Ps. 147. 17, 18.
n the cloud of his light.
o Ps. 143. 8.
p a rod.
q Isa. 12. 18.
r Ezr. 10. 9.
s 1 Ki. 18. 45.
t Joel 2. 23.
u Is. 40. 22.
v Gold.
w 1 Ki. 6. 15.
x Ps. 62. 11.
y 66. 3.

6 For he saith to the snow; Be thou on the earth; * likewise to the small rain, and to the great rain of his strength.

7 He sealeth up the hand of every man; that all men may know his work.

8 Then the beasts go into dens, and remain in their places.

9 Out of the * south cometh the whirlwind, and cold out of the * north.

10 By the breath of God frost * is given; and the breadth of the waters is straitened.

11 Also by watering he wearieth the thick cloud: he scattereth * his bright cloud:

12 And it is turned round about by his counsels: that they may do * whatsoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth.

13 He causeth it to come, whether for * correction, * or for his * land, or for * mercy.

14 Harken unto this, O Job: stand still, and consider the wondrous works of God.

15 Dost thou know when God disposed them, and caused the light of his cloud to shine?

16 Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect in knowledge?

17 How thy garments are warm, when he quieteth the earth by the south wind?

18 Hast thou with him spread * out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?

19 Teach us what we shall say unto him; for we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness.

20 Shall it be told him that I speak? if a man speak, surely he shall be swallowed up.

21 And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.

22 * Fair weather cometh out of the north: with God is terrible majesty.

23 Touching the Almighty, we * cannot find him out: he is excellent in * power, and in speaking out of the whirlwind, in the chapter following. (Chap. xxxviii.)

CHAP. XXXVII. Ver. 1—24. Elihu continues his beautiful description of the thunder storm, and the sublime winter scenery of the East.—The storm scene here continued is so admirably rendered into English verse by Scott, that we cannot refrain from copying a few lines of it, relating to the commencement of this chapter.

"Even while I paint this dreadful scene I start;
My bosom scarce can hold its panting heart.
Hark! tremble! murmurs in the distant air
Whisper of God, his awful way prepare:
He fires the heavens; earth to her distant shores,
Feels the broad flashes; now his thunder roars;

Ver. 7. He sealeth up, &c.—That is, the rain by overflowing the country, (which seems necessary to its fertility,) at the same time stops all agricultural and out-door labours.

Ver. 9. Out of the south.—The following version, which is nearly that of the Bible margin, is both more explicit and exact.

"Out of the chamber (of the south) cometh the whirlwind."
The whirlwind that smote the house in which was Job's family (chap. i. 19.) came from "the desert;" probably from the deserts of Africa, south of Idumæa.

"And cold from the (northern) scattering winds."—Scott (the poet).
Ver. 10. Straitened.—Scott, "Hardened." Boothroyd, "Condensed."

Ver. 11. His bright cloud.—See margin. Clouds are spent by rain, and scattered by wind.

Ver. 12. It is turned round.—"Thus he turneth their courses by his counsels." Boothroyd.

Ver. 13. Correction.—"Whether for correction or in mercy, he causeth it (the rain) to come upon the earth." Scott and Boothroyd.

Ver. 18. A molten looking-glass.—That is, a brazen mirror. See Deut. xxvii. 23.

Ver. 19. We cannot order our speech.—That is, we know not how to address him.—By reason of darkness.—That is, of ignorance.

Ver. 20. Shall it be told, &c.—This is very obscure; but may it not be read thus, "Shall that which I speak be told him? If a man (any one) speak (falsely) surely!" &c. This may be a bold suggestion, and is offered with trembling, finding no meaning in the present version. Dr. Good seeing he could make no sense of the Hebrew, explains the whole as Arabic, and reads ver. 19 and 20 thus:

"Teach us how we may address him
When arrayed in robes of darkness; (i. e. the thunder cloud.)
Or, if brightness be about him, how I may commune;
For if a man should then speak he would be consumed."

But is not this almost equally obscure?

Ver. 22. Fair weather.—Heb. "Gold," or "golden;" that is, brilliant shining weather. Scott (the poet) and Boothroyd, "The golden (sun,)" but "sun" is supplied. Dr. Henderson (of Russia) applies it to the splendid northern lights, which are always attended with a breeze from the north.

judgment, and in plenty of justice: he will not afflict.

24 Men do therefore fear him: he respecteth not any that are wise of heart.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

1 God challengeth Job to answer. 4 God, by his mighty works, convinceth Job of ignorance, 31 and of imbecility.

THEN the LORD answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said,

2 Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?

3 Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me.

4 Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

5 Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?

6 Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof;

7 When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

8 Or who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb?

9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it,

10 And brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors;

11 And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?

12 Hast thou commanded the morning since thy days; and caused the day-spring to know his place;

13 That it might take hold of the ends of

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1520.
x Ps. 99.4.
y Is. 45.21.
z La. 3.33.
a Mat. 10.28.
b Mat. 11.25.
1 Cor. 1.26.
a c. 24.35.
35.16.
b make me know.
c Pr. 8.22.30.
d knowest.
e sockets.
f made to sink.
g Re. 2.28.
h established my decree upon it.
i the pride of thy robes.
j Ps. 89.9.
k wings.
l Ps. 10.15.
m Ps. 9.13.
n or, at.
o Ex. 9.18, 24.
Joe. 10.11.
Is. 30.30.
Re. 16.21.
p Ps. 147.8.
Je. 14.22.
q Ps. 107.35.

the earth, that the wicked might be shaken out of it?

14 It is turned as clay to the seal; and they stand as a garment.

15 And from the wicked their light is withheld, and the high arm shall be broken.

16 Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth?

17 Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?

18 Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth? declare if thou knowest it all.

19 Where is the way where light dwelleth? and as for darkness, where is the place thereof, 20 That thou shouldst take it to the bound thereof, and that thou shouldst know the paths to the house thereof?

21 Knowest thou it, because thou wast then born? or because the number of thy days is great?

22 Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail,

23 Which I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?

24 By what way is the light parted, which scattereth the east wind upon the earth?

25 Who hath divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters, or a way for the lightning of thunder;

26 To cause it to rain on the earth, where no man is; on the wilderness wherein there is no man;

27 To satisfy the desolate and waste ground; and to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth?

His voice exalted with majestic sound,
Augments its terror through the vaulted round:
We hear, we shudder, but in vain inquire!
How formed his voice, and how inflamed his fire.
Great is the thundering God, and great his deeds;
Nor less his work our loftiest thoughts exceeds."

To this description succeeds that of an eastern winter, with snow and rain, the latter of which generally (and even sometimes the former) accompanies the thunder. During the rains and floods all out-door labour is interrupted, and the wild beasts retire into their dens in the mountains. Then ariseth the whirlwind from the south, or the cold winds from the north: the clouds are exhausted, and the floods are frozen. All these changes are wrought by the divine wisdom, whose counsels are inscrutable; not to be canvassed, but adored.

CHAP. XXXVIII. Ver. 1—41. The Almighty now addresses Job from the whirlwind.—The sixth and last part of the poem commences with this divine appearance. The storm had been gradually approaching; the voice of thunder increasing louder and louder; the elements are extremely agitated, and the storm bursts. It must have been after this, (as in the case of Elijah, 1 Kings, xix. 12.) and not during the raging of the storm, that the voice from the cloud (probably the Shechinah) uttered the sublime oracle which we are now about to consider. This Dr. Young calls, "by much the finest part of the noblest and most ancient poem in the world;"—"the grandeur" of which, according to Bishop Patrick, exceeds "all other poetry, as thunder is louder than a whisper."

We must recollect that Job, in many parts of his preceding speeches, had challenged the Deity to bring him to his trial, (particularly in chap. xxxi. 35, &c.) and now the challenge is accepted, and he is called to receive judgment: "Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?" A series of interrogatories then follows, the noblest that can be conceived of, the direct tendency of which was, to humble Job, and to produce that confession which begins the last chapter of the book, and which forms, or leads to, the catastrophe of the poem. What relates to the creation, demands our peculiar notice.

The creation of our world, and of the system with which it of the earth.—That is, its extremities, or cardinal points. See chapter xxxvii. 3.

Ver. 14. As clay to the seal.—A species of clay is still used for sealing doors, &c. in the East, particularly at Grand Cairo. Harmer.—Stand as a garment.—Scott (the poet), "Present themselves as in magnificent attire." The word is applied to royal apparel. Ester vi. 8, 10, 11.

Ver. 15. From the wicked their light is withheld.—That is, they are imprisoned, or shut up in darkness. See chap. xviii. 5, 6.—And the high arm shall be broken.—Meaning, the arm of the oppressor, as in Psalm x. 15.

Ver. 16. In the search of the depth.—That is, to sound the vast abyss.

Ver. 20. That thou shouldst take it (rather, "take a survey of it") to the bound thereof.—Or, its boundary, the horizon. See ver. 18.

Ver. 21. Knowest thou it, &c.—Rather,

"Knowest thou? for thou wast then born!

And the number of thy days is great!"

"This is lofty irony," says Scott (the poet). So Heath, Good, Boothroyd.

Ver. 24. By (or in) what way is the light (i. e. the lightning) parted?—

Which?—Rather, "when," or "whence." the east wind (i. e. the tempest, see chap. xv. 2.) is scattered, or scattereth itself, &c.

Ver. 26. To cause it to rain.—(It is well known that rain falls copiously in thunder storms. The flash is first seen, the clap is next heard, and last the rain descends; though in fact they all take place at the same time. The lightning traverses all space in no perceptible succession of time. Sound is propagated at the rate of 1142 feet in a second. Rain travels still more slowly, and will be seen sooner or later, according to the weight of the drops, and the distance of the cloud. Now, as water is composed of two elastic airs or gases, called oxygen, and hydrogen, in the proportion of 88 1/4 of the former, and 11 3/4 of the latter in 100 parts, the electric spark, or matter of lightning, passing through the atmosphere, ignites and decomposes those gases, which explode; and the water falls down in the form of rain. This explosion, as well as the rushing in of the circumambient air to restore the equilibrium, will account for the clap and peal; and thus by the lightning of thunder God causes it to rain on the earth.)—Bagster.

Ver. 24. Who respecteth not any that are wise of heart.—See chap. v. 13. But Schultens and Scott (the poet) render this, "Who beholdeth the wise in heart as nothing."

CHAP. XXXVIII. Ver. 3. Like a man.—"A male." (Göber) the strongest sex, and used sometimes for a strong man in opposition to Enosh, a frail and weak man.—Answer thou me.—i. e. Teach thy Maker! intended as an ironical reproof to Job's presumption.

Ver. 5. Who laid the foundations, &c.—

"Who fixed the proportions of it? for surely thou knowest;

Or, who stretched out the line upon it?" Louth.

Ver. 6. Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened?—Rather, piles, or pillars "thereof sunk?" The Hebrews consider the earth as founded upon the floods, in the manner of arches, or a bridge, (see Psalm xxiv. 2; i. c. 5.) which is not far from the truth, considering the earth as a globe, with an abyss within.—Who laid the corner stone thereof?—The corner stone of a building, is the angle of the foundation, which, it is probable, was first laid; and seems to receive its name from the human profile, as looking two ways; but Parkhurst here and elsewhere explains it of the key-stone of an arch.

Ver. 7. When the morning stars, &c.—That is, the angels. See Exposition, Gen. ii. 1—3.

Ver. 8. When it brake forth, &c.—"When it burst forth, as an infant that cometh from the womb." Bishop Louth. See Gen. i. 2, and note, where the great abyss may be considered as the womb from which cometh all the seas.

Ver. 11. Hitherto, &c.—[Thus far shall thy flux and reflux extend. The seas are marvellously limited and regulated, not only by the tides and gravitation, but by the quantum of time required to remove any part of the earth's surface, by its rotation round its axis, from under the immediate attractive influence of the sun and moon. Hence the attraction of the sun and moon, and the gravitation of the sea to its own centre, which prevent too great a flux on the one hand, and too great reflux on the other, are some of those bars and doors by which its proud waves are stayed, and prevented from coming farther.]—Bagster.

Ver. 13. That it (the morning) might take hold of the ends ("the wings")

28 Hath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of dew?
 29 Out of whose womb came the ice? and the hoary frost of heaven, who hath gendered it?
 30 The waters are hid as with a stone, and the face of the deep is frozen.
 31 Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?
 32 Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?
 33 Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven? canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?
 34 Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee?
 35 Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, Here we are?
 36 Who hath put wisdom in the inward parts? or who hath given understanding to the heart?
 37 Who can number the clouds in wisdom? or who can stay the bottles of heaven, 38 When the dust groweth into hardness, and the clods cleave fast together?
 39 Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion? or fill the appetite of the young lions, 40 When they couch in their dens, and abide in the covert to lie in wait?
 41 Who provideth for the raven his food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Of the wild goats and hinds. 5 Of the wild ass. 9 The unicorn. 13 The peacock, stork, ostrich. 19 The horse. 27 The eagle.

KNOWEST thou the time when the wild goats of the rock bring forth? or canst thou mark when the hinds do calve?

A. M. 2184.
 B. C. 1328.
 r c.37.10.
 s taken.
 t Cimach, or, the seven stars.
 u c.9.9.
 Am.5.8.
 v Cecil.
 w or, the twelve signs.
 x guide them.
 y Je.31.35, 36.
 z Behold us.
 a Ps.51.6.
 b cause to lie down.
 c is poured, or, is turned into mire.
 d Ps.104.51.
 e life.
 f Ps.147.9.
 Mat.6.26.
 g Ps.29.9.
 h Je.2.24.
 Ho.8.9.
 c.24.5.
 d salt places.
 e exactor.
 c.31.18.
 f De.33.17.
 Ps.92.10.
 g or, the feathers of the stork and ostrich.
 h La.4.3.
 i c.35.11.

2 Canst thou number the months that they fulfil? or knowest thou the time when they bring forth?
 3 They bow themselves, they bring forth their young ones, they cast out their sorrows.
 4 Their young ones are in good liking, they grow up with corn; they go forth, and return not unto them.
 5 Who hath sent out the wild ass free? or who hath loosed the bands of the wild ass?
 6 Whose house I have made the wilderness, and the barren land his dwellings.
 7 He scorneth the multitude of the city, neither regardeth he the crying of the driver.
 8 The range of the mountains is his pasture, and he searcheth after every green thing.
 9 Will the unicorn be willing to serve thee, or abide by thy crib?
 10 Canst thou bind the unicorn with his band in the furrow? or will he harrow the valleys after thee?
 11 Wilt thou trust him, because his strength is great? or wilt thou leave thy labour to him?
 12 Wilt thou believe him, that he will bring home thy seed, and gather it into thy barn?
 13 Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks? or wings and feathers unto the ostrich?
 14 Which leaveth her eggs in the earth, and warmeth them in dust, 15 And forgetteth that the foot may crush them, or that the wild beast may break them.
 16 She is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not her's: her labour is in vain without fear;
 17 Because God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her understanding stands connected, as it was a display of the divine glory and benevolence, so was it a matter of joy and gratulation to the holy angels:

With joy and shout
 They touched their golden harps, and hymning, praised God and his works; Creator him they sung.

The next object of interrogation is the sea, which is subjugated alone to the divine decree. The History of England in the eleventh century, furnishes an anecdote that will illustrate this circumstance. Canute the Great, (as he was called,) king of Denmark, had conquered great part of England, and was styled, by his flattering courtiers, Monarch of the Ocean. As he was one day at Southampton, in order (it is said) to reprove their folly, he ordered a chair to be set for him on the beach, while the tide was rising, and commanded the waves not to wet his feet; the tide, however, paying no regard to his commands, he took occasion to reprove the folly of his courtiers, by saying, He only ought to be called sovereign of the ocean, whom the winds and seas obey.

The singular expression (ver. 13.) of the morning taking hold of the ends (the extremities) of the earth to shake out the wicked, is thought to refer to two circumstances. 1. Night is the season of crime: but morning (as Job had himself asserted, chap. xxiv. 16, 17.) is "as the shadow of death" to the wicked, and drives them into retirement. And, 2. Morning was, in those early times, the season for the administration of justice. (Psalm ci. 8: Jer. xxi. 12.) Morning was, therefore, in a twofold sense, terrible to criminals and vagabonds, who fled from its presence. To others it appears, on the contrary, clothed with beauty, when the earth is changed as clay by the seal: when they (the morn and dayspring) present themselves in splendid attire—referring to the splendour of the rising sun, when he appears "as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber." (Psal. xix. 5.) On this passage, the late pious Hervey remarks, that "The earth and all its productions receive from the rising sun both colour and beauty; as the clay (or wax) all their beautiful impressions from the seal."

We are now conducted (as it were) into the great abyss beneath, whence the sea receives its secret springs, which no mortal can discover: and into the regions of Sheol, and of death, of which Job himself had sublimely discoursed in the xxvth chapter. We then again ascend to the earth, and a number of questions are proposed, as to the various phenomena of nature, and "the ordinances of heaven;" or, in common language, "the laws of nature," which the God of nature has impressed upon every department of his creation. Such inquiries were well calculated to humble the high spirit of Job, and convince him of the folly of attempting to censure the dispensations of divine providence, which are certainly not less mysterious and unsearchable than the secrets of nature and creation.

CHAP. XXXIX. Ver. 1—30. The Almighty continues his interrogatories as to the animal creation.—This chapter should perhaps have commenced with the three last verses of the preceding, which relate to the lioness and her cubs, the raven and her young, and proceed with the rock-goat and deer, the wild ass, the ostrich, the horse, &c. Concerning each of these, we shall notice the most instructive and remarkable particulars.

1. The wild goat of the rocks, (Jael) or Ibex, (ver. 1.) is remarkable for leaping, and climbing the highest precipices. (1 Sam. xxiv. 2; Psal. civ. 18.) 2. The hind, or roe, (ajaloh) the female of the stag. (2 Sam. xxii. 34; Psal. xviii. 33.) The wild ass, (Heb. para) ver. 5. is a much handsomer crea-

Ver. 28. Hath the rain a father?—Rather, "Who is father of the rain?"—Scott, &c.

Ver. 30. Is frozen.—"Taken," or seized, and so bound together, as if its surface were covered with a mass of stone.

Ver. 32. Mazzaroth.—Dr. Good quotes Chrysostom as saying, "Mazaroth are those clusters of stars, the Zodiac;" though others assert that Mazzaroth is Byrios, or the Dog-star. Our margin adopts the former. So Scott, &c.

CHAP. XXXIX. Ver. 1. Canst thou mark.—Scott renders it, "Canst thou preserve the calving;" i. e. the hinds when they calve.

Ver. 2. Canst thou number, is equivalent to, Canst thou appoint the number.—See chap. xiv. 5.

Ver. 4. They grow up with corn.—Rather, "in the desert." Scott.—Unto them.—That is, their parents.

Ver. 5. Wild ass.—(Heb. patre, in Arabic fara, the omager, or wild ass, is a taller, and much more dignified animal than the common ass: its legs are more elegantly shaped; it bears its head higher; it is distinguished by a dusky woolly mane; long erect ears; forehead highly arched; hair generally silvery white; upper part of the face, sides of the neck, and upper part of the thighs flaxen; forepart of the body divided from the flank by a white line extending round the rump to the tail; a stripe of waved, coffee-coloured, bushy hair along the top of the back; another stripe of the same crossing the former at the shoulders; and two beautiful white lines, which bound the dorsal band and mane. They are found in various parts of the East; and run so swiftly that they cannot be taken except by successive relays.—Bagster.

Ver. 13. Gavest thou? is supplied, and that improperly. Heath and Scott (the poet) thus render it, "The wing of the ostrich is expanded." The word here rendered "peacock" (runben) is ascertained to be one of the names of the ostrich, (for the peacock is not mentioned before the time of Solomon) and the ostrich is remarkable, as Dr. Shaw states, for its quivering, expanded wing, which it flaps perpetually, as it walks or runs.—Or wings, &c.—The margin reads, "Or the feathers of the stork and ostrich," but this also is incorrect, for the latter clause does not name the ostrich; but should be rendered either interpositively, as by Scott, "Is it the pinion or feathers of the stork?" or, as by Dr. Boothroyd, "Her pinions and feathers are (like) those of the stork," which seems justified by the account of Dr. Shaw, who says, the plumage upon the shoulders, the back, and some part of the wings, are black and white, like those of the stork.

Ver. 16. Without fear.—Rather, "through want of fear." Boothroyd. The want of fear here, cannot refer to courage, for she is very timid; but want of caution and prudence.

18 What time she lifteth up herself on high, she scorneth the horse and his rider.

19 Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?

20 Canst thou make him afraid as a grass-nopper? the glory of his nostrils is terrible.

21 He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength: he goeth on to meet the armed men.

22 He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword.

23 The quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the shield.

24 He swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage: neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet.

25 He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting.

26 Doth the hawk fly by thy wisdom, and stretch her wings toward the south?

27 Doth the eagle mount up at thy command, and make her nest on high?

28 She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place.

29 From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off.

30 Her young ones also suck up blood: and where the slain are, there is she.

CHAPTER XL.

1 Job humbly himself to God. 6 God stirrith him up to show his righteousness, power, and wisdom. 15 Of the behemoth.

MOREOVER the LORD answered Job, and said,

2 Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it.

3 ¶ Then Job answered the LORD, and said,

A. M. 2484.

B. C. 1520.

j terrors.

k or, His feet dig.

l Je. 6.6.

m armour.

n by thy mouth.

o Le. 49.16.

Ob. 4.

p Mat. 24.23.

Lu. 17.37.

a c. 33.13.

Is. 27.4.

b Ezr. 9.6.

c. 42.6.

Ps. 31.4.

Is. 6.5.

64.6.

Da. 9.5, 7.

Lu. 18.13.

c c. 29.9.

Mt. 7.16.

Zec. 2.13.

Ro. 3.19.

d c. 33.1, &amp;c.

e Ps. 29.3, 4.

f Ps. 96.1.

104.1.

g Ex. 18.11.

Pr. 15.25.

Is. 2.12.

Da. 4.37.

h or, the elephant,

as some think.

i or, setteth

up.

4 Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will lay my hand upon my mouth.

5 Once have I spoken; but I will not answer yea, twice; but I will proceed no farther.

6 ¶ Then answered the LORD unto Job out of the whirlwind, and said,

7 Gird up thy loins now like a man: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

8 Wilt thou also disannul my judgment? wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayest be righteous?

9 Hast thou an arm like God? or canst thou thunder with a voice like him?

10 Deck thyself now with majesty, and excellency; and array thyself with glory and beauty.

11 Cast abroad the rage of thy wrath: and behold every one that is proud, and abase him.

12 Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low; and tread down the wicked in their place.

13 Hide them in the dust together; and bind their faces in secret.

14 Then will I also confess unto thee that thine own right hand can save thee.

15 ¶ Behold now behemoth, which I made with thee; he eateth grass as an ox.

16 Lo now, his strength is in his loins, and his force is in the navel of his belly.

17 He moveth his tail like a cedar: the sinews of his stones are wrapped together.

18 His bones are as strong pieces of brass; his bones are like bars of iron.

19 He is the chief of the ways of God: he that made him can make his sword to approach unto him.

ture than the common ass. (Judges v. 10.) This animal roameth wild in the wilderness. (Jer. ii. 24.) See note on ver. 5. 4. The unicorn (reem) which we have no doubt is the one-horned rhinoceros. (See note on Num. xxiii. 22.) 5. The ostrich—the habits and character of this bird are peculiar. It hatches its eggs in the sand, and often leaves them exposed to danger; three or four birds sometimes sit together (the male being one of them) to hatch a number of eggs, which when hatched form one family. The male bird is said to be a polygamist; and it does not appear that the female can distinguish its own offspring: it consequently has no more sympathy for them than it has for others. This bird is also remarkable for its fleetness, in which it rivals both the horse and dromedary, and when its wings are expanded, it rather sails than runs. (See note.) 6. The war-horse, of which the description here given has been universally admired, and never can be read, by any person of poetic taste, without strong emotions. 7. The hawk, which is a migratory bird; and the Hebrew term is thought to include the whole falcon family. 8. And the eagle, which is the king of birds, and delights in blood as much as any human tyrant.

The Almighty, in these chapters, collects around him all his family of the brute creation, and calls upon the distressed patriarch to admire the manner in which he conducts the economy of this immense family—each species according to the instincts which he had implanted in them.

CHAP. XL. Ver. 1—24. Job's confession—and a farther address to him from the Almighty.—Here seems to have been a solemn pause, as if for Job to answer, which not doing, he is called upon in these words:—

"Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty draw back?

What! has he nothing to reply?—Presumptuous man!

He that reproveth (or argueth with) God, let him answer it."

Ver. 18. He scorneth the horse and his rider.—The Arabians call the ostrich the camel-bird, and they compare to its flight a swift camel, (or dromedary,) and a fleet race-horse.

Ver. 20. Canst thou make him afraid? &c.—"Canst thou make him leap like a locust?" Scott (the poet.)

Ver. 24. Neither believeth.—He is so rejoiced, that he scarcely believeth his own ears. See Job xix. 24.

Ver. 26. Doth the hawk.—(Heb. netz, Arabic naz, Latin ntus, the harok, so called from natzah, to shoot a way, fly, because of the rapidity of its flight; whence Homer calls it "the swiftest of birds.") It probably, like the Arabic term, comprehends various species of the falcon family, as the gerfalcon, goshawk, and sparrow-hawk.—Fly by thy wisdom.—Is it through thy teaching that the falcon, or any other bird of passage, knows the precise time for taking flight, and the direction in which she is to go to arrive at a warmer climate?—Bagster.

Ver. 29. Her eyes behold.—[The eagle was proverbial for her strong and clear sight. Hence Homer calls her "the most quick-sighted of birds under heaven."]—Bagster.

CHAP. XL. Heath and Kennicott contend that the first 14 verses of this

This produces the desired effect: he confesses himself vile; that is "light,"—"weighed in the balances" of heaven, and "found wanting." (See Dan. v. 27.)

The voice from the whirlwind now proceeds to point out two other animals, that must have been known to Job, as objects of astonishment and terror. First, the behemoth, on which the critics and commentators are much divided. Our translators have marked it in the margin to be the elephant. So Schultens, and Messrs. Scott (the poet and commentator,) with most of the old expositors. Dr. T. M. Harris, (of North America,) author of a Natural History of the Bible, in his first edition contended for the elephant; but in his second, confesses a change of opinion. We quote from him the following extracts, which are in favour of the hippopotamus, or river horse, which the Egyptians are said to call pi-he-mout, or the water ox.

"I believe that it is generally admitted, that the leviathan is the crocodile; his fellow then could not be the elephant, which was not known in Egypt; was not, at least peculiar to that country, though inhabiting the interior of Africa. In the great work published under the authority of the King of Naples, containing prints from antiquities found in Herculaneum, are some pictures of Egyptian landscapes, in which are figures of the crocodile, lying among the reeds, and of the hippopotamus browsing on the aquatic plants of an island. And in that famous piece of antiquity commonly called the 'Prænestine Pavement,' the crocodile and river horse are associated; as they are also on the base of the famous statue of the Nile.

"The hippopotamus is nearly as large as the rhinoceros. The male has been found 17 feet in length, 15 in circumference, and seven in height. The head is enormously large, the jaws extend upwards of two feet, and are armed with four cutting teeth, each of which is 12 inches in length. The body is of a chapter should follow chapter xlii. 6. and Dr. Boothroyd has so placed them, but we think without sufficient reason.

Ver. 7. Gird up, &c.—A repetition of ch. xxxviii. 3.

Ver. 11. Behold every one.—Bishop Louth, "Behold every proud thing, and abase it."

Ver. 13. Bind their faces in secret.—In the secret place. To cover the face of a person, is to treat him as a criminal, see chap. ix. 24. but to bind the face seems rather the treatment of the dead.

Ver. 15. Behold now behemoth.—Literally, "the great beast." See the Exposition. It is used for cattle, Psalm i. 10. Is. lxviii. 22.—He eateth grass like an ox.—[It inhabits the rivers of Africa; feeds on grass and other vegetables; moves slowly and heavily; swims dexterously; sleeps in reedy places; has a tremendous voice, between the lowing of the ox, and roar of the elephant; and when irritated, will attack boats and men with fury.]—Bagster.

Ver. 17. He moveth his tail.—erecteth his tail.—The sinews, &c. of his haunches are braced together. Good.

Ver. 19. He that made him, &c.—Hath furnished him with his sword." Heath. So Scott (the poet) and Boothroyd, who apply this to the tusks of the elephant, as others do to those of the hippopotamus.

20 Surely the mountains bring him forth
' food, where all the beasts of the field play.

21 He lieth under the shady trees, in the covert of the reed, and fens.

22 The shady trees cover him with their shadow; the willows of the brook compass him about.

23 Behold, he <sup>k</sup> drinketh up a river, and hasteth not: he trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth.

24 He <sup>1</sup> taketh it with his eyes: his nose pierceth through snares.

CHAPTER XLI.

Of God's great power in the leviathan.

CANST thou draw out a leviathan <sup>b</sup> with a hook? or his tongue with a cord which thou <sup>c</sup> lettest down?

2 Canst thou put a hook <sup>d</sup> into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? will he speak soft words unto thee?

4 Will he make a covenant with thee? wilt thou take him for a servant for ever?

5 Wilt thou play with him as with a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?

6 Shall thy companions make a banquet of him? shall they part him among the merchants?

7 Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons?
or his head with fish spears?

8 Lay thy hand upon him, remember the ttle, do no more.

9 Behold, the hope of him is in vain: shall not one be cast down even at the sight of him?

10 None is so fierce that dare stir him up:
who then is able to stand before me?

lightish colour, thinly covered with hair. The legs are three feet long. Though amphibious, the hoofs, which are quadrified, are unconnected with membranes. The hide is so thick as to resist the edge of a sword or sabre.

"Although an inhabitant of the waters, the hippopotamus is well known to breathe air, like land animals. On land, indeed, he finds the chief part of his food. It has been pretended that he devours vast quantities of fish; but it appears, with the fullest evidence, both from the relations of many travellers, and from the structure of the stomach, in specimens that have been inspected, that he is nourished solely, or almost solely, on vegetable food; though occasionally on aquatic plants, yet he very often leaves the waters, and commits wide devastations through all the cultivated fields adjacent to the river."

CHAP. XLI. Ver. 1-34. The power of God displayed in the leviathan.—The object of this, as well as of the preceding chapter, is evidently to convince Job, that he is not able to contend with certain creatures of the Almighty; much less with their Creator. The preceding instance is taken from the class of graminivorous animals, who do not prey upon flesh, which is true both of the elephant and the river-horse; but this animal is more terrible, as being carnivorous, and preying upon man. On the behemoth the learned are much divided;

Ver. 20. The mountains bring him forth food.—Elephants graze upon the mountains; the hippopotamus on eminences (or islands) in the river, and on the higher grounds around. But perhaps the expression means only that the animal devours a vast quantity of food.

Ver. 23. Behold he drinketh up ("he oppresseth," or presseth into) a river —And "hasteth not" to withdraw. But the learned Bochart renders it, "Behold, the stream may press (assumit) him," and he will not flee. Elephants will pass any river, and often swim; but water is the favourite element of the river-horse, who will walk under water, on the bottom of the river, as in a field.—Draw up Jordan.—But did either of these creatures visit the Jordan? It is probable that they might at an early period, and especially before the formation of the Dead sea, when the river might run much farther, and in a wider stream. See Gen. xii. 10.

Ver. 24. He taketh it with his eyes.—"Will (any) take him in his sight?"
or, "bore (his) nose with a gin?" Bochart renders it, "Who can take him openly? or draw a cord through his nose?"

CHAP. XLI. Ver. 1. Canst thou draw out?—These questions strongly imply the impossibility of the thing mentioned.—Leviathan. (See note ver. 7.)

Ver. 3. Will he make many supplications? &c.—This language is strongly ironical.

Ver. 7. Canst thou fill his skin, &c.—[The Leviathan described here, has been solidly proved by Bochart, to denote the crocodile; and the description suits no other species of amphibious animals. It is a species of lizard with a two-edged tail, large oblong head, small, but vivacious eyes, short legs, and triangular feet, the fore ones having four, and the hinder ones five toes, armed with strong sharp claws. Its length is usually about 20 feet, and its circumference about five feet; it has, in proportion to its size, the largest mouth of all monsters; moves both its jaws equally, the upper of which is armed with not less than forty, and the under with thirty-eight sharp, strong, and massy teeth; its voice is a loud, hollow growling of the most terrific description; and is furnished with a coat of mail, so scaly and callous as to resist the force of a musket ball, in every part except under the belly; it is a natural inhabitant of the Nile, and other African and Asiatic rivers; is of enormous voracity and strength, as well as fleetness in swimming; attacks mankind and the largest animals with the most daring impetuosity; and when

A. M. 2484.

E. C. 1520.

J Ps. 104. 14.

k oppress-eth.l or, Will any take him in his sight, or,
bore his nose with a gin?
c. 41. 2.a i. e. a whale, or,
a whale-
pool.b Ps. 104. 26.
Is. 27. 1.

c drownest.

d Is. 37. 29.

e Ro. 11. 35.

f Ex. 19. 5.
De. 10. 14.
Ps. 24. 1.
50. 12.
1 Co. 10.
26. 28.

g or, within.

h strong pieces of shields.

i rejoiceth.

j falling.

11 Who <sup>a</sup> hath prevented me, that I should repay him? whatsoever is under the whole heaven is <sup>b</sup> mine.

12 I will not conceal his parts, nor his <sup>c</sup> power, nor his comely proportion.

13 Who can discover the face of his garment?
or who can come to him <sup>d</sup> with his double brid-
dle?

14 Who can open the doors of his face? his teeth are terrible round about.

15 His scales <sup>e</sup> are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal.

16 One is so near to another, that no air can come between them.

17 They are joined one to another, they stick together, that they cannot be sundered.

18 By his neesings a light doth shine, and his eyes are like the eyelids of the morning.

19 Out of his mouth go burning lamps, and sparks of fire leap out.

20 Out of his nostrils goeth smoke, as out of a seething pot or caldron.

21 His breath kindleth coals, and a flame
goeth out of his mouth.

22 In his neck remaineth strength, and sorrow <sup>f</sup> is turned into joy before him.

23 The <sup>g</sup> flakes of his flesh are joined together: they are firm in themselves; they cannot be moved.

24 His heart is as firm as a stone; yea, as hard as a piece of the nether millstone.

25 When he raiseth up himself, the mighty are afraid: by reason of breakings they purify themselves.

26 The sword of him that layeth at him can-but as to the leviathan, though our translators, and many others, formerly interpreted it of the whale, Bochart has so ably advocated the claims of the crocodile to this distinction, that few now dispute it. (See note, ver. 7.) Scott (the poet,)

Good, and Boethroyd, in particular, are of this opinion.

The description of this animal, affords a fine specimen of the terrific sublime. He is so fierce, that none dare to rouse him; (see note on chap. iii. 8.) and when roused, so terrible, that terror and dismay are poetically represented as dancing in the smoke and flame, that is, the burning breath—proceeding from his mouth; and when he swims, he excites the same emotion as a sailing vessel. "When a crocodile, fifty feet in length, (says Scott, the poet,) dives to the bottom (of the Nile), the violent agitation of the water is justly compared to liquor boiling in a caldron. The mud raised by that agitation, thickens the water, and gives it a consistency like that of ointment:
'He maketh the sea (i. e. the Nile) to boil like a pot of ointment.' When a crocodile, of the size above mentioned, is swimming upon or near the surface, he cuts the water like a ship, and makes it white with foam. At the same time his tail, like a rudder, causeth the waves behind him to froth and sparkle like a trail of light: 'He maketh a path to shine after him,' &c. And when he comes to land, such is the impene-taken by means of a powerful net, will often overturn the boats that surround it. Nothing that it once seizes can escape; and shaking its prey to pieces, it is swallowed without mastication.]—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Remember the battle.—Boethroyd, "The conflict."—Do no more —That is, proceed no farther.

Ver. 9. Shall not (one) be cast down (faint) at the sight of him?

Ver. 13. Who can discover the face of his garment?—Rather, "Uncover his mailed face?"—Schultens, Scott, &c. See ver. 15.—With his double bridle.

—That is, to harness him.

Ver. 15. His scales ("Strong pieces of shields") are his pride.—The back of the crocodile is covered with horny flakes, or scales, which no musket ball can pierce. (See note ver. 7.)

Ver. 18. By his neesings, &c.—By the neesing of the crocodile, we are to understand the violent emission of water through his nostrils. The eyes of the crocodile are not large nor sparkling; but they are the first thing seen of the animal when it rises above the water, on which account the Egyptians, in their hieroglyphical writing, designated the morning by a crocodile's eye.

Ver. 19. Burning lamps.—Boethroyd, "Fire-brands." By the same figure of speech the horse's neck is said to be "clothed with thunder," (ch. xxxix.
19.) the mouth of the crocodile when enraged is compared to a volcano, emitting flames and sparks.

Ver. 22. In his neck remaineth strength.—This refers to its rigidity; the crocodile not being able to turn its neck without its body. Strength is therefore personified as residing in his neck.—Sorrow is turned into joy.—Heo, "Sorrow rejoiceth" before him, or more literally, "danceth before his face."
The noun rendered "sorrow" seems properly to mean that weakness resulting from terror, and is translated by Dr. Stock, "swooning;" by Miss Smith, "fainting;" by Kate and Parkhurst, "languor;" but by Good and Scott, "destruction." This "sorrow," or, &c. is here also personified, and supposed "to dance" or leap before him.

Ver. 25. When he raiseth up himself.—From the water, either to seize a boat or overturn it—or to go on shore—the mighty, &c.—By reason of break-ings they purify themselves.—See Jonah 1. 5. But some think this refers to the terror inspired by his breaking all the weapons brought against him, as in the following verses.

not hold: the spear, the dart, nor the <sup>a</sup> har-bergeon.

27 He esteemeth iron as straw, and brass as rotten wood.

28 The arrow cannot make him flee: sling-stones are turned with him into stubble.

29 Darts are counted as stubble: he laugheth at the shaking of a spear.

30 Sharp <sup>1</sup> stones are under him: he spreadeth sharp pointed things upon the mire.

31 He maketh the deep to boil like a pot: he maketh the sea like a pot of ointment.

32 He maketh a path to shine after him; one would think the deep to be hoary.

33 Upon earth there is not his like, who <sup>m</sup> is made without fear.

34 He beholdeth all high things: he is a king over all the children of pride.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Job submitteth himself unto God. 7 God, preferring Job's cause, maketh his friends submit themselves, and accepteth him. 10 He magnifieth and blesteth Job. 16 Job's age and death.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said,
2 I know that thou <sup>a</sup> canst do every thing, and that no thought <sup>b</sup> can be withholden from thee.

3 Who <sup>c</sup> is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful <sup>d</sup> for me, which I knew not.

trability of his scales, that no weapon has been found to pierce them. He beholdeth with contempt the tallest and the largest animals; and seems to consider himself the sovereign of all the sons of pride and loftiness.

CHAP. XLII. Ver. 1—17. Job's submission, the Lord's acceptance of it, and the blessing of his latter days.—Job acknowledges the divine omnipotence, and at the same time his own weakness and unworthiness. In doing this he refers to the language in which the Almighty addressed him from the whirlwind. "Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?" and he confesses himself to be thus rash and criminal. "I uttered," says he, "that (which) I understood not." He then implores a hearing and divine instruction. "Hear, I beseech thee; I will ask of thee, and do thou instruct me." Here the end of Job's trials is accomplished: he is humbled and instructed. "I have (before) heard of thee (says he) by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee." But what did Job see? Doubtless, the established symbol of the divine presence; the pillar of a cloud which accompanied the whirlwind, and which had appeared to Adam—to Abel—to Noah—to Abraham and other of the patriarchs, as the symbol of the divine presence; and which was of that awful nature as to humble them.

"This complete submission of Job," says Scott, (the poet,) "may not improperly be called the catastrophe of the poem. It is not indeed a change of Job's outward condition. It is an alteration infinitely more important and beneficial; an alteration, I mean, in the temper and state of his mind. He is brought back to his duty, and his soul returns to its rest. The restoration of his temporal prosperity quickly followed, and is the subject of the ensuing narrative."

The most important circumstance here to be considered is the issue of the controversy in the justification of Job, and the censure of his friends.

Job's friends had represented his afflictions as a decided proof that he was a wicked man; and that, notwithstanding all his pretences, he had been an oppressor of the poor and the fatherless: this they grounded upon the mistaken principle that virtue and vice have their reward in the present life, and here only. This was not right; it was a fundamental error,

Ver. 28. The habergeon.—Margin, "Breast-plate." But Bochart explains it of a javelin; it must mean some offensive weapon.

Ver. 30. Sharp stones were under him.—See Margin. But Scott (the poet) explains it of the rugged rocks which in some parts form the bed of the Nile.

Ver. 31. He maketh the deep to boil.—By the deep, or sea, is here meant the Nile, which is so called, Isa. xxvii. 1. Ezek. xxxii. 2. and Michaelis says, it is so called in the Koran. (When a large crocodile dives to the bottom, the violent agitation of the water may justly be compared to liquor boiling in a caldron; and his body being strongly impregnated with the scent of musk, the water is affected by it to a considerable distance.)—Bagster.

CHAP. XLII. Ver. 2. No thought can be withholden from thee.—See Margin. Compare Gen. xi. 6.

Ver. 4. I will demand, &c.—This is improper language for Job, or indeed for any creature to use. Dr. Boothroyd, therefore, renders the expression more correctly, as well as more respectfully, I will ask of thee, and do thou instruct me.

Ver. 6. Wherefore I abhor myself.—That is, "I reprobate—despise—nauseate—and start back with horror from my own character, and conduct towards God." See Jer. vi. 30. Lev. xxvi. 15. Job vii. 5.

Ver. 7. After the Lord (i. e. Jehovah) had spoken.—It is worthy of remark,

A. M. 2934.
B. C. 1330.

k or, breast-plate.
l pieces of potsherd.
m or, behave themselves with fear.
n Ge. 13. 14.
Is 43. 13.
Mat. 19. 28.
b or, of
c 33. 2, 3.
d Ps. 131. 1.
138. 6.

e c. 40. 7.
f Ezr. 9. 6.
c. 40. 3.
Ps. 51. 17.
Je. 31. 19.
Ja. 4. 10.
g Da. 9. 3.
Mat. 11. 21.
h Ps. 51. 4.
i Nu. 23. 1.
j Ja. 5. 16.
1 Jn. 5. 14.
k his face.
l or, person
Isa. 25. 35.
Mat. 1. 8.
1 Pt. 3. 11, 12.
m the face of Job.
n Ge. 20. 17.
Ps. 14. 7.
126. 1.
o added all that had been to Job unto the double.
p c. 19. 13.

4 Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me,

5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee.

6 Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

7 ¶ And it was so, that after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

8 Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering; and my servant Job shall pray for you: for him will I accept: lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 ¶ So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted Job.

10 And the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before.

11 Then there came unto him all his breboth in fact and doctrine, because it superseded the necessity of a future state.

On the contrary, Job had contended that virtue and vice were very imperfectly and uncertainly rewarded in the present state, which left room for a future judgment, with consequent rewards and punishments, of which he gives repeated intimations, and once, at least, openly avows. As to all his rash censures of providence towards him, they are retracted, lamented, and forgiven, through that atonement, which he doubtless offered for himself as well as for his friends; and which we may reasonably believe, as well as those of Abel, Noah, and Abraham, had reference to the sacrifice of the great Messiah.

As to his friends, the most effectual way to reconcile them to Job, and Job to them, was to appoint him their priest and intercessor. "He shall pray for you." God chooses to bestow his blessings in answer to prayer, and by means of a mediator. They were pardoned through Job's intercession—Israel were blessed for Abraham's sake; but our blessings come to us through the mediation of a greater than either Job or Abraham. We have here also an instance of the importance and necessity of prayer. God is determined to forgive and to bless; but it shall be through his own appointed means: so also the decree was gone forth for Job's return to prosperity: but it must be "when he prayed for his friends." In praying for others we bring down blessings upon ourselves. Prayer accomplishes the divine decrees, but does not change them.

It is very remarkable that the sacred name JEHOVAH, which occurs but once in the poetic dialogue, and is then put into the mouth of Job, is used repeatedly, both in the introduction and conclusion, and in other parts of the narrative. This circumstance, in our judgment, inclines very strongly in favour of Moses having composed the book from Arabian materials; but if so, we are still disposed to assign it to his latter years.

But to return to Job; when in distress, he complained that his brethren were "put far from him," and his "acquaintance were estranged;" a very usual circumstance when persons fall into poverty and distress; but a return of prosperity soon brings them back, and such was the case with Job. His character was now vindicated and his circumstances enriched.

that though this sacred name is frequently used in the narrative parts attached to this poem; i. e. the two first and last chapters; also ch. xxxvii. 1. and xl. 1, 3, 6; it is used but once only in the dialogue or poetical part, and then it is put into the mouth of Job, (chap. xii. 9.) but seems unknown to either of his three friends.—After the Lord had spoken.—Not immediately, perhaps, shortly after.

Ver. 8. Seven bullocks and seven rams.—(From this it appears that Job was considered as a priest not only to his own family, but also to others. For his children he offered burnt-offerings, (ch. i. 5.) and now he is to make the same kind of offerings, accompanied with intercession, in behalf of his three friends. This is a full proof of the innocence and integrity of Job.)—Bagster. The number seven was early held sacred among the Hebrews, perhaps from the sanctification of the seventh day: and it is very remarkable, that when Balaam, called upon Balak to furnish victims to sacrifice, it was, in every instance, "seven oxen (or bullocks) and seven rams."

Ver. 10. Turned the captivity.—This seems (Scott remarks) to have been a proverbial phrase for a happy change of circumstances; as we speak of the tide turning in our favour.—Gave Job twice as much.—Hebrew, Added all that had been to Job to the double." We need not, however, interpret this rigidly: the whole is expressed in round numbers, as is frequent, both in the Scriptures and in secular historians.

children, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold.

12 So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.

It has been queried how long Job's trial lasted, and a twelvemonth has been named by the rabbins; but we know of no higher authority for this. His troubles probably did not all come upon him at once. His friends from different and distant parts would be a considerable time in collecting. The speeches would be some time in delivery; for it is not likely that they followed each other so rapidly as in our modern assemblies. The Asiatics are very grave and deliberate in their proceedings; so that a shorter period is hardly probable, and it might be much longer. The period which he survived Ver 11. Gave him a piece of money.—See Gen. xxxiii. 19, and compare Acts vii. 16. Some think the word Kesita means "a lamb;" but from the text just referred to, it must have been a coin, probably bearing the image of a lamb, and a coin of some value, as coupled with a jewel of gold.

Ver. 14. Jemima, the day; Kezia, the perfume cassia; Keren-happuch, according to the LXX. means "the horn of plenty," a well known emblem;

A. M. 2494.
B. C. 1520.
Q. Re. 16.
c. 8. 7.
Je. 5. 11.

c. 1. 3.

c. 5. 25.

13 ¶ He had also seven sons and three daughters.

14 And he called the name of the first, Jemima; and the name of the second, Kezia; and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.

15 And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren.

16 ¶ After this lived Job a hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his sons' sons, even four generations.

17 So Job died, being old and full of days.

his troubles was a hundred and forty years, during which he saw (as well he might) four generations of his descendants; but as we know not Job's age at the commencement of his misfortunes, we cannot calculate the whole period of his life with any certainty. We know, however, that he had children grown up to maturity, and it is generally supposed, from an apology of Elihu, (ch. xxxii. 4.) that Job must have been three or fourscore years of age before his troubles, and, consequently, considerably above two hundred at his death. This justly entitled him to rank among the patriarchs before Abraham.

but, according to others, Stribum, with which it was customary to paint their eyebrows.

Ver. 16. After this lived Job.—[How long he had lived before his afflictions we cannot tell. If we could rely upon the LXX. all would be plain, which adds here, "And all the years he lived were two hundred and forty."]—Bagster.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOB.

[In the Septuagint and Arabic there is a considerable addition at the end of this book. The following is verbatim from the Codex Alexandrinus: "And ne (Job) dwelt in the land of Ausitis, in the confines of Idumæa and Arabia; and his former name was Jobab. And he took to wife Arabissa, and begat a son whose name was Ennon. And his father's name was Zarith, one of the sons of Esau; and his mother's name was Bosora; and thus he was the fifth from Abraham. And these are the kings who reigned in Edom; which region he also governed: the first was Balak, the son of Beor, the name of whose city was Dennaba. And after Balak reigned Jobab, who is called Job. And after him Assom, the governor of the country of the Temanites. After him Adad, the son of Basad, who cut off Madian in the plain of Moab; and the name of his city was Gethaim. The friends who came to visit him were Eliphaz, son of Sophan, of the children of Esau, king of the Temanites; Bildad, the son of Amnon, of Chobab, tyrant of the Sauchites; Sophar, king of the Minaites; Thaïman, son of Eliphaz, governor of the Idumæans. This is translated from the Syriac copy. He dwelt in the land of Ausitis, on the borders of the Euphrates; and his former name was Jobab; and his father was Zarith, who came from the East." The Arabic is not so circumstantial, though the same in substance. And Job dwelt in the land of Ar, between the boundaries of Edom and Arabia; and he was at first called Jobab. And he married a strange woman, and to her was born a son called Anun. But Job was the son of Zara, a descendant of the children of Esau: his mother's name was Basra; and he was the sixth from Abraham. Of the kings who reigned in Edom: the first who reigned over that land was Balak, the son of Beor; and the name of his city was Danaba. And after him, Jobab, the same who is called Job. And after Job, him who was prince of the land of Teman. And after him, the son of Barak, who he slew and put to flight Madian in the plains of Moab; and the name of his city was Jat'aim. And of the friends of Job who visited him, was Eliphaz, the son of Esau, king of the Temanites." Dr. Kennicott says, when Job lived seems deducible from his being contemporary with Eliphaz, the Temanite, thus:

ABRAHAM.

	ISAAC.
1	2	1
2	3	2
3	4	3
4	5	4
5	6	5

The history of Job, though greatly disguised, is well known among the Asiatics. He is called by Arabian and Persian historians Ayoub, which is merely a different pronunciation of the Hebrew Ejoub, which has been strangely metamorphosed by Europeans into Job. In the Tareekh Muntekeeb, his genealogy is given thus: "Ayoub the son of Anosh, the son of Razakh, the son of Ais, (Esau,) the son of Isaac. He was a prophet; and was afflicted by a grievous malady three years, or, according to others, seven years; at the end of which, when eighty years of age, he was restored to perfect health, and had a son called Bash ben Ayoub. Other writers say he had five sons, with whom he made war upon a brutal people called Dsul Kefel, whom he extirpated because they refused to receive the knowledge of the true God, whom he preached to them." Abul Faragius, who calls him Ayoub asadeek, Job the righteous, says that the trial of Job happened in the twenty-fifth year of Nahor, son of Sorug; thus making him prior to Abraham. Khondemir, who entitles him Job the patient, says he was descended by his father's side from Esau, and by his mother from Lot; and then proceeds to give his history, the same, upon the whole, as that contained in this book, though blended with fables. The facts are, however, the same, and we find that, with the oriental historians, the personality, temptation, and deliverance of Job, are matters of serious credibility. In fact, whatever uncertainty and variety of opinion may have existed respecting the country, parentage, and age of Job, the reality of his history has never been, and never can be, successfully questioned; and whoever was the author of this book, and in whatever time or language it may have been written, it has ever been received by both the Jewish and Christian churches, as perfectly authentic, and written by the inspiration of the Almighty. On the character of Job his own words are the best comment. Were we to believe his mistaken and uncharitable friends, he, by assertion and insinuation, was guilty of almost every species of crime; but every charge of this kind is rebutted by his own defence; and the character given him by the God whom he worshipped, frees him from even the suspicion of guilt. His patience, resignation, and submission to the Divine will, are the most prominent parts of his character presented to our view. He bore the loss of every thing which a worldly man values, without one unsanctified feeling, or murmuring word; and it is in this respect that he is recommended to our notice and imitation. His wallings relative to the mental agonies through which he passed, do not at all affect his part of his character. The greatest and most important purposes were accomplished by his trial. He became a much better man than he ever was before; the dispensations of God's providence were illustrated and justified; Satan's devices unmasked; patience crowned and rewarded; and the church of God greatly enriched by having bequeathed to the vast treasury of Divine truth which is found in the Book of Job—a book containing the purest morality, the sublimest philosophy, the simplest ritual, and the most majestic creed.]—Bagster.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

[THIS Book is termed in Hebrew, sepher tehillim, that is, "the Book of Hymns," or Præses, because the praises of God constitute their chief subject matter; and as they were set not only to be sung by the voice, but to be accompanied with musical instruments, they are designated in the Alexandrian manuscript of the Septuagint Psalterion, the Psalter, from the psaltery, a musical instrument, and in the Vatican manuscript simply Psalmoi, the Psalms.]—Bagster.

The Psalms (says Bishop Horne) are an epitome of the Bible, adapted to the purposes of devotion. They treat occasionally of the creation and formation of the world; the dispensations of Providence; and the economy of grace; the transactions of the patriarchs; the exodus of the children of Israel; their journey through the wilderness and settlement in Canaan; their law, priesthood, and ritual; the exploits of their great men, wrought through faith; their sins and captivities; their repentances and restorations; the sufferings and victories of David; the peaceful and happy reign of Solomon; the advent of Messiah, with its effects and consequences; his incarnation, birth, life, passion, death, resurrection, ascension, kingdom, and priesthood; the effusion of the Spirit; the conversion of the nations; the rejection of the Jews; the eternal punishment, increase, and perpetuity of the Christian church; the end of the world; the general judgment; the condemnation of the wicked, and the final triumph of the righteous with the Lord their king. These are the subjects here presented to our meditations. We are instructed how to conceive of them aright, and to direct the different affections, which, when so conceived of, they must excite in our minds. They are, for this purpose, adorned with the figures and set off with all the graces of poetry; and poetry itself is designed, yet farther to be recommended by the charms of music thus consecrated to the service of God; that so delight may prepare the way for improvement, and pleasure become the handmaid of wisdom, while every turbulent passion is calmed by sacred melody, and the evil spirit is still dispossessed by the harp of the Son of David.

The divine authority of the book of Psalms has, we believe, never been controverted by those who admit the inspiration of any part of the Old Testament.

ment; nor can it be with any appearance of reason, since they are so often referred to by our Lord and his apostles as inspired: about half these have David's name prefixed, and others may probably have been written by him, Solomon, one that of Moses, and two others those of Heman and Ethan. David is described in the New Testament both as a patriarch and a prophet, (Acts ii. 29, 30,) and he was unquestionably an eminent type of the Messiah, as we shall have frequent occasion to observe as we proceed.

In the New Testament, the whole number of the Psalms are considered as one book, (Luke xxi. 42. Acts i. 20.) but the Jews divide it into five, as follows: Book I. Psalm i. to xli. II. Psalm xlii. to lxxii. III. Psalm lxxiii. to lxxxix. IV. Psalm xc. to cvi. V. Psalm cvii. to c. Each of these books closes with Amen, or Hallelujah; but the antiquity of this division is uncertain, as is also that of the titles of some of the Psalms, which we shall consider as they occur. All the Psalms are admitted to be poetical; and Harriell Horne remarks, they "present every possible variety of Hebrew poetry. They may all, indeed, be termed poems of the lyric kind; that is, adapted to music; but with great variety in the style of composition. Thus some are simply odes. Others, again, are ethic, or didactic, dealing in grave maxims of life, or the precepts of religion, in solemn, but, for the most part, simple strains." To this class we may refer the 119th, and the other alphabetical Psalms, which are so called, because the initial letters of each line or stanza followed the order of the alphabet. Nearly one seventh part of the Psalms are elegiac, or pathetic compositions on mournful subjects. Some are enigmatical, delivering the doctrines of religion in enigmata; sentences contrived to strike the imagination forcibly, and yet easy to be understood; while a few may be referred to the class of idyls, or short pastoral poems. But the greater part of the book, according to Bishop Horsley, is a sort of "dramatic ode, consisting of dialogues between certain persons sustaining certain characters."

All that is known respecting the authors, occasions, and date of the Psalms is contained in the following table, which is chiefly compiled from the valuable work of Townsend, compared with the arrangement of Calmet and others.

CHRONOLOGICAL ARRANGEMENT OF THE PSALMS.

NUMBER.	AUTHOR.	PROBABLE OCCASION.	CONNECTION.	DATE.
88.	Heman.	Affliction of Israel in Egypt.	Exod. ii. 23—25.	A. M. B C 2473 1531
90.	Moses.	Shortening of man's life.	Numb. xiv. 45.	2514 1490
11.	David.	Victory over Goliath.	1 Sam. xviii. 4.	2941 1063
59.	—	Advised to flee to the mountains.	— xix. 3.	2942 1062
56.	—	Saul's soldiers surrounding his house.	— 17.	—
34.	—	With the Philistines at Gath.	— xxi. 15.	—
142.	—	Leaving the city of Gath.	—	—
17.	—	In the cave of Adullam.	— xxii. 1.	—
52. 109. 35. 140.	—	Priests murdered by Doeg.	— 17—19.	—
64. 31.	—	Persecution by Doeg.	—	—
54.	—	Persecution by Saul.	— xxiii. 12.	2943 1061
57. 58.	—	Treachery of the Ziphites.	— 23.	—
63.	—	Refusal to kill Saul.	— xxiv. 22.	—
141.	—	In the wilderness of Engedi.	—	—
139.	—	Driven out of Judea.	— xxvii. 1.	2946 1058
68.	—	King of Israel.	2 Chron. xii. 40.	2956 1048
24. 132. 105. 96. 106.	—	First removal of the ark.	2 Sam. vi. 11.	2962 1042
2. 45. 22. 16. 118. 110.	—	Second removal of the ark.	1 Ch. xv. 4.—xvi. 43.	—
60. 108.	—	Nathan's prophetic address.	1 Chron. xvii. 27.	—
20. 21.	—	Conquest of Syria and Edom by Jobab.	— xviii. 13.	2964 1040
6. 51. 32. 38. 39.	—	War with the Ammonites and Syrians.	2 Sam. x. 19.	2968 1038
40. 41. 103.	—	Adultery with Bathsheba and murder of Uriah.	— xii. 15.	2970 1034
3.	—	Flight from Absalom.	— xv. 29.	2983 1021
49. 43. 55. 4. 5. 62.	—	The reproaches of Shimei.	— xvi. 14.	—
143. 144. 70. 71.	—	By the Jordan, having fled from Absalom.	— xvii. 29.	—
18.	—	Conclusion of his wars.	— xxii. 1—51.	2986 1018
30.	—	Dedication of Araunah's threshing floor.	1 Chron. xxi. 30.	2987 1017
91.	—	After his advice to Solomon.	— xxviii. 10.	2989 1015
145.	—	A review of his past life.	—	—
8. 12. 19. 23. 28. 29.	—	Occasions and dates unknown.	—	—
33. 61. 65. 69. 86. 95.	—	Coronation of Solomon.	1 Chron. xxix. 19.	2989 1015
101. 104. 120. 121.	—	Removal of the ark into the temple.	2 Chron. vii. 10.	3000 1004
122. 124. 131. 133.	—	Dedication of the temple.	—	—
72.	Solomon.	Assa's victory over Israel.	— xvi. 6.	3074 980
47. 97. 98. 99. 100.	Solomon.	The reign of Jehoshaphat.	— xx. 26.	3108 896
135. 136.	Asaph.	The blasphemous message of Rah-shakeh.	2 Kings xix. 13.	3294 710
79. 74. 83. 94.	Asaph & others.	Destruction of Sennacherib's army.	— 19.	—
137. 130. 80. 77. 37.	Asaph.	Burning of the temple at Jerusalem.	Jer. xxxix. 10.	3416 588
67. 49. 53. 50. 10. 13.	Asaph, Ethan, and others.	During the Babylonian captivity.	Dan. vii. 28.	3463 541
14. 15. 25. 26. 27. 36.	—	Near the close of the captivity.	— ix. 27.	3464 540
89. 92. 93. 123.	Daniel.	The decree of Cyrus for restoring the Jews.	Ezra i. 4.	3465 539
102.	Sons of Korah.	The return of the Jews from captivity.	— iii. 7.	—
126. 85.	—	Foundation of the second temple.	— 13.	3469 535
107. 87. 111. 112. 113.	—	Opposition of the Samaritans.	— iv. 24.	3470 534
114. 116. 117. 125.	Various.	Rebuilding of the temple.	— vi. 13.	3485 519
127. 128. 134.	Sons of Korah.	Dedication of the second temple.	Zech. viii. 23.	3489 515
84. 66.	Ezra or Nehem.	Manual of devotion.	Neh. xiii. 3.	3560 444
129.	Haggai or Zec.	—	—	—
138.	—	—	—	—
48. 81. 146. 147. 148.	Various.	—	—	—
149. 150.	—	—	—	—
1. 119.	Ezra.	—	—	—

As the dates of the Psalms, so far as known, are given in the above table, the chronological heading in the centre column will be omitted. A chronological date will be found in the centre column only at the commencement of the books of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Solomon's Song. These dates are generally received as the period when they were severally collected or written.

PSALM I.

1 The happiness of the godly. 4 The unhappiness of the ungodly.

BLESSED is the man that walketh not <sup>a</sup> in the counsel of the <sup>b</sup> ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth <sup>c</sup> in the seat of the scornful.

PSALM I. Ver. 1—6. Introductory Psalm.—The blessedness of the righteous, and misery of the wicked.—The author of this psalm is unknown; but many have ascribed it to Ezra, on the presumption that on his collecting these sacred poems into a volume, he might prefix this didactic (or preceptive) psalm, as a proper introduction to the whole. It does not follow, however, that it must have been his own composition, and we know nothing of Ezra as a poet.

This psalm contains a contrasted view of the character of the righteous and the wicked, with the blessings which attend the former, and the miseries which await the latter. The blessedness of the good man ariseth, not from riches, nor pleasures, nor gay companions, nor great connexions; but, on the contrary, from a total separation from sin and sinners. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly." Ahaziah, we are told, "walked in the way of Ahab; for his mother (Athaliah) was his counsellor to do wickedly;" which led, as wickedness always does, "to his destruction." (2 Chron. xxii. 2—4.) Those who walk in the counsels of such men, will be found often "standing," or stopping, in their way, and sometimes seating themselves in the chair of the scornful; those who make a scoff and ridicule of all religion.—Here is intimated a gradation in vice. "The way of iniquity,"

a Pr. 4. 14, 15.
b or walked
c Job 23. 12.

e Ps. 119. 97.
f Je. 17. 8.
g fade.

2 But his delight <sup>d</sup> is in the law of the LORD; and in his law <sup>e</sup> doth he meditate day and night.

3 And he shall be like a tree <sup>f</sup> planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not <sup>g</sup> wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

says Henry, "is down hill; the bad grow worse, and sinners themselves become tempters to others, and advocates for Baal."

But the blessed man "delights in the law and in the word of God," and spends those hours in reading and meditation, which others spend in sinful pursuits abroad, or revellings at home. The good man makes the lively oracles of God his companion, and will (as Bishop Horne observes) "have recourse to them for direction in the bright and cheerful hours of prosperity;" and for "comfort in the dark and dreary seasons of adversity." The enemy, when advancing to the assault, will always find him well employed, and will be received with—"Get thee behind me, Satan;" as he was repulsed by our divine Redeemer.

Such a one is compared to "a tree planted by the rivers;" He is planted by the "river of the water of life;" and as this nourishes his root, his leaves of profession are ever green, and his fruits of righteousness abundant. (Jer. xvii. 11.) But "the ungodly are not so." Like chaff winnowed in the open air, as in the eastern countries is the custom to this day, his hopes and expectations shall all be scattered. Neither his character nor his actions will stand the trial of affliction, or of death; much less shall he "stand in the judgment, or be numbered in PSALM I. Ver. 1. Blessed.—The Hebrew word is a noun plural, "Blessings" on the man!

Ver. 2. The law—is here not to be taken for the ten commandments only, but for the whole revealed will of God.

Ver. 3. Wither.—More literally, "fall." This may be rendered impersonal by; "Its leaf shall not wither, and whatsoever it doeth (or produceth) shall prosper." A tree is said to make fruit when it beareth it." Jer. xvii. 8.—Annworth.

4 The ungodly are not so: but are like the chaff <sup>h</sup> which the wind driveth away.

5 Therefore the ungodly shall not stand <sup>i</sup> in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

6 For the LORD knoweth <sup>j</sup> the way of the righteous: but the way <sup>k</sup> of the ungodly shall perish.

PSALM II.

1 The kingdom of Christ. 10 Kings are exhorted to accept it.

WHY <sup>a</sup> do the heathen <sup>b</sup> rage, and the people <sup>d</sup> imagine a vain thing?

2 The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his <sup>e</sup> anointed, saying,

3 Let <sup>f</sup> us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.

4 He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the LORD shall have them in <sup>g</sup> derision.

5 Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and <sup>h</sup> vex them in his sore displeasure.

6 Yet have I <sup>i</sup> set my king <sup>j</sup> upon <sup>k</sup> my holy hill of Zion.

7 I will declare <sup>l</sup> the decree: the LORD hath h Mat. 3. 12.

i Mat. 25. 41.
46.
j Job. 23. 10.
k Pr. 15. 9.
a Ac. 4. 25.
26.
b or, tumultuously assemble.
c Ps. 46. 6.
d meditate.
e Ps. 45. 7.
f Lu. 19. 14.
g Pr. 1. 26.
h or, trouble.
i anointed.
j Ac. 5. 31.
k Zion the hill of my holiness.
l or, for a.

m Mat. 3. 17.
17. 3.
n Re. 2. 27.
o He. 12. 28.
p Je. 5. 23.
q Ps. 84. 12.
a Ps. 84. 15.
18.
b Ps. 71. 11.

said unto me, Thou <sup>m</sup> art my son; this day have I begotten thee.

8 Ask of me, and I shall give <sup>n</sup> thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

9 Thou shalt break them with a <sup>o</sup> rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

11 Serve the LORD with <sup>p</sup> fear, and rejoice with trembling.

12 Kiss <sup>q</sup> the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed <sup>r</sup> are all they that put their trust in him.

PSALM III.

The security of God's protection.

A Psalm of David, when he fled <sup>a</sup> from Absalom his son.

LORD, how are they increased that trouble me? many are they that rise up against me.

2 Many there be which say of my soul, There <sup>b</sup> is no help for him in God. Selah.

the congregation of the righteous." "For the Lord knoweth them that are his;" (2 Tim. ii. 19.) his eye is upon the way of the righteous, both to guide them and guard them: and they are blessed, while sinners perish.

PSALM II. Ver. 1—12. The kingdom of Messiah. A Psalm of David.—The kings of the earth (or of the land) are explained (Acts iv. 26, 27.) to be the Jewish and Roman governors, "Herod and Pontius Pilate," who "set themselves" against Messiah; particularly the former, who, as if purposely to fulfil this prediction, "with his men of war set him at nought, mocked him," and having arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, sent him again to Pilate; "and the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together." (Luke xxiii. 11.) "Thus they set themselves in array against him."

There is something peculiar in the manner in which the Psalmist represents the Lord JEHOVAH, as sitting upon the throne of the universe, and looking down with the most sovereign contempt upon all human opposition. Ridicule can only be ascribed to Deity in the same manner as grief and repentance are in other places; God is not affected by human passions; but his actions are explained in analogy with ours. Fools that scoff at God, and make "a mock at sin," are given to know that they will reap the fruit of their own folly; and He whom they now deride, will then "have them in derision." (See Gen. iii. 20—24, and exposition.)

But to apply to the great subject of this psalm: "The views which it gives of the Messiah (says Dr. P. Smith) are, that he should be, in a peculiar sense, the Son of God; that he should be entitled to the homage of the world; that, pursuant to the appointment of the Almighty Father, he should support his own throne by the righteous exercise of authority and power; and that the only way of safety and happiness would lie in submission to him, and confidence in him."

The august title, "Son of God," is here announced by a divine decree; which certainly, in its peculiarity, raises the Messiah above men and angels. "For unto, which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" (Heb. i. 5.) But to him it is applied, 1. As the essential word and wisdom of God; he was "set up from everlasting" upon the throne of the divine glory: "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever;" (Heb. i. 3—9.) and to this Milton alludes.

"Hear, all ye angels, progeny of light,
Thrones, dominations, principedoms, virtues, powers,
Hear my decree, which unrevok'd shall stand.
This day I have begot whom I declare
My only Son, and on this holy hill
Him have anointed, whom ye now behold
At my right hand; your head I him appoint;
And by myself have sworn, to him shall bow
All knees in heaven, and confess him Lord."
(Paradise Lost, bk. v. l. 600.)

Ver. 5. In the judgment.—The judgment here intended, is evidently the last judgment; the congregation of the righteous, is their assembly at the judgment-seat of Christ.—Bishop Horne.

Ver. 6. The Lord knoweth.—That is, approveth and acknowledgeth. See Ps. xxi.

PSALM II. David's name is not prefixed to this psalm in our bibles; it is so in the Septuagint translation, and the whole assembly of the apostles attribute it to his pen, and apply it to his illustrious Son and Lord, as the anointed King of Israel, of whom David was a type only. (Acts iv. 25, &c. xiii. 33.) The Targum also refers (it) to the Messiah. So do the Bereshith Rabba, the book Jalkuth, (Zohar) and others of the Talmudical writings. So Solomon Jarchi confesses in these words, "Our masters have expounded (this psalm) of the King Messiah; but, according to the letter; and for furnishing answers to the Minim, (heretics, i. e. the Christians.) it is better to interpret it of David himself." (Dr. Smith's Scripture Testimony to the Messiah.)

Ver. 1. Why do the heathen.—Hebrew, "the nations." The Jews called all nations beside their own heathen: we restrain it to pagan or idolatrous nations.

Ver. 3. Bands . . . cords.—This implies rebellion, or renouncing all allegiance

This decree was repeated and confirmed at his incarnation; for "when he bringeth the first-begotten into the world, he saith, Let all the angels of God worship him." (Heb. i. 6.) And accordingly, "a multitude of the heavenly host attended, and praised God." (Luke ii. 13.) And again, when raised from the dead, he was "declared to be the Son of God with power, (i. e. most forcibly) by his resurrection from the dead." (Rom. i. 4.)

This may with great propriety be called a Missionary Psalm, since it relates especially to the conversion of the heathen. In verses 7 and 8, the Son of God himself is personally introduced, as announcing the decree by which he was declared to be "the Son of God," and the "Heir of all things." (Heb. i. 2.) And he is particularly encouraged to "ask" of his heavenly Father "the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession." In this petition it is certainly the duty of Christians to unite with their Redeemer, and the more so, as we already see the dawn of its accomplishment; for now "verily" hath "the sound" of salvation gone forth "into all the earth," and "the words" of the gospel "unto the ends of the world."

The Psalmist concludes with advising all nations with their chiefs and princes, to do homage to the Son of God; and as this homage was generally rendered by kissing the hand; so they are required to kiss the Son, which implied not only submission, but adoration.

PSALM III. Ver. 1—8. A Psalm of David, for the morning.—This psalm is said to have been composed by David, when he fled from his son Absalom. "Thus circumstanced (says Bishop Horne,) he expresses himself in terms well adapted to the parallel case of the Son of David, persecuted by rebellious Israel; as also to that of his church, suffering tribulation in the world." The Psalmist "complains, in much anguish, of the multitude of his enemies, and of the reproaches cast upon him, as one forsaken by God;" but declaring, notwithstanding, his sure trust in the divine promises, he derides the impotent malice of his enemies, and ascribes his anticipated salvation to JEHOVAH. Thus is the same scripture made "profitable" to a variety of useful purposes. (2 Tim. iii. 16.) If we look back to the original occasion of the psalm, we cannot but grieve to hear the venerable monarch say of his own rebellious son, "Arise and flee, for we shall not else escape from Absalom; make speed to depart, lest he overtake us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword." (2 Sam. xv. 14.) If we look forward to David's Son and successor, we may mark the period when Jew and Gentile conspired against him, as stated in the preceding psalm. If we look within we shall always find enemies ready to rise up against us: we may, however, here also encourage ourselves, as both David and Messiah

Ver. 4. The Lord.—Adonai, not JEHOVAH, as in ver. 2. As we shall frequently meet with both these names in this book, we may here observe, that when the word "Lord" occurs in small letters, it is the former in the original, but the latter when in capitals: here, however, all the printed bibles in Hebrew we have consulted, read Adonai, "Lord;" yet most copies of our authorized version we have seen, print the word in capitals, as if it were JEHOVAH, which Dr. Boothroyd says, is the reading of many Hebrew MSS. and he thinks the true one.

Ver. 5. Vex.—Margin, "trouble;" "rebuke."—Dr. J. P. Smith. "Co-found."—Dr. Chandler.

Ver. 7. I will declare the decree.—Messiah is here introduced as speaking, in his own person.

Ver. 9. A rod of iron.—"A sceptre of iron." See note on Ge. xlix. 10.

Ver. 12. Perish from the way.—"Or" by the way; "or" on the road." Dr. J. P. Smith. "Or," and ye lose the way," or, "and ye perish in the way." The LXX. and Vulgate have, "and ye perish from the righteous way;" and the Syriac, "and ye perish from his way."—Baxter.—Kiss—Was used not only as an act of submission, but also of idolatry. 1 Kings xix. 18. Hosea xii. 2.

PSALM III. Ver. 2, 4, 8. Selah.—No less than twelve different senses have 3 But thou, O LORD, art a shield <sup>c</sup> for me; my glory, and the lifter up of my head.

4 I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 I laid me down and <sup>d</sup> slept; I awaked; for the LORD sustained me.

6 I <sup>e</sup> will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about.

7 Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God: for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

8 Salvation <sup>f</sup> belongeth unto the LORD: thy blessing <sup>g</sup> is upon thy people. Selah.

PSALM IV.

1 David prayeth for audience. 2 He reproveth and exhorteth his enemies. 6 Man's happiness is in God's favour.

To the <sup>a</sup> chief Musician upon Neginoth, A Psalm of David.

HEAR me when I call, O God of my righteousness: thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress; <sup>b</sup> have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer.

2 O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? Selah.

did, in the consideration that "salvation belongeth unto God," and he is "a shield unto all them that trust in him." Under these considerations, we may at night "lie down in peace," and in confidence of divine protection; and in the morning, arise and praise our great Deliverer.

"My God sustain'd me all the night;
Salvation doth to God belong;
He raised my head to see the light,
And make his praise my morning song."—Watts.

PSALM IV. Ver. 1—8. A Psalm of David, for the evening.—This, like many other psalms, is in the title directed to "the chief musician on Neginoth," or, "the overseer of the performers on stringed instruments," including the harp, psaltery, and other instruments played with the hand: so the following psalm is dedicated "to the chief musician on Nehiloth, or "to the overseer of the performers on wind instruments." The trumpets were performed on by the priests only; but these two classes of instruments, as already intimated, were properly used to accompany two choirs of singers, which performed alternately, and when they united in general chorus, the trumpets, horns, and cymbals, were probably joined with them. This was an evening psalm, and probably used at the time of the evening sacrifice. It is, however, equally adapted to the use of Christians as of Jews. It is the language of one who, having received mercy in former time, now applies to the same source for assistance and deliverance. But the psalm is not all devotional; part of it is addressed to persons of a different character: "How long will ye turn my glory into shame?" that is, how long will you despise and ridicule my trust in Jehovah, which is my glory? and at the same time delight in vanity and falsehood; or, as those words mean in the lips of a pious Israelite, "How long will you put your trust in idols, which are but lying vanities." (Acts xiv. 15.)

Such are exhorted to stand in awe—to reflect—to meditate by night upon their beds, and submit to the divine decree, as having reference to his establishment on the throne, from which he was probably now driven; for Lightfoot, Calmet, and others, think this psalm, as well as the preceding, was written during Absalom's rebellion. Both, however, may have a farther reference to the Messiah himself, as King in Sion, and ver. 4. may be parallel with Ps. ii. 11. "Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling."

The concluding verses of the psalm forcibly represent the writer's faith and confidence in God, in contradistinction from been given to this word; but elevation seems the radical idea, from which many have inferred that it signified an extraordinary elevation of the voice; but as this word generally occurs at the end of a verse, such an elevation seems most unnatural. We are not apt to speak confidently; but in this case we have no doubt, that the elevation was not that of the voice, but of the hand; a common and very natural sign, made by the leader of a choir, when the performers are to hold a note beyond its proper duration, or make a solemn pause, or division in the performance.

Ver. 3. A shield for me.—The shields of the ancients were sometimes so large that a man might be carried on them.

Ver. 6. I will not be afraid.—The Lord had helped David, and disabled his enemies, when persecuted by Saul and his ungodly adherents; and he was confident that he would thus appear for him in his present distress, for salvation, temporal and spiritual, came from God alone; and he never failed to bless his faithful people.—T. Scott.

Ver. 7. On the cheek bone.—David's ungodly and profane enemies are here compared to ravenous beasts, who, being smitten upon the cheek bone, are obliged to give up their prey.

PSALM IV. Title.—To the chief.—[Nasan, to strike, or play on a musical instrument, seems to be a general name for stringed instruments, played on by striking. This and the following psalm seem to have been composed on the same occasion as the preceding.]—Bagster. The original word (me-o or, about.

d Ps. 127.2.

e Ps. 27.1, &c.

f Is. 43. 11.

g Ps. 115.13.

a or, overseer. Hab. 3.19.

b or, be gracious unto.

c De. 33.19.

d Ps. 3.5.

3 But know that the LORD hath set apart him that is godly for himself: the LORD will hear when I call unto him.

4 Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. Selah.

5 Offer the sacrifices <sup>c</sup> of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD.

6 There be many that say, Who will show us any good? LORD, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us.

7 Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased.

8 I will <sup>d</sup> both lay me down in peace, and sleep: for thou, LORD, only makest me dwell in safety.

PSALM V.

1 David prayeth, and professeth his study in prayer. 4 God favoureth not the wicked. 7 David, professing his faith, prayeth unto God to guide him, 10 to destroy his enemies, 11 and to preserve the godly.

To the chief Musician upon Nehiloth, A Psalm of David.

GIVE ear to my words, O LORD, consider my meditation.

2 Harken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

those who seek their happiness in worldly objects. There be many that say, "Who will show us any good?"—many who inquire after honours, riches, and earthly pleasures;—but what are these to us? "Lord! lift thou up on us the light of thy countenance!" This shall kindle a light amidst the darkest adversity; this shall create a joy beyond that of the harvest or the vintage. (Isa. ix. 3.) With such anticipations, the good man may lay down to sleep with composure, and rest in the assurance of perfect safety.

"Thus with my thoughts, composed to peace,
I lay me down to sleep:
Thy hand in safety keeps my days,
And will my slumbers keep."—Watts.

PSALM V. Ver. 1—12. A Psalm of David, at morning prayer.—This psalm (as already mentioned) is addressed to "the chief musician," or Levite who superintended Nehiloth, or "the wind instruments." Musicians know that it requires a high state of improvement in wind instruments, (by means of keys, &c.) to make them perform in tune with stringed instruments, which, being played with the hand, may be tuned more perfectly. Hence the bands of stringed and wind instruments are generally employed separately and alternately, even to our own time.

Bishop Horsley applies this psalm personally to Christ, in his priestly office, for which we see no sufficient grounds. We should rather consider it as the language of the psalmist, attending the early devotions of the temple, preparing his heart to seek God, looking upward towards his holy residence in heaven, and waiting like an anxious petitioner for his answer.

The psalmist then, considering his own situation as placed among wicked men, waiting for his halting, (as the prophet Jeremiah expresses it, chap. xx. 10.) prays to be directed in the straight path of duty, that his enemies may gain no advantage over him.

Bishop Horne remarks, that St. Paul (Rom. iii. 13.) has cited a part of verse 9, "together with other passages from the Psalms and Prophets, to evince the depravity of mankind, whether Jews or Gentiles, till justified by faith, and renewed by grace. It is plain, therefore, that the description was designed for others, besides the enemies of the literal David; and is of more general import, reaching to the world of the ungodly, and to the enemies of all righteousness, as manifested in the person of the Messiah and his church. The charge natseach) signifies one that ureth the continuance of any thing unto the end. 2 Chron. xxii. 18. and xxxiv. 12, 13.

There were Levites appointed to several duties; and some (lenatseach) to set forward, and be over the rest, 1 Chron. xv. 21. and there were such as excelled in the art of singing and playing upon instruments. . . . Some Levites had no other charge, and the critics have been much puzzled to account for; but if the leader were always placed as with us, at the end of the row of musicians which he superintended, it will be easily accounted for.

Ver. 1. My righteousness.—By this expression the Psalmist acknowledged God to be in all respects the Author and Source of his righteousness, as accepted and sanctified; and he appealed to him to do justice between him and his unrighteous adversaries.—T. Scott.

Ver. 2. My glory.—David might have considered his throne as a special honour to him, seeing he was called to it by the immediate choice of God, and as a type of the Messiah; but the Lord himself, and his relation to him, were indeed "his glory."—Scott.—Lensing.—Horsley, "falsehood." But the Greek translation, "Be angry and sin not;" and so it is quoted by St. Paul, Ep. iv. 6.

Ver. 7. More than in the time.—"Beyond," or, "superior to."—Bishop Louth.

Ver. 8. I will both, &c.—"I will at once."—Louth.

3 My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

4 For <sup>a</sup> thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee.

5 The foolish shall not stand <sup>b</sup> in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6 Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: the LORD will abhor the <sup>c</sup> bloody and deceitful man.

7 But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship toward <sup>d</sup> thy holy temple.

8 Lead me, O LORD, in thy righteousness because of <sup>e</sup> mine enemies; make thy way straight before my face.

9 For there is no <sup>f</sup> faithfulness in <sup>g</sup> their mouth; their inward part is <sup>h</sup> very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

10 <sup>i</sup> Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall; by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee.

11 But <sup>k</sup> let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou <sup>l</sup> defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee.

12 For thou, LORD, wilt bless the righteous; with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield.

PSALM VI.

1 David's complaint in his sickness. 8 By faith he triumpheth over his enemies.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth upon <sup>a</sup> <sup>b</sup> Sheminith, A Psalm of David.

a Hab. 1.13.
b before
c man of blood and deceit.
d the temple of thy holiness.
e those which observe me.
f Ps. 27.11.
g for, steal-faithless.
h his, is, in the mouth of any of them.
i wicked-natures.
j or, make them guilty.
k or, from their counsels.
l Is. 65.13, 16.
m covered over, or, protect.
n or, the eighth.
o Ch. 15.21.
p Ps. 12 title.

c Je. 10.24.
d Ps. 2.5.
e Ps. 51.8.
f Ep. 2.7, 8.
g Is. 83.18.
h Ps. 83.11.
i or, every.
j Job 7.3.
k Ps. 119.138, 139.
l Ps. 145.18.
a Hab. 3.1.
b or, business.
c 2 Sa. 16.
d or, a deliverer.

O LORD, rebuke me not in thine <sup>a</sup> anger, neither chasten me in thy hot <sup>b</sup> displeasure.

2 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; for I am weak: O LORD, heal me; for my bones <sup>c</sup> are vexed.

3 My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, how long?

4 Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: oh save me for thy mercies' <sup>d</sup> sake.

5 For <sup>e</sup> in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave <sup>f</sup> who shall give thee thanks?

6 I am weary with my <sup>g</sup> groaning; all the night <sup>h</sup> make I my bed to swim; I water my couch with my tears.

7 Mine eye is consumed because of grief; it waxeth old because of all mine enemies.

8 Depart <sup>i</sup> from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for the LORD hath <sup>j</sup> heard the voice of my weeping.

9 The LORD hath heard my supplication; the LORD will receive my prayer.

10 Let all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed: let them return and be ashamed suddenly.

PSALM VII.

1 David prayeth against the malice of his enemies, professing his innocence. 10 By faith he sees his defence, and the destruction of his enemies.

Shiggaion <sup>a</sup> of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the <sup>b</sup> words of <sup>c</sup> Cush the Benjamite.

O LORD, my God, in thee do I put my trust: save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me:

2 Lest he tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces, while there is <sup>d</sup> none to deliver.

brought against these is, that 'truth' and 'fidelity' were not to be found in their dealings with God or each other; that their 'inward parts' were very wickedness; their first thoughts and imaginations were defiled, and the stream was poisoned at the fountain; that their 'throat was an open sepulchre,' continually emitting, in obscene and impious language, the noisome and infectious exhalations of a putrid heart, entombed in a body of sin; and that, if ever they put on the appearance of goodness, they 'flattered with their tongue,' in order the more effectually to deceive and destroy."

In calling for judgment against his enemies, the psalmist must be considered as the Lord's anointed; those who rebelled against him, rebelled against the Lord himself. This is particularly true, if, with Bishops Horne and Horsley, we apply the psalm to the Messiah, whose impenitent enemies are excluded from the hope of mercy. (Ps. ii. 9, 12.) Those, however, who love and fear him, have every reason to hope in him—

"For thou, Jehovah, wilt be found To bless the just man still,
As with a shield thou wilt surround Him with thy lasting favour and good-will."—Milton.

PSALM VI. Ver. 1—10. A Psalm of David, in time of sickness and great affliction.—This psalm is addressed to the chief musician on Neginoth upon Sheminith—that is, probably, on stringed instruments (tuned) an octave above the usual pitch, as more plaintive, and therefore a more suitable accompaniment to a penitential psalm like this. Bishop Horsley remarks, "The supplicatory Psalms may be generally divided into two classes, according to the prayer; which, in some, regards the public, and in others the individual. In those of the PSALM V. Ver. 3. Will I direct.—Rather, arrange. Ainsworth, "orderly address thee;" the words "my prayer" being supplementary. Bishop Horsley thinks it refers to the orderly arrangement made by the priests previous to the morning sacrifice.—And wilt look up.—Ainsworth, "look out;" literally, "watch" for an answer to his prayer.

Ver. 4. Wickedness. . . evil.—Ainsworth remarks, that these words may be understood of wicked and evil persons, who ought not impudently to rush into the divine presence; and who will not be admitted into the courts above.

Ver. 5. The foolish, in Scripture, seldom or never means persons deficient in capacity. The word here used is rendered by Ainsworth, "vain-glorious fools;" i. e. sinners who glory in their sins.

Ver. 7. Toward thy holy temple.—(See Margin.) See 1 Kings viii. 38, 44, 48. Before the erection of Solomon's temple, this applied to the tabernacle. 1 Sam. i. 9; iii. 3.

Ver. 9. Faithfulness.—Ainsworth, "certainty;" i. e. their word cannot be depended on.—Very wickedness.—Flatter.—Horsley, "smooth over."

Ver. 10. Destroy thou them.—See Margin. Bishop Horsley, "Convincing them," i. e. pronouncing sentence against them as rebels; for those that rebelled against the Lord's anointed, rebelled against the Lord.

Ver. 12. Compass him.—Crown him." This seems in allusion to the verse preceding, and means, to spread the divine protection all around them, as if covered by a shield. Bishop Horsley renders it, "As a shield of good-will, (favour,) thou wilt guard around him."

PSALM VI. Title.—Neginoth upon Sheminith.—If Sheminith means the eighth, or octave, as is generally agreed, the question occurs whether we are to consider it in the ascending scale or descending. Some learned men have suggested the latter, but common sense leads to the former; for in accompalatter class, which is the most numerous, the supplicant is always in distress. His distress arises chiefly from the persecution of his enemies. His enemies are always the enemies of God and goodness. Their enmity to the supplicant is unprovoked. If it has any cause, it is only that he is the faithful servant of JEHOVAH, whose worship they oppose. They are numerous and powerful, and use all means, both of force and stratagem, for the supplicant's destruction; an object, in the pursuit of which they are incessantly employed. The supplicant is alone, without friends, poor, and destitute of all support, but God's providential protection. The supplicant, on the other hand, often miraculously relieved, is yet never out of danger, though he looks forward with confidence to a period of final deliverance. If at any time he is under apprehension of death, it is by the visitation of God in sickness. And at those seasons, the persecution of his enemies always makes a considerable part of the affliction.

But why, (it may be asked,) is David so distressed at the thought of dying? Did he suppose that he should perish, or be annihilated? or that the state on which he was entering was one of total insensibility? This can refer only to the state of the body. The grave is the land of forgetfulness and of silence, where the voice of praise is never heard. (Psalm lxxviii. 12; cxv. 17. Isa. xxxviii. 18, 19.) Recovery from sickness is the restoration of joy and gladness, and while our joy arises from a principle of gratitude, our gladness will be expressed in praise; and that praise will not rest privately in our own bosoms, but we shall be glad to unite with the congregation of all those who fear God.

PSALM VII. Ver. 1—17. An Elegy of David.—"David is nying airs of peculiar pathos, the soft notes in the upper scale of our harps would surely be preferred, by a skillful musician, to those of the deep, sonorous chords at the bottom of the scale. We therefore consider these as a small species of harps tuned an octave higher than others, and intended for this purpose, over which particular Levites were appointed to preside. 1 Chron. xv. 21.

Ver. 5. In the grave.—The word is often translated hell, and it frequently denotes the place of separate spirits, happy or unhappy, according to the context: yet it sometimes must be understood of the grave, and that appears to be the sense in this place.—T. Scott.

Ver. 7. Mine eye is consumed.—That is, worn with grief and weeping. David, as visited and chastised by distressing sickness, and a variety of sufferings; and at the same time mourning for his sins in deep repentance, complained, that his complicated sorrows caused him every night to water his couch with copious tears, and made him waste, become dull-sighted, and as it were grow old prematurely. In this distress, he earnestly pleaded with God to visit him in mercy, without farther delay.—T. Scott.

PSALM VII. Title.—Shiggaion.—This is a very difficult word, and of doubtful derivation. Ainsworth calls it "an artificial song" or "an elegy." See Genius, "a lamentation;" and Boothroyd, (still better) "an elegy." See Hab. iii. 1. (Shiggaion probably denotes a mournful song, or elegy, from the Arabic, shaga, to be anxious, sorrowful.)—Bagster.—Cush, the Benjamite.—The late C. Taylor has taken some pains to show that the Hebrews (like other Orientalists) called sometimes in a play of words. Something of the kind may be observed here. Some suppose the name Cush (or Kush) used for Kish, and the name Kish, the father, for Saul his son. Others think Cush may here be used in a moral sense for Shimei, (who was a Benjamite.) as in such sense a black man: that is, a man of black, malignant cha-

3 O LORD my God, if I have done this; if there be iniquity in my hands;

4 If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me; (yea, I have delivered him that without cause is mine enemy:)

5 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it; yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth, and lay my honour in the dust. Selah.

6 Arise, O LORD, in thine anger, * lift up thyself because of the rage of mine enemies: and awake <sup>f</sup> for me to the judgment that thou hast commanded.

7 So shall the congregation of the people compass thee about: for their sakes therefore return thou on high.

8 The LORD shall judge the people: judge me, O LORD, <sup>g</sup> according to my righteousness, and according to mine integrity that is in me.

9 Oh let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but establish the just: for the righteous God trieth the <sup>h</sup> hearts and reins.

10 My <sup>i</sup> defence is of God, which saveth the upright in heart.

11 God <sup>k</sup> judgeth the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked every day.

12 If <sup>l</sup> he turn not, he will whet his sword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

13 He hath also prepared for him the instruments of death; he ordaineth his arrows <sup>m</sup> against the persecutors.

14 Behold, he travaileth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief, and brought forth falsehood.

15 He <sup>n</sup> made a pit, and digged it, and is <sup>o</sup> fallen into the ditch which he made.

e Ps.94.1,2.

f Ps.44.23.
73.20.
Is.51.9.

g Ps.18.20.

h Re.2.23.

i buckler is upon.

j Ps.69.18.

k or, is a righteous judge.

l Mat.3.10.

m De.32.23.
Ps.45.5.

n hath digged a pit.

o Ps.9.25.
Ec.10.8.

a Ps.81.94.
title.

b Ps.148.13.

c Mat.11.
25; 21.16.
1 Co.1.27.

d founded.

e Ps.44.16.

f Ps.144.3.
Re.2.6-9.

g 1Co.15.27.

h flocks and ozen, all of them.

16 His mischief shall return upon his own head, and his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate.

17 I will praise the LORD according to his righteousness: and will sing praise to the name of the LORD most high.

PSALM VIII.

God's glory is magnified by his works, and by his love to man.

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Gittith, A Psalm of David.

O LORD our Lord, how excellent <sup>b</sup> is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens.

2 Out of the mouth of <sup>c</sup> babes and sucklings hast thou <sup>d</sup> ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy <sup>e</sup> and the avenger.

3 When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained;

4 What <sup>f</sup> is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?

5 For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

6 Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou <sup>g</sup> hast put all things under his feet:

7 <sup>h</sup> All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field;

8 The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.

9 O LORD our Lord, how excellent <sup>i</sup> is thy name in all the earth!

said to have composed this psalm" concerning the words (or the matter) of Cush the Benjamite. "Whether Saul, or Shimei, or any one else, be intended under this name, it is sufficiently clear that David had been maliciously calumniated, and that this psalm was written to vindicate himself from the imputation." The writer declares his trust to be in God alone, protests his innocence of the accusation, and requests that judgment may be given on his behalf. He then prays for the suppression of wickedness and the establishment of righteousness, denounces the most awful judgment against sinners, and praises God for his deliverance.

That the psalmist requests to be "judged according to his righteousness," has been used as an argument, not only to apply, but to confine this psalm to the Messiah, but with how little force may be seen by considering the cases of Hezekiah and Nehemiah, (referred to in the notes.) We have no objection, however, to such an application, if not made exclusive. The following remarks of Bishop Horne are both just and striking:

"Conscious of his righteousness and integrity, as to the matter in question, David desires to be judged by him who is to judge the world at the last day. How few, among Christians, have seriously and deliberately considered whether the sentence of that day is likely to be in their favour! Yet, how many, with the utmost composure and self-complacency, repeat continually the words of this psalm, as well as those in the Te Deum, 'We believe that thou shalt come to be our judge!' Legal, or perfect, righteousness and integrity, are peculiar to the Redeemer; but evangelical righteousness and integrity all must have who would be saved."

PSALM VIII. Ver. 1-9. A Psalm of David, for the vintage. --We consider this as an evening or midnight hymn, in which the psalmist, overwhelmed with the brilliant glories of an eastern sky, is led to reflect upon the comparative littleness and insignificance of man and of himself, though king of Israel. It is not necessary to suppose David acquainted with the modern system of astronomy, to account for his humiliating views. Supposing the golden orbs, which he surveyed, to be only floating meteors, their brilliancy and beauty, and especially that of the moon, might well command his admiration. Man is mean and little, compared with the globe which he inhabits, much more compared with the vaulted skies around him--well might he, therefore say, "Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

From the title of this psalm, we think it highly probable that it was composed for the time of vintage, which we know was a time of great rejoicing, in which not only the young people, but the children also, joined in praising God for the bounties of his providence; which marked Israel, under that dispensation, as the chosen people of God, and was calculated to silence the reproaches of their enemies. This circumstance may account for our Lord's application to himself of the hosannahs of the Jewish children, Matt. xxi. 16.

The New Testament, however, gives us another and widely different view of human nature. Adam fell and lost his prerogative of supremacy, and in fact, his all: but a second Adam has been appointed to supersede the former; and not only to restore, but to raise our nature to higher honour and felicity than his predecessor lost. This second Adam, this "Lord from heaven," whose peculiar character is that of Son of Man, has been for "a little while" made lower than the angels, to the end that he might, in his own person, exalt human nature far above them; and herein is a display of the divine power and goodness that may well excite our admiration and our praise: "O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!"

vine-press; and the LXX. understand this title as intimating that it was composed for the time of vintage, with which the purport of the psalm very well agrees, as it is a thanksgiving to God for the bounty of his providence.

Ver. 1. O LORD our Lord.—The first word here rendered LORD, in capitals, is Jehovah, the second LORD is Adonai, Governor, or Master.

Ver. 2. Ordained.—See margin. The Jews considered the divine ordination as the foundation of all strength.

Ver. 3. Consider the heavens.—[The Psalmist appears to have composed this sacred hymn, while his attention was fixed, during the silence of the evening, on "the moon walking in brightness," and on "the stars of light;" but, instead of being tempted to worship the heavenly host, he contemplated the magnificent scene, and the immensity of the creation, till he was filled with adoring admiration of the Creator's incomprehensible majesty, which naturally suggested the subsequent reflections.]—T. Scott.

Ver. 6. A little lower.—The Hebrew, (says Ainsworth,) means either "a little while," or "a little deal," in both which senses it is used in Ps. xxxvi. 10-16. Bishop Horsley renders it, "Thou hast somewhat abased him in comparison of angels." Dr. J. P. Smith, "Thou hast reduced him a little below the angels;" the Hebrew thus translated is Elohim, the gods; which is explained of angels, not only by the Greek and Chaldee, but also by the apostle to the Hebrews, chap. ii. 7, 9 racter. Such was Shimei, as we find in his history. (2 Sam. xvi. 5, &c.) The Cushites, if not absolutely black, were of very dark complexions. Ver. 3. If I have done this.—Namely, what he was accused of, 2 Sam. xvi. 7, 8.

Ver. 4. Yea, (namely) "but—rather" I have delivered.—See ver. 10, 11. of the chapter just quoted.

Ver. 8. According to my righteousness.—See Neh. xiii. 14, 22, 31. 2 Kings ix. 3. and exposition.

Ver. 10. My defence is of God.—Ainsworth, "in God;" the meaning unquestionably is, "God is my buckler," or "shield."

Ver. 11. God judgeth the righteous.—See margin. So Ainsworth, Horsley, &c.—God is angry with the wicked.—This should be understood in the singular, "the wicked man," which agrees with the following sentence, If he, &c.

Ver. 14. Behold, he travaileth.—The verbs travaileth and conceiveeth should be transposed: "Hath conceived iniquity, travailed with mischief, and brought forth falsehood," i. e. an abortion; to this effect Boothroyd.

PSALM VIII. Title.—Upon Gittith.—See margin. He has supposed this to be a musical instrument, which David brought from Gath, where he long, doubtless, resided; so the Chaldee paraphrase; and if this be correct, it was a stringed instrument, as it does not appear that David played on any other. But Gath is also a

PSALM IX.

1 David praiseth God for executing of judgment. 11 He inciteth others to praise him.
13 He prayeth that he may have cause to praise him.

To the chief Musician upon Muth-labben,
A Psalm of David.

I WILL praise thee, O LORD, with my whole heart; I will show forth all thy marvellous works.

2 I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will sing praise to thy name, O thou most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, they shall fall and perish at thy presence.

4 For thou hast maintained my right and my cause; thou satest in the throne judging right.

5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever.

6 O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetual end: and thou hast destroyed cities; their memorial is perished with them.

7 But the LORD shall endure for ever: he hath prepared his throne for judgment.

8 And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness.

9 The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble.

10 And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, LORD, hast not forsaken them that seek thee.

11 Sing praises to the LORD, which dwelleth in Zion: declare among the people his doings.

12 When he maketh inquisition for blood, he remembereth them: he forgetteth not the cry of the humble.

13 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; consider my trouble which I suffer of them that hate me, thou that liftest me up from the gates of death:

14 That I may show forth all thy praise in the gates of the daughter of Zion: I will rejoice in thy salvation.

15 The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made: in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

16 The LORD is known by the judgment which he executeth: the wicked is snared in the work of his own hands. m m Higgaion. Selah.

a Ps. 139. 14.
b Ps. 63. 18.
c male my judgment
d in righteousness.
e Ps. 10. 7.
f or, The destructions of the enemy are come to a perpetual end; and their cities hast thou destroyed.
g 2 Ki. 19. 23, &c.
h Ps. 102. 26.
i Re. 20. 12, 13.
j an high place.
k Ps. 18. 10.
l afflicted.
m i.e. meditation.
n Ps. 19. 14. 52. 3.
o Ps. 50. 22.
p Is. 41. 17.
q Ps. 33. 15, 16.
a In the pride of the wicked he doth
b Ps. 52. 2.
c soul's.
d or, the comelous himself, he abhorreth the LORD.
e or, all his thoughts are, There is no God.
f Ps. 14. 1.
g unto generation and generation.
h deceits.
i or, iniquity.
j themselves.
k in the secret places.
l breaketh himself.
m or, into his strong parts.
n Ec. 3. 11.
o or, afflicted.

17 The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.

18 For the needy shall not always be forgotten: the expectation of the poor shall not perish for ever.

19 Arise, O LORD; let not man prevail: let the heathen be judged in thy sight.

20 Put them in fear, O LORD: that the nations may know themselves to be but men Selah.

PSALM X.

1 David complaineth to God of the outrage of the wicked. 12 He prayeth for remedy.
16 He professeth his confidence.

WHY standest thou afar off, O LORD? why hidest thou thyself in times of trouble?

2 The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor: let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

3 For the wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.

4 The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God: God is not in all his thoughts.

5 His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his sight: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them.

6 He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moved: for I shall never be in adversity.

7 His mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud: under his tongue is mischief and vanity.

8 He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes are privily set against the poor.

9 He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net.

10 He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones.

11 He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his face; he will never see it.

12 Arise, O LORD; O God, lift up thy hand: forget not the humble.

13 Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? he hath said in his heart, Thou wilt not require it.

PSALM IX. Ver. 1—20. A Psalm of David—in thanksgiving for victory.—There seems no doubt but this was a song of triumph and thanksgiving for a signal victory over some powerful pagan adversary, whose object seems to have been the overthrow of the Jewish church and state. David, however, piously attributes his victory to divine interference, and thanks his deliverer for rescuing him from the gates of death, which had probably enclosed many both of his enemies and friends; and determines, in consequence of being so spared, that he will enter the gates of the daughter of Zion, and worship among her children.

We have reason to bless God that we live in times of peace, and in a land that has long been exempted from the miseries of war. But all true Christians have enemies, if not externally, yet in their own bosoms; against these enemies they have need, most earnestly, to pray, and to return thanks for every victory obtained over them.

The church of God also, as a body, have their enemies, and will always be liable to suffer from the hostilities both of infidels and wicked men: and though, under the Christian dispensation, we are forbidden to pray for the destruction of our enemies, there is nothing unchristian in praying that they may be made sensible of their frailty, and humbled before their Maker and their Judge, and thereby be prevented from showing their enmity against the people and the cause of God.

"Rise, great Redeemer, from thy seat,
To judge and save the poor;
Let nations tremble at thy feet,
And man prevail no more."—Watts.

PSALM X. Ver. 1—18. A Prayer for deliverance from atheistical and cruel enemies.—This psalm having no title, it is in vain to guess at either its author or occasion. Bishop Horsley calls it "a supplication in behalf of certain helpless people cruelly persecuted by a powerful enemy; who, renouncing all fear of God and regard of men, uses both force and deceit as means of oppression." The heathen formerly, as well as at present, were divisible into two classes; the one extremely ignorant and superstitious—the other more enlightened, as to general know-

Ver. 13. The gates of death.—The invisible world is constantly represented in the Scriptures as a place of confinement, having gates and bars, Job xvii. 16; xxxviii. 17. Isa. xxxviii. 10.

Ver. 16. Higgaion—is generally allowed to mean, as in the margin, "a meditation." As we have supposed Selah (Ps. iii.) to answer in some respects to a hold in our music, it is probable that the pious Israelites were here required seriously to meditate during this musical pause.

Ver. 17. Turned into hell.—The place of future punishment; not the grave nor the state of death merely; for this is equally true of the righteous as of the wicked.

PSALM X. The LXX. have united this psalm to the preceding, for which we know no reason, except that it has no distinct title; but this alteration makes a difference in the numbering, till we come to the 147th psalm, which is divided into two, and makes the final number right. Calmer, Dr. Grey, and Bishop Horne, suppose it to have been composed during the time of the Babylonish captivity; but there is no certainty of this.

Ver. 10. He croucheth.—Or at, beneath himself, as a wild beast crouches down to spring at his prey.—By his strong ones.—"Into his strong parts: i. e. into his paws. Answereth."

PSALM IX. Title.—Upon the death of Labben.—Among the great variety of interpretations here given, we shall name a few only. 1. We have no idea that any of these Hebrew terms refer to hymn tunes. The Hebrews had no musical characters, nor any metrical tunes, like modern psalmody. The hymns were all chanted, as already remarked. 2. We do not conceive Labben to be Goliath; internal evidence is strong to the contrary. This Psalm must have been composed after David laid claim to the crown, ver. 4; after he had taken Zion, ver. 11; and the conquest here referred to, was in defence of his throne and his religion; ver. 4, 5. Ben signifies a son, and the Chaldees so here explain it; but David's feelings on the death of his son Absalom were very different from those of joy and triumph. Farther, Labben signifies white; and it is very possible that the fallen chieftain here meant, may have been named the white prince, perhaps from wearing a remarkable white feather; just as one English prince was called the black prince, from the colour of his armour.

Ver. 6. O thou enemy.—Bishop Loxth reads, "Destructions have consumed the enemy for ever; and as to the cities which thou (O God) hast destroyed, their memory is perished with them." This nearly corresponds with the margin, but is clearer.

The providence of God.

PSALMS.—XI..XIII.

David craveth help of God.

14 Thou hast seen it; for thou beho dest mischief and spite, to requite it with thy hand: the poor <sup>p</sup> committeth himself unto thee; thou art the helper of the fatherless.

15 Break <sup>a</sup> thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man: seek out his wickedness till <sup>r</sup> thou find none.

16 The LORD is King <sup>a</sup> for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out of his land.

17 LORD, thou hast heard <sup>r</sup> the desire of the humble: thou wilt <sup>a</sup> prepare their heart, thou wilt cause thine ear to hear:

18 To judge <sup>r</sup> the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may no more <sup>w</sup> oppress.

PSALM XI.

<sup>i</sup> David encourageth himself in God against his enemies. <sup>4</sup> The providence and justice of God.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

IN the LORD put I my trust: how say ye to my soul, Flee as a bird to your mountain?

2 For, lo, the wicked <sup>a</sup> bend their bow, they make ready their arrow upon the string, that they may <sup>b</sup> privily shoot at the upright in heart.

3 If the foundations <sup>c</sup> be destroyed, what can the righteous do?

4 The LORD is in his holy <sup>d</sup> temple, the LORD's throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men.

5 The LORD trieth the righteous: but the wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth.

6 Upon the wicked he shall rain <sup>e</sup> snares, fire <sup>f</sup> and brimstone, and a <sup>g</sup> horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup.

ledge, but atheistical and profane. Persecutors may be found in both classes; the one jealous for their favourite superstition—the other rejecting superstition, and with it all religious worship; the true God as well as idols. The Lord Jehovah is, however, the universal sovereign. He will punish impenitent sinners of every class. At the same time, he hears the desire of the humble, before that desire is expressed in words; and will never fail to answer the prayer which his spirit teaches them to offer.

God will "prepare their hearts to pray,
And cause his ear to hear;
He hearkeneth what his children say,
And puts the world in fear."—Watts.

PSALM XI. Ver. 1—7. A Psalm of David, expressive of his confidence in God.—Whether this was written during Saul's persecution of him, when some advised him to seek his safety in flight; or during the rebellion of Absalom, when the foundations of the kingdom appeared to be subverted (as intimated ver. 3.) we cannot ascertain. But it was certainly during a time of great danger and alarm; when the fate of his kingdom seemed very precarious, and when his friends seemed utterly in despair. David, however, strengthened himself in the Lord his God, and trusted in him for support and deliverance.

"As the choicest of heavenly blessings (says Bishop Horne) are frequently in scripture represented by the salutary effects of wine, a cup of which the master of the family is supposed to hold in his hand, ready to distribute due portions of it to those around him; so, from the noxious and intoxicating qualities of that liquor, when drunk strong, and in too large a quantity, is borrowed a most tremendous image of the wrath and indignation of Almighty God. Calamity and sorrow, fear and trembling, infatuation and despair, the evils of the present life, and of that which is to come, are the bitter ingredients which compose this most horrible cup of mixture. It is entirely in the hand and disposal of God, who, through every age, has been pouring out its contents, more or less, in proportion to the sins of men. But much of the strength and power of the liquor still remains behind, until the day of final vengeance. It will be then exhausted, even to the dregs, by unrepenting rebels, when 'burning coals, fire and brimstone, and eternal 'tempest,' shall be 'the portion of their cup.'" (Horne on Psalm lxxv. 8.)

Ver. 15. Break thou the arm.—That is, the power of the wicked. PSALM XI. Ver. 3. If the foundations.—"For the foundations are cast down." "The just, what hath he done?"—Ainsworth.

Ver. 6. Upon the wicked he shall rain snares, &c.—Pachin, Bishop Loveth explains by balls of fire, or simply lightning. This is a manifest allusion to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Ps. xviii. 12, 13. Bishop Loveth renders this verse,

"He shall rain live coals upon the ungodly,
Fire, and sulphur, and a burning storm;
This shall be the contents of their cup."

PSALM XII. Title.—Upon Sheminith.—(The eighth.)—See title of Ps. vi. Some think this Psalm was made when the Ziphites betrayed David to Saul.

cleaveth.

q <sup>a</sup> 37.17.

r <sup>a</sup> 2 Ki. 21.12

-15.

s <sup>a</sup> Ti. 6.15,

16.

t <sup>a</sup> Is. 65.24.

u <sup>a</sup> or, esta-bleish.

v <sup>a</sup> Is. 11.4.

w <sup>a</sup> or, terrify.

a <sup>a</sup> Ps. 64.2.4.

b <sup>a</sup> in darkness.

c <sup>a</sup> 2 Ti. 2.19.

d <sup>a</sup> Hab. 2.20.

e <sup>a</sup> or, quirk burning coals.

f <sup>a</sup> Ge. 19.24.

g <sup>a</sup> or, burning.

a <sup>a</sup> or, the eighth.

Ps. 6. title.

b <sup>a</sup> a heart and a heart.

c <sup>a</sup> great.

d <sup>a</sup> Is. 2.3.

Da. 7.8.25.

e <sup>a</sup> with us.

f <sup>a</sup> or, would ensnare

him.

g <sup>a</sup> Ps. 119.

140.

h <sup>a</sup> him: i. e.

every one of them.

i <sup>a</sup> of the sons of men.

a <sup>a</sup> or, overseer.

b <sup>a</sup> Ps. 83.14.

7 For the righteous LORD loveth righteousness; his countenance doth behold the upright

PSALM XII.

<sup>1</sup> David, destitute of human comfort, craveth help of God. <sup>3</sup> He comforteth himself with God's judgments on the wicked, and confidence in God's tried promise.

To the chief Musician upon <sup>a</sup> Sheminith, A Psalm of David.

HELP, LORD; for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men.

2 They speak vanity every one with his neighbour: with flattering lips and with <sup>b</sup> a double heart do they speak.

3 The LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh <sup>c</sup> proud <sup>d</sup> things:

4 Who have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are <sup>e</sup> our own: who is lord over us?

5 For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy, now will I arise, saith the LORD; I will set him in safety from him that <sup>f</sup> puffeth at him.

6 The words of the LORD are <sup>g</sup> pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times.

7 Thou shalt keep them, O LORD, thou shalt preserve <sup>h</sup> them from this generation for ever.

8 The wicked walk on every side, when the vilest <sup>i</sup> men are exalted.

PSALM XIII.

<sup>1</sup> David complaineth of delay in help. <sup>3</sup> He prayeth for preventing grace. <sup>5</sup> He boasteth of divine mercy.

To the <sup>a</sup> chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

HOW long wilt thou forget me, O LORD? for ever? how long wilt thou hide <sup>b</sup> thy face from me?

2 How long shall I take counsel in my soul,

The concluding sentiment is equally consolatory to good men under every dispensation. "As the righteous LORD loveth righteousness," so he countenanceth the upright by his providence, and rewards them by his grace. The light of his countenance shall afford them every everlasting happiness.

PSALM XII. Ver. 1—8. A Psalm of David, imploring the divine aid in a time of great degeneracy.—It is in vain to conjecture to what particular period this psalm originally referred; but often do such unhappy periods occur, both in the world and in the church. In the former, by the spread of infidel and atheistic principles; and in the latter, by the lukewarmness of zeal and the decay of piety among believers. We are encouraged, however, to rest assured that the LORD will not forsake his people. His word is pure, and his promises have been often tried.

Among the signs of our Lord's second coming, we have been taught to consider this as one, that "the love of many shall wax cold" towards him. (Matt. xxiv. 12.) Many such seasons have occurred, and the LORD has been pleased, by signal appearances, to produce revivals in his church, and such we still expect, even in an unprecedented degree. But even the millennium itself is to be followed with a degeneracy equally remarkable. Satan, though bound for a thousand years, will be again let loose with all the powers of infidelity. (Rev. xx. 7—11.) so that finally, when the Son of Man cometh, he shall find little faith upon the earth. (Luke xviii. 8.) "When the wicked walk around on every side, the vilest of men shall be exalted;" and when the thrones of earth are filled with infidels and tyrants, then—when good men shall shrink in despair under the power of the last tyranny—then shall the "sign of the Son of Man" suddenly appear, and his "trumpet sound to judgment."

PSALM XIII. Ver. 1—6. A Psalm of David, complaining of desertion, and imploring divine aid.—"While God permits his servants to continue under affliction, he is said, after the manner of men, to have 'forgotten and hid his face from them.' For the use, therefore, of persons in such circumstances, is this psalm intended; and consequently, it suits the different cases of the church universal, languishing for the advent of our LORD to deliver her from this evil world; of any particular church, in time of persecution, and of each individual,

Ver. 5. From him that puffeth at him.—The English import of the phrase is, that he disregardeth him; but the Hebrew rather means, probably, to "breathe out threatenings and slaughter against him." (See Acts ix. 1.) The margin reads, "From him that would ensnare him." Bishop Horsley says, perhaps it might be rendered, "I will put him in safety for whom the snare is laid."

Ver. 6. Furnace.—Bishop Horne, "Crucible" of earth.

Ver. 7. Preserve them.—The LXX. render this verse as follows: "Thou, LORD, wilt guard us and preserve us from this generation, and for ever." Not only from this wicked race, but "from every evil work unto thy heavenly kingdom."—T. Scott.

PSALM XIII. Title.—To the chief Musician.—Or overseer. See title of Psalm iv.

having sorrow in my heart daily? how long shall mine enemy be exalted over me?

3 Consider and hear me, O LORD my God: lighten mine eyes, lest I sleep <sup>c</sup> the sleep of death;

4 Lest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me rejoice when I am moved.

5 But I have trusted in thy mercy; my heart shall rejoice in thy salvation.

6 I will sing unto the LORD, because he hath dealt bountifully with me.

PSALM XIV.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their conscience. 7 He glorieth in the salvation of God.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

THE fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. They are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good.

2 The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God.

3 They are all gone aside, they are all together become <sup>a</sup> filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

4 Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the LORD.

5 There <sup>b</sup> were they in great <sup>c</sup> fear: for God is in the generation of the righteous.

when harassed by temptations, or broken by sickness, pain, and sorrow. He who bore our sins, and carried our sorrows, may likewise be presumed to have made it a part of his devotions in the day of trouble."—(Bishop Horne.)

The complaint of desertion here resembles that in the beginning of the twenty-second Psalm, which we know was used by our blessed Lord upon the cross; and the complaint is not of desertion only, but also of persecution from the enemy. In both, deliverance is implored and confidence expressed, with a promise of the like grateful return of praise. "The heart which trusteth in God's mercy (says the above excellent writer) shall alone rejoice in his salvation, and celebrate by the tongue, in songs of praise, the loving-kindness of the Lord. It is observable, that this and many other psalms with a mournful beginning, have a triumphant ending; to show us the prevailing power of devotion, and to convince us of the certain return of prayer, sooner or later, bringing with it the comforts of heaven, to revive and enrich our weary and barren spirits in the gloomy seasons of sorrow and temptation, like the dew descending by night upon the withered summit of an eastern mountain."

PSALM XIV. Ver. 1—7. A Psalm of David, lamenting the depravity of human nature.—This psalm is also ascribed to David, but the occasion is uncertain. From the last verse some learned men have supposed it to have been written during the time of Absalom's rebellion, when the ark was in possession of the city: (see 2 Sam. xix. 9—15.) others refer it to the period of the Babylonish captivity; but St. Paul plainly refers us to the days of Messiah, and to a future restoration of the Jews subsequent to their conversion. (Rom. xi. 26, &c. compare Psalm cx. 2. Isa. lxiii. 11. Zech. ix. 9.) The chief subject of this psalm, however, is the infidelity of the human heart, for infidelity is unquestionably more a disease of the heart than of the head; the corruption of our nature gives an unhappy bias to the judgment. Sin makes fools of us all; and he is the greatest fool whose mind is most under the influence of depraved passions, which not only lead to abominable actions, but incapacitate for doing good. "The consideration of the apostacy and cor-

Ver. 3. Lighten mine eyes.—That is, restore to me health and joy and comfort; for darkness is the shadow of death.

Ver. 5. I have trusted.—Or, "I trust." Bishop Horne.

Ver. 6. Dealt bountifully. The verb is more frequently rendered reward or recompense; but a gracious recompense is intended, when good received from God is spoken of; and this is "dealing bountifully."—T. Scott.

PSALM XIV.—This psalm bears the name of David, and is addressed likewise to the chief Musician. Another copy of it is given, with some slight variations, Psalm liii., and a difference in the title, which will be there noticed.

Ver. 3. Gone aside—Become filthy.—The expressions, Hervey suggests, "are borrowed from wines soured (or turned,) and means purified." The word for the latter is used Job xv. 16. At the end of this verse, the present copies of the LXX. insert three verses quoted by St. Paul in the third chapter of Romans from the other psalms.

Ver. 4. Who (or they) eat up my people.—That is, devour the poor. See Micah iii. 3.

Ver. 5. There were they in great fear.—The parallel passage, Psalm liii. 5. is added, "where no fear was" see that Psalm.

Ver. 7. O God, &c.—Marg. "Who will give?" &c.

PSALM XV. Ver. 2. Walketh uprightly.—"The fruits meet for repentance," "the work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope," "the fruits of the Spirit," and "the things which accompany salvation," are here compendiously enumerated, or rather pointed out, in some of the most striking and observable particulars.—T. Scott.

Ver. 4. Vile person.—"The vile person" is an openly wicked and ungodly

c Je.51.39.

a stinking.

b they feared a fear.

c Ps.53.5.

d Who will give.

e Ro.11.28.

a sojourn.

b or, receive, or, endure.

c Eze.18.3, 17; 22.12.

d 2Pe.1.10.

a or, A golden Psalm. Ps.56 to 60.

6 Ye have shamed the counsel of the poor because the LORD is his refuge.

7 <sup>a</sup> Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM XV.

David describeth a citizen of Zion.

A Psalm of David.

LORD, who shall <sup>a</sup> abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?

2 He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart.

3 He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbour, nor <sup>b</sup> taketh up a reproach against his neighbour.

4 In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the LORD. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not.

5 He that putteth not out his money to <sup>c</sup> usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never <sup>d</sup> be moved.

PSALM XVI.

1 David, in distrust of merits, and hatred of idolatry, fleeth to God for preservation. 5 He sheweth the hope of his calling, of the resurrection, and life everlasting.

A Michtam of David.

PRESERVE me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust.

2 O my soul, thou hast said unto the LORD, ruption of mankind, described in this psalm, makes the prophet express a longing desire for 'the salvation of Israel,' which was to 'go forth out of Zion,' and to bring back the people of God from that most dreadful of all captivities, the captivity under sin and death; a salvation at which Jacob would indeed rejoice, and Israel be glad."—(Bishop Horne.)

PSALM XV. Ver. 1—5. A Psalm of David, describing a citizen of Zion.—We agree with Bishop Horsley, that this psalm has "no allusion to the offices of the Levitical priesthood;" but is simply intended to point out, that moral righteousness is the qualification which alone can fit any one to be a guest in God's tabernacle—a citizen of Zion. This qualification, however, implies no claim of merit, but simply moral fitness. "The man (says Bishop Horne) who would be a citizen of Zion, and there enter into the rest and joy of his Lord, must set that Lord always before him. Renewed through grace, endued with a lively faith, and an operative charity, he must consider and imitate the life of that blessed Person, who walked amongst men without partaking of their corruptions; who conversed unblameably with sinners; who could give this challenge to his inveterate enemies, 'Which of you convinceth me of sin?' in whom the grand accuser, when he came 'found nothing;' who being himself 'the truth,' thought and spake of nothing else, making many promises and performing them all."

"In the above comment (says Bishop Horne) it was thought most advisable to open and display the full intent of what was both enjoined and forbidden, by exemplifying each particular. Whoever shall survey and copy these virtues and graces as they present themselves in his life, [relying at the same time on his atonement,] will, it is humbly apprehended, take the best and shortest way to the heavenly Zion; and shall never be expelled from the eternal city."

PSALM XVI. Ver. 1—11. A golden Psalm of David.—Different conjectures have been formed respecting the occasion of penning this psalm, and that of Dr. Hales seems as probable as any; namely, that it was composed just after David had reman, who renders himself base and contemptible by his crimes. Persons of this description may be exalted in station, and abound in wealth; and many will pay court to them: but the true servant of God will form a juster estimate of his character and state. He will neither envy their prosperity, nor give any sanction to their impiety.—T. Scott.—Change not.—That is, will not violate his oath for self-interest.

Ver. 5. Usury.—See Exod. xxii. 25, 26. Lev. xxv. 35—37. Neh. v. 5—7.—Never be moved.—The concluding clause of this verse, in the original, is emphatical. "He that doeth these things shall not be moved for ever," or to eternity. The formal, nay, plausible worshippers at the tabernacle; the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and the most zealous contenders for the law; might be moved from their steadfastness, and perish: but none would be moved for ever, or come short of eternal life, who really bore the character here delineated.—T. Scott.

PSALM XVI. Title.—Micham.—Marg. "A golden (psalm) of David." D'Herbelot observes of the works of seven of the most excellent Arabian poets, that they are called Al Modhahebat, which signifies golden, because they were written in letters of gold upon Egyptian paper. Might not the six psalms which are thus distinguished (viz. this and Ps. lv.—lx.) be so called from their having been, on some occasion, written in letters of gold, and hung up in the sanctuary? Such a title would have been agreeable to the Eastern taste, as D'Herbelot has mentioned a book, entitled "Bracelets of Gold." See title of Psalm xxii.

Ver. 2. O my soul, thou hast said, &c.—The LXX. and several MSS., 'probably to avoid the supplementary words) read, "I have said," &c. but

Thou art my Lord: my goodness extendeth not to thee;

But to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight.

4 Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god: their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer, nor take up their names into my lips.

5 The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot.

6 The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage.

7 I will bless the Lord, who hath given me counsel: my reins also instruct me in the night seasons.

8 I have set the Lord always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved.

9 Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth: my flesh also shall rest in hope.

10 For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

11 Thou wilt show me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

PSALM XVII

I David, in confidence of his integrity, craveth defence of God against his enemies. 10 He sheweth their pride, craft, and eagerness. 13 He prayeth against them in confidence of his hope.

A Prayer of David.

HEAR the right, O Lord, attend unto my cry, give ear unto my prayer, that goeth not out of feigned lips.

2 Let my sentence come forth from thy presence; let thine eyes behold the things that are equal.

3 Thou hast proved my heart; thou hast visited me in the night; thou hast tried me, b Job 35.7,8.

c Mat.3.17.

d or, give

e Ho.2.17.

f La.3.24.

g my part.

h Ac.2.25.

i Ps.73.23.

j Ps.139.23.

k Ac.3.15.

l Mat.7.14.

m Mat.25.33.

n Ps.36.8.

a Justice.

b without

c lips of d deceit.

e Ps.139.23.

f Ps.39.1,2.

g Pr.2.10,15.

h be not i present.

j or, then

k which

l trust in

m them from n those that

o rise up

p against

q thy right

r hand.

h waste.

i enemies

j against k soul.

l The like-

m ness of n him (that

o of every p one of

q them)

r is, as a s lion that

t desireth

u to raven.

v sitting.

w present.

x his face.

y or by thy.

z is 10.5.

a or, by b thy.

c Lu.16.25.

d or, their

e children

f are full.

g r 1 Ju.3.2.

and shalt find nothing; I am purposed that my mouth shall not transgress.

4 Concerning the works of men, by the word of thy lips I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer.

5 Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not.

6 I have called upon thee, for thou wilt hear me, O God: incline thine ear unto me, and hear my speech.

7 Show thy marvellous loving-kindness, O thou that savest by thy right hand them which put their trust in thee from those that rise up against them.

8 Keep me as the apple of the eye, hide me under the shadow of thy wings, 9 From the wicked that oppress me, from my deadly enemies, who compass me about.

10 They are enclosed in their own fat: with their mouth they speak proudly.

11 They have now compassed us in our steps: they have set their eyes bowing down to the earth.

12 Like as a lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young lion lurking in secret places.

13 Arise, O Lord, disappoint him, cast him down: deliver my soul from the wicked, which is thy sword:

14 From men which are thy hand, O Lord, from men of the world, which have their portion in this life, and whose belly thou fillest with thy hid treasure: they are full of children, and leave the rest of their substance to their babes.

15 As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness.

ceived by Nathan the promise that his house should be built up for ever in the person of Messiah. (1 Chron. xvii. 11—27.)

The late Dr. Kennicott calls it—"A hymn prophetically descriptive of the Messiah, as expressing his abhorrence of the general idolatry of mankind, and his own zeal for the honour of Jehovah: with the full assurance of his being raised from the dead, before his body should be corrupted in the grave. That David did not here speak of himself, but of the Messiah, and of him only, is asserted by St. Peter and St. Paul: (see Acts ii. 25—32, with xiii. 35—37.) And if this psalm speaks in a literal sense, concerning an actual and speedy resurrection, by that same literal sense David himself is necessarily excluded."

The former part of this psalm has, by most commentators, been considered as applicable to David; but if, as some think, ver. 4. implies the priestly character of the speaker, David is excluded from this as well as from the latter part of the psalm. One thing seems here intimated, which we have not before remarked, that the priests under the law, when they offered the sacrifice of an individual, named the offerer before the Lord; a circumstance that beautifully points to the intercession of the Saviour. (See Rev. viii. 3, 4.)

The latter part of the psalm being expressly applied to the resurrection of Christ by the apostles themselves, as above remarked, can apply to others only as interested in and virtually raised with him "to newness of life," and introduced into those paths which lead to everlasting bliss.

"Those paths that to his presence bear,
For plenitude of bliss is there;
And pleasures, Lord! unmixed with wo,
At thy right hand for ever flow."—Merrick.

PSALM XVII. Ver. 1—15. A Prayer of David against his enemies.—From the description of his enemies here given, there can be little doubt but Saul and his followers were intended; and their charge against David was no less than treason—that he aspired to the crown and sought the life of Saul; which was not only false, but exactly the reverse of the truth. (1 Sam. xxiv.) The psalmist, therefore, confident in the justice of his cause, appeals to the Almighty for his decision. His "heart this makes no difference in the meaning.—My goodness (extendeth) not to thee.—The LXX. render it, "Thou hast no need of my goods (or goodness.) Compare Job xxxv. 7. The Chaldee and Syriac render the words, "My goodness is from thee."—Kennicott reads, "Is not without thee."

Ver. 4. That hasten (run) after another (god).—Ainsworth renders it, "that endow another;" and Kennicott, "that go whoring after strange gods."

—Their drink-offerings of blood.—The drink-offerings of the Jews were of wine only. (Levit. xlvii. 10—14.) part of which was poured on the head of the victim; but the heathen offered "drink-offerings of blood, even of human blood, the blood of their enemies." In Dupuis' Journal in Ashantee, mention is made of a wretched tyrant who delighted in drinking the blood of his enemies. In one instance he had an enemy bound and laid before him. He then had "his body pierced with hot irons, gathering the blood which issued from him in a vessel, one half of which he drank, and offered up the rest unto his god."

Ver. 5. Portion of mine inheritance.—JEHOVAH was David's present comfort. A source of exultation and refreshment, as the cup of water to the thirsty, or wine to the faint: he was also his future inheritance; and he who allotted him his portion, would maintain him in it, and never leave him to forfeit it.—T. Scott.

Ver. 6. The lines are fallen.—That is, the measuring cords by which heritages are allotted out. As Canaan was divided by lot and line, these measures are used to represent his joy in the favour of God. But the Saviour himself has obtained the most goodly heritage; and his people are admitted to partake of it.—T. Scott. See Ps. lxxviii. 55.—My reins instruct me.—See note on Job xix. 27.

Ver. 10. My soul in hell.—The apostles Peter and Paul both explain these words exclusively of our Saviour Christ, as in our exposition, but there is some difficulty as to the translation. The word rendered Hell is Sheol, which we have already shown to mean both the grave and the invisible world. Our translators frequently render it by the former word, as Gen. xlii. 38. xlv. 31. 1 Kings ii. 9. Job xvii. 18, 14. and often Hell, as here, Job xxvi. 6. Ps. ix. 17. But it is generally admitted to include (like Hades) the invisible world in general. See exposition and notes on Job xxvi. 5, 6. Bishop Pearson says, "It appeareth that the first intention of putting these words into the Creed was only to express the burial of our Saviour, or the descent of his body into the grave." It is most certain, however, that the phrase was afterwards explained, even by the Christian fathers, of Christ's descent into the place of punishment. See 1 Peter iii. 18. "But that it was actually so, or that the apostle intended so much," the Bishop confesses is "not manifest." See also Professor Witsius, who contends, "that Christ descended into hell, (the place of torment,) is no where expressly affirmed in Scripture, nor in the most ancient creeds. The creeds which mentioned the descent, were generally silent with respect to the burial; yea, it was without some mistake that both were afterwards joined together." V. J. P. Smith renders the first clause of this verse (10), "Thou wilt not be a my life in the grave;" which nearly corresponds with Dr. Kennicott's version "Thou wilt not abandon my life to the grave." [The word hell, from the Saxon hylan or helan, to hide, or from holi, a cavern, though now used only for the place of torment, originally denoted the concealment or unseen place of the dead in general.]—Bagster.

PSALM XVII. Ver. 1. Hear the right, O Lord.—Or, "Hear, O righteous Lord." Bishop Horne.

Ver. 7. That savest by thy right hand.—See margin. Rather, "at thy right hand." See Zech. iii. 1.

Ver. 8. Apple of the eye.—Heb. as the pupil, or black spot, the daughter of the eye.—The singular precaution with which the Creator has secured the pupil of the eye, and by which every creature instinctively guards it from injury, forms a striking illustration of the Lord's watchful care over his people, amidst the peculiar dangers to which they are on every side exposed.—T. Scott.

Ver. 9. My deadly enemies.—i. e. my soul's enemies, or the enemies of my life.

Ver. 10. Enclosed in their own fat.—Or, "They have closed up their mouth with fat." Dr. Hammond. See Job xv. 27.

Ver. 11. Bowing down to the ground.—Or, "Bending (us) down to the earth." Ainsworth and Horne.

Ver. 14. Whose bellies thou fillest, &c.—That is, "Whom thou permittest to enjoy temporal blessings in abundance." Bishop Horne. See Luke xvi. 25.—They are full of children.—See Job xxi. 11. Or, "Their children are filled."

PSALM XVIII.

David praiseth God for his manifold and marvellous blessings.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, the servant <sup>a</sup> of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words <sup>b</sup> of this song in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said,

I WILL <sup>c</sup> love thee, O LORD, my strength.

2 The LORD <sup>d</sup> is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my <sup>e</sup> strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower.

3 I will call upon the LORD, <sup>f</sup> who is worthy <sup>g</sup> to be praised: so <sup>h</sup> 'shall I be saved from mine enemies.

4 The sorrows of death compassed me, and the floods of <sup>i</sup> ungodly men made me afraid.

5 The <sup>j</sup> sorrows of hell compassed me about: the snares of death prevented me.

6 In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: he heard my voice out of his temple, and my cry came before <sup>k</sup> him, even into his ears.

7 Then the earth shook and trembled; the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken, because he was wroth.

8 There went up a smoke <sup>l</sup> out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

a Ps. 36. title

b 2 Sa. 22.

c 1 Jn. 4. 19.

d rock.

e Re. 5. 11..

f Ps. 50. 15.

g Belial.

h or, cords.

i 2 Ch. 30. 27.

j by.

k Ps. 144. 5,

l &amp;c.

m Ps. 97. 2.

n 1 Sa. 7. 10.

o Ps. 106. 9.

p or, great.

q 1 Sa. 30. 6.

r Ps. 3. 1..5.

s Ps. 24. 17,

t 20.

9 He bowed <sup>u</sup> the heavens also, and came down: and darkness <sup>v</sup> was under his feet.

10 And he rode upon a cherub, and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

11 He made darkness his secret place; his pavilion <sup>w</sup> round about him were dark waters and thick clouds <sup>x</sup> of the skies.

12 At the brightness <sup>y</sup> that was before him his thick clouds passed, hail stones and coals of fire.

13 The LORD also thundered <sup>z</sup> in the heavens, and the Highest gave his voice; hail stones and coals of fire.

14 Yea, he sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.

15 Then <sup>aa</sup> the channels of waters were seen, and the foundations of the world were discovered at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.

16 He sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of <sup>ab</sup> many waters.

17 He delivered me from my strong enemy, and from them which hated me: for they were too strong for me.

18 They prevented me in the day of my calamity: but <sup>ac</sup> the LORD was my stay.

19 He brought me forth also into a large place; he delivered me, because he delighted in me.

20 The LORD rewarded <sup>ad</sup> me according to my condemns him not, and he has confidence towards God," who is the witness as well as judge of his integrity. He had been tried, and lived in the expectation of farther trials: but he attributes his preservation to the word of God. "By the word of thy lips I have kept (me) from the paths of the destroyer."

The description here given of David's enemies, (as already hinted,) naturally leads us to look to Saul and his party as laying snares for him, as sportsmen were accustomed to do for game in the forests, or for wild beasts in the woods. Saul himself resembled "a lion greedy of his prey," who had been lurking and watching for him "in secret places." From these men, these "mortals of this transitory world," (as Ainsworth and Horne render it,) he prays to be delivered; and in confidence that he shall be so, he concludes with declaring, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness;" an expression that may be referred either to the immortality of the soul, or the resurrection of the body. Dr. Watts includes both, and paraphrases the verse in three beautiful stanzas, which we should be glad to transcribe, but can only refer to.

Some commentators apply this psalm, as well as the preceding, to Christ himself, who, though he assumed in his death "the form of a slave," arose in all the glories of the Divinity.

PSALM XVIII. Ver. 1-24. To the chief musician: a Psalm of David, the servant of the Lord.—The title of this psalm is literally transcribed from 2 Sam. xxii. 1., where the psalm itself follows, nearly as in this place, except that the first verse is now introduced, with some verbal corrections in the following verses. "The variations between the two copies (says Scott, the commentator) seem to have been principally poetical improvements of the style, as few of them materially alter the sense, and several evidently render the composition more elegant. Indeed, the whole psalm seems one of the most finished poetical compositions extant in any language."

The first verse of the psalm just referred to, is noticed by the critics as peculiarly emphatic. "With all the yearnings of affection, I will love thee," is the paraphrase of Bishop Horne; and we may remark, that we can never too forcibly express

PSALM XVIII. Ver. 1. I will love.—The original implies tenderness; "with bowels of compassion."

Ver. 2. My strength.—Heb. "rock;" but a different word from that in the preceding line.

Ver. 3. I will call.—This being a psalm of thanksgiving, Bishop Horne thinks the verbs should be rendered in the present tense: so Dr. Kennicott. But as the Hebrew is future, we rather think with Scott, that the future was used purposely, to express "the feelings of David's heart, while struggling with his difficulties;" he then said, "I will love," &c.

Ver. 4. The sorrows.—So the word is used for the pains of childbirth and of death; see Acts ii. 24.; but the same word (with a slight variation in the points) is used also for cords, ropes, and the toils of the fowler (made of cord) to ensnare his game, &c.

Ver. 5. The sorrows (or cords) of hell.—Heb. Sheol. See note on ver. 4. Sheol and Hades, according to Archbishop Usher, "when spoken of the body, signify the grave: when of the soul, they refer to the state in which the soul is without the body, whether in Paradise or Hell, properly so called."

Ver. 7. The earth shook and trembled.—[In this and the following verses, David describes, by the sublimest expressions and grandest terms, the majesty of God, and the awful manner in which he came to his assistance. The imagery is borrowed from an awful and tremendous thunder storm; and the circumstances are such as to create the utmost admiration, excite a kind of horour attachment to the Author of our mercies, while we are careful to keep our language unalloyed: our expressions can never be too strong, while they are pure and chaste: but we sometimes meet with a familiarity or puerility of address in Christians to the Most High, which can only be excused by the simplicity of their piety, and unconscious ignorance. But David revered the God he loved; and accumulates the strongest terms he could recollect to express his obligations to his deliverer: the rock on whom all his hopes were built; the fortress to which he looked alone for safety, and "the horn of his salvation."

The psalmist now looks back upon the sorrows and dangers from which he had been at different times rescued. He had been in imminent danger of his life. "The sorrows," or rather "toils" (i. e. snares) of death had been thrown around him; but "the horn of his salvation" tore them to pieces. "The floods of Belial," or of wickedness, had been cast after him, as it were to overwhelm him. But he fled to the rock that was higher than himself, and there he found a refuge. The psalmist then goes on to describe the deliverance wrought for him in allusion to the awful tempests at mount Sinai, meaning thereby to intimate that, in some instance at least, his rescue from death and destruction had been attended with a similar display of the divine power and majesty, and he ascribes the cause of it to the divine bounty: "He delivered me, because he delighted in me." Nor is this contradicted by the words following: for, though his character and conduct, especially in respect of zeal and uprightness, may not be the cause of his deliverance, it may be the measure of it. Thus, under the new dispensation, salvation, as to its cause, is of grace alone, (Ephes. ii. 8.) yet will the rewards of grace be distributed to every man according to his works." (Matt. xvi. 27.)

It does not, therefore, appear to us necessary to exclude David's personal experience from this psalm: at the same time we have no objection to its application, in a secondary view, to the Messiah: and, indeed, St. Peter seems to allude to the 4th verse, when he speaks of his resurrection from the dead, (Acts ii. 24.) and to him, certainly, some of the expressions apply more literally and fully, for "he knew no sin, neither was ror, and far exceed in sublimity every thing of the kind to be found in any remains of heathen antiquity."—Bagster.

Ver. 8. Smoke out of his nostrils.—Ainsworth, "Smoke ascended in his anger."

Ver. 9. He bowed the heavens.—[Jehovah is here represented as a mighty warrior going forth to fight the battles of David. When he descended to the engagement, the very heavens bowed to render his descent more awful.—His military tent was substantial darkness;—the voice of his thunder was the warlike alarm which sounded to the battle;—the currier in which he rode was the thick clouds of heaven, conducted by cherubs, and carried on by the irresistible force, and rapid wings of an impetuous tempest;—and the darts and weapons he employed were thunder-bolts, lightnings, fiery hail, deluging rains, and stormy winds!—No wonder that when God rose all his enemies were scattered, and those that hated him fled before him.—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Fly on wings of the wind.—[In the parallel place of Samuel it is voyage, "and he was seen;" but many MSS. read as here, voyagide, "and he did fly," which, from the parallelism, appears the correct reading. God alone "rides in the whirlwind and directs the storm."—Bagster.

Ver. 15. At the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.—Ainsworth, "At the breath of the wind of thine anger." This is supposed to refer to the passage of the Red sea.

Ver. 16. Many waters.—i. e. afflictions, terrors.

Ver. 18. They prevented me.—Anticipated, surrounded me.

righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

21 For I have kept the ways of the Lord, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

22 For all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his statutes from me.

23 I was also upright before him, and I kept myself from mine iniquity.

24 Therefore hath the Lord recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eyesight.

25 With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful; with an upright man thou wilt show thyself upright;

26 With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward.

27 For thou wilt save the afflicted people; but wilt bring down high looks.

28 For thou wilt light my candle: the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness.

29 For by thee I have run through a troop; and by my God have I leaped over a wall.

30 As for God, his way is perfect: the word of the Lord is tried: he is a buckler to all those that trust in him.

31 For who is God save the Lord? or who is a rock save our God?

32 It is God that girdeth me with strength, and maketh my way perfect.

33 He maketh my feet like hinds' feet, and setteth me upon my high places.

34 He teacheth my hands to war, so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms.

35 Thou hast also given me the shield of thy salvation: and thy right hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleness hath made me great.

36 Thou hast enlarged my steps under me, that my feet did not slip.

37 I have pursued mine enemies, and overtaken them: neither did I turn again till they were consumed.

a with.

t Ps. 37. 27.

u before his eyes.

v Pr. 3. 34.

w or, useless.

x Pr. 6. 16, 17.

y or, lamp.

Job 22. 3.

z Pr. 20. 27.

a or, broken.

b or, refined.

c Ps. 12. 6.

d Pr. 30. 5.

e 2 Co. 3. 5.

f or, with thy meekness thou hast multiplied me.

g ancles.

h Pr. 4. 12.

i 2 Sa. 5. 30.

j caused to bow.

k Jer. 11. 11.

l Is. 55. 5.

m at the hearing of the ear.

n sons of the stranger.

o lie, or, yield feigned obedience.

p give thine avengements for me.

q or, destroyed.

r man of violence.

s or, concealed.

t Ro. 11. 23.

u Ro. 1. 19, 20.

38 I have wounded them that they were not able to rise: they are fallen under my feet.

39 For thou hast girded me with strength unto the battle: thou hast subdued under me those that rose up against me.

40 Thou hast also given me the necks of mine enemies; that I might destroy them that hate me.

41 They cried, but there was none to save them: even unto the Lord, but he answered them not.

42 Then did I beat them small as the dust before the wind: I did cast them out as the dirt in the streets.

43 Thou hast delivered me from the strivings of the people; and thou hast made me the head of the heathen: a people whom I have not known shall serve me.

44 As soon as they hear of me, they shall obey me: the strangers shall submit themselves unto me.

45 The strangers shall fade away, and be afraid out of their close places.

46 The Lord liveth, and blessed be my rock; and let the God of my salvation be exalted.

47 It is God that avengeth me, and subdueth the people unto me.

48 He delivereth me from mine enemies: yea, thou liftest me up above those that rise up against me: thou hast delivered me from the violent man.

49 Therefore will I give thanks unto thee, O Lord, among the heathen, and sing praises unto thy name.

50 Great deliverance giveth he to his king; and showeth mercy to his anointed, to David, and to his seed for evermore.

PSALM XIX.

1 The creatures show God's glory. 7 The word his grace. 12 David prayeth for grace.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.
THE heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handy-work.

guile found in his mouth." (1 Pet. ii. 22.) The last verse but one is also quoted by St. Paul, in reference to the calling of the Gentiles. (Rom. xv. 9.)

Ver. 25—50. The equity of divine providence, and the merciful deliverance of those who trust in God.—These maxims evidently accord with those of our Lord in his sermon on the mount, (Matt. v. 3, &c.) "The merciful shall obtain mercy; the pure in heart shall see God." He will save the meek, the poor, and the distressed; but with the froward and perverse he will contend; and the high-spirited and proud he will bring down. The Psalmist, however, expresses his confidence in God, who, as he had delivered, he trusted in him that he would still deliver: and in this part of the psalm some verses also occur which seem peculiarly appropriate to the Messiah. David might indeed say, when he became master of the surrounding nations, "Thou hast made me head of the heathen (nations); a people whom I have not known (that is, foreigners) shall submit themselves unto me;" but it appertains, in a far more exalted and extensive sense, to our divine Redeemer, to whom, as we have seen, (Ps. ii. 8.) it was said, "Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Christ being indeed the substance of the Old Testament as well as of the New, while we are warranted in believing that David, in most of his psalms, had respect to his own circumstances and experience, we are no less justified by apostolical authority in conceiving, that by the Spirit of inspiration he had frequent views of the future glory of his great antitype; and this is the more natural, as it appears the Hebrews always felt a peculiar interest in the fate of their posterity, and no more than the patriarch David, who, at the same time that he looked to the coming of Messiah as the consummation of all his wishes in futurity, looked to him also as the medium of his personal salvation.

The last verse, in which both appear included, is thus beautifully paraphrased by Bishop Horne: "Great deliverance giveth he unto his king," to king David, in saving him from Saul, and his other temporal enemies, and seating him on the earthly throne of Israel; to King Messiah, in rescuing him from death and the grave, and exalting him to a heavenly throne, as Head of the church: "and showeth mercy to his anointed;" i. e. outwardly, and in a figure, with oil (David;) and to him who was anointed inwardly, and in truth, with the Holy Ghost and with power (Christ): "to David, and to his seed for evermore;" to the literal David, and to his royal progeny, "of whom, according to the flesh, Christ came;" and to Christ himself, the spiritual David, the beloved of God, with all those who through faith become his children, the sons of God, and heirs of eternal life.

"To David and his royal seed

Thy grace for ever shall extend;

Thy love to saints, in Christ their head,

Knows not a limit, nor an end."—Watts.

PSALM XIX. Ver. 1—14. To the chief musician. A Psalm

Ver. 33. Like hinds' feet.—Agility was a great qualification with the ancient warriors. 2 Sam. i. 23. 1 Chron. xii. 8. So among the Greeks Achilles was called "swift-footed," &c.

Ver. 34. Bow of steel.—Ainsworth and Horsley, "brass," or copper. [All the versions read, "and thou hast made my arms as a bow of brass;" evidently reading nathathah, "thou hast given" or made, instead of nichathah, "is broken;" and nechooshah, is certainly not steel, but brass, of which arms were anciently made.]—Bagster.

Ver. 35. Thy gentleness hath made me great.—Boothroyd, "Thy condescension maketh me great;" which we prefer, as meekness cannot be applied to Deity.

Ver. 40. The necks of mine enemies.—See Josh. x. 24. Jer. xxvii. 12.

Ver. 44. Shall submit themselves.—"Lie unto me." Submission does not always imply conversion: "they shall fade away," &c. ver. 45.

PSALM XIX. It is uncertain when this highly finished and beautiful ode was composed; though some think it was written by David in the wilderness when persecuted by Saul.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. Firmament.—[Rakca, from raka, to stretch out, the expanse: not only containing the celestial bodies, but also the air, light, rain, &c., &c.]

2 Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge.

3 There is no speech nor language, <sup>b</sup> where their voice is not heard.

4 Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun,

5 Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

6 His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

7 The <sup>a</sup> law of the Lord is perfect, <sup>c</sup> converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

8 The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes.

9 The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

10 More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and <sup>e</sup> the honeycomb.

11 Moreover by them is thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward.

12 Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults.

13 Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion <sup>b</sup> over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from <sup>i</sup> the great transgression.

b without their voice heard, or, without these their voices is heard.

c or, rule, or, direction.

d or, doctrine.

e or, restoring.

f truth.

g the dropping of honey-combs.

h Ro. 6.12. 14.

i or, much.

j rock.

a set thee on a high place.

b thy help.

c support.

d turn to ashes, or, make fat.

e heaven, of his holiness.

f by the strength of the salvation of.

14 Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my <sup>i</sup> strength, and my redeemer.

PSALM XX.

1 The church blesseth the king in his exploits. 7 Her confidence in God's succour.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

THE Lord hear thee in the day of trouble; the name of the God of Jacob defend <sup>a</sup> thee.

2 Send <sup>b</sup> thee help from the sanctuary, and <sup>c</sup> strengthen thee out of Zion.

3 Remember all thy offerings, and <sup>d</sup> accept thy burnt-sacrifice. Selah.

4 Grant thee according to thine own heart, and fulfil all thy counsel.

5 We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners: the Lord fulfil all thy petitions.

6 Now know I that the Lord saveth his anointed; he will hear him from <sup>e</sup> his holy heaven <sup>f</sup> with the saving strength of his right hand.

7 Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God.

8 They are brought down and fallen: but we are risen, and stand upright.

9 Save, Lord: let the king hear us when we call.

PSALM XXI.

1 A thanksgiving for victory. 7 Confidence of farther success.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

THE king shall joy in thy strength, O Lord; and in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

PSALM XX. Ver. 1—9. To the chief musician. A Psalm of David, after he became king, containing the prayer of the Hebrew church on his behalf.—This is a loyal as well as a devotional psalm. It is evidently intended to express the attachment of Israel, and particularly of Judah, to David's government, and may very properly be applied to David's Son and Lord, the King of Zion, interpreting only Old Testament types according to the apostolical examples. The sixth verse seems to be the language of David himself, who, contemplating the pious petitions offered on his behalf, says, "Now know I," seeing the Lord's people are stirred up to prayer for me, and for my success—"Now know I that the Lord saveth his anointed!" In the following verses, David and his subjects unite in the same petitions, and conclude with an hosanna, or prayer for salvation, which, as it was offered to our Saviour while on earth, peculiarly belongs to him. "Thus (says Bishop Horne) the psalm concludes with a general 'hosanna' of the church, praying for the prosperity and success of the then future Messiah, and for her own salvation in him, her king; who, from the grave and gate of death, was, for this end, to be exalted to the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, that he might hear, and present to his Father, the prayers of his people, 'when they call upon him.'"

"Hosanna to the Prince of Grace;
Sion, behold thy King!
Proclaim the Son of David's race,
And teach the babes to sing."—Watts.

PSALM XXI. Ver. 1—13. A Psalm of David.—Bishop Horsley divides this psalm into two parts. "The first part, consisting of the first seven verses, (he remarks,) is addressed to a certain king. The second part, beginning with the eighth and ending with the twelfth verse, is addressed to that king assuring him of success and triumph over his enemies, as the reward of his trust in God. The thirteenth verse closes the whole song with a prayer to God, to exert his power for the speedy destruction of his enemies." The king here referred to, the Bishop, in harmony with the Chaldee paraphrast, explains of the king Messiah. There seems no necessity, however, wholly to exclude the type. When God blessed Abra-

Ver. 13. Presumptuous sins.—Literally, swelling sins; as pride, haughtiness, tyranny.

PSALM XX. Ver. 5. We will set up our banners.—"The sense is, We will take the field against our enemies, in full reliance upon God's assistance." Bishop Horsley.

Ver. 7. Some trust, &c.—Bishop Lowth renders this verse,

"These in chariots, and those in horses;
But we in the name of Jehovah our God will be strong."

[This is probably a reference to the vast multitudes of chariots and horses which the Ammonites and Syrians brought against David, 2 Sa. x. 6—8. The Psalm seems to consist of the following parts:—the prayers of the people on behalf of the king, who had previously offered sacrifices, ver. 1—3. of the high priest, ver. 4.; of David and his attendants, ver. 5.; of the high priest, after the victim was consumed, ver. 6.; of David and his men, ver. 7, 8.; of the whole congregation, ver. 9.]—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Save, Lord.—[Or, O Jehovah save the king—answer us when we call upon thee.]—Bagster.

f David, on the works and word of God.—As the 8th Psalm describes the beauties of a midnight scene, this celebrates the glories of an unclouded eastern day. "Day unto day, and night unto night," in perpetual succession, declare the glory of their Creator; and though their instructions are conveyed in silence, and no sound is heard, yet those instructions are universally understood, and equally intelligible in all nations. "Their line (or sound) is gone out through all the earth," &c. that is, the instructions they are intended to convey, as to the being and power, wisdom and goodness of the Creator, are seen without letters, and heard without sound, because they speak not to the eye or the ear only, but to the heart.

"In them," (says the Psalmist,) that is, in the visible heavens, "hath he set a tabernacle for the sun," which is here compared to "a bridegroom" coming "out of his chamber" on the bridal morning; or to "a giant prepared to run a race." Such is the diffusion of divine truth, and such the extent of its powerful influence, as displayed in the following verses. The law of God here spoken of, though it always includes "the preceptive" parts of Scripture, is seldom confined to them; but includes "the doctrine," (as in the margin,) and in short the whole of divine revelation, every part of which is occasionally employed by the Holy Spirit in the conversion of the soul of man, or in restoring it to God, from whom it has miserably departed.

David follows his eulogy on the word of God with a prayer for renewing and restraining grace; the latter, as Bishop Horne expresses it, "to keep him back" from "presumptuous sins," or sins committed knowingly, deliberately, and with a high hand, against the convictions and remonstrances of conscience. "The Rabbins (as did Moses himself) distinguish all sins into those committed ignorantly and presumptuously: the former we consider here intended by "secret faults," as forming a contrast to the latter. (See Levit. iv. 2, 3. Num. xv. 30.) And by the great transgression, commentators understand either idolatry or apostasy, which, indeed, as respected the ancient Jews, was the same thing; for whenever they apostatized from Jehovah, they became idolaters. He that would avoid great sins, must beware of little ones.

all of which display the infinite power and wisdom of their Almighty Creator.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Day unto day.—Or, "After day:" so unto is used for after, Exod. xvi. 1.; xix. 1. in Hebrew.

Ver. 3. Where their voice, &c.—See margin. Bishop Horsley renders this verse, "There is no speech, no words: no voice of them is heard: (yet) their sound goeth," &c. [Or, they have no speech, nor words, nor is their voice heard; yet into all the earth hath gone out their sound, and to the extremity of the world their words.]—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Their line.—The allusion is to a measuring line, by which inheritances were divided. But the LXX. render it sound, and so it is quoted by the apostle, (Rom. x. 18.) implying the intelligible nature of that instruction which he works of nature every where give to man, as to the being and perfections of his Creator.

Ver. 7. The law.—The Hebrew Torah, is neither confined to the preceptive, or the doctrinal parts of Scripture, but includes the whole of revelation.

Ver. 9. Clean—Lowth, "Pure."—True.—Heb. "Truth." The and, inalic, is better omitted, as by Ainsworth and Lowth, "just altogether."

a thanksgiving for victory.

2 Thou hast given him his heart's desire, and hast not withholden the request of his lips. Selah.

3 For thou preventest him with the blessings of goodness: thou settest a crown of pure gold on his head.

4 He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever.

5 His glory is great in thy salvation: honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him.

6 For thou hast made a him most blessed for ever: thou hast b made him exceeding glad c with thy countenance.

7 For d the king t rusteth in the LORD, and through the mercy of the Most High he shall not be moved.

8 Thy hand shall find e out all thine enemies: thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.

9 Thou shalt make them as a f fiery oven in the time of thine anger: the LORD shall swallow them up in his wrath, and the fire shall g devour them.

10 Their h fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, and their seed from among the children of men.

11 For they intended evil against thee: they imagined a mischievous device, which i they are not able to perform.

12 Therefore shalt thou j make them turn their k back, when thou shalt make ready thine arrows upon thy strings against the face of them.

13 Be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own l strength: so will we sing and praise thy power.

PSALM XXII.

1 David complaineth in great discouragement. 9 He prayeth in great distress. 23 He praiseth God.

To the chief Musician upon a Ajeleth Shahar, A Psalm of David.

MY b God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from c helping me, and from the words of my d roaring?

2 O my God, I cry in the day-time, but thou

PSALMS.—XXII.

a set him to be blessed
b Ps. 12.2
c Ps. 4.6, 7, 16.11.
d 1 Sa. 30.6. Ps. 26.1.
e Am. 9.2, 3. f Mat. 4.1. g Is. 28.11. h Ps. 37.28. i Ps. 2.1, 4. j or, set them as a butt.
k shoulder. l Job 9.19. a or, the hind of the morning. b Mat. 27.46. Lu. 24.44. c my salvation. d He. 5.7.
e there is no silence to me. f Ps. 65.1. g Is. 41.14. h Is. 53.3. i Ma. 15.29. j Lu. 23.35, &c. j open. k Ps. 109.25. l rolled himself. m Ps. 91.14. n or, if he delight in him. o or, keptest me in safety. p Is. 46.3. 49.1. q nota calper. r opened their mouths against me. s or, sundered. t Re. 22.15. u Jn. 19.23. 20.25. 27. v Is. 52.14. w only one. x hand.

David's prayer in distress

hearest not; and in the night season, and e am not silent.

3 But thou art holy, O thou that inhabitest the praises f of Israel.

4 Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them.

5 They cried unto thee, and were delivered: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.

6 But I am a g worm, and no man; a reproach of men, and despised h of the people.

7 All i they that see me laugh me to scorn: they j shoot out the lip, they shake k the head, saying,

8 He l trusted on the LORD that he would deliver him: let him deliver m him, n seeing he delighted in him.

9 But thou art he that took me out of the womb: thou o didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts.

10 I was cast upon thee from the womb: thou p art my God from my mother's belly.

11 Be not far from me; for trouble is near; for there is q none to help.

12 Many bulls have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round.

13 They r gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion.

14 I am poured out like water, and all my bones are s out of joint: my heart is like wax; it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

15 My strength is dried up like a potsherd; and my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death.

16 For t dogs have compassed me: the assembly of the wicked have inclosed me: they u pierced my hands and my feet.

17 I v may tell all my bones: they look and stare upon me.

18 They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.

19 But be not thou far from me, O LORD: O my strength, haste thee to help me.

20 Deliver my soul from the sword; my w darling from the x power of the dog.

ham, he was made a blessing, and so David; and this, indeed, is God's method of blessing mankind. Israel were blessed for the fathers' sakes, and we are blessed for Christ's sake. (Rom. xi. 28. Ephes. iv. 32.)

"The church concludes with a joyful acclamation to her Redeemer, wishing for his exaltation in his own strength as God, who was to be abased in much weakness as man. We still continue to wish and pray for his exaltation over sin, in the hearts of his people by grace, and finally over death, in their bodies, by his glorious power at the resurrection."—Bishop Horne.

"Let every nation, every age,
In this delightful work engage;
Old men and babes in Zion sing
The growing glories of her king."—Watts.

PSALM XXI. Ver. 3. Preventest.—[To prevent, literally signifies to go before; and this sense of the word is an exact version of the original.]—B.

Ver. 9. As a fiery oven.—Dr. Kennicott, on the authority of three or four MSS., would read, "Thou shalt put them in a fiery furnace." But Bishop Horsley says, "The common reading seems preferable. It describes the smoke of the Messiah's enemies perishing by fire, ascending like the smoke of a furnace." See Rev. xiv. 11.

Ver. 10. Their fruit.—That is, their children. Ps. cxvii. 3. Ver. 12. Make them turn their back.—"Thou shalt set them as a butt." So Ainsworth, Horsley, &c. See Job vii. 20; xvi. 12. Lam. iii. 12.

Ver. 13. Be thou exalted.—Both the prosperity of the church, and the ruin of its enemies, tend to exalt God, or to render his glory conspicuous to his rational creatures. These effects can only be produced by his Omnipotence; which his people unitedly pray to see displayed, that they may justly celebrate his praises. This conclusion greatly resembles the first petitions, and closing doxology, of the Lord's prayer.—T. Scott.

PSALM XXII. Title.—To the chief Musician . . . upon Ajeleth Shahar.—We have not the least idea that this psalm has reference to any musical instrument or tune, for in none of these titles is any known instrument mentioned, only the different bands of wind or stringed instruments. The margin explains the Hebrew words Ajeleth Shahar to mean, "the hind of the morning," with which agree Ainsworth, Patrick, and many others, who compare the illustrious author of this psalm to a hind hunted by dogs (see ver. 16—20) in the morning, the usual time for hunting. Some Rabbin, however, translate these words, "the morning star;" and Bishop Chandler tells us that Ajeleth is the name of Venus among the Arabs; and this name, "the morning star," is, we know, applied to our Saviour by St. John, in Rev. xii. 16. But we prefer the former interpretation. Such titles of poetical compositions are, we know, quite in the Eastern taste. One of the most celebrated Persian poems is called "the Bed of Roses;" another, "the Garden of Knowledge;" and certain celebrated Arabian works are called, "Fragrant Plants," "Approved Butter," "Pure Gold," "The Lion of the Forest," "The Bright Star," &c. See Orient. Lit. No. 755. Rev. T. H. Horne's Introduction.

PSALM XXII. Ver. 1—31. A Psalm of David.—Our Lord is here set forth, as Bishop Horne remarks, under the image of a hind (or hart) roused early in the morning of his mortal life, chased all the day, and, in the evening of that day, hunted to the death. This psalm appears to belong exclusively to the Messiah, several passages not meeting the circumstances of David, whose garments were not parted by lot; whose hands and feet were never pierced, &c. Dr. Kennicott (with many others) divides this psalm into two parts—a prayer and thanksgiving. The first sentence of the former was uttered by our Saviour on the cross in an agony of distress, and with a voice so loud, that it is here compared to the roaring of a lion: a cry so strong and agonizing as to be indistinct, which accounts for its being misunderstood by the by-standers, some of whom sup-

Ver. 1. From my roaring.—The word is applied to the roaring of a lion, (Amos iii. 8, and elsewhere,) and we learn from St. Matthew, (ch. xxvii. 46, 47,) that when Jesus uttered the preceding words, it was with a loud voice, and in great agony. (Heb. v. 7.)

Ver. 2. Am not silent.—See margin; i. e. no interval of rest, or ease. Ver. 3. Inhabitest the praises, &c.—That is, that dwellest in the temple, where praises are perpetually sung.

Ver. 4. A worm.—A maggot; implying excessive weakness in himself, and contempt from others, as in the verse following.

Ver. 5. He trusted on the Lord.—A Hebrew phrase, expressing faith and confidence; but used here in ridicule. —Seeing he delighted.—Or, "if he delighted in him." See Mat. xxvii. 43.

Ver. 12. Strong (bulls) of Bashan.—A country famous for cattle and sheep. Deut. xxxii. 14, 15. Amos iv. 1.

Ver. 14. I am poured out.—This describes a state of extreme lassitude and weakness.

Ver. 16. Dogs have compassed me.—Dogs in the East are not domesticated as with us; (see note on Exod. xi. 7.) they are therefore furious and dangerous. —Pierced.—[The textual reading is, kaari, "as a lion my hands and feet;" all the Evangelists so quote the passage, and apply it to the crucifixion of Christ, there seems scarcely the shadow of a doubt that this is the genuine reading; especially when it is considered, that the other contains no clear sense at all. The whole difference lies between war and yood, which might easily be mistaken for each other.]—Bastard.

Ver. 17. Tell all my bones.—The body of our Lord, being distended by crucifixion. Le Clerc.—They look and stare.—Who? It is generally supposed his enemies are here referred to; but may not the bones themselves, by a bold personification, be intended? Is it not often said, of a person in the last stage of consumption, that his bones stare through the skin?

Ver. 20. My darling.—i. e. my life. See Ps. xxxv. 17.—From the power—i. e. the paw of the dog, ready to tear the sufferer to pieces.

21 Save me from the lion's <sup>2</sup> mouth : for thou hast heard me from the horns of the <sup>3</sup> unicorns.
22 I <sup>4</sup> will declare thy name unto my brethren : in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee.

23 Ye <sup>5</sup> that fear the LORD, praise him ; all ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him ; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel.

24 For he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted ; neither hath he hid his face from him ; but when he <sup>6</sup> cried unto him, he heard.

25 My praise shall be of thee in the great <sup>7</sup> congregation : <sup>8</sup> I will pay my vows before them that fear him.

26 The meek <sup>9</sup> shall eat and be satisfied : they shall praise the LORD that seek him : your heart shall live for ever.

27 All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD : and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

28 For the kingdom is the LORD's : and he is the governor among the nations.

29 All they that be fat upon earth shall eat and worship : all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him : and none can keep alive his own soul.

30 A seed shall serve him ; it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation.

y 2 Ti. 4. 17.

z Is. 34. 7.

a Ps. 40. 9.
He 2. 11, 12.

b Ps. 115. 11, 13.

c He. 5. 7.

d Ps. 66. 13, 16.

e Ps. 116. 14.
Ec. 5. 4, 5.

f Mat. 5. 5.

g Ro. 3. 27. 26.

h Is. 40. 11.
Jo. 10. 11, 14.

i Ps. 84. 11.

c pasture of tender grass.

d waters of quietness.

e Is. 43. 2.

f makest fast.

g to length of days.

31 They shall come, and shall declare his righteousness <sup>1</sup> unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this.

PSALM XXIII.

David's confidence in God's grace.

A Psalm of David.

THE LORD is my <sup>2</sup> shepherd ; I <sup>3</sup> shall not want.

2 He maketh me to lie down in <sup>4</sup> green pastures : he leadeth me beside the <sup>5</sup> still waters.

3 He restoreth my soul : he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

4 Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil : for thou <sup>6</sup> art with me ; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

5 Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies : thou <sup>7</sup> anointest my head with oil ; my cup runneth over.

6 Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life : and I will dwell in the house of the LORD <sup>8</sup> for ever.

PSALM XXIV.

1 God's lordship in the world. 2 The citizens of his spiritual kingdom. 3 An exhortation to receive him.

A Psalm of David.

THE earth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof ; the world, and they that dwell therein.

2 For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods.

posed he was calling for Elias. The other circumstances herewith connected, imply a state of extreme lassitude, weakness, and fatigue, previous to the execution of our Lord, in consequence of which he fainted in carrying his cross ; and the peculiarity of his death by crucifixion, which was not a Jewish, but a Roman punishment, is here pointed out by the "piercing of his hands and feet, and the parting of his garments ;" but the casting lots for his vesture was still more singular, and occurred perhaps in no other instance. (Compare Matt. xxvii. 35, and John xix. 23, 24.)

The twenty-first verse, which concludes the petitionary part of the psalm, is obscure and difficult, (as may be seen in our note subjoined,) but Bishop Horsley has a very ingenious conjecture, which removes the difficulty without violence to the text. By restoring the words to the order of the Hebrew original, he divides the verse thus—

"Save me from the mouth of the lion,
And from the horns of the unicorns :—

PART II.

—Thou hast answered me.
I will declare," &c.

And then the psalmist proceeds (according to Bishop Louth's idea) with the hymn of praise here referred to. This second part of the psalm expresses Messiah's triumph after his resurrection, the universal spread of his gospel among the rich and the poor—those who are fattened like the bulls of Bashan, and those, who, for poverty and distress, can scarcely keep life in them—all, that is, many of both classes shall submit, and become "a seed to serve him," even the generation of the righteous.

On the authority of the Septuagint, and some of Kennicott's Hebrew manuscripts, Bishop Louth disjoins the last member of the twenty-ninth verse, in a manner similar to the above correction of Bishop Horsley on ver. 21 ; and, by a very slight departure from the present edition of the Hebrew Bible, reads as follows, ver. 35 :

"But my soul shall live to him ; my seed shall serve him :
It shall be accounted," &c.

With this correction, agree Bishop Horsley and others, and it is mentioned by Bishop Horne without censure.

The two great points to be considered by us in this psalm, are, 1. The extreme sufferings of the Son of God for our sins, which ought to humble us at his feet with gratitude and with shame ; and, 2. The blessed consequences resulting to mankind from his death and resurrection, which call upon us for the most animated praises, and the utmost devotion to his service.

PSALM XXIII. Ver. 1–6. A Psalm of David, in pastoral language.—Of the author of this psalm there is no doubt ; and we are inclined to date it among the first of the writer's compositions, when he had not forgotten the pleasures of the pastoral life, though at the same time he had become acquainted with the dangers of the wilderness, and had traversed the deep ravines between the mountains, from which he drew the fearful image of "the valley of the shadow of death." The psalmist appears overwhelmed with a grateful sense of the many blessings and privileges he then enjoyed, and encouraged to brave any dangers he might meet by faith in the divine protection. By "the valley of the shadow of death," may be intended any situation of danger, whether in sickness or in war in which he looked for protection to the rod (or sceptre) of the Almighty, and for support to the staff of his holy word.

Contemplating a situation in the barren wilderness, though even surrounded with enemies, he is encouraged by the divine goodness, not only to expect necessary supplies, but to sit down composedly as to a feast—his head fattened with oil (as the Hebrew phrase is) and his cup running over with the choicest wine ; that is, the divine presence and communion with his God was to him a feast in the wilderness, and a guard of protection when surrounded with foes. He looks forward, therefore, to end his days on earth in peace, where he could constantly attend God's earthly tabernacle, and from thence to be removed to his palace in the heavens.

"Still hope and grateful praise,
Shall form my constant song :
Shall cheer my gloomiest days,
And tune my dying tongue—
Until my ransomed soul shall rise,
To praise him better in the skies."

Condor's Star in the East.

PSALM XXIV. Ver. 1–10. A Psalm of David. The sovereignty of God, and the resurrection of Christ.—The occasion of this psalm is not stated. Bishop Louth supposes it to have been composed on the removal of the ark to mount Zion. 1 Chron. xv. xvi ; but it is remarkable that another psalm is there given, as composed on this occasion, totally different from the one before us : nor is the expression, "Lift up your heads, ye gates," well adapted to the occasion, since the tabernacle had neither gates nor doors, (much less everlasting ones) ; and when the temple was erected, the gates do not appear to have been made to lift up, but to fold, as usual in both ancient and modern times. The only way to account for this, is to suppose that on ascending the hill some temporary impediments were placed in the way, analogous to what is related by Bruce to have taken place at a grand festival occasion at which he was present, in Ethiopia. On this occasion, a chorus of noble virgins stretched a silken cord across where the king was to pass, and demanded, "Who are you ?" The answer was, "I am your king, the king of Ethiopia !" This is denied, and the king withdraws. The ceremony is three times repeated, and at the last the king draws his sword, and PSALM XXIII. Ver. 2. Beside the still waters.—See margin. Or, stillness i. e. a gently purling stream.

Ver. 3. He restoreth my soul.—from backsliding ; as a wandering sheep from the mountains. See Luke xv. 4, 5.

Ver. 5. Thou anointest my head with oil.—This was customary at the feasts both of the Hebrews and Greeks. Eccl. ix. 7, 8. Matt. vi. 17. Homcr's Iliad, x. 577, &c.—My cup runneth over.—This was also a piece of ancient hospitality, to make a guest welcome. See Orient. Cust. Nos. 889, 890.

PSALM XXIV. Ver. 2. Established it upon the floods.—See note on Job xxxviii. 6.

Ver. 21. For thou hast heard me.—This is unhappily transposed, contrary to the order of the original. Ainsworth reads literally, "from the horns of the unicorns, thou hast answered me." Bishop Horne renders it, "From the horns, &c. hear thou me." But Bishop Horsley's conjecture, given in our exposition, removes all the obscurity.

Ver. 29. All they that be fat.—That is, says Ainsworth, "the rich and mighty, . . . fat with plenty." See Isa. lx. 1–10. Rev. xxi. 24. If so, the following sentence refers to the poor and wretched.—None (of whom) can keep alive his own soul.—That is, the poor as well as rich shall bow before him. But see exposition.

3 Who <sup>a</sup> shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? or who shall stand in his holy place?

4 <sup>b</sup> He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

5 He <sup>c</sup> shall receive the blessing from the LORD, and righteousness from the God of his salvation.

6 This <sup>d</sup> is the generation of them that seek him, that seek thy face, <sup>e</sup> O Jacob. Selah.

7 Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

8 Who <sup>f</sup> is this King of glory? The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

9 Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

10 Who is this King of glory? The LORD of hosts, he <sup>g</sup> is the King of glory. Selah.

PSALM XXV.

1 David's confidence in prayer. 7 He prayeth for remission of sins, 16 and for help in affliction.

A Psalm of David.

UNTIL thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.

2 O my God, I trust in thee: let me not be <sup>a</sup> ashamed, let not mine enemies triumph over me.

3 Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed: let them be ashamed which transgress without cause.

4 Show <sup>b</sup> me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths.

5 Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou <sup>c</sup> art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day.

6 Remember, O LORD, thy <sup>d</sup> tender mercies and thy loving-kindnesses; for they <sup>e</sup> have been ever of old.

cuts the silken cord—on which the virgins shout, "You are our king, the king of Zion!" and they are immediately joined by the Court and the army, singing Hallelujah! accompanied with the sound of trumpets, drums, and fire-arms!

This ceremony seems evidently borrowed from the psalm before us; or may probably allude to some ceremony of more ancient date not on record, which might elucidate the phrase here used of lifting up the gates of Zion, and the repetition of this important question, "Who is the King of glory?" Supposing, however, some temporary impediment to have been placed in different parts of the hill of Zion, it will sufficiently account for the reiterated demand and reply here made by the semi-chorus and chorus in this psalm.

But to come to the psalm itself, which was evidently sung in dialogue. It first opens with claiming, on the part of the God of Israel, the sovereignty of the whole earth, though he had made his dwelling-place in Zion. The inquiry then is, Who will this great and illustrious Being admit to reside with him? And the answer is, None but upright and faithful men; none but those who seek the blessing of God and his righteousness; none but the generation of those who seek communion with the God of Jacob. In short, neither painted hypocrites, nor self-righteous Pharisees, nor mere formal professors; but the true worshippers only of the true God—the God of Jacob.

The character of the God of Israel, and of his true worshippers, being ascertained, a demand is now made to admit him, with his attendants, into his holy temple. This psalm, according to the Rabbins, was always sung on the first day of the week, and is marked as such in some copies of the Septuagint. Whether or not they considered it as a prophecy of the resurrection of Christ, to that event it has been, by Christians, uniformly applied, and with the greatest propriety, considering that he hath, on his vesture and on his thigh, this name written, "King of kings, and Lord of lords." (Rev. xix. 16.)

"We must now form to ourselves an idea of the Lord of Glory, after his resurrection from the dead, making his entry into the eternal temple in heaven, as of old, by the symbol of his presence, he took possession of that figurative and tempo-

a Ps. 15.

b The clean of hands.

c Is. 33. 15-17.

d or, O God of Jacob.

e Ps. 22. 4, 5. Is. 49. 23.

f Is. 2. 3. Je. 50. 5.

g bonitas. Is. 63. 15.

d Job 13. 28.

e Ps. 51. 1.

f Ho. 14. 9.

g Ps. 79. 9. Eze. 36. 22, 24. 1 Jn. 2. 13.

h Ro. 5. 15. 21.

i Ps. 32. 8. 37. 23.

j lodge in goodness.

k Ps. 37. 11, 22.

l Ps. 3. 32. Ep. 7. 17. Ep. 1. 9, 18.

m or, his covenant to make them know it.

n bring forth.

o Ps. 124. 7, 8.

p Mt. 7. 19.

q Hab. 3. 17. 19.

r hatred of violence.

s Ps. 130. 8.

7 Remember not the sins of my <sup>a</sup> youth, nor my transgressions: according <sup>b</sup> to thy mercy remember thou me for thy goodness' sake, O LORD.

8 Good and upright <sup>c</sup> is the LORD: therefore will he teach sinners in the way.

9 The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he teach his way.

10 All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth unto such <sup>d</sup> as keep his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For <sup>e</sup> thy name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; for it <sup>f</sup> is <sup>g</sup> great.

12 What man <sup>h</sup> is he that feareth the LORD? him <sup>i</sup> shall he teach in the way <sup>j</sup> that he shall choose.

13 His soul shall <sup>k</sup> dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit <sup>l</sup> the earth.

14 The secret <sup>m</sup> of the LORD <sup>n</sup> is with them that fear him; and <sup>o</sup> he will show them his covenant.

15 Mine eyes <sup>p</sup> are ever toward the LORD; for he shall <sup>q</sup> pluck my feet out of the <sup>r</sup> net.

16 Turn <sup>s</sup> thee unto me, and have mercy upon me; for I <sup>t</sup> am desolate and afflicted.

17 The troubles of my heart are <sup>u</sup> enlarged: O bring thou me out of my distresses.

18 Look upon mine affliction and my pain; and forgive all my sins.

19 Consider mine enemies; for they are many; and they hate me with <sup>v</sup> cruel hatred.

20 O keep my soul, and deliver me: let me not be ashamed; for I put my trust in thee.

21 Let integrity and uprightness preserve me; for I wait on thee.

22 Redeem <sup>w</sup> Israel, O God, out of all his troubles.

rary structure which once stood upon the hill of Zion. We are to conceive him gradually rising from mount Olivet, taking the clouds for his chariot, and ascending up on high; while some of his angels (like the Levites in this procession) demand that those everlasting gates and doors, hitherto shut and barred against the race of Adam, should be thrown open for his admission. "Lift up your heads, O ye gates!" and if any one should ask, "Who is the King of Glory?" to heaven and earth be it proclaimed aloud, by men and angels—that God our Saviour,—He is 'the Lord of Hosts;—He is the King of Glory.' Amen. Hallelujah."—Bishop Horne.

PSALM XXV. Ver. 1—22. A Psalm of David—in great distress.—"It is much the same, whether we suppose the church, or any single member thereof, to be speaking throughout this psalm, and praying for help and protection against spiritual enemies; and for knowledge and direction in the way of godliness." For this purpose the psalmist pleads God's ancient mercies, and the glory of his own name. He then describes the blessedness of those who fear the Lord, and concludes with praying for the redemption of God's Israel. Some passages, however, require a distinct remark. When David prays, "Pardon my iniquity, for it is great," we are not to consider (as some have done) the greatness of our sins as an argument for divine forgiveness; but because our sin is great, therefore should we the more earnestly pray for pardon. Again, by "the secret of the Lord," we do not understand any knowledge of the divine decrees, or of mysteries unrevealed; but rather, the assurance of his mercy, and that secret and divine communion with God, through Jesus Christ, in which consists the essence of true Christianity. (See John xiv. 22, 23. 1 John i. 3.)

On the psalmist's concluding prayer, "Redeem Israel, O God, out of all his troubles," Bishop Horne remarks, "In the common salvation, all have an interest; and for that reason, all should pray for it. The earthly David petitioned for Israel; the heavenly David ever continueth to intercede for the church; and every Christian ought to become a suppliant for his brethren, still looking and longing for that glorious day, when, by a joyful resurrection unto life eternal, God shall indeed "redeem Israel out of all his troubles."

Ver. 4. He that hath clean hands.—"The clean of hands and pure of heart."
—"Not sworn deceitfully."—Compare Ps. xv. 4.

Ver. 7. Lift up your heads.—It may be remarked, in addition to the Ethiopian custom above alluded to, that in London there is an ancient custom of shutting the gates of Temple Bar, whenever the king comes into the city; who is therefore obliged to demand admittance by a herald.

PSALM XXV. Title.—The name of David is prefixed to this and other psalms without the word Psalm or Prayer. Whether it were so originally, or for what cause omitted, we know not. This is the first of the alphabetical psalms, each verse beginning with a different letter, with some exceptions, supposed to be owing to the errors of the transcribers. Bishop Horsley.

Ver. 3. Transgress without cause.—Ainsworth, "In vain;" falsely, perfidiously.

Ver. 7. The sins of my youth.—That is, youthful sins. See note on Job xiii. 26.

Ver. 13. Dwell at ease.—See margin. Lowth, "Rest in goodness."

Ver. 14. The secret of the Lord.—The Hebrew word (sed) means private confidential conversation. Geenius.

PSALM XXVI.

David resorteth unto God in confidence of his integrity.

A Psalm of David.

JUDGE me, O LORD; for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the LORD; therefore I shall not slide.

2 Examine <sup>a</sup> me, O LORD, and prove me; try <sup>b</sup> my reins and my heart.

3 For thy loving-kindness is before mine eyes: and I have walked in thy truth.

4 I <sup>c</sup> have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers.

5 I have hated the congregation of evil-doers; and will not sit with the wicked.

6 I will wash <sup>d</sup> my hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O LORD:

7 That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works.

8 LORD, I have loved <sup>e</sup> the habitation of thy house, and the place <sup>f</sup> where thine honour dwelleth.

9 <sup>g</sup> Gather not my soul with sinners, nor my life with <sup>h</sup> bloody men:

10 In whose hands is mischief, and their right hand is full of bribes.

11 But as for me, I will walk in mine integrity: redeem me, and be merciful unto me.

12 My foot <sup>i</sup> standeth in an even place: in he congregations will I bless the LORD.

PSALM XXVII.

David sustaineth his faith by the power of God, <sup>j</sup> by his love to the service of God, <sup>k</sup> by prayer

A Psalm of David.

THE LORD <sup>a</sup> is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

2 When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, <sup>b</sup> came upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell.

a Ps. 139.23.
b Zec. 13.9.
c Ps. 1.1.
d Ex. 30.19, 20.
e Ps. 27.4.
f of the tabernacle of thine honour.
g or, Take not away.
h men of blood.
i I walked with.
j Ps. 40.2.
k Mi. 7.7, 8.
l approached against.
c Ps. 63.4.
d Ps. 63.2.
e or, delight.
f Is. 4.5, 6.
g shouting.
h or, my heart said unto thee, Let my face seek thy face.
i gather me.
j Is. 40.11.
k those which observed me.
Ps. 5.8.
l Ep. 2.8.

3 Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident.

4 One thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after; that I may <sup>c</sup> dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold <sup>d</sup> the <sup>e</sup> beauty of the LORD, and to inquire in his temple.

5 For <sup>f</sup> in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock.

6 And now shall my head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me: therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifices of <sup>g</sup> joy; I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.

7 Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice: have mercy also upon me, and answer me.

8 <sup>h</sup> When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, LORD, will I seek.

9 Hide not thy face far from me; put not thy servant away in anger: thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation.

10 When my father and my mother forsake me, then the LORD will <sup>i</sup> take me up.

11 Teach me thy way, O LORD, and lead me in a <sup>j</sup> plain path, because of <sup>k</sup> mine enemies.

12 Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: for false witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty.

13 I had fainted, unless I had believed to <sup>l</sup> see the goodness of the LORD in the land of the living.

14 Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart: wait, I say, on the LORD.

PSALM XXVI. Ver. 1—12. A Psalm of David, pleading his integrity and the divine mercy.—This is another of those psalms in which the writer maintains his own integrity; yet we must not, on that account, either exclude David, (see on Ps. xv.) or apply the whole to our Redeemer; for how could he who made satisfaction for our sins, plead (as in ver. 11.) for mercy for himself? Such an idea goes to set aside the atonement of Christ; for if our sins were forgiven to him, they cannot be forgiven to us for his sake.

The expression, used by the psalmist, of “washing his hands in innocency,” does not imply absolute purity in the sight of God, or wherefore offer an atoning sacrifice? but innocence, as to any design of injuring his fellow-creatures, and freedom from hypocrisy in the sight of God. (See Exod. xl. 32. Deut. xxi. 6. Isa. i. 15. 1 Tim. ii. 8.) Such are the characters who have welcome access to the divine presence, and whose gifts are accepted on the sacred altar. (Psalm xxiv. 4.) Yet they come not to plead their own righteousness before God, but to receive righteousness or justification from him. Such are those whom God seeks to worship him, and such are those who delight to worship God.

“I love thy habitation, Lord;
The temple where thine honours dwell:
There shall I hear thy holy word,
And there thy works of wonder tell.

Among thy saints will I appear,
My hands well washed in innocency;
But when I stand before thy bar,
The blood of Christ is my defence.”—Watts.

PSALM XXVII. Ver. 1—14. A Psalm of David. Past deliverances the ground of future confidence.—The psalmist, after alluding to the protection he had received from the providence of God in times past, encourages himself thereby to trust in God in times to come; and avows it to be the great desire of his heart, constantly to enjoy the privileges of public worship, and there to contemplate—not the beauty of the tabernacle and its furniture—but the beauty of the LORD; that is, the glory of Deity, so softened by the displays of grace intermingled therewith, as to afford the most pleasing contemplations to a pardoned sinner.—“And to inquire in his temple!” Ah! what subjects of inquiry are there suggested? What Moses said, as to the Passover, may well be applied to all the parts of the Jewish ritual. “And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean you by this service? that ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the Lord’s Passover.” (Exod. xii. 26, 27.) So when it is asked, what mean you by this goat, or by this bullock?—by the golden altar or fragrant incense?—by the shew-bread or the golden candlesticks, &c.? The answer to each, from a pious priest or Levite, would direct the humble worshipper to the great mysteries of the then future gospel.

In perfect harmony with these views of the tabernacle worship is the latter part of this psalm, on which, as it has been thought very obscure, we shall venture a little to enlarge. The psalmist says, “Hear me, O Lord; and answer me.” The divine oracle replies, “Seek ye my face;” and the heart of the petitioner replies, “Thy face, Lord, will I seek.” So that these words are a sort of dialogue between the sacred oracle and the heart of the sincere worshipper, the object of which is to draw him into closer communion with his God—“the God of Jacob.” (Ps. xxiv. 6.)

In the conclusion, David again encourages himself in the Lord his God. The supplementary words, “I had fainted,” ver. 13. (like those in ver. 8.) add to the perspicuity of the expression, but subtract something from its poetical beauty; “Unless I had believed,” as if the psalmist had said, “What then would have become of me?” But since I have believed, and triumphed over all my enemies, I am now able to encourage others. “Wait, I say, on the Lord.”

“There (could I say, and mark the happy place)
’Twas there I did his glorious footsteps trace;
’Twas there (oh let me raise an altar there)
I saw as much of heaven as mortal sense could bear;
There from his eyes I met the heavenly beam,
That kindled in my soul this deathless flame!”—Mrs. Rowe.

Ver. 6. Sacrifices of joy—i. e. when the priests blew the trumpets, and the people shouted.

Ver. 8. When thou saidst, &c.—See margin. (Or, literally, “My heart said to thee, (thy words are, being understood.) Seek ye my face: Thy face O Jehovah, will I seek.” That is, in retired meditation, I recollected thy exhortations to the sons of men to seek thy face, or favour; and my heart answered, “Dost thou deign thus to invite us? Then without delay or hesitation I will seek thy face.”—Bagster. Archbishop Secker renders this, “To thee my heart, he hath said, Seek ye my face.”

Ver. 11. Because of mine enemies.—“Observers,” or rather spies: “those that were on the watch for me.”

PSALM XXVI. Verses 4 and 5 are, by Ainsworth and Bishop Horsley, rendered in the present tense.

Ver. 5. The congregation.—That is, company, or society.

Ver. 6. I will wash my hands in innocency.—After the sacrifice was laid on the altar, and the blood sprinkled, the priest washed his hands, and walked in procession round the altar, both among the Hebrews and the Greeks. See Orient. Cust. No. 990.

Ver. 12. In an even place.—On a plain path, so as not to be in danger of sliding.

PSALM XXVII. Ver. 2. To eat up my flesh.—“To devour me like wild beasts.”

PSALM XXVIII.

1 David prayeth earnestly against his enemies. 6 He blesteth God. 9 He prayeth for the people.

A Psalm of David.

UNTo thee will I cry, O LORD my rock; be not silent <sup>a</sup> to me: lest, if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear the voice of my supplications, when I cry unto thee, when <sup>b</sup> I lift up my hands toward <sup>c</sup> thy holy oracle.

3 Draw <sup>d</sup> me not away with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief <sup>e</sup> is in their hearts.

4 Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands; render to them their desert.

5 Because <sup>f</sup> they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

6 Blessed <sup>g</sup> be the LORD, because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.

7 The LORD <sup>h</sup> is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him.

8 The LORD <sup>i</sup> is <sup>j</sup> their strength, and he <sup>k</sup> is the <sup>l</sup> saving strength of his anointed.

9 Save thy people, and bless <sup>m</sup> thine inheritance: feed them also, and lift them up for ever.

PSALM XXIX.

David exhorteth princes to give glory to God, 3 by reason of his power, 11 and protection of his people.

A Psalm of David.

GIVE <sup>a</sup> unto the LORD, O ye <sup>b</sup> mighty, give unto the LORD <sup>c</sup> glory and strength.

PSALM XXVIII. Ver. 1—9. A Psalm of David, praying for deliverance from his enemies, and support from God.—The psalmist prays that he may not be involved in the judgments of the wicked, who were his enemies; but the genius of that dispensation did not lead him to pray for his enemies, as does Christianity. On the contrary, he implores upon them the just reward of their evil deeds, (ver. 4.) As, however, in the original of this passage, the imperative and future are used promiscuously: "Give them—render them—thou wilt destroy them." Bishop Horne suggests, that if the verbs were "in all such cases rendered in the future, every objection against the scripture imprecations would vanish."

Such passages express only the acquiescence of good men in the righteous judgments of the Almighty, and when we shall have done with sin we shall have done with sympathy for sinners. (See Rev. xviii. 6, 20; xix. 1—4.) The psalm, however, concludes with strong expressions of gratitude and faith. "The LORD is the strength of his people; the saving strength of his anointed."—of David, and of his great antitype, the Messiah.

PSALM XXIX. Ver. 1—11. A Psalm of David, celebrating the glory of Jehovah as displayed in the thunder storm.—It is not necessary to suppose, as some have done, that this psalm was composed during a thunder-storm; but it is evident that the psalmist had such an event in view, or in recollection. Maimonides says, that this psalm was appointed to be sung on the first working day (i. e. not being a sabbath or holiday) of the feast of Tabernacles, and so it is marked in the Greek version. (See Ainsworth.) Here, then, we have a remarkable coincidence of circumstances; for it may be seen in our calendar at the end of Leviticus, that the feast of Tabernacles fell on the 15th day of the month Tisri, which was the last day of our September, or nearly so; at which time commenced, what the Hebrews called the early or former rain, for this was the first month of their civil year. Now, upon turning to Buhle's "Economic Calendar of Palestine," (which may be found translated into English in Taylor's Fragments, No.

PSALM XXVIII. Ver. 1. Silent to me.—"From me;" i. e. from answering me.—Into the pit.—That is, the grave.

Ver. 2. Thy holy oracle.—See margin; i. e. the ark, in the most holy place.

Ver. 3. Draw me not.—Bishop Horsley. "Let me not be drawn."

Ver. 8. Their strength.—Instead of az lamo, "their strength," eight MSS. have az lamma, "the strength of his people;" which is confirmed by the LXX., Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, Ethiopic, and Anglo-Saxon: this renders the passage more clear, definite, and intelligible.—Bagster.—"The saving strength of his anointed."—The meaning is, that Jehovah is the head of the Messiah and of his people; and that He who raised him from the grave, will also raise them to everlasting life.

Ver. 9. Feed.—The pastoral office here alluded to, implies both feeding and ruling.

PSALM XXIX. (It is not improbable, that this Psalm was written to commemorate the abundant rain, probably accompanied by a thunder-storm, which fell in the days of David, after it had been withheld three years.)—Bagster.

Ver. 4. Powerful.—Louth, "Full of power."

Ver. 6. A young unicorn.—The one-horned rhinoceros. See note on Num. xxiii. 22.

a from.

b Ps. 138. 2.

c or, the

d Ps. 135. 5.

e Job 34. 26,

f or, his.

g strength

h 1 Ki. 8. 51,

i or, rule.

a1 Ch. 16. 28,

b Ps. 7. 9.

c Ps. 5. 11.

d honour of e or, his

f 2 Ch. 20. 21.

g or, great.

h in power.

i in majesty.

j cutteth out.

k or, be in

l Ps. 63. 2.

m or, every

n Ge. 3. 1. 2.

o Ps. 6. 6. 9.

p Ps. 40. 29.

q Ps. 85. 10.

a Is. 33. 17.

2 Give unto the LORD the <sup>d</sup> glory due unto his name; worship the LORD in the <sup>e</sup> beauty <sup>f</sup> of holiness.

3 The voice of the LORD <sup>g</sup> is upon the waters the God of glory thundereth: the LORD <sup>h</sup> is upon <sup>i</sup> many waters.

4 The voice of the LORD <sup>j</sup> is <sup>k</sup> powerful; the voice of the LORD <sup>l</sup> is full of majesty.

5 The voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars; yea, the LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon.

6 He maketh them also to skip like a calf; Lebanon and Sirion like a young unicorn.

7 The voice of the LORD divideth the flames of fire.

8 The voice of the LORD shaketh the wilderness; the LORD shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh.

9 The voice of the LORD maketh the hinds to <sup>k</sup> calve, and discovereth the forests: and <sup>l</sup> in his temple <sup>m</sup> doth every one speak of <sup>n</sup> his glory.

10 The LORD sitteth upon the <sup>o</sup> flood; yea, the LORD sitteth King <sup>p</sup> for ever.

11 The LORD will give strength <sup>q</sup> unto his people; the LORD will bless his people with <sup>r</sup> peace.

PSALM XXX.

1 David praiseth God for his deliverance. 4 He exhorteth others to praise him by example of God's dealing with him.

A Psalm and Song at the dedication of the house of David.

IWILL extol thee, O LORD; for thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me.

2 O LORD my God, I cried unto thee, and thou hast healed me.

3 O LORD, thou <sup>a</sup> hast brought up my soul

(454.), we shall find that lightnings, at this time, are very frequent, and often accompanied with rain and thunder. For another supposition, see note.

About this time, therefore, we may believe that David composed this animated and beautiful psalm, in which the sublime phenomena of nature are made to exhibit the glory and majesty of nature's God. This theme is particularly recommended to "the sons of the mighty" among mankind, "the gods of earth," who must "die like men," (Psalm lxxxii. 6, 7.) they are invited to listen to his voice as it thunders through the heavens, and then to come and worship "in his glorious sanctuary," every part of which, and every article of its sacred furniture, utters somewhat of his glory or his grace.

Notwithstanding we now understand the theory of the thunder and the lightning, there is still something awful in the phenomena, even to a philosopher, especially when he recollects that the thunderbolts of the Almighty often convey his summons to mortals, to meet him at his judgment bar. We need not wonder then that the tyrant Nero, or the infidel Voltaire, should seek to hide themselves in the dark.

"With what beauty and propriety, (says Dr. Boothroyd), is the grand name of JEHOVAH repeated in almost every verse, and in some [verses] several times! Every echo of the thunder, every blaze of the vivid lightning, calls upon us to give glory to the LORD; for who hath an arm like God, or who can thunder with a voice like Him?"

But where can men hide themselves from the voice of the Most High? Shall they flee to the desert of Kadesh, climb the heights of Lebanon, or embark upon the mighty ocean? Nature every where trembles at his presence and his voice. The sea roars, the mountains tremble, and the timorous hind is thrown into premature labour. Man only, frail and mortal man only, is insensible to the voice of that Almighty Being, whose word with equal ease, can create or can destroy.

PSALM XXX. Ver. 1—12. A Psalm and Song at the dedication of the house of David.—This title, literally considered, Ver. 7. Divideth the flames of fire.—That is, the lightning, which is often zigzag in its form.

Ver. 9. And discovereth.—Or, "maketh bare the forest, by stripping it of its leaves;" for we have remarked above, that this is an autumnal scene. To make the images better harmonize, Bishop Louth and others, by a slight variation, for "hinds" read "oaks;" "he shivereth the oaks;" but as we read before of breaking the cedars, &c., the late Taylor, by another variation, here reads, "And deprives the female ibices" (or rock-goats) [of their young.] But we see no necessity for either of these changes.—Doth every one.—See margin; i. e. every part of the temple, (or tabernacle,) and of its mystical furniture, reveals somewhat of his praise.

Ver. 10. The flood.—That is, the vast ocean.

PSALM XXX. Title.—A Psalm and Song.—Rather, "A Psalm, (being) a song at the dedication of the house of David." [By which is supposed to be meant the place he built on the threshing-floor of Araunah, after the grievous plague which had nearly desolated the kingdom. 2 Sa. xxv. 25, &c. 1 Chron. xxi. 6.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. Lifted me up.—Ainsworth, "Drawn me out," as from the mouth of a pit or a well.

from the grave: thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit.

4 Sing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and give thanks <sup>b</sup> at the remembrance of his holiness.

5 For <sup>c</sup> his anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure <sup>d</sup> for a night, but <sup>e</sup> joy cometh in the morning.

6 And in my prosperity I said, I shall never be moved.

7 LORD, by thy favour thou <sup>f</sup> hast <sup>g</sup> made my mountain to stand strong: thou didst hide thy face, and I was troubled.

8 I cried <sup>h</sup> to thee, O LORD; and unto the LORD I made supplication.

9 What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? Shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?

10 Hear, O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, be thou my helper.

11 Thou hast turned <sup>i</sup> for me my mourning into dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness;

12 To the end that my <sup>j</sup> glory may sing praise to thee, and not be silent. O LORD my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

PSALM XXXI.

David showing his confidence in God craving his help. 7 He rejoiceth in his mercy. 9 He prayeth in his calamity. 19 He praises God for his goodness.

TO the chief Musician, A Psalm of David. IN <sup>a</sup> thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed: deliver me in thy <sup>b</sup> righteousness.

2 Bow down thine ear to me; deliver me speedily: be thou <sup>c</sup> my strong rock, for a house of defence to save me.

3 For thou <sup>d</sup> art my rock and my fortress;

b or, to the memorial.

c there is but a moment in his anger.

d in the evening.

e singing.

f Ps. 18. 35, 36.

g settled strength for my mountain.

h Ps. 34. 6.

i Ps. 138. 1, 2.

j i. e. tongue, and soul.

a Ps. 71. 1, 4.

b Ps. 143. 1.

c to me for a rock of strength.

d Lu. 23. 46. Ac. 7. 59.

e Jo. 2. 8.

f Ps. 142. 3.

g Ps. 18. 19.

h Ps. 102. 3, &c.

i Job 19. 13.

j vessel that perissheth.

therefore for thy name's sake lead me, and guide me.

4 Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me: for thou <sup>a</sup> art my strength.

5 Into <sup>b</sup> thy hand I commit my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O LORD God of truth.

6 I have hated them that regard <sup>c</sup> lying vanities: but I trust in the LORD.

7 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known <sup>d</sup> my soul in adversities;

8 And hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou <sup>e</sup> hast set my foot in a large room.

9 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief, <sup>f</sup> yea my soul and my belly.

10 For <sup>g</sup> my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: my strength faileth because of mine iniquity, and my bones are consumed.

11 I was a reproach among all mine enemies; but especially among my <sup>h</sup> neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me.

12 I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like a <sup>i</sup> broken vessel.

13 For I have heard the slander of many: fear <sup>j</sup> was on every side: while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life.

14 But I trusted in thee, O LORD: I said, Thou <sup>k</sup> art my God.

15 My times <sup>l</sup> are in thy hand: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

is attended with no difficulty; it is, therefore, with some surprise that we have seen learned men attempt a mystical explanation, explaining this "house," of David's body, which had been sick, or of his "soul," which had fallen into sin; and, after all, applying it to the Messiah, whose body had never been sick, that we know of, and whose soul, we know, was never stained with sin. That David had "a house of cedar," while as yet the ark dwelt in curtains, we have certain information. (2 Sam. vii. 2. See note on title of this Psalm for another supposition.) And as we know also, that it was customary with the Israelites to dedicate their houses to God when finished, (see Deut. xx. 5.) there can be no difficulty in supposing the patriarch David did so. Nor is it improbable, (though not recorded,) that at the time of dedicating this house, David might be but just recovering from a recent illness, and think this a proper opportunity for expressing his gratitude for such recovery.

Considering the psalm in this light, it may afford much useful admonition to persons in similar circumstances; and some parts of it are peculiarly beautiful, particularly the fifth verse. "For his anger (is but) for a moment—in his favour is life: weeping may lodge for the evening, but shouting for joy (cometh) in the morning." Such is the predominancy of Divine mercy, and of human happiness!

Affliction has its proper effect on us, when it sends us to a throne of grace. When David was afflicted, then he prayed: and his plea in this case was, "What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? Shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?" So Hezekiah argued, Isaiah xxxviii. 18., and the sum of the plea is, "Lord, if I am spared, I will magnify thy name, and study to advance thy glory; but death will put a period to my labours, and my voice shall be heard no more!"

The learned Hutchinson having adopted the plan of applying all the Psalms indiscriminately to the Messiah, represents him as pleading the inefficacy of his blood without a resurrection from the dead; and we know that a like system was adopted by some of the early Christian fathers, who were intoxicated with the love of allegory: we, however, consider this scheme not only as fanciful and injudicious, but as dishonourable to Him, whom we doubt not but it was designed to honour. When did the Saviour boast in his prosperity, "I shall never be moved?" He was, at least, from arriving at maturity, "a man of sorrows," and knew that he came into the world to suffer and to die. Bishop Horsley himself was sensible of this, and owns that this application cannot be here admitted without referring his "prosperity" to his state of glory at the resurrection, after which he was to be no more moved! an interpretation that appears to us violently forced and unwarrantable.

PSALM XXXI. Ver. 1.—24. A Psalm of David, pleading for mercy.—The occasion of this psalm is not mentioned, but Bishop Patrick, and most of the commentators, apply it to the period when Saul pursued him in the wilderness of Maon, but was diverted from that pursuit by being informed that the Philistines had invaded Judea. 1 Sam. xxiii. 24—29. Part of the fifth verse having been used by our Saviour upon the cross (Luke xxiii. 46.) many expositors make no hesitation in applying to him the whole psalm; but Scott judiciously remarks, that when our Saviour used this clause he omitted the following, "Thou hast redeemed me," &c. as more properly relating to the type than to the antitype. Besides which, it should be remembered that the martyr Stephen used the like expression, as did many saints and martyrs in various ages: but the quotation of a single phrase by no means warrants the application of the whole psalm: though it must be allowed that David was an eminent type of our Redeemer, it by no means follows that he was so in all respects. David was a great sinner as well as a great saint, and looked for pardon to the same mercy as we do. (Verses 5, 7, 9, 10, 16.)

Sin, in no way, could be attached to our Saviour but by imputation. "He was wounded for our transgressions;" but in no degree polluted by them: nor did he become, in any proper sense, a transgressor, though among such he was numbered. (Isa. liii. 5, 12.) Many passages in this psalm certainly suit the circumstances of his mortal life; but as no types in all respects correspond to their antitype, so is it with respect to typical prophecies, which require the same caution and prudence in their application. As our Saviour was not the subject of sin, neither was he the proper object of mercy; for he paid the

Ver. 5. Weeping may endure.—Ainsworth, "In the evening lodgeth weeping; at the morning shouting joy."

Ver. 7. Made my mountain to stand strong.—See margin; i. e. Mount Zion, where David resided; but figuratively, it refers to the establishment of his kingdom. Ainsworth.

Ver. 12. To the end that my glory.—The margin explains the "glory" here named, of the psalmist's tongue, or soul, and we prefer the former, as opposed to silence. See Ps. lvi. 8.

PSALM XXXI. (Bishop Patrick and others suppose that David composed his Psalm, to encourage himself and friends, during his extreme danger of being seized by Saul, when he fled from Keilah. 1 Sa. xxiii. 22—28.)—Bagster.

Ver. 2. Be thou my strong rock.—Ainsworth, "A rock of fortresses." i. e. a fortified rock.

Ver. 6. Lying vanities.—This phrase is often used in reference to idols Deut. xxxii. 21, &c.

Ver. 7. Known my soul in adversity.—[In the deepest adversities, when all forsook me, then I found Thee to be my friend and Supporter. "A friend in need is a friend indeed;" and such a Friend is God: human friendships may fail; but the friend of sinners never.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. Because of mine iniquity.—That is, says Ainsworth, "punishment due for iniquity." Gen. xix. 15. But Dr. Boothroyd remarks, that the ancient versions read "affliction," which he follows.

Ver. 9, 10. Consumed.—That is, wasted, as by pining disease, to the appearance of a skeleton.

Ver. 12. A broken vessel.—See margin; i. e. becomes useless, and of no value.

16 Make <sup>a</sup> thy face to shine upon thy servant: save me for thy mercies' sake.

17 Let me not be ashamed, O LORD; for I have called upon thee: let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be <sup>1</sup> silent in the grave.

18 Let the lying lips be put to silence; which speak <sup>m</sup> grievous things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous.

19 Oh how great <sup>n</sup> is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!

20 Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man: thou <sup>o</sup> shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.

21 Blessed be the LORD: for he hath showed me his marvellous kindness in a <sup>p</sup> strong city.

22 For I said in my haste, I am cut off <sup>q</sup> from before thine eyes: nevertheless thou heardest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto thee.

23 O love the LORD, all ye his saints: for the LORD preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

24 Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the LORD.

PSALM XXXII.

Blessedness consisteth in remission of sins. 3 Confession of sins giveth ease to the conscience. 8 God's promises bring joy.

A Psalm of David, <sup>a</sup> Maschil.

BLESSED <sup>b</sup> is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered.

2 Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth <sup>c</sup> not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile.

3 When I kept silence, my bones waxed old through my roaring all the day long.

4 For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: my moisture is turned into the drought of summer. Selah.

k Nu.6.25, 26.
l or, cut off for.
m a hard thing.
n Is.64.4.
o Job 5.21.
p or, fenced.
q Job 35.14.
a or, giving instruction.
b Ro.4.6-8.
c 2Co.5.19.
d 1Jn.1.9.
e 1Ti.1.16.
f of finding.
g Is.55.6.
h Is.43.2.
i Ps.143.9.
j Ex.15.1, &c.
Re.15.2,3.

k counsel, thee, mine eye shall be upon thee.
l Pr.22.3.
m Ps.16.4.
n 1Ti.6.10.
o Job.17.7,8.
a Ps.97.12.
Ph.4.4.
b Ps.150.3,4.
c Ps.144.9.
Re.5.9.
d Ps.119.64.
e or, mercy.
f He.11.3.
g Ge.2.1.

5 I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid. I said, I <sup>a</sup> will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah.

6 For this <sup>e</sup> shall every one that is godly pray unto thee in a time <sup>f</sup> when thou mayest be <sup>g</sup> found: surely in the floods of great waters <sup>h</sup> they shall not come nigh unto him.

7 Thou <sup>i</sup> art my hiding place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs <sup>j</sup> of deliverance. Selah.

8 I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide <sup>k</sup> thee with mine eye:

9 Be ye not as the <sup>l</sup> horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee.

10 Many <sup>m</sup> sorrows shall be to the wicked, but he <sup>n</sup> that trusteth in the LORD, mercy shall compass him about.

11 Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous: and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

PSALM XXXIII.

1 God is to be praised for his goodness, 6 for his power, 12 and for his providence. 20 Confidence is to be placed in God.

REJOICE <sup>a</sup> in the LORD, O ye righteous: for praise is comely for the upright.

2 Praise the LORD with harp: sing unto him with the psaltery <sup>b</sup> and an instrument of ten strings.

3 Sing <sup>c</sup> unto him a new song; play skilfully with a loud noise.

4 For the word of the LORD is right; and all his works are done in truth.

5 He loveth righteousness and judgment: the earth is full <sup>d</sup> of the <sup>e</sup> goodness of the LORD.

6 By <sup>f</sup> the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all <sup>g</sup> the host of them by the breath of his mouth.

penalty of sin, and having satisfied the law on our behalf, justice had no farther demands on him or us: "being delivered for our offences, he was raised again for our justification." (Rom. iv. 25.)

PSALM XXXII. Ver. 1—11. A Psalm of David, giving instruction.—"As the sick is eloquent in the praise of health, (says Bishop Horne,) so the sinner beginneth this his confession of sin with an encomium on righteousness, longing earnestly to be made a partaker of the 'evangelical' blessedness; 'to be delivered from the guilt and the power of sin, to be pardoned and sanctified through faith which is in Christ Jesus.'" Sin is compared to a debt which may be discharged in two ways—either by blotting out the record, (Ps. li. 1—9.) or by covering it with a contrary account, namely, the merits or atonement of the Saviour, typified by the mercy-seat which covered the ark. "In opposition to the blessedness above-mentioned, (continues the good prelate,) the penitent now proceeds to declare his own wretched state, occasioned by his 'keeping silence,' or not confessing his sin, which therefore rankled and festered inwardly, occasioning torment inexpressible. The disorders of the mind, as well as those of the body, should be communicated to persons skilful in assuaging and removing them: many might thereby be saved from the horrible crime of self-murder, which is generally committed in agonies of solitary remorse and despair."

This is called an "instructing or didactic psalm;" and the doctrine of it is explained, by the apostle Paul, to be that of imputed righteousness. "To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness: Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, (saying,) Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." Rom. iv. 1—4. The doctrine of justification by faith, here stated by St. Paul, was justly esteemed by Luther the fundamental article of the Protestant faith, by which the church must either stand or fall.

This psalm is evidently in dialogue (or in a dramatic form) like many others. The two first verses appear to be chorus; the five following the confession of the psalmist. Ver. 8. Bishop Horsley (and perhaps justly) considers as an oracular voice from the most holy place. Verses 9 and 10 appear to use the oracle continued, though the prelate just quoted considers them as the language of the psalmist; and the last verse we conceive to be the concluding chorus. The oracle itself, as we consider it, promises instruction and enjoins obedience. Man, in this case, is considered no better than an untamed colt, which must be forcibly restrained "with bit and bridle," and even a kind of muzzle to prevent the animal from attacking his owner. So says Job, "Man is born like a wild ass's colt," (Job xi. 12.) and it is only by a long training in trials and afflictions that he is brought to submission or obedience: but when thus brought to trust in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about; and great matter of joy is this, to those who are thus brought to love and fear God.

"Blest is the man, for ever blest, Whose guilt is pardoned by his God;
Whose sins with sorrow are confessed,
And covered with a Saviour's blood."—Watts.

PSALM XXXIII. Ver. 1—22. A Psalm exhorting to general joy and praise.—The topics of thanksgiving are here derived from the general goodness and fidelity of God, from the display of the divine power in the work of creation, and from the infinite superiority of the divine wisdom in the government of the world. It is in vain for mortals, however high in rank, to combine against him who made the universe. He that spake the world into being, can, with a word, frustrate all the counsels of the heathen, and even "make their diviners mad."

no unusual synecdoche, being used for the whole body; see 1 Sam. xxxi. 13, 2 Sa. xxi. 12—14.—"Roaring."—"Roaring," is here used metonymically for the pains or pangs which occasion it; as otherwise it would be a contradiction to the silence he maintained.—Bagster.

Ver. 9. Held in with bit and bridle.—Bishop Horsley renders it, "But the muzzle must compress his jaws." The Arabian horses, it appears, were so wild as to render this necessary.

PSALM XXXIII. [In the LXX., Syriac, and Vulgate, this is termed "A Psalm of David," and it is written as a part of the preceding in ten MSS.]—Bagster.

Ver. 2. The psaltery, (or Nablā,) was made in the form of a leathern bottle, and turned round in playing. Bishop Horsley thinks it was the instrument "with ten strings" if so, the "and" is here improperly supplied; but in Ps. xcii. 3, they appear to be distinguished.

7 He <sup>h</sup> gathereth the waters of the sea together as a heap: he layeth up the depth in <sup>l</sup> storehouses.

8 Let all the earth fear <sup>l</sup> the LORD: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him.

9 For he <sup>k</sup> spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast.

10 The LORD <sup>l</sup> bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought: he <sup>m</sup> maketh the devices of the people of none effect.

11 The counsel <sup>n</sup> of the LORD standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all <sup>o</sup> generations.

12 Blessed <sup>p</sup> is the nation whose God is the LORD; and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance.

13 The LORD looketh from heaven; he <sup>a</sup> beholdeth all the sons of men.

14 From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

15 He <sup>r</sup> fashioneth their hearts alike; he considereth all their works.

16 There <sup>s</sup> is no king saved by the multitude of a host: a mighty man is not delivered by much strength.

17 A <sup>t</sup> horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by his great strength.

18 Behold, the eye <sup>u</sup> of the LORD is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy;

19 To deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in <sup>v</sup> famine.

20 Our soul waiteth for the LORD: <sup>w</sup> he is our help and our shield.

21 For <sup>x</sup> our heart shall rejoice in him, because <sup>y</sup> we have trusted in his holy name.

22 Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us, according as we hope in thee.

PSALM XXXIV.

1 David praiseth God, and exhorteth others thereto by his experience. 8 They are blessed that trust in God. 11 He exhorteth to the fear of God. 15 The privileges of the righteous.

A Psalm of David, when he changed his behaviour before <sup>a</sup> Abimelech; who drove him away, and he departed.

I WILL bless the LORD at all <sup>b</sup> times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth.

h Job 26.10.

i Job 38.8.

j Je.10.7.

k Ge.1.3,&amp;c.

l maketh

frustrate.

m Is.44.25.

n Is.46.10.

o generation.

p Ps.65.4.

q Pr.15.3.

r Pr.22.2.

s Ps.44.3.7.

t Pr.21.31.

u Ho.11.3.

v Ps.37.19.

w Ps.115.9.

x Zec.10.7.

y Is.25.9.

a or, Ac-

hish.

Isa.21.13.

b Ep.5.20.

c 1 Co.1.31.

d Ps.119.74.

e Lu.1.46,

&amp;c.

f Lu.11.9.

g or, flowed.

h Ps.3.4.

i 2Sa.22.1.

j Je.1.14.

k 1 Pe.2.3.

l 1 Pe.2.12.

m 1 Pe.3.10,

&amp;c.

n 2Ti.2.19.

o Mat.5.9.

p Eccl.14.7.

q Is.65.24.

r to the broken heart.

s the contrite of spirit.

t or, guilty.

u Ps.41.11,

12.

2 My soul shall make her boast <sup>c</sup> in the LORD the <sup>d</sup> humble shall hear thereof, and be glad
3 O magnify <sup>e</sup> the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together.

4 I sought <sup>f</sup> the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears.

5 They <sup>g</sup> looked unto him, and were lightened: and their faces were not ashamed.

6 This <sup>h</sup> poor man cried, and the LORD heard him, and saved <sup>i</sup> him out of all his troubles.

7 The angel <sup>j</sup> of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them

8 O taste <sup>k</sup> and see that the LORD is good: blessed <sup>l</sup> is the man that trusteth in him.

9 O fear the LORD, ye his saints: for there is no want to them that fear him.

10 The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger: but they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing.

11 Come, ye children, hearken unto me: I will teach you the fear of the LORD.

12 What <sup>m</sup> man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good?

13 Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

14 Depart <sup>n</sup> from evil, and do good; seek <sup>o</sup> peace, and pursue it.

15 The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry.

16 The <sup>p</sup> face of the LORD is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

17 The righteous cry, and the LORD <sup>q</sup> heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

18 The LORD is nigh <sup>r</sup> unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth <sup>s</sup> such as be of a contrite spirit.

19 Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the LORD delivereth him out of them all.

20 He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken.

21 Evil shall slay the wicked: and they that hate the righteous shall be <sup>t</sup> desolate.

22 The LORD redeemeth the soul of his servants: and none <sup>u</sup> of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

(Isaiah xlv. 25.) As in the second psalm, so in this, (which was probably a psalm of David, though his name is not prefixed to it,) JEHOVAH is represented as seated on his celestial throne, whence, looking down upon men, he distributeth among them the gifts of his providence at pleasure. Wisdom, knowledge, power, are all his; it is in vain, therefore, to look to a horse for speed, to a giant for strength, or even to a host of warriors for deliverance. "The eye of the LORD is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy:" to him, therefore, are we directed for protection, and not to frail mortals like ourselves.

"LORD, let our hearts in thee rejoice,
And bless us from thy throne;
For we have made thy word our choice,
And trust thy grace alone."—Watts.

PSALM XXXIV. VER. 1—22. A Psalm of David, thanking God for his deliverance from Gath.—The history here referred to has already passed before us in 1 Sam. chap. xxi.; some have, indeed, doubted the authenticity of this title; but we think without sufficient reason, as the psalm certainly celebrates an escape from some great and imminent danger, and may be suitably and profitably used on any occasion of providential succour or deliverance. It is a narrative of David's

Ver. 7. He gathereth.—As this evidently refers to the creation, Gen. i. 2, 9, 10, this verse should be rendered in the past tense, like the preceding. [He separated the waters from the earth; and while the latter formed continents, islands, mountains, hills, and valleys, the former were collected into one place, and called seas; and by his all-controlling powers and providence, the waters have retained their place; and he has so adapted the solar and lunar influence exerted on the waters, that the tides are only raised to certain heights: see on Job xxxviii. 11.]—Bagster.

Ver. 15. He fashioneth their hearts alike.—Or, "He alike fashioneth all their hearts;" i. e. distributeth wisdom to men at his good pleasure. See Job xxxviii. 36.

Ver. 17. A horse is a vain thing for safety.—Ainsworth, "A horse is falsehood for salvation."

PSALM XXXIV. Title.—Abimelech.—Achish, king of Gath, is probably here called Abimelech, because that was a common name of the Philistine kings. This is the second of the acrostic, or alphabetical Psalms, (the first being Ps. xxv.) each verse beginning consecutively with a letter of the Hebrew experience in the particular instance before us: "This poor man cried," says he, evidently alluding to himself; and "the LORD delivered him;" others are therefore encouraged to do the same, under expectation of the like deliverance. "O taste and see that the LORD is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him."

Many of the expressions here used may, without violence, be applied to the circumstances of our divine Redeemer; and Bishop Horsley conceives one passage, "He keepeth all his bones, not one of them is broken," is applied to him by the apostle John, (chap. xix. 36.) It is more generally thought that St. John referred to the law of the paschal lamb, (Exod. xii. 46;) but supposing the reference to be to this psalm, we cannot admit it to be inapplicable to the psalmist himself, who often complains respecting his bones waxing old, &c., and might, therefore, well be thankful for their preservation. Nor can we by any means admit the canon of interpretation which the Bishop cites from Hutchinson, viz., "that any one sentence which is applicable to the true David, (i. e. Messiah,) and to none else, determines the psalm to that David." (Bishop Horsley, p. 72.) On the contrary, we believe there are but few which are confined to Messiah only, or to any one single topic, it being common to these lyric odes generally to admit a va-alphabet. The verse, however, which begins with voan, and which should come in between the fifth and sixth, is totally wanting: but as the 22d, which now begins with pay, podeh, "redeemeth," is entirely out of the series, it is not improbable that it was originally written oophodeh, "and redeemeth," and occupied that situation, in which connexion it reads admirably.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. They looked.—But we conceive the sense to be, that, as by looking to the light of the sun our eyes are enlightened, so are our minds, by looking unto God: and as the light of the sun makes our countenances shine, so the influences of the divine Spirit cheer the heart.

Ver. 17. Righteous.—[There is no word for the righteous in the present Hebrew text; but it is preserved in all the versions; and it was probably lost from its similitude to tzaakoo, "they cry;"—tzaakoo taddeekim, "the righteous cry."]—Bagster.

Ver. 19. The righteous.—Singular, "The righteous (man)." Some apply this exclusively to Christ; but it is also applicable to every one who is justified by his righteousness.

Ver. 21. Shall be desolate.—Ainsworth, "Condemned as guilty."

PSALM XXXV.

David prayeth for his own safety, and his enemies' confusion. 11 He complaineth of their wrongful dealing. 22 Thereby he inciteth God against them.

A Psalm of David.

PLEAD <sup>a</sup> my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me: fight against them that fight against me.

2 Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for my help.

3 Draw out also the spear, and stop <sup>a</sup> the way against them that persecute me: say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

4 Let <sup>b</sup> them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.

5 Let them be as chaff <sup>c</sup> before the wind: and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

6 Let their way be <sup>d</sup> dark and slippery: and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

7 For without cause have they hid for me their net <sup>e</sup> in a pit, <sup>f</sup> which without cause they have digged for my soul.

8 Let destruction come upon him <sup>g</sup> at <sup>h</sup> unawares; and let his net that he hath hid catch himself: into that very destruction let him fall.

9 And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 All my bones shall say, LORD, who is like unto thee, which deliverest <sup>i</sup> the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him?

11 <sup>j</sup> False witnesses <sup>k</sup> did rise up; <sup>l</sup> they laid to my charge <sup>m</sup> things that I knew not.

12 They rewarded me evil <sup>n</sup> for good <sup>o</sup> to the spoiling of my soul.

13 But as for me, when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth: I <sup>p</sup> humbled my soul with fasting; and my prayer returned into mine own bosom.

14 I <sup>q</sup> behaved myself <sup>r</sup> as though he had been my friend or brother: I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth <sup>s</sup> for his mother.

15 But in mine <sup>t</sup> adversity they rejoiced, and gathered themselves together: yea, the abjects <sup>u</sup> gathered themselves together against me, and I knew <sup>v</sup> it not; they did tear <sup>w</sup> me, and ceased not:

16 With hypocritical mockers in feasts, they gnashed <sup>x</sup> upon me with their teeth.

17 LORD, how long wilt thou look on? rescue

a La. 3.58.

b Ps. 71.21.

c Ps. 1.4.

d darkness and slipperiness.

e which he knoweth not of.

f 1 Th. 5.3.

g Pr. 22.22, 23.

h witnesses of wrong.

i Ps. 27.12.

j Mat. 26.59.

k Job 30.1, 5, &amp;c.

l asked me.

m 1 Jn. 10.32.

n depriving.

o or, afflicted.

p walked.

q as a friend, as a brother to me.

r halting.

s Job 30.1, 5, &amp;c.

t La. 2.16.

u Ac. 7.54.

v only one.

w Ps. 22.20.

x strong.

y falsely.

z Jn. 15.23.

a Mat. 12.24.

b Ps. 40.15.

c Ps. 50.21.

d Is. 65.6.

e Ps. 80.2.

f Ps. 2.23.

g 2 Th. 1.6.

h Ah, ah, our soul!

i Ps. 132.18.

j righteousness.

k Ps. 70.4.

l Ps. 34.1.

m to find his iniquity to hate.

n Je. 4.22.

o or, vanity.

p Dr. 4.16.

my soul from their destructions, my <sup>a</sup> darling from the <sup>b</sup> lions.

18 I will give thee thanks in the great congregation: I will praise thee <sup>c</sup> among much people.

19 Let not them that are mine enemies <sup>d</sup> wrongfully rejoice over me: <sup>e</sup> neither let them wink with the eye that <sup>f</sup> hate me without <sup>g</sup> cause.

20 For they speak not peace: but they devise <sup>h</sup> deceitful matters against them that are quiet in the land.

21 Yea, they opened their mouth wide against me, and said, <sup>i</sup> Aha, aha, our eye hath seen it.

22 This thou hast seen, O LORD: keep not <sup>j</sup> silence: O LORD, be not far from me.

23 Stir <sup>k</sup> up thyself, and awake to my judgment, <sup>l</sup> even unto my cause, my God and my LORD.

24 Judge <sup>m</sup> me, O LORD my God, according to thy <sup>n</sup> righteousness; and let them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not say in their hearts, <sup>o</sup> Ah, so would we have it: let them not say, We have swallowed him up.

26 Let them be ashamed and brought to confusion together that rejoice at my hurt: let them be clothed <sup>p</sup> with shame and dishonour that magnify themselves against me.

27 Let them shout for joy, and be glad, that favour my <sup>q</sup> righteous cause: yea, let them say continually, Let the LORD be magnified, which hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servant.

28 And <sup>r</sup> my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness and of thy praise all the day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

1 The grievous estate of the wicked. 5 The excellency of God's mercy. 10 David prayeth for favour to God's children.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David the servant of the LORD.

THE transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, <sup>a</sup> that there is no fear of God before his eyes.

2 For he flattereth himself in his own eyes, <sup>b</sup> until his iniquity be found to be hateful.

3 The words of his mouth <sup>c</sup> are iniquity and deceit: he hath left off to be wise, and to <sup>d</sup> do good.

4 He deviseth <sup>e</sup> mischief upon his <sup>f</sup> bed; he

riety of topics; as we have already had frequent occasion to remark. In fact, it is the very nature of a typical dispensation, to advert sometimes to the typical things themselves, and sometimes to the sublimer objects they were intended to represent. So is it in typical prophecies, as we shall have farther occasion to observe. A spiritual Christian may see Christ in a thousand objects which surround him, without excluding the moral improvement arising from their literal sense.

PSALM XXXV. Ver. 1—28. A Psalm of David, appealing to God to maintain his cause.—The psalmist here addresses JEHOVAH as his champion, to support his cause against his enemies; he therefore calls upon him, in military terms, to "Take hold of shield and buckler, draw out the spear," &c. But the following verses (from 4 to 9) both Bishop Horne and Scott render in the future instead of the imperative. "They shall be confounded and put to shame," &c. which is the more necessary when we apply the psalm to the sufferings of Messiah, to which it seems generally applicable, as he prayed not for the destruction, but the salvation of his enemies: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." (Luke xliii. 34.) So verses 26, 27. "They shall be ashamed; they shall be clothed with shame," &c.

PSALM XXXV. [This Psalm, as is evident from its language, was composed by David when fiercely persecuted by Saul, Doeg, and the rest of the courtiers.]—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Let the angel of the LORD chase them.—Or pursue them with divine vengeance.

Ver. 7. They have hid for me their net in a pit.—This alludes to the custom of digging pits, and putting nets in them, covered with straw, &c. to catch wild beasts.—Orient. Cust. No. 995.

Ver. 8. Let destruction.—See margin. [All the verbs in these verses, (ver. iv. 8.) in the original, are in the future tense, as a prediction, and should probably be so rendered; though, as that tense is frequently used in Hebrew for the imperative, most translators, both ancient and modern, have considered them as an imprecation.]—Bagster.

Though the occasion of this psalm is not expressly mentioned, it was evidently written while smarting under the false accusations and reproaches of his enemies, particularly as Bishop Patrick and others suggest, those of Doeg. (See 1 Sam. xxii. 9, 22.)

The false witnesses that rose up against David, showed the same dispositions as those which arose against his Lord, and vented alike their malice in taunt and ridicule. In several instances, David certainly displayed remarkable forbearance towards his enemies; but it was the glory of Jesus to pray for his murderers when he was dying. The type was amiable, but the antitype divine.

"O glorious type of heavenly grace!

Thus Christ the Lord appears:

While sinners curse, the Saviour prays,

And pities them with tears."—Watts.

PSALM XXXVI. Ver. 1—12. A Psalm of David, the servant of Jehovah, complaining of the atheism, deceit, and cruelty of his enemies.—Bishop Patrick supposes that this psalm was probably composed toward the beginning of Saul's jealousy against David. (1 Sam. xviii. 9.)

The first verse of the psalm is attended with considerable

Ver. 11. False witnesses.—Ainsworth, "of cruel wrong." Ver. 14. I behaved myself, &c.—Heb. "I walked as if he had been a friend or brother to me."

Ver. 25. Ah, I so would we have it.—See margin; i. e. so our soul desired Soul (nephesh) is rendered desire, Ps. xli. 2.

PSALM XXXVI. [This fine Psalm is supposed by some to have been composed by David at the beginning of Saul's persecution; but Calmet and others on good grounds, are of opinion that it was written during the Babylonian captivity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. The transgression of the wicked.—(Or, rather, "The speech of transgression to the wicked is within his heart: there is no fear of God before his eyes;" for instead of libbi, "my heart," four MSS. have libbo, "his heart," which is also the reading of the LXX., Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, Ethiopic.)

setteth himself in a way that is not good; he abhorreth <sup>a</sup> not evil.

5 Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens; and thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds.

6 Thy righteousness is like the <sup>a</sup> great mountains; thy judgments are a <sup>a</sup> great deep: O LORD, thou preservest man and beast.

7 How <sup>b</sup> excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings.

8 They <sup>c</sup> shall be abundantly <sup>c</sup> satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river <sup>k</sup> of thy pleasures.

9 For <sup>d</sup> with thee is the fountain of life: in <sup>m</sup> thy light shall we see light.

10 O <sup>e</sup> continue thy loving-kindness unto them that know thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart.

11 Let not the foot of pride come against me, and let not the hand of the wicked remove me.

12 There are the workers of iniquity fallen: they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise.

PSALM XXXVII.

David persuadeth to patience and confidence in God, by the different estate of the godly and the wicked.

A Psalm of David.

FRET <sup>a</sup> not thyself because of evil-doers, neither be thou envious <sup>b</sup> against the workers of iniquity.

2 For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 Trust in the LORD, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and <sup>c</sup> verily thou shalt be fed.

4 Delight <sup>d</sup> thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thy heart.

5 <sup>e</sup> Commit thy way unto the LORD; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.

6 And <sup>f</sup> he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

7 <sup>g</sup> Rest in the LORD, and wait <sup>h</sup> patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

perplexity, which seems partly owing to some error in the copyist. Bishop Lowth reads it, "The wickedness of man, according to the wickedness in his heart, saith, There is no fear of God before mine eyes." For some versions and a few manuscripts, instead of "my heart," read "his heart," which affords this sense, that "the transgression of the wicked saith, (asserteth) within his own heart, that there is no fear of God before his eyes." (See note, ver. 1.) Applying this to Saul, the wicked man supposed to be here alluded to, a late ingenious writer (Robinson) supposes the psalmist to reflect thus within himself:—"I have made my own observations on that cruel man, Saul, and I have imagined he is an Atheist. I observe, although he commits many crimes, for which, did he fear God, he would always blush; yet he never blushes till his iniquities appear hateful in the eyes of his fellow-creatures. He even affects to be a good man, and wears the mask till it cements with his face, accounting himself as good as any other man, till somebody detects his vices, and exposes him to shame, and this is the common condition of almost all bad men." This seems not an improbable sense of the passage. In the latter part of the psalm, David celebrates the mercy and Anglo-Saxon.]—Bagster. The original gives the important sentiment, that the oracle of a wicked man is the corruption of his own heart; and that, doubtless, is the true source of his atheism.

Ver. 8. Abundantly satisfied.—Ainsworth, ("moistened") with the fatness—that is, with the richness of the (moral) provisions of thy house.

Ver. 10. O continue.—See margin. Ainsworth, "extend" thy loving-kindness.

Ver. 11. The foot of pride.—Or, "of the proud." It was the practice of tyrants to tread upon their enemies, or to spurn those who offended them from their feet.

PSALM XXXVII. [This is the third alphabetical Psalm. It seems to have been intended as an instructive and consoling ode for the captives in Babylon, who might feel themselves severely tempted when they saw those idolaters in prosperity, and themselves in adversity.]—Bagster.

Ver. 7. Rest.—I. e. wait, and murmur not.

Ver. 9. Inherit the earth.—(Or, "the land," probably the land of Judea,

e Ps. 97. 10.

f mountains of God.

g Ro. 11. 33.

h precious.

i Pe. 2. 7.

j Ps. 65. 4.

k watered.

l Je. 22. 13.

m Je. 4. 10, 14.

n draw out at length.

a 1 Sa. 1. 6.

b Ps. 73. 3.

c in truth, or, establish.

d Is. 58. 14.

e roll thy way upon Ps. 22. 8.

f Mt. 7. 9.

g Be silent to.

h Pr. 22. 22.

i La. 3. 35, 26.

j Mat. 5. 5.

k or, practise.

l the upright of way.

m Pr. 15. 16.

n Ec. 30. 21, &amp;c.

o Ps. 1. 3, 4.

p precious.

q or, established.

r Mt. 7. 8.

s Is. 33. 16.

t He. 13. 5, 6.

u all the day.

9 For evil-doers shall be cut off; but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth.

10 For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be.

11 But <sup>i</sup> the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

12 The wicked <sup>j</sup> plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

13 The LORD shall laugh at him: for he seeth that his day is coming.

14 The wicked have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, to cast down the poor and needy, and to slay <sup>k</sup> such as be of upright conversation.

15 Their sword shall enter into their own heart, and their bows shall be broken.

16 A <sup>l</sup> little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.

17 For the arms <sup>m</sup> of the wicked shall be broken: but the LORD upholdeth the righteous.

18 The LORD knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance <sup>n</sup> shall be for ever.

19 They shall not be ashamed in the evil time: and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

20 But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the LORD shall be as the <sup>o</sup> fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away.

21 The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: but the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth.

22 For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off.

23 The <sup>p</sup> steps of a good man are <sup>q</sup> ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way.

24 Though <sup>r</sup> he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.

25 I have been young, and now am old; yet <sup>s</sup> have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

26 He is ever merciful, and lendeth; and his seed is blessed.

and kindness of the Lord, and prays for its extension and continuance. God is considered as the fountain of life, and light, and blessedness. "God, like the sun, (says Bishop Horne,) cannot be seen but by the light which himself emits;" and he is no less the universal source of life and blessedness.

"O thou whose power o'er moving worlds presides,

Whose voice created, and whose wisdom guides,

On darkling man in pure effulgence shine.

And cheer the clouded mind with light divine!

'Tis thine alone to calm the pious breast,

With silent confidence and holy rest:

From thee, Great God! we spring—to thee we bend, Path, Motive, Guide, Original, and End"—Dr. Johnson.

PSALM XXXVII. Ver. 1—40. A Psalm of David, exhorting to patience, meekness, and submission to the divine providence.—"From the beginning to the end of this psalm, (Bishop Horne remarks,) the Holy Spirit, by the hand of the prophet, administheth advice and consolation to the church and people of the Lord, oppressed and afflicted in this world by prosperous and triumphant wickedness. Faith and patience are therefore recommended, upon the double consideration of that sure reward which awaiteth the righteous, and that certain punish-given by God himself as an inheritance to their fathers, and their posterity, for ever; and this verse seems to contain a promise of their return thither.]—Bagster.

Ver. 10. It shall not be.—Ainsworth and Lowth, "He shall not be (found);" LXX. "Lo! he was gone!"

Ver. 20. As the fat ("the precious, or rich") of lambs.—Which blazes for a moment and then expires. [As the fat was wholly consumed in sacrifice, by the fire on the altar, so the wicked shall consume away in the fire of God's anger.]—Bagster.

Ver. 25. Seed begging bread.—[There is no absolute promise in Scripture, that the righteous man shall not want bread, nor his seed become beggars; but the Psalmist, and many since his time, during a long course of observation, had never known an instance of the kind.]—Bagster. In Isa. xxxiii. 16, there is a precious promise of bread and water, upon which multitudes have relied, and have not been disappointed: still it does not disclose the manner in which the supply is to come.

27 Depart from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore.

28 For <sup>a</sup> the LORD loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved <sup>v</sup> for ever: but <sup>w</sup> the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.

29 The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever.

30 The <sup>x</sup> mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom, and his <sup>y</sup> tongue talketh of judgment.

31 The law of his God <sup>z</sup> is in his <sup>a</sup> heart; none of his <sup>b</sup> steps shall slide.

32 The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him.

33 The LORD <sup>c</sup> will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn <sup>d</sup> him when he is judged.

34 <sup>e</sup> Wait <sup>f</sup> on the LORD, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see <sup>g</sup> it.

35 I <sup>h</sup> have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green <sup>i</sup> bay tree.

36 Yet he passed away, and, lo, he <sup>j</sup> was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found.

37 Mark the perfect <sup>k</sup> man, and behold the upright: for the end <sup>l</sup> of that man is peace.

38 But <sup>m</sup> the transgressors shall be destroyed together: the end of the wicked shall be cut off.

39 But the salvation of the righteous <sup>n</sup> is of the LORD: <sup>o</sup> he is their strength in the time of trouble.

40 And the LORD shall help them, and deliver them: he <sup>p</sup> shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him.

PSALM XXXVIII.

David moveth God to take compassion of his pitiful case.

A Psalm of David, to bring to <sup>a</sup> remembrance.

O LORD, rebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 For thine arrows <sup>b</sup> stick fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.

3 <sup>c</sup> There is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither <sup>d</sup> is there any <sup>e</sup> rest in my bones <sup>f</sup> because of my sin.

4 For mine iniquities are gone over my

Is. 30. 18.
v 1 Fe. 1. 5.
w Is. 14. 20.
x Mat. 12. 35.
y De. 6. 6.
Is. 51. 7.
z or, goings.
a 2 Pe. 2. 9.
b Ro. 3. 1, 24.
c ver. 7.
d Job. 5. 3.
Is. 14. 19.
e or, tree that groweth in his own soil.
f Pr. 11. 32.
g Mat. 13. 30.
h Da. 3. 17. 28.
i Ps. 70. title.
j Job. 6. 4.
k peace, or, health.
l Ps. 51. 3.

e Ex. 9. 6.
f Is. 1. 5. 6.
g wearied.
h Ps. 32. 3.
i Jn. 1. 48.
j La. 5. 16, 17.
k not with.
l Mat. 26. 56.
Lu. 10. 31, 32.
m stroke.
n or, my neighbour.
o Lu. 23. 49.
p 2Sa. 16. 10, &c.
Is. 42. 19, 20.
q thee do I wait for.
r or, answer.
s for halting.
t 2 Co. 7. 9, 10.
u being living, are strong.

<sup>v</sup> head: as a heavy burden they are too heavy for me.

5 My wounds <sup>w</sup> stink <sup>x</sup> and are corrupt because of my foolishness.

6 I am <sup>y</sup> troubled; I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the day long.

7 For my loins are filled with a loathsome <sup>z</sup> disease: and <sup>a</sup> there is no soundness in my flesh.

8 I am feeble and sore broken: I have roared <sup>b</sup> by reason of the disquietness of my heart.

9 LORD, all my desire <sup>c</sup> is before <sup>d</sup> thee; and my groaning is not hid from thee.

10 My heart panteth, my strength faileth me: as for the light <sup>e</sup> of mine eyes, it also is <sup>f</sup> gone from me.

11 My lovers and my friends stand aloof <sup>g</sup> from my <sup>h</sup> sore; and my <sup>i</sup> kinsmen stand <sup>j</sup> afar off.

12 They also that seek after my life lay snares <sup>k</sup> for me: and they that seek my hurt speak mischievous things, and imagine deceits all the day long.

13 But <sup>l</sup> I, as a deaf <sup>m</sup> man, heard not; and <sup>n</sup> I was as a dumb man <sup>o</sup> that openeth not his mouth.

14 In whose mouth <sup>p</sup> are no reproofs.

15 For <sup>q</sup> in thee, O LORD, do I hope: thou wilt <sup>r</sup> hear, O LORD my God.

16 For I said, <sup>s</sup> Hear me, lest otherwise they should rejoice over me: when my foot slip-peth, they magnify <sup>t</sup> themselves against me.

17 For I <sup>u</sup> am ready <sup>v</sup> to halt, and my sorrow <sup>w</sup> is continually before me.

18 For I will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry <sup>x</sup> for my sin.

19 But mine enemies <sup>y</sup> are lively, and they are strong: and they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied.

20 They also that render evil for good are mine adversaries; because I follow <sup>z</sup> the thing that good is.

21 Forsake me not, O LORD: O my God, be not far from me.

ment which shall be inflicted on the wicked. These two events are set before us under many lively and affecting images. As the psalm is rather a collection of divine aphorisms on the same subject, than a continued and connected discourse, it admitteth of nothing farther in the way of argument; but the maxims or observations here introduced, are most interesting and important. It is a folly for Christians to fret and fume at evils which they cannot prevent. It is much better patiently to submit to circumstances, and make the Lord himself the object of their confidence and delight. For, after all, as our Lord himself assures us, it is "the meek" who "inherit the earth;" and though others may boast greater claims, they only enjoy it. A sensible writer observes, "They have no turbulent, repining, vexatious thoughts that they deserve better; nor are vexed when they see others possessed of more honour, or more riches, than their wise God has allotted for their share."

An observation in the latter part of the psalm may demand particular notice, as it has occasioned some practical difficulty. As a general maxim, it may certainly be admitted, "So far is charity from impoverishing, (says Bishop Horne), that what is given away, like vapours emitted by the earth, returns in showers of blessings into the bosom of the person that gave it; and his offspring is not the worse, but infinitely the better for it." (Prov. xi. 25.) This maxim is not, however, to be so strictly interpreted, as to maintain that, in no case, has a pious man been reduced to beggary: our Lord himself, though not a beggar, lived upon the hospitality of his disciples, during the whole of his public ministry. He had no patrimony, no home, no purse; and when called upon for tribute, was compelled to work a miracle to pay it. Generally speaking, however, benevolence far more frequently enriches than impoverishes.

PSALM XXXVIII. Ver. 1—22. A Psalm of David to bring to remembrance—That is, a memorial of his sins, and of his sufferings under them. His afflictions appear to have been of two classes—bodily pain and sickness, and the desertion of his friends and relatives, who, instead of comforting, aggravated his afflictions. In David's history, indeed, we read nothing of his being confined with sickness; yet it is reasonable to believe this might often be the case, though perhaps for no long continuance, so as to interrupt the operations of his government. That he suffered much from disease may be inferred, not only from his frequent references to it in the book of Psalms, but from the singular fact of his extreme debility, and the extraordinary means used to keep life in him, for some time before his death, though he died at the age of seventy. (1 Kings i. 1—4.) In these afflictions, he constantly refers to sin as the cause of his sufferings; and it is true that all our sufferings originate in sin; yet his language in this psalm seems to refer particularly to his dreadful apostacy in the matter of Uriah, when he sent Joab to conduct the war with the Ammonites, while he stayed at home to indulge in ease, and luxury, and crime.

Ver. 34. Wait on the Lord.—(Kavah, to wait, implies the extension of a right line from one point to another. The first point is the human heart; the line is its intense desire; and the last point is God, to whom the heart extends this straight line of earnest desire. He who, while he waits on God, keeps his way, is sure to have the farther blessings of which he is in pursuit.)—E.

Ver. 35. Green bay-tree.—(Or, a green tree that groweth in his own soil. Ezra is certainly a tree growing in its native soil, not having been transplanted; in which circumstance, trees acquire their largest and most luxuriant growth. Job vii. 13—19. Eze. xxi. 6—10, 18. Da. iv. 20, &c.)—Bagster.

This psalm is alphabetical, but not strictly so throughout; whether the deviations are owing to the laxness of the Hebrew laws of versification, as some have thought, or to the negligence of transcribers, as is now the more general opinion, we presume not to determine.

PSALM XXXVIII. (This deeply penitential Psalm is supposed to have been composed by David under some grievous affliction, either bodily or mental, or both after his illicit intercourse with Bathsheba.)—Bagster.

Ver. 5. Because of my foolishness.—(The soul being invisible, its distempers are also so; therefore the sacred writers describe them by the distempers of the body. On reading these and similar passages, says Bishop Loath, some, who were but little acquainted with the genius of the Hebrew poetry, have pretended to inquire into the nature of the disease with which the poet was affected; not less absurdly, in my opinion, than if they had perplexed themselves to discover in what river he was plunged, when he complains, that "the deep waters had gone over his soul.")—Bagster.

Ver. 6. Troubled.—Or, writhed with pain.

Ver. 10. Is gone from me.—His disease affected his sight.

Ver. 17. Ready to halt.—i. e. ready to sink down under my infirmities. Ver. 19. Lively.—strong.—(Instead of chayim, "lively," Bishop Loath would read chinnom, "without cause;"—"But mine enemies without cause have strengthened themselves." As this emendation renders this member of the sentence parallel to the other, it is by no means improbable.)—Bagster.

22 Make haste <sup>v</sup> to help me, O LORD my salvation.

PSALM XXXIX.

David's care of his thoughts. 4 The consideration of the brevity and vanity of life. 7 The reverence of God's judgments, 10 and prayer, are his bridges of impatience. To the chief Musician, even to Jeduthun, A Psalm of David.

I SAID, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my <sup>v</sup> tongue: I will keep <sup>c</sup> my mouth with a bridle, while <sup>a</sup> the wicked is before me.

2 I was dumb with silence; I held my peace, even from good; and my sorrow was <sup>c</sup> stirred.

3 My heart was hot within me; while I was musing the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue.

4 LORD, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know <sup>f</sup> how frail I am.

5 Behold, thou hast made my days as a handbreath; and <sup>g</sup> mine age is as nothing before thee: verily every man <sup>h</sup> at his best state is altogether vanity. Selah.

6 Surely every man walketh in <sup>i</sup> a vain show: surely they are disquieted in vain: he <sup>j</sup> heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.

7 And now, LORD, what wait I for? my hope is in thee.

8 Deliver me from all my transgressions: make me not the reproach of the foolish.

9 I was dumb, I opened not my mouth; because thou didst it.

10 Remove thy stroke away from me: I am consumed by the <sup>k</sup> blow of thy hand.

11 When thou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity, thou makest <sup>l</sup> his beauty to consume away like a moth: surely every man is vanity. Selah.

12 Hear my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry; hold not thy peace at my tears:

Many have endeavoured to explain the psalmist's complaints of unsoundness and putridity in his flesh and in his bones figuratively, of his inward distress and spiritual conflicts; but we think "it seems evident (as Scott observes) that the writer was (also) visited with some dire malady, which affected his whole frame in a most distressing manner; and that he considered this as the chastisement of God, for some particular sins of which his conscience accused him." What that particular malady might be with which he was afflicted, we presume not to determine; but from the symptoms mentioned, and particularly from his friends and neighbours keeping "aloof from his sore," we should think it must have closely resembled, either the leprosy of Job, or the pestilence of Hezekiah, either of which, connected with the agonies of conviction in his conscience, would be fully sufficient to account for his groans and agonies. (See note, ver. 5.) But we totally object to the application of such language to our Redeemer, for reasons which we have already stated: nor do we find any application of it to him in the New Testament, by either evangelists or apostles.

PSALM XXXIX. Ver. 1—13. A Psalm of David, contemplating the frailty of human life.—"The psalm begins abruptly, with the result of a meditation on the narrow, slippery, and dangerous paths of life; and more especially on the extreme difficulty of restraining the tongue amidst the continual temptations and provocations of the adversary." (Bishop Horne.) Meditation should terminate in devotion; and this meditation

PSALM XXXIX. Title.—To Jeduthun.—Jeduthun, probably the same as Ethan, 1 Ch. vi. 44, was one of the sons of Merari; and is supposed to have been one of the four masters of music, or leaders of bands, belonging to the temple service. It is therefore probable that David, having composed this Psalm, gave it to Jeduthun and his company to sing; and it is very likely, that it was written on the same occasion as the preceding.—Bagster.

Ver. 1. With a bridle.—It is probable that the bridges of the ancients were made in the form of muzzles. See note on Ps. xxxix. 9.

Ver. 3. The fire burned.—See Jer. xx. 9.

Ver. 4. How frail I am.—i. e., as the Chaldee explains it, "How soon I shall cease to exist here."

Ver. 5. At his best state.—Most permanent.

Ver. 6. In a vain show.—Phantasm, or appearance only. [There is but the appearance of being: he appeareth for a little, and then vanisheth away.] 1 Co. vii. 31. Ja. iv. 14.—Bagster.

Ver. 11. Thou makest his beauty.—Heb. "That which is to be desired in him."—To consume (Heb. "to melt away") as a moth, or moth-worm, which perisheth with the touch. See Job iv. 19, and note.

PSALM XL. [This Psalm is supposed to have been composed by David about the same time, and on the same occasion, as the two preceding; with this difference, that here he magnifies God for having obtained the mercy which he sought there. It also contains a remarkable prophecy of the incarnation and sacrifice of Jesus Christ.]—Bagster.

v for my help.
a 1 Ch. 16. 41
b Pr. 21. 23.
Ja. 3. 2, &c.
c a bridle, or, muzzle, for my mouth.
d Col. 4. 5.
e troubled.
f or, what time I have here.
g Ps. 90. 4, &c.
h settled.
i an image.
j Ec. 2. 18, &c.
Jer. 12. 20, 21.
k conflict.
l that which is to be desired in him to melt away.
m In waiting I waited.
n a pit of noise.
o Ps. 15. 4.
d Ps. 125. 5.
e Job. 9. 10.
f Jer. 22. 11.
g or, none can order them unto thee.
h Ps. 51. 16.
He. 10. 4. 10.
i digged.
EX. 21. 6.
j Lu. 24. 44.
Jn. 5. 39.
k Jn. 4. 34.
l in the midst of my bowels.
m Lu. 4. 16. 22.
n Ac. 20. 20, 27.

for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were.

13 O spare me, that I may recover strength, before I go hence, and be no more.

PSALM XL.

1 The benefit of confidence in God. 6 Obedience is the best sacrifice. 11 The sense of David's evils inflamed his prayer.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

I <sup>a</sup> WAITED patiently for the LORD; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry.

2 He brought me up also out of <sup>b</sup> a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings.

3 And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD.

4 Blessed is that man that maketh the LORD his trust, and respecteth <sup>c</sup> not the proud, nor such as turn aside <sup>d</sup> to lies.

5 Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works <sup>e</sup> which thou hast done, and thy thoughts <sup>f</sup> which are to us-ward: <sup>g</sup> they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.

6 Sacrifice <sup>h</sup> and offering thou didst not desire; mine ears hast thou <sup>i</sup> opened: burnt-offering and sin-offering hast thou not required.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come: in <sup>j</sup> the volume of the book it is written of me,

8 I <sup>k</sup> delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is <sup>l</sup> within my heart.

9 I have preached <sup>m</sup> righteousness in the great congregation: lo, I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, thou knowest.

10 I have not hid <sup>n</sup> thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation.

11 Withhold not thou thy tender mercies led to the following excellent prayer—that the psalmist might be taught practically his own frailty, and the uncertain duration of the present life, which, compared to the life to come, is but as a shadow to the substance; a shadow fleeting like that of the passing cloud upon the grass.

The life of man is then compared to "an image" exhibited to the mind in a vision, or in a dream: and in no man is this vanity more striking than in the avaricious, who "heapeth up riches," and knoweth not who shall gather them. And even while this transitory life endures, how doth affliction "melt away" health, and beauty, and talent, and wealth, and every thing desirable in man!

"This life's a dream, an empty show;
But the bright world to which I go Hath joys substantial and sincere;
When shall I wake, and find me there?"—Watts.

PSALM XL. Ver. 1—17. A Psalm of David, relating partly to his own circumstances, and partly to Messiah.—We agree with Dr. Kennicott in dividing this psalm into three parts, but not exactly in our application of them. The first part, comprising the first five verses, we consider as capable of a double application, expressing first the psalmist's deep sufferings, during some of his persecutions from his enemies; and, in a typical sense, the sufferings of our Redeemer. The imagery seems taken from one of the horrible dungeons of the Asiatic tyrants. (Jer. xxxviii. 6—12.) Applied to our Saviour, it may

Ver. 2. A horrible pit.—Resounding with falls of water. See Ps. xviii. 16.

Ver. 6. Mine ears hast thou opened.—Or carved; and it is with much diffidence the editor ventures to suggest, that cutting out, digging, or carving, is the radical idea of the root (karah) here used. It is very commonly used for digging pits, or wells; sometimes for carving sepulchres from a rock, Isa. xvi. 14. also for carving (or cutting up) meat for a feast, 2 Kings vi. 23, where, instead of "prepared a great provision," we would read more literally, "cut up a great cutting;" i. e. cut up many joints of meat amongst them; and in Job xli. 6. "Will thou part the Leviathan (or carve him out) among the merchants?" The same term is transferred back from the gutters of the sepulchre, to the quarry of human nature; "Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hollow of the cave whence ye were digged;" referring to Abraham and Sarah. Loath's Isa. li. 1, 2. In harmony with this imagery, a kindred Hebrew noun is used for birth, or origin, Ezek. xvi. 3; xxxi. 30. The writer of these notes is well aware that many interpreters consider this is an allusion to the Jewish law, Exod. xxi. 6. But the Hebrew word there used for boring, is radically different from this.

Ver. 7. In the volume.—That is, roll. All the ancient books were in this form, as are all the sacred MSS. of the Synagogues to this day.

Ver. 11. Withhold not, &c.—[From this verse to the end, we have quite a new subject; for the former contains a thanksgiving, and this contains a supplication.]—Bagster. We have mentioned above Dr. Kennicott's discovery, that this psalm should end with the 10th verse. Thus much is certain, that from me, O LORD: let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me.

12 For innumerable evils have compassed me about: mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up; they are more than the hairs of my head: therefore my heart faileth me.

13 Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, make haste to help me.

14 Let them be ashamed and confounded together that seek after my soul to destroy it; let them be driven backward and put to shame that wish me evil.

15 Let them be desolate for a reward of their shame that say unto me, Aha, aha.

16 Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: let such as love thy salvation say continually, The LORD be magnified.

17 But I am poor and needy; yet the LORD thinketh upon me: thou art my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God.

PSALM XLI.

1 God's care of the poor. 4 David complaineth of his enemies' treachery. 10 He fleeth to God for succour.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David. BLESSED is he that considereth the poor: the LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.

2 The LORD will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth: and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.

3 The LORD will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing; thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness.

o Ps. 85. 10.
p He. 4. 13.
q Ps. 38. 4, &c.
r Lu. 19. 13, 14.
s foreknowledge.
t ver. 5.
1 Pe. 5. 7.
a Pr. 14. 21.
He. 6. 10.
b weak, or, sick.
c the day of evil.
d or, do not thou.
e Ps. 37. 29, 33.
f turn.
g Ps. 32. 5.
h Ps. 147. 3.
Ho. 6. 1.
i Pr. 28. 24, 25.
j evil to me.
k A thing of Belial.
l the man of my peace.
m Job 19. 19.
Jn. 13. 18.
n magnified.
a or, A Psalm giving instruction to the sons, &c.
b brayeth.
c Ps. 63. 1.
Jn. 7. 37.

4 I said, LORD, be merciful unto me: heal my soul; for I have sinned against thee.

5 Mine enemies speak evil of me, When shall he die, and his name perish?

6 And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

7 All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise my hurt.

8 An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth he shall rise up no more.

9 Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me.

10 But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me, and raise me up, that I may requite them.

11 By this I know that thou favourest me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before thy face for ever.

13 Blessed be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting, and to everlasting. Amen and Amen.

PSALM XLII.

1 David's zeal to serve God in the temple. 5 He encourageth his soul to trust in God.

To the chief Musician, A Maschil, for the sons of Korah.

AS the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God.

2 My soul thirsteth for God, for the living typify the extreme sufferings which he endured; yet a pit of mire, with the sound of waters and waterfalls, seems not to agree with the quiet of the grave; but would intimate (as indeed many of the ancients thought) that our Lord's sufferings were not terminated with his parting breath.

The second part of the psalm, from ver. 5 to 10, appears to relate to the incarnation of the Messiah, and to that only. The purport of it is, that, seeing the insufficiency of all other sacrifices to take away sin, He presented himself as the great atoning sacrifice for human guilt. The language here used is peculiar, and requires explanation. "Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire:" not that the sacrifices of the law were unenjoined or disapproved; yet they were not the ultimate object of the divine command; but were appointed only as typical, and derived all their value in the sight of God, from being the appointed types of Messiah's more perfect sacrifice: when offered to supersede the moral duties, they became abominable. (Isa. li. 8. Amos v. 21.)

"Mine ears hast thou opened." In the language of the Hebrews, and of poetry, to open the ears of any one is to secure his favourable attention, (Job xxxiii. 16.) Isaiah, speaking in the person of Messiah, says, "The LORD God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back. I gave my back to the smiters," &c. (Isa. i. 5, 6.) But neither in this instance, nor in any other, (we believe,) is the same original word used for opening the ears, as in the psalm before us, which we conceive signifies "carved," or "cut out," in the sense of forming. (See notes.) As if the psalmist had said, "Mine ears hast thou made, or prepared, for the most exact and complete obedience." This will partly account for the version given of this passage by the Septuagint, and in Hebrews x. 5, to which we shall there again advert.

When it is added, "Lo, I come!" these words, we conceive, express the effect of the Messiah's ears being thus prepared, namely, a ready and prompt obedience, and that in the accomplishment of preceding predictions: "In the volume (or roll) of the book, it is written of me: I delight to do thy will," &c. the evidence of which appeared in preaching in "the great congregations" of the temple, the synagogue, and the public highways, till the speaker's lips were closed by violence and death.

The third part of the psalm comprehends from ver. 11 to the the last five verses form the 70th Psalm. Perhaps they might be originally connected, as distinct parts of the same poem; but a short psalm being wanted for some particular occasion, these verses might be separated for the purpose.

Ver. 14. Let them be ashamed.—(The verbs in the preceding verse, in which the Psalmist simply prays for deliverance, are in the imperative; but here, and in the following verses, they are in the future tense, and naturally express the language of lively faith and hope, rather than that of wishing the destruction foreseen and predicted.)—Bagster.

PSALM XLI. [This Psalm is supposed to have been written on the same occasion as the three former; and to relate to David's affliction, and the evil treatment he received from his enemies during its continuance.]—Bagster.

Ver. 1. The poor.—See margin. The Hebrew term is of extensive import, and includes every kind of affliction.

end; where, as the writer speaks of his sins laying hold upon him, and sinking him into despair, we return again to David. It appears to us, that the five intervening verses (6 to 10,) are a kind of parenthesis, though a most important one; and that the eleventh verse should be connected with the fifth: that declares the mercies of God to be innumerable; and this treats that those mercies may neither be withheld or withdrawn from the petitioner, who is overwhelmed with sins and troubles, from which he prays to be delivered. The three following verses, (14 to 16,) which, in our version, are rendered imprecatory, are in the original simply future, and so rendered, not only by Bishops Horne and Horsley, but also by Dr. Boothroyd, who is not governed by the same system.

PSALM XLI. Ver. 1—13. A Psalm of David. The blessedness of charity and the baseness of treachery.—The eulogy on true charity with which the psalm opens, is of most extensive application. The poor, the weak, the sick, are all its objects, and those who display this kind and benevolent disposition, of which our Lord affords a perfect example, though they can have no pretensions to merit, have a promise of like sympathy and aid from the Lord himself in their afflictions. But it may be here asked, how then was our compassionate Lord himself surrendered to his enemies? why was not he, the most compassionate of all men, delivered from them? The answer is easy—"He was delivered for our offences." (Rom. iv. 25.)

Bishop Horne, and other Hutchinsonian writers, apply the whole of this, as of the Psalms generally, to our Saviour; but as the psalmist here also confesses sin, and pleads for mercy, we cannot, for reasons given in our exposition of Psalms xxx. and xxxi., admit him to be here the speaker; but perhaps we might divide the psalm not improperly into two parts: in the first five verses, we may consider the writer as speaking in his own person, and in the remainder in the person of the Messiah, our Lord Jesus having himself applied (or accommodated) the ninth verse to the treachery of Judas. To lift up the heel against a person, is not only to desert him, or run away; but to turn the back and treat him with contempt. Judas did this, and probably never looked his master in the face after he betrayed him.

PSALM XLII. Ver. 1—11. David thirsts after communion with God in his sanctuary.—This thirst for "the living God"

Ver. 8. An evil disease.—This term seems always to imply moral evil, and is analogous to that of blasphemy. Matt. xxvi. 65.

Ver. 13. Amen and Amen.—(That is, as the LXX. and Vulgate render, "So be it! So be it!") With this psalm ends the first of the five books into which the Hebrews have divided the Psalms.]—Bagster.

PSALM XLII. Title.—Maschil.—(Or, "An instructive psalm," or didactic ode, "for the sons of Korah.") It is generally supposed to have been written by David when driven from Jerusalem and beyond Jordan, by Absalom's rebellion. I cannot help esteeming this Psalm, says Bishop Lushington, one of the most beautiful specimens of the Hebrew elegy. The author of this elegant complaint, exiled from the temple, and from the public exercise of religion, to the extreme parts of Judea, persecuted by his numerous enemies, and agitated by their reproaches, pours forth his soul to God in this tender and pathetic composition.]—Bagster.

God : when <sup>d</sup> shall I come and appear before God ?

3 My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God ?

4 When I remember these things, I pour out my soul in me : for I had gone with the multitude, I went with them to the house of God, with the voice of <sup>e</sup> joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holyday.

5 Why art thou <sup>f</sup> cast down, O my soul ? and why art thou disquieted in me ? hope thou in God : for I shall yet <sup>g</sup> praise him <sup>h</sup> for the help of his countenance.

6 O my God, my soul <sup>i</sup> is cast down within me : therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, from <sup>j</sup> the hill Mizar.

7 Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy water-spouts : all thy waves <sup>k</sup> and thy billows are gone over me.

8 Yet the LORD will command his loving-kindness in the daytime, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life.

9 I will say unto God my rock, Why hast thou forgotten me ? why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy ?

10 As with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me ; while they say daily unto me, Where is thy God ?

11 Why art thou cast down, O my soul ? and

d Job 23.3.

e Ps. 122.1

f bowed down.

g or, give thanks.

h or, his presence is salvation.

i Ps. 77.3.

j Ps. 133.3.

k Ps. 88.7.

l or, killing

a or, unmerciful.

b a man of deceit and iniquity.

c the gladness of my joy.

d Ps. 42.5, 11.

e Job 24.12.

why art thou disquieted within me ? hope thou in God : for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIII.

1 David, praying to be restored to the temple, promises to serve God joyfully. 5 He encourageth his soul to trust in God.

JUDGE me, O God, and plead my cause against an <sup>a</sup> ungodly nation : O deliver me from <sup>b</sup> the deceitful and unjust man.

2 For thou art the God of my strength ; why dost thou cast me off ? why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy ?

3 O send out thy light and thy truth : let them lead me ; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles.

4 Then will I go unto the altar of God, unto God <sup>c</sup> my exceeding joy : yea, upon the harp will I praise thee, O God my God.

5 Why <sup>d</sup> art thou cast down, O my soul ? and why art thou disquieted within me ? hope in God : for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIV.

1 The church, in memory of former favours, 7 complaineth of their present evils. 17 Professing her integrity, 24 she fervently prayeth for succour.

To the chief Musician for the sons of Korah, Maschil.

WE have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old.

2 How thou didst drive out the heathen with thy hand, and plantedst them ; how thou didst afflict the people, and cast them out.

3 For <sup>a</sup> they got not the land in possession by Rock of my hope ! Great solace of my heart !

Why, why desert the offspring of thy care,

While taunting foes thus point the injurious dart ?

"Where's now thy God ? abandoned wanderer, where ?"

Why faint my soul ? why doubt Jehovah's aid ?

Thy God, the God of mercy shall still prove !

In his bright face thy thanks shall yet be paid ;

Unquestioned be his pity and his love !"

was rendered the more painful by the taunting language of the heathen, who surrounded him with the insulting inquiry, "Where is thy God?" Their gods, indeed, were to be met with every where, in a variety of forms of wood and stone; but the God of Israel and of Christians is too great, too glorious, for the conceptions of a pagan.

Again: the psalmist's desires were quickened by the recollection of former enjoyments, when, in time past, he went with the multitude of the pious worshippers to Mount Zion, there to keep the holy festivals. These, while they called forth "the voice of joy and praise" for present mercies, pointed to the better days and higher enjoyments of "the age to come," that is, of king Messiah. In the mean time, many and great were his anxieties and despondencies, but he encouraged himself, as at other times, in the Lord his God. "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? . . . Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God."

The following admirable paraphrase is given by Bishop Lenth, in his Lectures on Hebrew Poetry, as the most beautiful specimen of the Hebrew elegy:

"As pants the wearied hart for cooling springs,

That sinks exhausted in the summer's chase ;

So pants my soul for thee, great King of kings !

So thirsts to reach thy sacred resting-place.

On briny tears my famished soul has fed,

While taunting foes deride my deep despair ;

"Say, where is now thy great Deliverer fled ?

Thy mighty God—Deserted wanderer, where ?"

Oft dwell my thoughts on those thrice happy days,

When to thy fane I lead the jocund throng ;

Our mirth was worship, all our pleasure praise,

And festal joys still closed with sacred song.

Why throb, my heart ! Why sink, my saddening soul ?

Why droop to earth with various woes oppressed ?

My years shall yet in blissful circles roll,

And joy be yet an inmate of this breast.

By Jordan's banks with devious steps I stray,

O'er Hermon's rugged rocks, and deserts drear ;

E'en there thy hand shall guide my lonely way,

There, thy remembrance shall my spirit cheer.

In rapid floods the vernal torrents roll,

Harsh-sounding cataracts responsive roar ;

Thine angry billows overwhelm my soul,

And dash my shattered bark from shore to shore.

Yea thy soft mercies, ever in my sight,

My heart shall gladden through the tedious day ;

And midst the dark and gloomy shades of night,

To thee I'll fondly tune the grateful lay.

Ver. 3. Tears have been my meat.—That is, I have been so occupied in weeping, that I have neglected my necessary food. See Ps. lxxx. 6.

Ver. 4. These (things)—Or times, rather. Boothroyd.

Ver. 6. The hill Mizar.—Some inconsiderable hill, where David had taken refuge in his banishment.

Ver. 7. Deep calleth unto deep.—Merrick observes, that in Homer, one river is represented as calling upon another to aid the Greeks ; and in Ezechyus, fire and water are represented as covenanting together against them.

